Announcement for armed resistance organizations' members including PDF who want to enter legal fold

LESSONS have already been learnt from the past that unity can only assure non-disintegration of the Union and perpetuation of sovereignty for the Republic of the Union of Myanmar where various ethnic peoples are living in. In the future, it must work for the unity and solidarity of ethnic brethren. Due to political adversaries and disagreements in ethnic affairs, internal armed conflicts occurred and it has hampered the development of the country.

Those who were persuaded by terrorist groups CRPH and NUG to commit acts of terrorism leading to the utter devastation of the country and launch armed resistance under various names of groups including PDF. Such doings can affect the stability of the State and ensue delay in ways to democracy.

As the strength of the country lies on its own, the entire people should cooperate in establishing a genuine and disciplined multiparty democratic system as per the five-point roadmap of the State Administration Council, “upon accomplishing the provisions of the state of emergency, free and fair multiparty democratic elections will be held in line with the 2008 Constitution, and further work will be undertaken to hand over State duties to the winning party according to democratic standards”, and in line with “one of the objectives on political affairs to build a Union based on democracy and federalism through a disciplined and genuine multiparty democratic system that is fair and just”.

Therefore, it is here announced that the organizations including PDF are welcomed if they enter the legal fold for their normal civilian lives by surrendering their weapons following rules and regulations to participate in future work plans of the country.

Don't give up on everything easily in life

ALL duties and functions are formed with challenges and opportunities. All works of building, manufacturing, maintaining, making preparation, decorating and so on are facing challenges and opportunities on a daily basis.

Hence, everybody needs to understand all things in operations must face challenges and opportunities without fail. That is why anyone should not give up on the processes of operating or managing every measure. If one gives up on something, one will never achieve success in the work process. Even if one achieves success in a relevant work process, it will not be real or not have an essence.

Everybody needs to take relevant measures to have progress or accomplishment while overcoming challenges and seeking opportunities. Indeed, the challenge and the opportunity are separated with an intangible margin between them. In actuality, everybody cannot reach the opportunity without penetrating the intangible margin of challenges. Even though it is not ensured that everybody can penetrate the intangible margin of separation layer into the opportunity, those who could overcome challenges ensure to enjoy the fruits of happiness in accomplishment.

Hence, all the persons should not easily give up on everything. Especially, students should not easily give up on their failure in examinations. Recently, the matriculation examination came out, bringing a large number of winners as well as the almost same number of losers in the exam. It is true that those who have already won the examination would be happy with their endeavours. At the same time, those who lost the examination may face downheartedness or depression. So, those exam losers should not fall under depression. They should not give up on such a measure. They should note that it is just a challenge in their lives.

Those exam losers should keep the best loss of their lives in their minds. Such a loss must be a great encouragement for them. They should shift the loss into the opportunity. They must boost up their mental capability to penetrate the intangible margin between the win and the loss. If they have the capability to penetrate the tangible margin before the loss, they will have to enjoy the sweet life of opportunity. If so, it is ready to take an opportunity for their lives. How the great astonishment it is!

So, all the people need to change their mindsets. They should not give up on all easily. They have to understand if they lose one thing, there will remain many things in which they may take opportunities in their lives.

WTO agrees to lift Covid vaccine patents, but is it ‘too late’?

THE World Trade Organization agreed Friday to temporarily lift patents on Covid-19 vaccines after two years of bruising negotiations, but experts expressed scepticism that the deal will have a major impact on global vaccination inequality.

The unprecedented agreement, sealed by all 164 WTO members after late-night overtime talks, will grant developing countries the right to produce Covid vaccines for five years “without the consent of the right holder”.

Since October 2020, South Africa and India have called for intellectual property rights for coronavirus vaccines to be temporarily lifted so they can boost production to address the gaping inequality in access between rich and poor nations.

But Friday’s compromise fell short of their earlier requests that the waiver apply to all countries — and also cover Covid tests and treatments.

Under the terms of the new deal, WTO members have six months to decide on whether to extend the measures “to cover the production and supply of Covid-19 diagnostics and therapeutics”.

“This does not correspond to the initial request,” said Jerome Martin, the co-founder of the Drug Policy Transparency Observatory, pointing to the fact that the deal only includes developing countries.

“We have to see what it does in the field, but it is not ambitious at all,” he told AFP.

out Switzerland, Britain and the European Union for “blocking anything that resembles a meaningful intellectual property waiver”.

“The conduct of rich countries at the WTO has been utterly shameful,” he said.

The agreement also disappointed the pharmaceutical lobby group IFPMA, which warned that “dismantling” patent protections would strangle innovation.

“The single biggest factor affecting vaccine scarcity is not intellectual property, but trade. This has not been fully addressed by the World Trade Organization,” said IFPMA’s director general Thomas Cueni.

And while vaccine doses were scarce early in the pandemic, that is no longer the case.

Nearly 14 billion doses had been produced worldwide as of mid-June, according to research group Airfinity.

As supply soars, some vaccine makers like the giant Serum Institute of India have stopped producing doses due to falling demand.

Yet many developing countries still lag far behind the rest of the world in vaccination rates. While 60 per cent of the world’s population has received two vaccine doses, that number falls to 17 per cent in Libya, eight per cent in Nigeria and less than five per cent in Cameroon, according to the World Health Organization.

“Our focus now is to ensure we address demand by persuading global procurers for vaccines to source from African producers,” the South African government said in a statement.

Glimpses of World History by Jawaharlal Nehru

THIS book stands as the best recommendation for the young people across India and the globe about the history of humankind until now, as Indira Gandhi mentioned.

Indeed, this is a history for young people. Nehru wrote a series of letters to his daughter, Indira, to introduce her to world history and aspects of humankind at a young age. She followed her father’s steps and became the Prime Minister of India. She is a respected leader with high intellect. Glimpses of World History, the priceless inheritance from her father contributes to her career. It helped her reach her goal.

It is only for young people, right? Absolutely not, it is a must-read for an adult person who lacks history knowledge. It will give benefits to the readers if you even slowly digest it in your free time. The author Boe Hlaing translated it into the Myanmar Language.

Actually, this book is a compilation of letters written by Jawaharlal Nehru, an anti-colonial nationalist and the first Prime Minister of India, to his daughter Indira while serving his prison terms. This series of letters are legendary pieces of writing. In other words, it was famous as the Glimpse of World History.

Tun Foundation Literary Committee published the second edition of this book, which includes 84 chapters highlighting the ancient and middle age, extracted from Glimpse of World History. Contents including the history of the early modern age have been published. As it is a collection of letters from a father to his daughter, it is narrative writing.

This book will help one understand what you have not realized and the political spectrum. Thus, it should be on your book rack. It contains nearly 500 pages with magazine-sized quality papers.

The Last Days of Madame Mao

“I was Chairman Mao’s dog, I bit whomever he asked me to bite”, the famous quote of Jiang Qing who formed a political alliance called the Gang of Four during the Cultural Revolution. This book is a biography of the wife of Mao Zedong.

It is also a modern story including political chaos and the struggle for power during the transitional period of Mao Zedong and Deng Xiaoping.

This book can enlighten readers as to the politics of China. The readers can vividly see the deep state and complex political system of China despite its seemingly quiet stance.

The author of this book remarked that as all flowers are born on a single iron tree, they all are efficacious. The antagonism and resentment between one family and another portrayed China’s political leadership.

The book started with “Oh dear, how did it happen? I wished those deities in heaven see you, Madame Jiang Qing muttered when she saw Chairman Mao suffering from illness. The book contains three parts: introduction, last part and epilogue. Madame Mao was an actress and political figure during the Cultural Revolution. She became the wife of Mao Zedong. Readers can feel the remorseful life of Madame Mao during her imprisonment.

The book also contains pictures of the founder of the People’s Republic of China Chairman Mao who led the Chinese Community Party, famous political figures of China and Madame Jiang Qing during her young age, actress life, marriage and prison life, with 240 pages. The cover of the book is Kyaw Min Maung’s artwork.

The author references Ross Terrill’s Madame Mao, The White-Boned Demon published by Stanford University Press and The End of the Maoist Era by Frederick C. Teiwes and Warren Sun for political backgrounds. He covered political events as well, he stated in his preamble.

DEVELOPING countries voiced “disappointment” as climate talks in Germany ended Thursday with frustrations flaring over a lack of momentum on helping vulnerable nations cope with the impacts of warming.

With world attention drawn towards other challenges, notably Russia’s invasion of Ukraine and spiralling food, energy and economic crises, the technical discussions meant to lay the groundwork for key United Nations negotiations later this year were mired in disagreements.

Representatives of nearly 200 countries arrived in the city of Bonn buoyed by the ambition displayed six months ago during the UN COP26 negotiations in Glasgow, where countries rallied around the urgent threat of climate change.

“After that sense of emergency had been established, probably the expectations were very high,” said Preeti Bhandari, senior climate adviser at the World Resources Institute.

But the meeting produced little tangible progress, even on the emissions-cutting ambitions that countries have agreed are needed to meet the Paris agreement goal of limiting warming to preferably 1.5 degrees Celsius. Finance is an ongoing sore point, with a promise of $100 billion a year from 2020 to help developing countries adapt to a warming world still not met.—AFP

Los Angeles warned over 4 July firework blazes during drought

THE punishing drought gripping the western United States has claimed another victim: Independence Day fireworks, with Los Angeles city bosses warning private displays could spark dangerous blazes.

Americans celebrate the 1776 declaration of independence from British rule on 4 July every year with proudly patriotic parties that often include drinking and pyrotechnics.

But managers in Los Angeles, the second-biggest city in the country, are warning residents they should avoid backyard firework displays.

“All fireworks in the city are illegal for personal use and only professional and permitted firework shows are the places where Angelenos should go to celebrate the Fourth of July with a fireworks display,” City Attorney Mike Feuer said.

“The risk of devastating, quickly spreading fires sparked by fireworks is severe this year, not to mention the ever-present threat of serious, life-altering injuries.

“That’s why we’re starting early this year, cracking down and urging Angelenos to leave fireworks to the pros.”—AFP

British journalist confirmed dead in Brazil

BRAZILIAN police on Friday officially identified the remains of British journalist Dom Phillips, who was found buried in the Amazon after going missing on a book research trip.

The grim result comes after the disappearance on 5 June of Phillips and his guide, indigenous expert Bruno Pereira, ignited an international outcry, with the United States calling Friday for “accountability”.

Phillips was identified through “forensic dentistry combined with forensic anthropology,” the Federal Police said in a statement.

It said it was still working on “complete identification” of the unearthed remains, which may include those of Pereira, who had received multiple death threats.

Veteran correspondent Phillips, 57, and Pereira, 41, went missing in a remote part of the rainforest rife with illegal mining, fishing and logging, as well as drug trafficking.

Ten days later, on Wednesday, a suspect named Amarildo da Costa de Oliveira — known as “Pelado” — took police to a place where he said he had buried bodies near the city of Atalaia do Norte, where the pair had been headed by boat. —AFP

South Korean engineer’s browser ‘grave’ goes viral

A South Korean engineer who built a grave for Internet Explorer – photos of which quickly went viral – told AFP Friday that the now-defunct web browser had made his life a misery.

South Korea, which has some of the world’s fastest average internet speeds, remained bizarrely wedded to Microsoft’s Internet Explorer, which was retired by the company earlier this week after 27 years.

In honour of the browser’s “death”, a gravestone marked with its signature “e” logo was set up on the rooftop of a cafe in South Korea’s southern city of Gyeongju by engineer Kiyoun Jung, 38.

“He was a good tool to use to download other browsers,” the gravestone’s inscription reads.

Images of Jung’s joke tombstone quickly spread online, with users of social media site Reddit upvoting it tens of thousands of times. Once dominant globally, Internet Explorer was widely reviled in recent years due to its slowness and glitches.—AFP

Spanish airline to fly UK-made helium airships

SPAIN’S Air Nostrum has become the first airline to reserve 100-seat helium airships that emit just one tenth of harmful emissions produced by jet planes, their British manufacturer said Wednesday.

A spokesperson for Hybrid Air Vehicles told AFP that Air Nostrum signed a deal to lease 10 Airlanders scheduled for delivery from 2026 onwards in a transaction worth over $600 million.

The Spanish regional carrier aims to become HAV’s launch customer while also diversifying its domestic fleet, using the Airlander on domestic routes.

The UK group will create 1,800 jobs at its facility in South Yorkshire, northern England, when it starts production later this year.

The hybrid ship – which looks like two blimps stuck together – has a helium-filled hull and will be propelled by a hybrid of electric and fuel-burning engines, with the goal of going all-electric by 2030.—AFP

China has world largest monitoring network for disease, health risk factors

CHINA has established the world's largest monitoring network for disease and health risk factors, the National Health Commission said Friday.

Noting China has improved its disease prevention and control system over the past 10 years, the commission said the country has seen a significant drop in the infection and death rate of many diseases. The fight against the COVID-19 greatly improved China's disease control capability, said Lei Zhenglong, an official with the commission.—Xinhua

Biden says Americans “really down” amid COVID-19 pandemic

US President Joe Biden has recently said Americans “are really, really down” as they continue to deal with the impact of COVID-19.

“They’re really down,” Biden told The Associated Press (AP) during an Oval Office interview on Thursday. “Their need for mental health in America has skyrocketed because people have seen everything upset.”

“Everything they counted on upset. But most of it’s a consequence of what’s happening, what happened is a consequence of the COVID crisis,” he underscored.—Xinhua

Iraq says on alert for possible new COVID-19 spread

THE Iraqi health ministry on Friday warned of the possibility of new COVID-19 spread in the country, calling on the public to follow health measures and receive vaccines, official Iraqi News Agency (INA) reported.

Covid shadow hovers over shrinking New Zealand economy

THE New Zealand economy shrank in the first quarter, performing worse than the central bank and economists had forecast as the country suffered a surge in Covid-19 infections.

The 0.2 per cent fall in Gross Domestic Product in the three months to March followed a 3.1 per cent rise in the December 2021 quarter.

It was also down on the 0.3 per cent average growth for other countries in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development that have already reported for the same period.

The New Zealand central bank, in its May monetary policy statement, predicted a modest rise while most economists had forecast a flat result.

The slump in economic activity came in a quarter marked by the arrival of the omicron variant of Covid-19 in the community, Stats NZ, New Zealand’s official data agency, said in a statement.

Finance Minister Grant Robertson said the decline reflected a “volatile global situation”, adding that the relaxing of border restrictions and influx of skilled workers and tourists “will help business and the economy rebuild.”

Canada confirms 168 cases of monkeypox

CANADA’S Chief Public Health Officer Theresa Tam confirmed a total of 168 cases of monkeypox in the country as of Friday.

Speaking at a health briefing, the top doctor said that these confirmed cases had been reported nationally, including two cases from British Columbia, four from Alberta, 21 from Ontario and 141 from Quebec.

“We continue to monitor and respond to the evolving monkeypox situation, including supporting provinces and territories in their efforts to roll out targeted vaccination campaigns,” Tam said, adding that they are working to raise awareness of how the virus is transmitted.

According to her, among the cases for whom information is available and has been reported to the Public Health Agency of Canada, all cases are male and ages range from 20 to 69 years.

However, the risk of exposure to monkeypox virus is not exclusive to any group or setting. Anyone, no matter their gender or sexual orientation, could get infected and spread the virus if they come into close contact with someone who has monkeypox or objects they have used, like personal objects, towels or bed linens, she said.

Monkeypox is a sylvatic zoonosis that may cause infections in humans and the disease usually occurs in forested parts of Central and West Africa. It is caused by the monkeypox virus which belongs to the orthopoxvirus family, according to the World Health Organization.— AFP

Asian air travel set for ‘V-shaped’ recovery: AirAsia

AIR travel in Asia is set to make a “V-shaped comeback”, budget carrier AirAsia’s parent company said Wednesday, as countries ease tough coronavirus curbs that have hampered the industry.

The region’s aviation sector has been slow to recover, as governments kept restrictions such as quarantines and testing in place far longer than in Europe and the United States.

But countries in the Asia-Pacific have been gradually scrapping curbs in recent months, and travel is picking up again.—AFP

Bank of Japan keeps easing policy despite US, Europe rate hikes

THE Bank of Japan on Friday stuck to its long-held monetary easing policy even as other central banks around the world hike interest rates to tame inflation.

But it said it would "pay due attention" to foreign exchange markets, a rare comment that comes after the yen hit a 24-year low against the dollar.

In a statement following a two-day policy meeting, the BoJ kept in place its rate of minus 0.1 per cent — part of a decade-old action plan aimed at boosting the world's third-largest economy — bucking pressure to address the impact of a weaker yen.

Its decision runs counter to a global tightening trend to tackle sky-high fuel and food prices linked to the war in Ukraine and supply chain snarls.

Global interest rate hikes have been led by the US Federal Reserve, which this week announced its most aggressive increase in nearly 30 years, and signalled more ahead in a battle to drive down inflation.

The European Central Bank also plans to start a series of rate increases next month, while the Bank of England announced a fifth straight increase on Thursday and Switzerland surprised markets with its own increase, the first since 2007.

The widening chasm between Japanese and US monetary policy has pushed the yen to its lowest level against the dollar since 1998, a cause for increasing concern that even the central bank made reference to.—AFP

Deal reached on US 5G antennas near airports: FAA

THE Federal Aviation Authority said Friday that mobile operators AT&T and Verizon have reached an agreement with airlines for the gradual deployment of additional 5G antennas around US airports.

"We believe we have identified a path that will continue to enable aviation and 5G C-band wireless to safely co-exist," said the FAA's acting administrator Billy Nolen in a statement.

Tensions between the two sectors flared at the end of 2021 when the FAA voiced concerns about possible interference between the altimeters of some aircraft — vital instruments for landing in certain weather conditions — and the deployment of 5G frequencies for which AT&T and Verizon shelled out tens of billions of dollars.

AT&T and Verizon finally agreed in January to delay by six months the activation of mobile phone antennas around certain airport runways. As the end of that voluntary moratorium approaches, companies have agreed to a "gradual" approach. The regional companies most exposed to possible interference have agreed to modify their radio altimeters by the end of the year. Telephone operators have at the same time agreed to further delay the activation of 5G antennas located around the airports most likely to be affected for another 12 months, with a gradual lifting of restrictions.— AFP

Tanzania targets internet giants with new tax

TANZANIA will introduce a digital tax this year, the country's finance minister said, in a move targeting global internet giants offering services in the East African nation.

The two-per-cent tax will come into effect in July and follows similar attempts by other countries to force US multinational tech companies to pay at least a portion of their revenues in local tax.

Tanzania's Minister for Finance and Planning, Mwigulu Nchemba, announced the measure on Tuesday as he presented the nation's annual budget.

"Tanzania Revenue Authority shall establish a simplified registration process to accommodate digital economy operators who have no presence in Tanzania," Nchemba told lawmakers.

"This measure is intended to keep pace with rapid growth in the digital economy," he added. The tax needs to be approved by Tanzania's parliament, which will vote on the budget before July.

The tax announcement follows talks in April between officials from the Tanzania Revenue Authority and US social media giant Meta — the parent company to Facebook, Instagram and WhatsApp.— AFP

SOUTH Korea's overseas direct investment more than doubled in the first quarter due to the alleviated COVID-19 pandemic, finance ministry data showed Friday.

The overseas direct investment amounted to 25.4 billion US dollars in the January-March quarter, up 123.9 per cent from the same quarter of last year, according to the Ministry of Economy and Finance.

The ministry attributed the triple-digit increase to the eased pandemic that reduced external uncertainty.

Direct investment in the overseas manufacturing industry came to 9.55 billion dollars, followed by the finance and insurance sector with 7.76 billion dollars, the real estate segment with 2.48 billion dollars, and the information and communications industry with 1.71 billion dollars.

Direct investment in the United States and China reached 8.73 billion dollars and 4.26 billion dollars respectively, and those to the Cayman Islands and Luxembourg amounted to 2.06 billion dollars and 1.61 billion dollars.—Xinhua

Austria's OMV to receive less Russian gas

AUSTRIA'S OMV energy company said on Thursday that it too would receive less Russian gas as Moscow steps up the energy pressure on Europe.

Russia on Wednesday slashed gas supplies to the continent for the second day in a row, in a move blasted as "political" by Germany.

"We can confirm that we have been informed by (Russia's) Gazprom about reduced delivery volumes," said OMV in a statement emailed to AFP.

The company said supply to its customers was "ensured at the moment". "If necessary at all, since there is currently a significantly lower demand, these volumes can be replaced by storage volumes and volumes from the spot market," it said.

OMV gave no further details on how much less gas it would receive and from when. Several European countries, including Germany, are highly reliant upon Russian gas for their energy needs. But since Russia's invasion of Ukraine, they have been battling to wean themselves off Russian power.— AFP

Russian farmers seek to ride out Western sanctions

YEVGENY Shifanov, co-owner of an organic farm, says his business has felt the sting of Western sanctions and he is no longer able to sell his grain to Europe.

But the 42-year-old puts on a brave face, saying he is pivoting to ex-Soviet countries such as Belarus as well as domestic clients. “We are more interested in our internal market, our economy,” the co-owner of Chyorny Khleb (“Black Bread”) told AFP.

Shifanov’s business — located in the village of Khatmanovo, some 150 kilometres (90 miles) south of Moscow on the banks of the Oka River — is one of numerous small farms that have mushroomed in Russia over the past decade. Moscow’s military intervention in Ukraine has devastated crops and farming in the pro-Western nation and disrupted crucial deliveries from Ukraine fuelling concern about hunger and food prices worldwide.

The military campaign also put a major focus on Russia’s own agriculture sector.

The country is the largest wheat exporter in the world and has been accused by the West of using grain as a geopolitical tool.

While Russia appears to be calling the shots in the current grain standoff with the West, experts say that its own agricultural sector is also bracing for tough times.

At Chyorny Khleb, which cultivates cereals on just over 1,000 hectares of land, green wheat stalks are knee-high. The farmers are enjoying a relative lull before harvesting starts in late July.

“In March or April, we begin to prepare the land, then we plant. Soon we will reap the results of our work,” said Alexei Yershov, a 28-year-old tractor driver before climbing into his red-and-black tractor and setting off into a buckwheat field.—AFP

A factory in Belgium behind a Salmonella contamination in Kinder chocolates sold in Europe can reopen conditionally after a clean-up by owner Ferrero, health authorities said Friday. Belgium’s AFSCA factory in Arlon,” in the country’s southeast, it said in a statement. The permission was given for three months, during which all the products will be analyzed before they can be distributed and sold, it added. Ferrero was forced to withdraw more than 3,000 tonnes of Kinder products worth tens of millions of euros after the Salmonella cases were traced to Kinder chocolates made in its Arlon factory.

AFSCA ordered the factory closed in early April, just before the Easter period that usually sees Kinder products fly off supermarket shelves.—AFP

US cosmetics giant Revlon files for bankruptcy

US cosmetics giant Revlon has filed for bankruptcy after years of stiff competition from rivals focused on online sales and supply chain problems.

In a court filing late Wednesday, the company initiated Chapter 11 proceedings to manage its debt, which it said stood between $1 billion and $10 billion.

Revlon, known for its signature nail polish and lipstick, reported long-term liabilities of $3.3 billion in the first quarter.

“Today’s filing will allow Revlon to offer our consumers the iconic products we have delivered for decades, while providing a clearer path for our future growth,” CEO Debra Perelman said in a statement.

In the United States, Chapter 11, known as reorganization bankruptcy, allows firms to restructure themselves while being protected from creditors and continuing to operate.

The company said it expects to receive $575 million in financing from its lenders if its bankruptcy is approved in court.—AFP

Japan deploys MSDF flotilla to Indo-Pacific

JAPAN has dispatched a Maritime Self-Defence Force flotilla on a deployment to 11 Indo-Pacific countries and one foreign territory as part of joint naval exercises with the United States and other countries undertaken to counter a more assertive China.

The fleet will make port calls in the Pacific island nations of the Solomon Islands, Tonga and Fiji for the first time, according to the Defence Ministry.

The fleet will also take part in the Rim of the Pacific exercise — the world's largest multinational naval exercise — the Pacific Vanguard exercise involving Australia, Japan, the United States and South Korea, and other drills, the ministry said.

The Izumo, one of the Japanese Maritime Self-Defence Force's two de facto carriers, will be accompanied by two destroyers, a submarine, patrol aircraft and others.

Besides New Caledonia, a French territory in the South Pacific, the 11 countries to be visited are the United States, India, Australia, the Solomon Islands, Tonga, Papua New Guinea, Palau, Vanuatu, Fiji, Vietnam and the Philippines.

Earlier this year, China and the Solomon Islands signed a security pact that would allow the deployment of Chinese military personnel, as well as the docking of Chinese warships at the islands.

Such a move has alarmed regional maritime democracies such as Australia, Japan and the United States.

Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi, who took an eight-country tour of the Pacific islands from late May to early June, was quoted by his ministry as saying while in the Solomon Islands that Pacific island nations are "not anyone's backyard." — Kyodo

RUSSIA-UKRAINE CONFLICT

Macron, Scholz, Draghi meet Zelensky in Kyiv

THE European Union's most powerful leaders on Thursday embraced Ukraine's bid to be accepted as a candidate for EU membership, in a powerful symbol of support in Kyiv's battle against Russia's invasion.

French President Emmanuel Macron, Germany's Chancellor Olaf Scholz and Italian premier Mario Draghi arrived in Ukraine by train and headed to the Kyiv suburb of Irpin, scene of fierce battles early in the brutal war.

They were later joined in Kyiv by Romania's President Klaus Iohannis and met their Ukrainian counterpart Volodymyr Zelensky, who has been lobbying his western allies for more and faster weapons deliveries and the promise of a European future. —AFP

Russian state TV airs videos of two missing Americans in Ukraine

A Russian state TV channel aired videos on social media of two Americans who went missing last week while fighting alongside the Ukrainian army, stating they had been captured by Russian forces.

United States President Joe Biden had said earlier yesterday he did not know the whereabouts of Alexander Drueke and Andy Huynh, both US military veterans whose relatives lost contact with the pair. The missing Americans — including a third identified as a former US Marines captain — are believed to be part of an unknown number of mostly military veterans who have joined other foreigners to volunteer alongside Ukrainian troops.

Yesterday evening, Russian journalist Roman Kosarev — who works with state TV RT channel — posted a video on messaging platform Telegram of Drueke speaking facing the camera.

"Mom, I just want to let you know that I'm alive and I hope to be back home as soon as I can be," said Drueke, who was seated in what appeared to be an office and dressed in military fatigues.

RT's official Telegram channel also posted an interview with Huynh, in which he said the duo had been "engaged in combat with Russian troops" near Ukraine's flashpoint Kharkiv area. —AFP

EU backs Ukraine's 'European dream' as Russia cuts gas supplies

EUROPE sent a powerful symbol of solidarity with Ukraine on Friday, when Brussels backed Kyiv's bid for EU candidate status, even as Russia shelled frontline Ukrainian cities and cut back gas supplies to the West.

With the European Commission's backing, Ukraine could now be added to the list of countries vying for EU membership as early as next week, when member state leaders meet at their Brussels summit.

All 27 EU leaders will have to agree to the candidacy, but the heads of the European Union's biggest members — France, Germany and Italy — already gave their full-throated support to the idea on Thursday, on a trip to a war-torn suburb of Kyiv.

Then on Friday, the European Commission gave the executive's formal backing to the bid, and EU chief Ursula von der Leyen made her position clear by donning a striking jacket in Ukraine's national colours. — AFP

Italy's Eni says Gazprom to reduce gas supply Friday by 50%

ITALY'S Eni said it will receive only 50 per cent of the gas requested Friday from Gazprom, following accusations by Rome the Russian state-backed company was peddling "lies" over a series of cuts.

"Gazprom has announced that it will supply only 50 per cent of what is requested (with actual delivered volumes almost unchanged with respect to the amounts delivered yesterday)," reducing supplies for the third day running, Eni said in a statement.

Several European countries, including Italy and Germany, are highly reliant upon Russian gas for their energy needs. As tensions rage with the West over the Ukraine war, Russia has stepped up the energy pressure, slashing gas supplies to the continent in a move blasted as "political" by both Italy and Germany. —AFP

US to propose new Pacific island initiative

THE United States plans to propose a new initiative to address Pacific island issues next week as it scrambles to offset China’s thrust into the region, a top White House official said Thursday.

Washington is “stepping up across the board” its engagement with Pacific island nations to address their concerns over everything from relations with Washington to illegal fishing, climate change and regional security, said Kurt Campbell, a senior official for Asia in the National Security Council.

“This is an area of enormous strategic importance. We have historical and moral responsibilities, both from the Second World War and, subsequent, the nuclear age,” Campbell told a forum held by the Centre for a New American Security, a Washington think-tank.

The new initiative will allow those involved, including the 18-member Pacific Island Forum, Japan and major Western powers, “to make clear our desire to keep a Pacific environment that’s open, that’s healthy, that’s productive, and free from coercion”, said Campbell.—AFP

Scandal-hit UK PM loses second ethics chief

BRITISH Prime Minister Boris Johnson’s top ethics adviser said he had quit after the government forced him into an “impossible and odious” position, according to a letter released on Thursday.

Christopher Geidt is the second official to quit the role in two years in protest at Johnson’s actions. His resignation on Wednesday came after the prime minister was enmeshed in the “Partygate” scandal, which saw him receive a police fine.

Lord Geidt had stayed on despite expressing unease over the Covid-19 lockdown-breaching parties in Downing Street, and endured a bruising time in front of a committee of MPs on Monday.

At that hearing, Geidt had said it was “reasonable” to conclude that Johnson broke Britain’s ministerial code by getting the police fine. Breaches of the code are traditionally a resigning matter.

But Johnson has refused to quit, and his office said it was “surprised” at the mandarin’s decision to step down now, as the term “Geidtgate” began circulating on social media.—AFP

Russia jails former US diplomat for smuggling drugs

A Moscow court has sentenced a former US diplomat to 14 years in prison for “large-scale” cannabis smuggling, the latest American to be caught up in Russia’s legal system.

Russia and the United States regularly clash over the detention of each other’s citizens and sometimes exchange them in scenes reminiscent of the Cold War.

The sentence comes as relations between Moscow and the West, particularly Washington, are tense after Moscow began its military operation in pro-Western Ukraine.

“The American citizen (Marc) Fogel has been found guilty,” the Khimki court said in a statement late Thursday.

It said Fogel committed “large-scale drugs smuggling” by crossing the Russian border, as well as “large-scale illegal storage of drugs without a commercial purpose.”—AFP

UK clears Assange extradition to US

BRITAIN’S government on Friday approved the extradition to the United States of WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange to face trial over the publication of secret files relating to the Iraq and Afghanistan wars. Home Secretary Priti Patel’s interior ministry said Assange had 14 days to appeal the decision, which comes after a UK court issued a formal order clearing his removal. Assange’s supporters have held frequent rallies to protest the planned deportation.

His wife, Stella, has pleaded for his release from custody after they had two children in secret while the 50-year-old campaigner was holed up for years in Ecuador’s London embassy. WikiLeaks called Patel’s decision a “dark day for press freedom and for British democracy” and vowed to pursue the appeal to the High Court, accusing the United States of having “plotted his assassination”.

“Julian did nothing wrong. He has committed no crime and is not a criminal. He is a journalist and a publisher, and he is being punished for doing his job,” the group said in a statement.

WikiLeaks said the case was “political”, as Assange published evidence that the United States “committed war crimes and covered them up”.

The extradition was an attempt to “try to disappear him into the darkest recesses of their prison system for the rest of his life to deter others from holding governments to account”.—AFP

Man aboard plane grounded in Argentina linked to Quds Force: Paraguay

ONE of the men aboard a plane grounded near Buenos Aires has ties to Iran’s Quds Force, Paraguay’s intelligence chief said Friday, despite claims by Argentina that no evidence links the case to Tehran’s overseas intelligence.

Intelligence chief Esteban Aquino told AFP that Captain Gholamreza Ghasemi did not merely share a name with a member of the Force — an arm of Iran’s Revolutionary Guards which is listed as a terrorist organization by the United States — but is in fact the same man.—AFP

La Liga confirms complaints to UEFA against City and PSG

LA Liga confirmed on Wednesday it has filed complaints to UEFA about Paris Saint-Germain and Manchester City “continuously breaching the current regulations of financial fair play”.
La Liga said the complaint to UEFA against City was made in April while the complaint against PSG was filed “this week”.
The Spanish league insisted ed it will continue to ramp up legal action against the two state-backed clubs.

La Liga has hired legal firms in France and Switzerland “with the aim of undertaking administrative and judicial actions before the relevant French bodies and the European Union as soon as possible”, read a statement from the league.
And in Switzerland, La Liga is “studying different representation options” to investigate the “possible conflicts of interest” of Nasser Al-Khelaifi, who is PSG chairman, in charge of Qatar-owned BeIN Sports, leads the European Club Association and sits on UEFA’s executive committee.

Manchester City won the race to buy Erling Haaland from Borussia Dortmund after paying the striker’s £51 million ($63 million) release clause but the deal, including salary and agents fees, could reportedly exceed £250 million. And PSG will pay Kylian Mbappe a yearly salary of between 40 and 50 million euros, after the Frenchman chose to reject Real Madrid and sign a new three-year contract with the Qatari-owned club.
PSG suffered a 224.3-million-euro ($240m) loss in 2020/21, an increase of 80 per cent on the previous year, the annual report from French football’s financial authority (DNCG) said earlier this month.—AFP

World Cup record-holder Klose to coach Austria’s Altagh

FORMER Germany striker Miroslav Klose, the all-time top scorer at World Cup finals, was on Friday named coach of Austrian Bundesliga club Altagh. This will be the 44-year-old’s first role as a head coach having previously been on the coaching staff at Bayern Munich and the Germany. He is set to sign a contract on Sunday.
The website of Altagh briefly crashed Friday after the news broke. “I am looking forward to my new job here,” Klose said in a statement. “I had a positive feeling right from the start.” Klose retired from international football after helping Germany win the 2014 World Cup. In Brazil, he netted the 16th goal of his career at tournament finals to break the previous World Cup record of Brazil’s Ronaldo.
He is also Germany’s record scorer with 71 goals in 137 internationals. Klose retired from all football in 2016 and was initially assistant coach of Germany under Joachim Loew before taking charge of Bayern Munich’s Under-17s team. In 2020/21, Klose graduated to the senior team where he joined Hansi Flick’s back-room staff as assistant coach.—AFP

National team striker Than Paing moves to Thai club

MYANMAR striker Than Paing has joined Thai League 3 club Kanchanaburi on a one-season contract, according to the Myanmar Football Federation.
The Kanchanaburi team officially announced on 17 June that they have been able to sign Than Paing and have started joining the club.
This is Than Paing’s first arrival at a foreign club and he has moved to the Thai League, where most Myanmar players are playing.
Than Paing is a Myanmar player who qualified for the U-20 World Cup and scored the only winning goal for the UAE in the quarter-finals of the 2014 AFC U-19 Championship to help Myanmar qualify for the 2015 U-20 World Cup.
Than Paing started his professional career with Yangon United and moved to Shan United in early 2021.
However, due to the inability to host the MNL tournament in 2021, the bilateral contract was terminated and he moved to a foreign club.
