Announcement for armed resistance organizations' members including PDF who want to enter legal fold

LESSONS have already been learnt from the past that unity can only assure non-disintegration of the Union and perpetuation of sovereignty for the Republic of the Union of Myanmar where various ethnic peoples are living in. In the future, it must work for the unity and solidarity of ethnic brethren. Due to political adversaries and disagreements in ethnic affairs, internal armed conflicts occurred and it has hampered the development of the country.

Those who were persuaded by terrorist groups CRPH and NUG to commit acts of terrorism leading to the utter devastation of the country and launch armed resistance under various names of groups including PDF. Such doings can affect the stability of the State and ensue delay in ways to democracy.

As the strength of the country lies on its own, the entire people should cooperate in establishing a genuine and disciplined multiparty democratic system as per the five-point roadmap of the State Administration Council, “upon accomplishing the provisions of the state of emergency, free and fair multiparty democratic elections will be held in line with the 2008 Constitution, and further work will be undertaken to hand over State duties to the winning party according to democratic standards”, and in line with “one of the objectives on political affairs to build a Union based on democracy and federalism through a disciplined and genuine multiparty democratic system that is fair and just”.

Therefore, it is here announced that the organizations including PDF are welcomed if they enter the legal fold for their normal civilian lives by surrendering their weapons following rules and regulations to participate in future work plans of the country.

FROM the 2018-2019 Financial Year (FY) until the 2020-2021 Financial Year, more than 350 small-scale and artisan gold mining blocks in Sagaing Region still remain to pay taxes to the State, according to the statement of the Sagaing Region Block Scrutiny Committee.

A total of 256 small-scale gold mining blocks and 98 artisan blocks in Khamti, Homalin, Phaungpyin, Katha, Bamauk, and Kyunhla townships in the Sagaing Region were approved by the Sagaing region government, and notification letters were sent to the companies/entrepreneurs of the gold mining blocks through the lawyers to pay the remaining taxes. Pork and chicken prices surge in the market

THE prices of chicken and pork including fish and prawns are high in the market and the people have to consider their rate of income and expenses, said housewives.

The pork price at the Lanmadaw Iron Market is K15,000 per viss, K14,000 per viss of pork and K14,000 per viss of special ribs this week, said Daw Hla Htay from Lanmadaw Township.

The pork belly price was only K10,000 per viss in April 2020, said Ko Hla Tin from Kyimyindine Township.

Although the prices are high, the sellers rely on the daily customers and restaurants, said pork seller Ma Myo Myo in the Mawtin market.

The pork prices in Mawgyun Township are K17,000 per viss while K15,000 per viss of pork belly, resident Daw Tin Win said.

“We sold 100 pigs daily in the past. But now, we sell only 20 per day. The numbers of pork consumers decline. We transport to restaurants,” said a pig slaughterer.

The Myanmar chicken price is K12,000-13,000-14,000 per viss while K6,500 per viss of the CP at the Lanmadaw Iron Market.

The beef is priced at K18,000 per viss, K25,000 per viss of mutton and K20,000 or K30,000 per viss of lobster depending on their sizes.

“The freshwater shrimp is K14,000 per viss, Rakhine shrimp is K12,000 per viss while K8,000-10,000 per viss of mrigal fish. The catfish, fossil cat and snakehead have not entered the Yangon market yet. The price may be K15,000-16,000 per viss in other regions,” said a fish seller.

“At the supermarket, the finished meat is available. People can buy groundfish and meat by weight. They are clean. As they are purified, the prices are higher than others,” said Ma Lin Lin from Pazundaung.

The supermarkets sell three chicken wings weighing 356 grammes at K1,994, pork weighing 408 grammes at K3,468 and beef weighing 268 grammes at K3,468.

During this year, the meat, fish, egg and cooking oil prices are higher than in previous years and so the daily expenses of families also become higher while their daily income is not on the rise.

Families with low incomes mainly rely on the cheap food-stuffs that affect their health.

If the people consume beans together with rice in their daily meals, they can get proper protein and they cannot be affected by the high prices of meat and fish, a market analyst said. — TWA/GNLM

Set a great expectation over livestock farms

Today's global countries are striving for booming their economy based on agriculture and livestock farming works which supply food to the peoples.

Those countries emphasize the operation of agriculture and livestock farms in order to supply food to the people and earn incomes from the export of surplus agricultural produce and livestock products in various forms to foreign partners.

People in Myanmar primarily consume meat and fish produced from chicken, pig, goat, cow and fish farms. In this regard, farmers are to always focus on the operation of livestock farms and seek expertise from livestock breeding experts on how to improve their farms. Only when livestock farmers apply the expertise of experts for running the livestock farms, will they have great success in the work process.

Now is the best time to initiate the better running of livestock farms in order to meet the demand of local people with the opportunities to export the surplus to the international market. But, these livestock farms must be operated on a commercial scale with a great expectation for achieving success.

Not only poultry but cattle farming work needs various kinds of farming works such as cage system, free herding system and herding under care system. Among them, the cage system is the best for fully feeding the animals.

Livestock farms must be run with the techniques and experts of livestock experts. As such, the role of livestock experts is crucial in the development of the livestock sector. Hence, the State leaders arrange for turning out of livestock professionals with the establishment of agriculture and livestock institutes, colleges and universities.

In fact, neighbouring countries of Myanmar have established a larger number of institutions than Myanmar that are turning out livestock professionals and technicians. Hence, Myanmar needs to produce many livestock professionals and technicians to be able to catch up with the development of livestock farming works from neighbouring countries.

That is why the government decided to establish the institutions to turn out an adequate number of agriculture and livestock professionals as human resources reliable for the agriculture and livestock sectors of Myanmar.

Recently, the government released notifications to extend districts in the entire nation. The other day, the State leaders pledged to establish more and more livestock technological training schools in the newly-formed districts across the nation. Moreover, good news has come out that the outstanding trainees who graduated from the aforesaid training schools will be allowed to continuously learn high education in order to turn out highly-qualified human resources reliable for the livestock sector.

Now is the best time to initiate the better running of livestock farms in order to meet the demand of local people with the opportunities to export the surplus to the international market. But, these livestock farms must be operated on a commercial scale with a great expectation for achieving success.

Problems soar for airlines despite pandemic recovery

In the past few weeks, delays and cancellations caused by a lack of staff at airports and strikes for better pay have wreaked havoc upon travellers.

DESPERATE to put the coronavirus pandemic behind them, airlines will hold talks on Sunday ahead of a potential summer of chaos with shortages and strikes that could threaten their recovery.

While trade is roaring back to life, representatives from the aviation sector meeting for three days in Qatar have a packed agenda with multiple geopolitical crises including the war in Ukraine and the environment.

Cracks are already showing in the sector's recovery, though industry figures are optimistic about the future despite the issues.

In the past few weeks, delays and cancellations caused by a lack of staff at airports and strikes for better pay have wreaked havoc upon travellers.

The problems originate with the pandemic when airlines and airports laid off thousands of workers during its worst-ever crisis.

Now, they are scrambling for workers.

Passenger numbers dropped by 60 percent in 2020, and in 2021 it was still down 50 percent. Airlines lost nearly $200 billion over two years.

While some firms in the sector went bankrupt, others — backed often by states — have emerged from the pandemic with profits intact.

European airlines are excited about the prospect for a “beautiful summer”, with some data showing booking rates higher than in 2019.

In the United States, the domestic market has almost returned to pre-pandemic levels.

“Airlines are generating cash again, which is a real positive,” said Willie Walsh, head of the International Air Transport Association, during a visit to Paris earlier this month.

The sector's morale was buoyant after “a very long and barren two years”, he told reporters.

‘Not up to speed’

The International Air Transport Association (IATA), which represents 290 airlines accounting for 83 per cent of global air traffic, will host its annual general meeting in Doha instead of Shanghai after record-high Covid case counts forced it to relocate the forum.

There will be cause for celebration during the event.

In terms of Revenue Passenger Kilometres (RPKs), a measure of total distance flown by paying passengers, activity in April reached 62.8 per cent compared with the same month in 2019.

That was the best figure since March 2020.

Domestic routes, meanwhile, hit 74.2 per cent in April, better than international markets which reached 56.6 per cent compared with the same period in 2019.

After the Easter holidays fiasco at European airports, Walsh admitted “the system is not up to speed”, but vowed the issues would be addressed.

He was hopeful despite the war in Ukraine and its wider impacts, surging inflation and record prices for jet fuel.

Fuel makes up 25 to 30 per cent of companies' spending, and given the still-fragile state of airlines' balance sheets, higher costs will be passed on to customers to preserve their profits.

But the effects of Russia's war in Ukraine are already being felt.

European flights to Asia are constrained by long diverted routes to avoid Russian airspace after having slapped heavy sanctions on Moscow.

Costly decarbonisation

With inflation eroding people's purchasing power, higher costs could weaken demand at a time when companies need to make serious investments to cut their carbon dioxide emissions.

The IATA pledged last October to achieve net-zero carbon emissions by 2050. The issue will be raised at a general assembly meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organization in the autumn, but a deal between countries is far from certain.

The IATA, which expects 10 billion air passengers annually by the middle of the century compared with 4.5 billion in 2019, refuses to consider any restrictions on growth in order to contain the effects of climate change.

Commercial air travel, often the target of environmental activists, is responsible for between 2.5 and 3 per cent of global emissions.

Between “cleaner” planes and sustainable fuel, investment worth $1.5 trillion over 30 years is needed to improve the sector's environmental impact. The costs will be most likely handed down to the customer, again.

Thailand to drop mask rule, foreign tourist registration

Thailand's relaxation on facemasks comes after similar moves by regional peers including Cambodia and Singapore.

THAILAND announced Friday it would drop rules requiring people to wear masks outdoors and no longer require foreign visitors to register before travel, as Covid-19 cases fall and the kingdom seeks to lure tourists back.

Facemasks have been compulsory in public in Thailand, including outdoors, since mid-2021 when the Delta variant was running rampant.

But as the pandemic has subsided, the tourism-dependent kingdom has gradually relaxed covid restrictions in a bid to boost visitor numbers.

Thailand's relaxation on facemasks comes after similar moves by regional peers including Cambodia and Singapore.

Taweessin Visanuyothin, spokesman for the Thai Covid taskforce, said wearing masks outside would become voluntary, but was still recommended in crowded areas, entertainment venues and on public transport.

He said the health ministry would announce further details of the mask relaxation, including when it would come into force.

On 1 July the government will also end the “Thailand Pass” system, under which foreign tourists had to register and show proof of vaccination and health insurance before they could fly to the kingdom.

Visitors will have to carry vaccine certificates or take Covid tests on arrival.

The move is seen as an attempt to bolster the sputtering economy, which has seen growth hammered by the pandemic and living costs rising.

There were more than 1.6 million foreign tourist arrivals during the first six months of 2022, with foreign tourist receipts logged at 99.7 billion baht, according to government data.

This compares with around 40 million foreign tourists visiting Thailand in 2019, the last year before the pandemic.

Daily Covid-19 cases have hovered below 3,500 in recent weeks, with the number of deaths registering below 50 a day for a month.

More than three quarters of the population has been jabbed with two vaccine doses, with more than 40 percent also getting a booster dose.

Grape cultivation thriving in Natmauk town

GRAPE cultivation on a commercial scale is prospering in Natmauk town, Magway Region. Grapes are highly demanded in the domestic market. Grape cultivation can be seen in the neighbouring villages of Natmauk town. This small-scale business helps the villagers earn a living. Locals from Latkhokpin village, which is two miles away from Natmauk town, are also engaged in grape cultivation. They supply the grapes to the Natmauk town. The grapes can be harvested six months after pruning grapevines. The wholesale prices of grapes are K3,500-4,000 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kilogrammes) This year, Seintalone mango is abundantly flowing into markets. The sales of grapes are declining, for now, said U Wai Yan Soe, an owner of grape farms. There are different varieties of grapes — Italian grape, RG, Black Queen, No 3 and Chun. Terminalia catappa benefits health and eyes market

By Lin Oo

A 70-year-old woman is hitting the fruits of Terminalia catappa (Natapoa nut), which is commonly called Indian almond or tropical almond and is locally called Badum, with a hammer by the roadside near the pedestrian platform of Phonegyi Road in Lanmadaw Township. She is not just doing this for fun but for income.

She collects raw Badum fruits from the large tropical trees which are naturally and widely grown on the roadside in Dala Township, where she lives. She does not need to worry over raw materials.

Regardless of senior age, she does not follow the easy path but still struggles to earn a living with her own business by selling the Badum nuts. She daily comes to Yangon from the opposite side of Dala Port carrying her raw materials. Transportation cost is estimated at K2,600 a day, including ferry charges, and trishaw rate, an elder woman said.

The roadside Badum nut market can be seen earlier along Pansodan Street in Yangon city. The sellers are rarely seen when they lack raw materials. When some businesspersons realized the health benefits of this tropical almond, an online market boomed for a while.

“There is no cultivation of Terminalia catappa, yet they are naturally grown. They are shade trees and can be used as herbs. Earlier, people bought nuts from roadside markets with paper cones. At present, the nuts can be available through online trade platforms, making those street-side vendors lack raw materials,” said Daw Sein Aye, a seller in Pansodan Township.

The ready-to-eat Banda nuts roadside market has weak hygiene knowledge and practices. Therefore, the consumers turn to online markets with systematic packaging.

The 10-15 nuts are priced at K500 per paper cone from the roadside market. It is worth K5,500 per 10 ticals (a tical equals 0.578 ounce or 0.016 kilogramme). In recent days, Badum nuts, sunflower seeds, and pumpkin seeds are produced as a product. It is not a waste of money for snacks as natural Badum nuts have health benefits, said Ko Thein Toe, a nutrition researcher from Pazundaung Township.

The nuts can reduce the risk of colorectal cancer and heart disease and strengthen the brain and lower the risk of Alzheimer’s disease. It helps digestion and protects against colon cancer.

The handful of Badum nuts has rich sources of minerals such as Manganese and copper which keep the immune system healthy and Riboflavin to produce energy.

Healthy Monounsaturated fats, proteins, calcium and Vitamin E are found in the nuts so they can reduce the high risk of heart disease and heart attack.

It also contains phosphorus which matters to bone and teeth. It can deliver benefits for people with arthritis.

As prevention is better than cure, people should take necessary measures for any unwanted circumstances. Badum nuts are suggested for health benefits, said U San, a health enthusiast.

Myanmar-Thailand border trade up by $150.9 mln as of 10 June

THE value of Myanmar’s bilateral trade with the neighbouring country Thailand through the land borders was registered as a significant increase of US$150.925 million over the past two months of the current financial year 2022-2023 as against the year-ago period, the statistics issued by the Ministry of Commerce indicated.

The ministry reported that exports surpassed imports in trade with Thailand between 1 April and 7 June, with exports reaching over $693.96 million and imports valued at over $296.7 million, totalling $990.673 million.

During the corresponding period of the past FY2020-2021, Myanmar-Thailand border trade amounted to $839.74 million.

There are seven border posts between Myanmar and Thailand, Tachilek, Myawady, Kawthoung, Hteekhee, Myeik, Mawtaung and Meisei. Except for Kawthoung and Mawtaung, the remaining land borders showed an increase in trade this FY.

The value of border trade stood at $39.15 million via Tachilek, $467.6 million via Myawady, $25.83 million via Kawthoung, and $20.5 million via Myeik, $436.77 million via Hteekhee and $0.77 million via Mawtaung.

Myanmar exports corn to Thailand through the Myawady and Tachilek land borders. Additionally, exports of natural gas through Hteekhee in the Taninthayi Region contributed to the enormous increase in border trade with Thailand.

The use of Baht-Kyat in bilateral transactions also resulted in trade facilitation, said a trader.

Myanmar primarily exports natural gas, fishery products, coal, tin concentrate (SN 71.58 per cent), coconut (fresh and dry), beans, and bamboo shoots to Thailand. It imports capital goods such as machinery, raw industrial goods such as cement and fertilizers, and consumer goods such as cosmetics and food products from the neighbouring country. — KK/GNLM

China's Xi to host virtual summit for BRICS emerging economies

CHINESE President Xi Jinping will host a virtual summit with top leaders from Russia, India, Brazil and South Africa next week, marking the first such meeting since the Ukraine crisis unfolded.

The influential club of BRICS emerging economies formed in 2009 is home to more than 40 per cent of the global population and accounts for nearly a quarter of the world's gross domestic product.

Three of its members — China, India and South Africa — have abstained from voting on a UN resolution condemning Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

China and India have strong military links with Russia and purchase significant amounts of its oil and gas.

Xi in a call Wednesday assured his Russian counterpart Vladimir Putin that China will support Moscow's core interests in "sovereignty and security" — leading Washington to warn Beijing it risked ending up "on the wrong side of history".

South Africa, one of the few African countries wielding diplomatic influence outside the continent, has also refused to condemn the Russian military action, to safeguard important economic ties.

Xi will chair the virtual BRICS summit on 23 June, state news agency Xinhua said Friday, citing Chinese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Hua Chunying.

This year's theme focuses on "fostering high-quality BRICS partnerships (and) ushering in a new era for global development", Hua said. China said at a BRICS foreign ministers meeting in May that it wants other emerging economies to join the grouping, though it is unclear whether new members have been invited.—AFP

Deadly heatwaves directly threaten world economy

MORE frequent and intense heatwaves are the most deadly form of extreme weather made worse by global warming, with death tolls sometimes in the thousands, but they can also have devastating economic impacts too, experts say.

The prolonged and unseasonable scorches gripping the central United States (US) and rolling northward across western Europe, sending the thermometer above 40C (degrees Celcius), are likely to cause both.

Very high temperatures caused nearly 10 per cent of the two million deaths attributed to extreme weather events from 1970 to 2019, according to the World Meteorological Organization.

From 2010 to 2019 scorching heat was responsible for half of 185,000 extreme weather deaths registered.

In Europe, heatwaves accounted for about 90 per cent of weather-related mortality between 1980 and 2022, the European Environment Agency (EEA) has reported.

Heatwaves rack up economic costs as well, but they are harder to quantify than damage from a storm or flood, and more difficult to insure.

But extended bouts of great heat can result in more hospital visits, a sharp loss of productivity in construction and agriculture, reduced agricultural yields, and even direct damage to infrastructure. Excess mortality has an economic cost too.—AFP

China factory output, retail sales weak as Covid shadow persists

CHINA'S factory output and retail sales remained weak in May, official data showed Wednesday, with tepid demand and lingering Covid restrictions putting a damper on growth in the world's second-largest economy.

The government is persisting with a zero-Covid strategy to stamp out clusters as they emerge, but this has placed companies and consumers at the mercy of snap, economically damaging lockdowns. Retail sales sank 6.7 per cent on-year in May, the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) said, though that was an improvement from April's 11.1 per cent drop.

The figure was also slightly better than forecasts from analysts polled by Bloomberg.

"In May, our economy gradually overcame the adverse impact of the pandemic," NBS spokesman Fu Linghui told reporters.

"But we also have to see that the international environment has become more complex and severe, and the domestic economic recovery still faces many difficulties and challenges." It was the third straight month of contraction in retail sales, according to official data, suggesting nervous consumers are tightening their purse strings with the persistent threat of lockdowns. But industrial production was up 0.7 per cent after falling 2.9 per cent in April, while the urban unemployment rate ticked down to 5.9 per cent. Shanghai, China's most populous city, started emerging from a gruelling two-month lockdown in June, providing a boost to economic sentiment.—AFP

Ecuador roads blockaded on fourth day of fuel price protests

INDIGENOUS Ecuadorans used burning tires, tree trunks and stones Thursday to block access to the capital, Quito, on the fourth day of protests against high fuel prices and living costs.

Indigenous people, who make up over a million of Ecuador's 17.7 million inhabitants, embarked on an open-ended anti-government protest Monday that has since been joined by students and other discontented groups.

"We came to claim our rights because we are paid low prices for the products we produce," Nelson Jami, a farmer from the southern Cotopaxi province, told AFP at a blockade south of Quito.

Protests and roadblocks were registered Thursday in 15 of Ecuador's 24 provinces, authorities said, with hundreds of demonstrators gathered in Quito alone.

Firefighters said a truck carrying demonstrators overturned

China's online payment users top 900 mln: report

THE number of online payment users in China amounted to 904 million at the end of 2021, a report said Wednesday. The figure accounted for 87.6 per cent of the country's total netizens and was up by nearly 50 million from a year ago, according to the Payment & Clearing Association of China. China's cashless and cardless trend continues to grow, covering an increasing number of scenarios from ordering food to paying bus fare. Chinese banks handled 102.28 billion such transactions with a combined value of 2,353.96 trillion yuan (about 350 trillion U.S. dollars) last year, 5.32 times and 2.86 times that of 2012, respectively.—Xinhua

Japan's top court rules state not liable for Fukushima disaster

JAPAN'S top court on Friday dismissed claims that the government should pay damages in cases involving around 3,700 people whose lives were seriously affected by the 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster, absolving the state of responsibility for the crisis that led to mass evacuations.

The decision by the Supreme Court's Second Petty Bench was the first for the top court and covered four lawsuits filed in Fukushima, Gunma, Chiba and Ehime prefectures. Around 30 such lawsuits have been filed across Japan by people who had to evacuate from their homes or whose lives were greatly impacted by the earthquake- and tsunami-triggered disaster.

The ruling leaves Tokyo Electric Power Company Holdings Inc., the operator of the crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant, solely responsible for slightly over 1.4 billion yen ($10.5 million) in damages in the four lawsuits. The top court finalized the utility's liability in March for the first time. Reflecting the majority opinion of three out of four judges on the bench, the court ruled that the government "was highly unlikely to have been able to prevent the flooding" of the plant, even if it had exercised its regulatory powers over TEPCO to take preventative measures as the scale and direction of the actual tsunami differed from estimates.—Kyodo

Germans turn to food banks as inflation hits

Demand for food banks across Germany has increased 'significantly' since the start of the year, the Tafel food bank network says. PHOTO: AFP/FILE

GERMAN pensioner Gabriele Washah waits in line to fill her trolley with bags of carrots for 50 cents, yoghurts just past their sell-by date and bunches of wilting flowers.

With the cost of living soaring across Europe, the 65-year-old retired shop assistant is one of many Germans turning to food banks to make ends meet. "Sometimes I go home from the shop almost crying because I can't afford it any more," she told AFP outside the row of stalls in Bernau, near Berlin.

Nestled in an alleyway behind a big chain supermarket, the food bank sells at greatly reduced prices groceries donated by supermarkets, as well as cheap prepared meals.

Here, customers can pick up a full trolley of food for around 30 euros (around $32).

For Washah, that means bread, butter and her favourite sandwich filling, sausage — "which used to cost 99 cents ($1.02) but now sometimes costs more than two euros". Driven by the war in Ukraine, inflation in Germany soared to 7.9 per cent in May — its highest level since reunification in 1990, with food prices among those worst affected.—AFP

Russia-Ukraine conflict hurting East Africa's business community

THE Russia-Ukraine conflict is hurting the performance of East Africa's business community due to the rising prices of key commodities, the regional apex lobby said Thursday.

John Bosco Kalisa, the chief executive officer of the East African Business Council (EABC), told journalists in Nairobi, the capital of Kenya, that the crisis has disrupted global supply chains and has been devastating given the substantial amount of products that are imported from the two nations.

"The financial performance of businesses has been negatively affected given that we are net importers of wheat and edible oils from Russia and Ukraine which are key inputs for businesses," Kalisa said during the EABC-Trade Mark East Africa regional private sector consultative meeting on the African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA) and Tripartite Free Trade Area (TFTA).

He observed that the transmission mechanism of the impact of the Russia-Ukraine crisis has manifested in the form of skyrocketing prices of most household and commercial goods.—Xinhua

Denmark jails British sailor over fatal ship collision

A Danish court on Thursday sentenced a British sailor to 18 months in prison for his role in a fatal collision between his cargo ship and a Danish fishing vessel in the Baltic Sea.

“A 30-year-old British man, who was the officer in charge on the MV Scot Carrier, was today sentenced to one and a half years in prison by the Copenhagen district court for his role in a ship collision that claimed the lives of two Danish sailors,” the prosecution said in a statement.

Sharing border with US complicates gun violence issues in Canada: report

THE US gun control laws are erected on a state-by-state basis, and sharing a border with a nation like the United States complicates gun violence issues in Canada, Spectrum News 1 reported Wednesday. While gun violence is an issue in Canada, the magnitude of single shootings is greater in the United States because of semiautomatic weapons, according to the report. “Guns are too easy to get in the United States,” Jooyoung Lee, associate professor of sociology and faculty member at the Centre for the Study of the United States, was quoted as saying.—Xinhua

RUSSIA-UKRAINE CONFLICT

Some 10,000 civilians still in Ukraine’s Severodonetsk: governor

AROUND 10,000 civilians are trapped in Ukraine’s eastern city of Severodonetsk, where intense fighting with Russia has raged for weeks, the local governor said Thursday.

“Out of 100,000 residents, around 10,000 remain,” Sergiy Gaiday, the governor of the Lugansk region, said on Telegram.

He said Kyiv’s army is “holding back the enemy as much as possible”.

“For almost four months they have dreamt of controlling Severodonetsk... and they do not count the victims,” Gaiday said.

He said the Russian army “loses hundreds of fighters, finds reserves and continues to destroy Severodonetsk”.

The city is the biggest in the Lugansk region that is still in Ukrainian hands and it has been under heavy shelling for weeks.

The three bridges linking the city to Ukrainian-held Lysychansk, just across the river, have all been destroyed.

G-7 ministers to meet next week with focus on food crisis

The envisaged meeting will lay the groundwork for a three-day G-7 summit to be held from 26 June in Schloss Elmau in southern Germany, where the food crisis is also expected to be on the agenda, according to the sources.

Foreign Minister Yoshimasa Hayashi is considering attending the talks online and expected to explain the Japanese government’s supportive efforts to address food shortages through entities such as the UN World Food Programme, the sources said.—Kyodo

A former leftist guerrilla and a millionaire businessman will go head-to-head on Sunday hoping to become the new president of Colombia following a tense campaign in which no candidates appeared safe.

Gustavo Petro, 62, comfortably topped last month's first round of voting and is vying to become Colombia's first left-wing president.

But Colombia's traditional political elites have thrown their weight behind his unconventional independent rival, 77-year-old construction magnate Rodolfo Hernandez.

The most recent opinion polls have been inconclusive, meaning a tight race lies ahead.

A self-styled "revolutionary" warrior for the marginalized — black and Indigenous people, the poor and the young — Petro promises to address hunger and inequality.

Accused of despotic tendencies while serving as mayor of Bogota from 2012 to 2015, Petro is in his third presidential race.

The father of six is described as a good orator, though not necessarily charismatic. He is a map buff, and a keen social media user.

Born into a modest family on Colombia's Caribbean coast, Petro embraced leftist politics as a teenager after the 1973 coup d'etat in Chile that unseated Marxist president Salvador Allende.—AFP

Thai influencers charged with royal insult over adverts

THAI police charged three social media influencers with lese majeste Thursday over controversial social media advertisements for an e-commerce firm that monarchists said mocked a member of the royal family.

The TikTok clips promoting Lazada — owned by China's Alibaba Group — enraged ultra-royalists who called for it to be banned in the kingdom, and led to the Thai military barring the firm's delivery vehicles from its premises.

Criticism of the monarchy is taboo in Thailand, where King Maha Vajiralongkorn and his close family are protected by some of the world's toughest royal insult laws, with each charge carrying a prison term of up to 15 years.

Police Colonel Siriwat Deepo from the Technology Crime Suppression Division confirmed to AFP the arrest of the three people acting in the clips: Anuwat Pratumklin, Kittikhun Thamakitirat and Thidaporn Chaokovieng.

Their lawyer Duangrat Srinaunt told AFP the trio had been freed on bail and that they denied the charges.

In the clips Thidaporn, wearing a traditional Thai silk costume, sits in a wheelchair playing an influencer's mother — which angry monarchists said was an insulting allusion to a member of the royal family.

The material also attracted criticism from disability campaigners who described it as distasteful and disrespectful to wheelchair users.

EU beefs up fight against social media disinformation

THE EU is stepping up its fight against disinformation spread by accounts on Facebook, Google, Twitter and other social media with a bolstered code of practice presented Thursday. The text — a reinforced revision of the code originally launched in 2018 — aims to push the platforms to more urgently and systematically crack down on false advertising, demonetize accounts spreading disinformation and boost fact-checking. The code, obtained by AFP ahead of publication, remains voluntary. But officials expect around 30 bodies to sign up, including some of the biggest social media companies, including Facebook parent Meta, Twitter, Microsoft and TikTok, along with big advertising corporations. They all had input into the drafting of the updated code along with fact-checking outfits and media watchdogs such as Reporters Without Borders (RSF by its initials in French).

It was to be presented Thursday by the EU commissioner for transparency, Vera Jourova, and internal market commissioner Thierry Breton. The new code of practice contains some 40 commitments, around double the number in the previous version, along with indicators to measure how well they are being met.

While the previous text relied on self-regulation, the new one holds the biggest platforms — those with at least 45 million users in the EU — to binding measures set out in the bloc's Digital Services Act (DSA).—AFP

Nadal says his ‘intention is to play at Wimbledon’

SPANISH tennis legend Rafael Nadal said on Friday he intends to play at Wimbledon but his final decision rests on how his troublesome left foot feels after training in London next week.

“My intention is to play at Wimbledon,” Nadal said at a press conference in Mallorca.

“The treatment and the last week of training tells me there is a chance. I will travel to London on Monday, play an exhibition at Hurlingham and do a week of training to see if it’s possible.” Nadal said injections meant his left foot felt “asleep” during the French Open final on June 5 — he still beat Casper Ruud to claim a record-extending 22nd Grand Slam title.

Nadal travelled to Barcelona last week to begin “pulsed radiofrequency stimulation”, a treatment aimed at reducing nerve pain. Nadal’s spokesperson said the treatment would leave the nerves in his foot “temporarily numb”. The 36-year-old then had his first session on grass on Monday at the Mallorca Country Club in Santa Ponca and has steadily increased the intensity of his training this week.

“I have noticed a difference, some slightly strange feelings to be honest,” said Nadal.

“With the treatment in the nerves, things happen in your foot, sometimes one part of the foot goes numb, sometimes another.—AFP
