THE Mainmahla Kyun Wildlife Sanctuary in Bogale Township of Pyapon District, Ayeyawady Region, has been designated as a natural reserve by the Ministry of Forestry on 5 January 1993 and an ASEAN heritage park in 2003. The mangrove forest in this wildlife sanctuary is a natural habitat for many endangered plant and animal species, and the source of livelihood and income for more than 8,000 households from 32 surrounding villages. FROM PAGE-1

However, the destruction of mangroves from the Mainmahla Kyun Wildlife Sanctuary started in 1985 when it was selected as a forest reserve for firewood extraction. People's excessive and unregulated use of trees and Cyclone Nargis that hit in 2008 caused the ruination of mangrove swamps.

The deterioration of the mangrove ecosystem generated from the destruction of mangroves produced effects on the biodiversity on which it depends, and the instability of the food chain, resulting in damage in food and water supply of locals.

Thus, forestry experts, environmental and wildlife conservation groups and social groups are already implementing the process of mangrove restoration planting, increasing plant growth density, improving the biodiversity including endangered mangrove species and making the mangrove ecosystem healthier. Therefore, there is a major need for the participation of residents.

The project implementers also want the local people to participate, and if they participate, they will get income opportunities, in addition to a healthier mangrove ecosystem that will increase agricultural produce and livestock products. — Moe Sat (Bogale)/GNLM

rocket to new high in edible oil markets

THE prices of palm oil hit a peak of K10,000 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kilogrammes) in the Yangon wholesale market on 17 August 2022, Ko Aung Tun, a trader from the Nyaungpinlay market told the Global New Light of Myanmar (GNLM).

Similarly, the prices of palm oil were estimated at K130,000 per 18-litre jerry can (10 visses). The wholesale prices of palm oil stood at K8,600 per viss last week. Shortly thereafter, the prices gradually rose to K9,400 per viss on 15 August, K9,700 per viss on 16 August and K10,000 per viss on 17 August, said Ko Myo, a trader who delivers the goods to the areas outside Yangon Region.

When the palm oil price spiked, the wholesale price of peanut was priced at K14,000-15,000 per viss on 18 August 2022. During the year-ago period last year, the edible oil prices were registered at K7,000 for peanut oil and K3,640 for palm oil. On 18 August 2020, peanut oil was valued at K6,500 per viss and palm oil fetched K1,775 per viss in the wholesale market.

A buyer Ma Than Win from Sanchaung Township told the GNLM that I purchased palm oil at K4,500 per viss and peanut oil at K5,500 per viss from Yenanchaung town in November 2021.

However, after nine months, the price reached the high of K10,000 per viss of palm oil and K14,000-15,000 per viss of peanut oil. There is still a large gap between palm oil and peanut oil, a seller Ko Nay Lin elaborated on market prices to the GNLM.

It is difficult to buy palm oil at the Nyaungpinlay market. A deep-fried dough stick vendor named Ko Win Sein reported that as the wheat price is also higher, I sell a dough stick at K250 for now. I will raise the price in need depending on the prices of the ingredients. – TWA/GNLM

Peanut, sesame prices remain upward trajectory

THE prices of peanut and sesame seeds continued upward spiral. Peanut prices hit over K7,000 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kilogrammes) in the domestic market, according to Mandalay's market price data.

On 18 July, the peanut prices moved in the range of K4,700 and K4,900 per viss depending on varieties, whereas the price jumped to K6,400-7,000 per viss on 18 August. The figures reflected an increase of K1,800-2,100 per viss within one month.

Similarly, the prices of sesame hit the highest of K122,000 per 45-viss bag of Niger seed, K185,000 per bag of brown sesame, K250,000 per bag of white sesame and K250,000 per viss of black sesame (Samone variety) on 18 July. The prices soared to K160,000 for Niger seed, K227,000 for brown sesame, K280,000 for white sesame and K265,000 for black sesame on 18 August. The price of various sesame seeds showed a significant rise of K15,000 to 43,000 per bag in one month.

After Myanmar's export ban on oil crops was eased and Kyat weakened against the US dollar in the local forex, the prices of peanut and sesame prices climbed, according to the commodities depot.

At present, an abundant supply of newly harvested peanuts and sesame is entering the market. The local millers are also increasingly purchasing them, coupled with the foreign demand, according to the commodity warehouses.

The hikes in peanut and sesame seeds raised the peanut oil price to K15,000 per viss and the sesame oil price to K10,000 per viss.

Last April, the world's top palm oil exporter Indonesia, which is one of the main oil suppliers to Myanmar, declared an export ban on cooking oil export to reduce the domestic shortage. Consequently, Myanmar's Trade Department under the Ministry of Commerce temporarily suspended exports of oil crops (peanut and sesame) from 9 May in order to have oil self-sufficiency.

Exports of Myanmar's edible oil crops will resume as the world's top palm oil exporters return to normalcy, according to a notification dated 5 July 2022 released by the Trade Department. — NN/GNLM

Fuel market sees slight decline in prices

The Supervisory Committee on Fuel Oil Import, Storage and Distribution stated that domestic fuel price is due to the price index set by Mean of Platts Singapore (MOPS), the pricing basis for many refined products in Southeast Asia.

FUEL prices dipped in the domestic market these days, according to the fuel price market.

On 16 August, the prevailing fuel prices stood at K2,365 per litre for Octane 92, K2,445 for Octane 95, K2,780 for premium diesel and K2,700 for diesel, whereas fuel prices decreased to K2,290 per litre for Octane 92, K2,370 for Octane 95, K2,760 for premium diesel and K2,685 for diesel on 18 August, showing a slight decline of K15-75 per litre.

The Supervisory Committee on Fuel Oil Import, Storage and Distribution stated that domestic fuel price is due to the price index set by Mean of Platts Singapore (MOPS), the pricing basis for many refined products in Southeast Asia.

Additionally, the drop in fuel prices and Kyat depreciation against the US dollar are contributing factors to the price fluctuation.

The Central Bank of Myanmar set the reference exchange rate for a dollar at K2,100, whereas the exchange rate against the US dollar hit K2,800 in the grey market.

The fuel price experienced an upward spiral in recent days when Kyat devalued at K3,000 against the dollar. Some fuel stations in regions and states faced short of supply.

However, some petrol stations are allegedly suspending fuel sales and setting limited sales on the possible shortage of fuel oil, sparking consumers' concerns and raising fuel prices. They are taking advantage of the consumers' concerns for their benefits, according to the statement released by the Central Committee on Ensuring Smooth Flow of Trade and Goods on 16 August.

The committee has assured adequate fuel supply until this month. It is also working together with Myanmar Petroleum Trade Association to ensure a steady fuel supply in order for the energy consumers to mitigate concerns.

Therefore, the consumers can complain about the halt in fuel sales and limited sales through the contact numbers of the respective regions and states if they find those stations that violate the rules, the committee stated.

The committee is governing the fuel oil storage and distribution sector effectively not to have a shortage of oil in the domestic market and ensuring price stability for energy consumers.

The Petroleum Products Regulatory Department, under the guidance of the committee, is issuing the daily reference rate for oil to offer a reasonable price to energy consumers. The reference rate in Yangon Region is set on the MOPS' price assessment, shipping cost, premium insurance, tax, other general cost and health profit per cent.

The rates for regions and states other than Yangon are evaluated after adding the transportation cost and the retail reference rates daily cover on the state-run newspapers and are posted on the media and official website and Facebook page of the department on a daily basis starting from 4 May.

As per the statement, 90 per cent of fuel oil in Myanmar is imported, while the remaining 10 per cent is produced locally. The domestic fuel price is highly correlated with international prices. The State is steering the market to mitigate the loss between the importers, sellers and energy consumers. Consequently, the government is trying to distribute the oil at a reasonable price compared to those of regional countries.

Some countries levied higher tax rates and hiked oil prices than Myanmar. However, Malaysia's oil sector receives government subsidies and the prices are about 60 per cent cheaper than in Myanmar. Every country lays down different patterns of policy to fix the oil prices. Myanmar also poses only a lower tax rate on fuel oil and strives for energy consumers to buy the oil at a cheaper rate. — NN/GNLM

Forge humanitarian spirit not for all but for us

EVERYBODY needs to hold up humanitarianism upon all for sharing good things with each other to enjoy happiness together. In fact, humanitarianism is acceptable for all global peoples as well as countries to shape the world for flourishing four cardinal virtues. If so, the whole world will enjoy the fruits of peace and prosperity.

In Myanmar traditions, humanitarianism is based on sharing of enjoyment with each other. Especially, it is necessary to provide aid to needy persons from wealthy persons. Those who have plenty of useful things but they do not afford to use them all along their lives need to share these things with other needy persons. If so, the things which cannot be affordably used will be useful for others.

Myanmar people need to show off their humanitarian spirit to all by providing all sorts of useful things for needy persons throughout the nation. In this regard, it is necessary to share humanitarian aid together with physical and mental encouragement to others to be able to meet the target all the people aspire to: building a peaceful and prosperous nation.

ian Day (WHD) as part of efforts for easing the humanitarian crises. With record-high humanitarian needs around the world, this year's World Humanitarian Day (WHD) builds on this metaphor of collective endeavours to grow global appreciation of humanitarian work.

The 2022 World Humanitarian Day campaign shines a light on the thousands of volunteers, professionals and crisis-affected people who deliver urgent health care, shelter, food, protection, water and much more.

Everybody must show the importance, effectiveness and positive impact of humanitarian work to mark world humanitarian day this year. Everybody needs to let flowing out of their compassion and empathy together with humanitarian aid to needy persons across the world.

Myanmar people need to show off their humanitarian spirit to all by providing all sorts of useful things for needy persons throughout the nation. In this regard, it is necessary to share humanitarian aid together with physical and mental encouragement to others to be able to meet the target all the people aspire to: building a peaceful and prosperous nation.

The Workplace and Benefit of Creative Thinking

By Yin Nwe Ko

THINKING skill has not been popular in Myanmar until the beginning of the 21st century. Most teachers in Myanmar have already known four skills: reading, writing, listening and speaking. Now, almost every teacher become aware of the presence of thinking skills and their importance vividly. There are several types of thinking skills viz. convergent thinking, divergent thinking, critical thinking, creative thinking, etc. Among them, I would like to emphasize the last one.

The idea behind the School or University Life competencies is that they prepare learners with skills that will be useful in the English language classroom and their future work environment. This article will also look at how creative thinking competency can be incorporated into classroom activities for teens and how this practice could directly impact a given work situation. Now, let us make a glimpse at it with the following categories.

Thinking outside the box

One of the essential concepts behind Creative Thinking is the ability to “Think outside the box”, to solve problems by coming up with new and original solutions or by taking a different angle on things. This requires us to be open-minded, organized, communicative (being a good listener is essential), and curious (feeling the need to enquire and ask questions about a topic). However, it doesn't necessarily require an amazing imagination; this is a common misconception about Creative Thinking. It is all to do with honing the skills, resources, and prior knowledge that particular students may have at their disposal.

Front classroom task

To show the connection between the classroom world and that of the work environment, consider the current topic of the climate crisis and climate strikes and what we can do in our daily lives to help save the planet. The fact that Greta Thunberg, a Swedish, has had such a prominent role in environmental activism in the world should, of course, act as an inspiration for teenage students in the classroom. Indeed, a nice angle for the topic is to focus on this new breed of teenage activists who come from different parts of the world but share Greta's concerns. However, the important thing here is to engage the learners not just with the content but with the skill of employing their ideas to solve problems rather than just repeating ones that have been previously suggested. Students could start by brainstorming their eco-friendly suggestions and applying them to their school environment.

In the real world of the work

It is not difficult for these practical suggestions to be transposed to a work setting. Indeed, for examples such as these, we could choose virtually any professional context. The skill on the part of the students lies in applying what they know to that particular situation. For example, we could ask students to imagine they worked for the marketing department of a world trade fair or conferences. How could they employ their knowledge of eco-friendly products to make their marketing plans more respectful of the environment?

Creative thinking shows us that there are many solutions to any problem, and developing one's creative thinking skills helps them recognize innovative solutions more quickly. ILLUSTRATION COURTESY OF FREEPIK ence. How could they employ their knowledge of eco-friendly products to make their marketing plans more respectful of the environment?

To ask this question, students need to think of different angles on the topic and respond imaginatively. For example, they could think of the freebies that marketing departments give to customers - say at a trade fair - and how the materials could be greener. For instance, rather than gifts such as plastic USB sticks, these could be made of bamboo and bags made from a potato-based product. To do this, students need only look around them at other examples from their worlds (e.g., potato-based bags are now available in most supermarkets) and apply them to their new context.

Adaptation and Collaboration

As mentioned earlier, the important thing about an approach like this is that it does not require learners to be great innovators or inventors, the “Thinking outside the box” is done within the restrictions of students' prior knowledge and world experience. Indeed, bringing in ideas and solutions from other life domains (e.g., direction. Again, this is another skill that can easily be practised in class whenever students need to work in groups to solve a problem, and once again it stands the students in good stead for their future work experience.

Importance of Creative Thinking

It is easy to get stuck in the same thought patterns, especially at work. However, those thought patterns may be hampering one's innovation and keeping them stuck in routines that do not serve them. Creative thinking shows us that there are many solutions to any problem, and developing one's creative thinking skills helps them recognize innovative solutions more quickly. Plus, creativity was the most sought-after soft skill in 2020, so strengthening their creativity skills can set them apart at work, too. Alongside critical thinking and focus, creative thinking is crucial to help recognize patterns that may not be obvious at first glance. Thinking creatively makes one a better problem-solver, which has far-reaching benefits in both their work and personal life. Expressive, creative thinking helps us challenge our own assumptions, discover new things about ourselves and our perspective, stay mentally sharp, and even be more optimistic.

The Benefits of creative thinking

Creative thinking does not just make one a better employee; it also makes one a better parent, student, and leader, too. By developing one's creative thinking skills, the benefits of thinking creatively can show up throughout their daily life.

Improved problem-solving capabilities

We do not just solve problems at work, and we should not only use our creative thinking skills at work, either! Developing one's creative thinking abilities can help one solve a wide variety of problems faster. As one's mind becomes more accustomed to using different thought techniques, one will quickly recognize patterns that one might not have before.

Stronger interpersonal connections

Creative thinking can help one communicate their ideas more clearly, which leads to better conversations and relationships with their friends, family, and coworkers. Plus, many creative thinking methods work best when they are done in a group. Developing new ideas together can strengthen bonds and help them combine ideas to create something truly innovative.

Heightened productivity

It may seem like creative thinking is a time-consuming distraction from one's work, but that could not be further from the truth. When we get stuck in thought patterns, it's easy to get frustrated when something is not working correctly. That frustration can cause our productivity to plummet. Taking a moment and engaging in a creative thinking strategy can renew one's motivation, reinvigorate one's passion, and help one find new solutions when they are stuck.

Higher self-awareness

Creative thinking allows one to try on perspectives that one may not have considered before. As one is exploring new perspectives, one may discover something about their own assumptions, viewpoints, or biases that one never noticed. Challenging one's traditional way of thinking can offer higher self-awareness and build one's emotional intelligence. With creative thinking, one strengthens their ability to reframe their perspective and harness a growth mindset.

To sum up my article, I would like to focus on some factors that our teachers should always be aware of the changing and improving advanced techniques and concepts in education. We should not have drowned in our textbooks daily. We should keep abreast of our qualifications with the international aspects in order to raise and improve our students' abilities day after day.

16 killed, many missing in northwest China floods

SIXTEEN people were killed and many left missing in flash flooding in northwest China, state media reported Thursday, as the country battles extreme weather that has shuttered factories and caused rolling power cuts.

The deluge comes during a summer of soaring temperatures and torrential rains in China, with multiple cities clocking their hottest days on record and floods causing hundreds of millions of dollars worth of damage.

Floods hit this week in a mountainous region of Datong county in Qinghai province, affecting more than 6,200 people from six villages, state broadcaster CCTV said.

Photos of the aftermath showed roads covered in mud, uprooted trees, damaged homes and rescue workers carrying shovels. "As of noon on the 18th, 16 people have been killed," added CCTV, saying that rescue work was ongoing.

At least 18 people are missing and 20 have since been rescued, and a "frontline headquarters" has been set up to organise the emergency response, according to state media reports.

"The rescue work is progressing in an orderly manner," the report said, adding that sudden heavy rainfall Wednesday night had triggered the situation.

Extreme weather

Scientists say extreme weather across the world has become more frequent due to climate change, and will likely grow more intense as temperatures rise.

Hundreds evacuated as 'frightening' floods hit New Zealand

HUNDREDS of families on New Zealand's South Island were forced to leave their homes on Thursday after dramatic flooding prompted a state of emergency in three regions.

A tropically fuelled storm has dumped more than 30 centimetres (11 inches) of rain on parts of the South Island, causing rivers to burst their banks. The extreme weather has also felled trees, blocking major roads.

A state of emergency was declared Wednesday in Buller, on the west coast, and Nelson — where 233 homes have been evacuated after a month's worth of rain fell in just 15 hours.

The deluge transformed Nelson's main river, the Maitai, into a torrent — flooding houses, exposing pipes and leaving streets knee-deep in water.

City mayor Rachel Reese described the flash flooding as a "one-in-100-year event" as search and rescue teams, plus military personnel, helped people on submerged streets.

Reese warned locals to treat all water as contaminated, because some sewers had broken.

Nelson resident Sam Lagrutta said the situation was "frightening" after police gave him just five minutes to leave his home.

"I literally just grabbed a carry-on bag and filled it with my passport, wallet and anything important I could find," he told the New Zealand Herald.

A further 160 households along the South Island's west coast were also asked to evacuate. Buller has been repeatedly hit by flooding in recent years.—AFP

Dutch anglers save fish as Rhine drought bites

ANGLER Mark Kouwenhoven grins as he wades into what's left of a dried-up Dutch lake where his colleagues are throwing slime-coated fish into buckets. It's not the kind of catch they're used to — but that's because this time they're helping the government to save the fish from the drought gripping Europe. Each fish will be moved nearby to the River IJssel, a Dutch branch of the drought-hit River Rhine that until recently had fed the lake with fresh water. "It's a dirty job but somebody has to do it," says the 32-year-old Kouwenhoven, a member of the Eastern Netherlands Sportfishing Association.

"We're fishermen, we care for the fish, we don't want them to die. We love fish!" he adds, dressed in a pair of long waterproof waders.

The Netherlands is famed as a "land of water" where canals and dikes protect against rising seas, but the country declared an official water shortage earlier this month. One key factor in the drought has been the low water levels in the Rhine. Europe's mighty river rises in Switzerland and flows through several countries including France and Germany, before flowing into the sea in a huge delta in the Netherlands.

'Big net'

Dry, parched banks are now exposed to the air along the Dutch distributaries of the Rhine such as the Waal, the Nederrijn and the IJssel.

The water in the small lake near the town of Giesbeek used to be about a metre higher, with fish swimming in from a channel from the IJssel, but is now down to about 10 centimetres, anglers say.—AFP

Wildfires in Portugal, Spain contained

MASSIVE wildfires in Portugal and Spain were largely under control Thursday after forcing thousands from their homes and destroying large swathes of land.

The fires in both countries followed punishing heatwaves and long dry spells, leaving forests parched and primed to burn.

In Portugal, over 1,000 firefighters were still deployed in the Serra da Estrela national park, but the blaze was mostly contained after days of burning out of control.

With more hot weather forecast, however, there were fears it could flare up again.

"The fire is under control, but it is not extinguished. Consolidation work will continue in the coming days," civil protection commander Miguel Oliveira told TSF radio.

"It is always possible, and very likely, that there will be new reactivations, but we hope that they do not take on worrying proportions," he said.

The huge fire in central Portugal was brought under control last week, only to restart again Monday.—AFP

2022 MONKEYPOX OUTBREAK

WHO says Monkeypox vaccines efficacy below 100 %

VACCINES against monkeypox are not 100 per cent effective and that is why, people must reduce their own risks of infection, WHO technical lead Rosamund Lewis said on Wednesday.

This comes as more than 35,000 cases of monkeypox have been reported worldwide across more than 92 countries and 12 deaths have been attributed to the disease.

Addressing a press briefing, Lewis said that WHO is “not expecting a 100 per cent efficacy” for these vaccines for the prevention of monkeypox.

“We don’t have the exact information ... it reminds us that vaccine is not a silver bullet? That every person who feels that they are at risk and appreciates the level of risk and wishes to lower their risk have many interventions at their disposal, which includes vaccination where available, but also includes protection from activities, where they may be at risk,” she said.

WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said that almost 7,500 cases were reported last week, which is a 20 per cent increase over the previous week.

The WHO chief also said that most of the monkeypox cases are being reported from Europe and the Americas—among men who have sex with men.

“More than 35,000 cases of monkeypox have now been reported to WHO, from 92 countries and territories, with 12 deaths. Almost 7,500 cases were reported last week, a 20 per cent increase over the previous week, which was also 20 per cent more than the week before,” he said during a media briefing.

COVID-19 SITUATION UPDATE WORLDWIDE

China’s service sector sustains recovery amid COVID-19 resurgence

CHINA’S service sector, a key driver of its economic growth, has sustained recovery momentum in July despite a resurgence of sporadic COVID-19 cases and a weak property market.

The services production index grew 0.6 per cent year on year last month, data from the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) showed. In the first seven months, the index dropped by 0.3 per cent year on year, narrowing 0.1 percentage points from that of the first six months. Overall, the recovery trend of the service sector remains unchanged, said Fu Linghui, a spokesperson with the NBS. Modern service industries witnessed good growth momentum, according to Fu. Information transmission, software and information technology services and financial intermediation services posted strong performance as their indices climbed 10.3 per cent and 4.9 per cent year on year, respectively, in July.

Multiple industries stayed within the high expansion range of 55 per cent and above, including railway and air transportation, accommodation, catering, and culture, sports and entertainment, he said.

Adding to the evidence of a recovering service sector, the index for business activities in the sector, boosted by the pro-growth policies, stood at 52.8 in July, according to the NBS.

The index for business activity expectations in the service sector came in at 58.8 last month, which was within the high expansion range and reflected rebounding confidence among most companies in the sector.

Investment in the service sector also picked up. In July, fixed-asset investment in high-tech services grew by 14.3 per cent year on year, NBS data showed.

Investment in services for the transformation of scientific and technological achievements and research, development and design services went up by 16.2 per cent and 15.5 per cent, respectively. Fu also noted that the downward trend in the property industry had put a damper on the service sector, which dragged down the July services production index by 1.7 percentage points. At the same time, the reduction in service business activities like conventions and exhibitions, due to the resurgence of COVID-19 cases last month, weighed on the index as well, he said.

The recent, frequent international instabilities and the resurgence of the sporadic domestic virus have both posed new challenges for the development of the service sector, Fu pointed out. But the spokesperson voiced optimism over the recovery momentum in the service sector.

While stressing support from the modern service industries and stable expectations of most service companies, Fu said transportation and travel services have also improved as the targeted measures to contain the epidemic have allowed both goods to circulate at a faster pace and people to go out and travel more.— Xinhua

Malaysia reports 3,516 new COVID-19 infections, 15 new deaths

MALAYSIA reported 3,516 new COVID-19 infections as of midnight Wednesday, bringing the national total to 4,744,929, according to the health ministry.

There were three new imported cases, with 3,513 cases being local transmissions, data released on the ministry’s website showed.

Another 15 deaths were reported, pushing the death toll to 36,117.

The ministry reported 2,541 new recoveries, bringing the total number of cured and discharged to 4,667,111.

There are 41,701 active cases, with 92 being held in intensive care and 49 of those in need of assisted breathing.

The country reported 5,782 vaccine doses administered on Wednesday alone and 86 per cent of the population have received at least one dose, 84.1 per cent are fully vaccinated and 49.6 per cent have received the first booster and 1.3 per cent have received the second booster.— Xinhua

Singapore reports 3,762 new COVID-19 cases

SINGAPORE reported 3,762 new cases of COVID-19 on Wednesday, bringing the country’s total tally to 1,805,698.

Of the new cases, 382 cases were detected through PCR (polymerase chain reaction) tests and 3,380 through antigen rapid tests (ART), according to statistics released by the Ministry of Health. Among the PCR-confirmed cases, 352 were local transmissions and 30 were imported cases.

Among the ART-confirmed cases with mild symptoms and assessed to be of low risk, there were 3,207 local transmissions and 173 imported cases, respectively. A total of 479 cases are currently warded in hospitals, with 11 cases in intensive care units.— Xinhua

Brazil lifts mandatory mask use in airports, on flights

BRAZIL’S National Health Regulatory Agency (Anvisa) on Wednesday lifted the mandatory use of face masks in Brazilian airports and on flights, due to the current COVID-19 epidemiological situation.

However, Anvisa said it continues to recommend the use of face masks and social distancing as they are effective measures to mitigate the risk of disease transmission.

“Given the current situation, the use of masks that was adopted as a collective health measure will become an individual protection measure,” it said. — AFP

Indian economy revives as car sales, exports pick up

RISE in vehicles' sales and exports of various commodities including merchandise, agriculture products and sugar indicate that the Indian economy is reviving bit by bit, after being battered by COVID-19 over the past two-and-a-half years.

The country's economy is expected to get a further boost in the remaining part of the current calendar year as the festive season, which has just begun and will last till the year-end, is expected to witness a surge in purchases particularly of vehicles, jewellery and housing units.

Total production of vehicles including two-wheelers and three-wheelers in the country rose to nearly 2.2 million in July 2022, registering a growth of 5.61 per cent compared to the same month in the previous year. Similarly, passenger vehicles' sales rose to 293,865, an increase of 6.55 per cent over July 2021.

hicles in the country indicate a rising purchasing power, which means the overall employment scene has improved in recent weeks compared to the past two-and-a-half years.

Data from the Centre for Monitoring Indian Economy (CMIE) showed that India's unemployment rate in July 2022 dropped to a six-month low of 6.8 per cent, attributing mainly to a better monsoon and an uptick in agricultural activities in rural areas.

The joblessness rate dropped from 7.8 per cent in June 2022 to 6.8 per cent in July 2022. But, in urban India, the unemployment rate rose to 8.21 per cent in July from 7.3 per cent in June.—Xinhua

China reconnects nuclear reactor after shutdown due to damage

A nuclear reactor in southern China has been reconnected to the electricity grid more than a year after it was shut down to repair damage, its operator said.

Part of Taishan nuclear power plant in Guangdong province was taken offline last July after Chinese authorities reported minor fuel rod damage and a build-up of radioactive gases at the plant.

Operators reconnected the damaged reactor after months of "inspection and maintenance", China General Nuclear Power Group (CGN) said in a stock exchange filing late on Tuesday.

"The monitoring results of Taishan Nuclear Power Plant and its surrounding environment are normal," CGN said in the filing, without giving further details.

The plant is operated in a partnership with French energy giant EDF and uses the European Pressurised Reactor (EPR) design, which was developed to relaunch nuclear power in Europe after the Chernobyl catastrophe of 1986.

The design is touted as offering higher power and better safety, but EPR projects in Finland, France and Britain have been plagued by delays and cost overruns.

There are more than 60,000 fuel rods in the reactor and the proportion of damaged rods was "less than 0.01 per cent", China's environment ministry and nuclear regulator said before the reactor's closure.

They called the damage "inevitable" due to factors including fuel manufacturing and transportation.

EDF also previously blamed the build-up of radioactive gases at the Taishan plant on deteriorating coating on some uranium fuel rods.—AFP

Japan logs trade deficit in July for 12 months in row as imports rise

JAPAN posted a trade deficit of 1.44 trillion yen ($10.7 billion) in July against a backdrop of rising import prices driven by Russia's invasion of Ukraine and the yen's weakness, remaining in the red for the 12th straight month, government data showed Wednesday.

Imports jumped 47.2 per cent from a year earlier to 10.19 trillion yen, increasing for the 18th straight month and bringing the deficit to all-time high for July. Exports rose 19.0 per cent to 8.75 trillion yen, up for the 17th month in a row.

The values of imports and exports were both the highest since comparable data became available in January 1979, according to the Finance Ministry's preliminary report.

Analysts warn that the outflow of income under the prolonged trade deficit is hurting companies and households at home at a time when the broader economy shows few signs of sharp recovery from the novel coronavirus shock.

Imports soared as prices for crude oil from the United Arab Emirates and those for coal and liquefied natural gas from Australia were higher.

Exports gained due largely to brisk shipments of automobiles and semiconductor manufacturing devices to the United States and those of diesel fuel to the Philippines, the ministry said.

A ministry official attributed the expansion in imports and exports mainly to rising prices, while saying crude oil prices were around twice as high compared with the same month last year.

The value of petroleum imports rose to 1.14 trillion yen in the reporting month from a year earlier, increasing for the 16th consecutive month, the ministry said.—Kyodo

New Zealand hikes official cash rate to 3%

THE Reserve Bank of New Zealand (RBNZ)'s Monetary Policy Committee raised the Official Cash Rate (OCR) to three per cent from 2.5 per cent on Wednesday.

The Committee agreed it remains appropriate to continue to tighten monetary conditions at a pace to maintain price stability and contribute to maximum sustainable employment. Core consumer price inflation remains too high and labor resources remain scarce, said the central bank in a statement.

The central bank uses the OCR to control inflation, encouraging people to either spend or save. The OCR is the interest rate the RBNZ pays on settlement accounts and is reviewed seven times a year.—Xinhua

US retail sales flatline in July as gas prices fall

US retail sales held steady in July as gas prices fell sharply, but the new data released Wednesday showed consumers are still spending, keeping the pressure on the Federal Reserve to continue its aggressive interest rate hikes.

Americans flush with savings have been a key driver of the US pandemic recovery, and the Fed is keeping a careful eye on economic data as it battles to quash red-hot inflation without tipping the world's largest economy into recession.

While the headline data of the closely-watched report flatlined at $682.8 billion, rather than rise slightly as economists had expected, sales increased 0.7 per cent when gasoline and motor vehicles are excluded from the calculation, the Commerce Department said.

"Despite the flat headline reading, the core retail sales figures in July show the consumer has staying power," Kathy Bostjancic of Oxford Economics said.—AFP

Fashion designer Hanae Mori dies at 96: Japanese media

JAPANESE fashion designer Hanae Mori, who cracked the elite world of Parisian haute couture, has died at her home in Tokyo aged 96, Japanese media reported Thursday.

But she was also a pioneer for Japanese women as one of a tiny number to head an international corporation.

Mori died on 11 August, Kyodo news agency said on Thursday, citing her office, without giving further details.

Public broadcaster NHK and other media outlets also reported the news, saying a private family funeral had already taken

Damaged freighter blocks traffic at drought-hit Rhine

A stranded cargo ship caused traffic to be halted Wednesday at the Rhine river in western Germany after suffering a technical fault, authorities said, at a time when water transport was already ailing from a drought. The vessel is stuck at St Goar and Oberwesel, in between the cities of Mainz and Koblenz, water police said, adding that they were expecting to clear the stricken ship within the day. The machine damage came as water levels in the Rhine had dropped to critical points at several locations, including at nearby Kaub — a known bottleneck for shipping where the river runs narrow and shallow. The gauge at Kaub stood at 34 centimetres (13 inches) on Wednesday, well below the 40-cm reference point.—AFP

Opposition demands extra Diet session to probe Unification Church ties

JAPANESE opposition parties called Thursday for an extraordinary parliamentary session to be opened as soon as possible to examine the controversial links between members of Prime Minister Fumio Kishida’s government and the Unification Church.

The move came as increasing numbers of ruling party lawmakers have been tied to the religious group, a major political issue in the wake of the assassination of former Prime Minister Shinzo Abe.

Among them, Koichi Hagiuda, policy chief of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, who has come under public scrutiny after being reported to have visited a facility linked to the religious group accompanying a then-LDP candidate in June, told reporters on Thursday that he has “never received financial support or donations from the organization” or asked for help in election campaigning.

But Hagiuda and his office said his support group and a local LDP chapter have paid fees for attending charity parties to a group linked to the church on six occasions between 2012 and 2019.

Still, Kishida, who reshuffled his Cabinet earlier this month, is unlikely to succumb to the pressure to hold the extraordinary session, given he is considering one in October, sources close to the premier said. — Kyodo

RUSSIA-UKRAINE CONFLICT

China to send troops to Russia for joint military drills

CHINESE troops will travel to Russia to take part in joint military drills, Beijing’s defence ministry said. Beijing and Moscow have close defence links and China has said it wants to push bilateral relations “to a higher level,” even as Moscow faces international sanctions and widespread condemnation over its war in Ukraine.

China’s defence ministry said Wednesday its participation in the annual “Vostok” exercises — which Moscow has said will take place from 30 August to 5 September — is part of a bilateral cooperation agreement with Russia.—AFP

LATEST DEVELOPMENTS

Here are the latest developments in the war in Ukraine:

‘Urgent’ inspection of nuclear plant

NATO chief Jens Stoltenberg says it is “urgent” that the International Atomic Energy Agency be allowed to inspect the Zaporizhzhia nuclear power plant in Ukraine that is under Russian military control.

Speaking of the danger of “a nuclear accident or incident”, he tells reporters in Brussels that Moscow’s military control of the facility “endangers the population of Ukraine, of neighbouring countries and of the international community”.

Crimea bridge should be ‘dismantled’

UKRAINIAN presidential aide Mykhaylo Podolyak calls for Moscow’s main bridge connecting the Kremlin-controlled Crimea to the Russian mainland to be “dismantled”, in the wake of several attacks on the peninsula. The 19-kilometre (12-mile) bridge inaugurated in 2018 by Russian President Vladimir Putin is Moscow’s key military and civilian land corridor to the peninsula, which it annexed from Ukraine in 2014.

Crimea attacks: Ukraine puts pressure on lost territory

TWO massive attacks on Russian bases in Crimea far from the frontline in recent days have given Ukraine a boost -- eight years after Russia’s humiliating takeover of the strategic peninsula.

Russia’s defence ministry said a series of explosions at an ammunitions storage facility near the village of Dzhankoi on Tuesday, which also damaged a railway line, were an act of “sabotage”.

There was no public claim of responsibility by Ukrainian authorities, but presidential aide Mykhailo Podolyak called it “demilitarization in action” — using the same terminology employed by Russia to justify its invasion of Ukraine.

The blasts came exactly a week after an attack on an air base which a senior Ukrainian official speaking on condition of anonymity described as a “well-prepared, special partisan job”. —AFP

Once hated by the left, FBI is now US conservatives’ evil demon

AGENTS of the US Federal Bureau of Investigation are used to criticism, but never in the agency’s history have they faced anything like the attacks from conservatives after last week’s raid on former president Donald Trump’s Florida home.

Over its more than 100-year history, the FBI has been excoriated by southerners committed to racist segregation, by civil libertarians defending political activists and especially by African Americans whose 1960s liberation movement was treated as an acute national threat by the agency.

But the extraordinary threats of the past week originate in the FBI’s political bedrock: conservative Republicans.

“It’s the world turned upside down,” said Kenneth O’Reilly, a retired University of Alaska historian, who has written books about the FBI and politics.

According to O’Reilly, the FBI has historically been a “deeply conservative institution” with a bipartisan constituency in Washington.

But since Trump condemned the FBI as corrupt and fascist after they searched his Mar-a-Lago estate on 8 August for illegally retained top secret documents, the attacks have kept coming — and his supporters have fanned the flames.

Republican National Committee chairwoman Ronna McDaniel accused the bureau of “abuse of power”.

Senator Marco Rubio, a Republican from Florida, compared the agency to secret police in a Marxist dictatorship, while Representative Paul Gosar declared: “We must destroy the FBI”.— AFP

Malaysia’s Najib starts final bid to overturn 1MDB jail sentence

MALAYSIA’S top court on Thursday began hearing ex-leader Najib Razak’s appeal to overturn his jail sentence for corruption in a high-stakes legal gambit that could see him locked up or potentially launching a political comeback.

The Federal Court on Tuesday dismissed the former prime minister’s plea for a retrial, clearing the way for the hearings, which will be held until 26 August.

But as the hearing started, lead defence lawyer Hisyam Teh Poh Teik surprised the court by telling the panel of five judges that he wanted to be discharged from the case, sending the tribunal into a recess. The hearing resumed after two hours, with the court refusing to discharge Hisyam and Chief Justice Tengku Maimun Tuan Mat ordering the prosecution to present its case.—AFP

Death toll in Kabul mosque blast rises to 21: police

A blast which ripped through a mosque packed with worshippers in the Afghan capital Kabul killed at least 21 people and wounded more than two dozen others, police said Thursday.

The number of bombings across Afghanistan has dropped since the Taliban returned to power, but several attacks — many targeting minority communities — have rocked the country in recent months, including several claimed by the jihadist Islamic State group.—AFP

Cuba unable to identify remains of 14 firefighters after fuel plant blaze

THE remains of 14 firefighters who died combatting a major blaze at a Cuban fuel depot last week are too badly burned to be identified, a specialist said Wednesday.

In total, 16 firefighters were killed and 17 others hospitalized due to the massive fire in Matanzas, on Cuba’s northern coast.

“Given that the remains found were subjected to high temperatures for a long time, it is not possible to apply DNA extraction,” Jorge Gonzalez Perez, president of the Cuban Society of Legal Medicine, told a press conference.

The fire first broke out on 5 August, when lightning struck a tank containing 26 million litres of fuel.

Early the next morning, a major explosion occurred when a second fuel tank caught fire.

Gonzalez Perez said that at the time there were 30 people near the second tank, and that testimony from the survivors allowed investigators to locate remains of those who perished.

“We have explained to the relatives that we have 14 groups of skeletal remains, which correspond to the 14 who are missing, but we cannot differentiate one from the other and name any of those who are there,” he said.

Four of the eight tanks at the depot — each with the capacity to hold 50 million litres (13.2 million gallons) of fuel — collapsed during the blaze, which was finally extinguished late last week.— AFP minister said Wednesday.

The suspect “admitted to being involved in the terrorist attack” in the neighbourhood of Cristo del Consuelo, minister Patricio Carrillo said on Twitter.

The man had “a history of murder and robbery”, he added.

Five people died and 17 were wounded — two seriously

— when two people on a motorcycle threw a bag of explosives into a restaurant in Guayaquil on Sunday.

“This is the type of crime that now faces Ecuador, a clear message for all: either we act as a... determined State or the consequences will be very serious,” said Carrillo.—AFP

Man. Utd legend Giggs cites disciplinary record in assault trial

Taking the stand at Manchester Crown Court for the second day running, the former United and Wales forward broke down in tears as he described spending a night in the cells as the “worst experience of my life”. PHOTO: AFP

FORMER Manchester United footballer Ryan Giggs, on trial for assaulting and coercively controlling an ex-girlfriend, told a UK court Wednesday that his record of one sending off in a 24-year career showed he was not prone to violence.

Taking the stand at Manchester Crown Court for the second day running, the former United and Wales forward broke down in tears as he described spending a night in the cells as the “worst experience of my life”.

Giggs denies physically assaulting former partner, PR agent Kate Greville, and her sister nearly two years ago.

He also denies controlling Greville during their rocky years-long relationship.

Giggs claims that injuries sustained by Greville were an accidental result of a three-way tussle between her and her sister over a mobile phone.

The former winger admitted he “may have caught her and her sister”, but that his playing career showed he was not violent.

He told the court it was “part and parcel” to be verbally abused and provoked on the pitch.

“On any occasion did you react to any of that with violence?” asked his lawyer Chris Daw.

“No,” replied Giggs, saying he had only received the red card once in more than 1,000 appearances.— AFP
