The implementation of a mutual farming system through collaborative efforts of organizations will be beneficial for the production of the agricultural sector: Senior General

AN agricultural engineering subject must be taught at the schools at different levels so as to efficiently utilize the water, said Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing at the opening of the meeting on the enhancement of the agriculture sector and socioeconomic life of farmers by Participatory Irrigation Management, at the training school of agricultural education and rural development of the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation in Zeyathiri Township of Nay Pyi Taw yesterday morning.

Speaking at the meeting, the Senior General said a total of 245 dams and reservoirs, as well as 210 river water pumping stations, were built on Ayeyawady, Chindwin, Thanlwin and Sittoung rivers and tributaries.

There are 25.517 million acres of rainfed and irrigated farmlands, some 15 million acres of monsoon paddy and some three million acres of monsoon paddy.

State Administration Council Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing views round the booths at the inauguration event to discuss the enhancement of the agriculture sector and socioeconomic life of farmers by Participatory Irrigation Management in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday.

... the government has set up the K230 billion fund allotted from the K400 billion State economic promotion fund for successfully growing 850,000 acres of summer paddy and 500,000 acres of green gram through a mutual farming system as of the coming season.

Among them, more than 20 per cent of 33.2 million net sown acres are irrigated by dams. If more than 6 million irrigated farmlands are placed under triple cropping pattern such as paddy-bean-paddy, paddy-sunflower-paddy, paddy-sesame-paddy and paddy and other two crops with systematic irrigation facilities, the socioeconomic life of farmers will face a great change.

An agricultural engineering subject must be taught at the schools at different levels so as to efficiently utilize the water. Farmers themselves need to effectively participate in the efficient utilization of agricultural water from dams built across the nation.

The Speech Delivered by the Republic of the Union of Myanmar State Administration Council Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing to the 75th Anniversary (Diamond Jubilee) of Sarpay Beikman

FIRST of all, I would like to extend my greeting to and wish the physical and mental well-being of the Union Ministers, Regional Government Member Ministers, luminaries of the literary world, departmental officials, responsible personnel from the publishing houses and guests.

Today, 26th August of 2022, is the auspicious occasion of the 75th Anniversary (Diamond Jubilee) of Sarpay Beikman, which has a high tradition in the literary world in Myanmar. In those days, there were many things which attributed to the development of a race and a nation. These days, however, education is the only thing needed for development as accepted by all nations around the globe. Education requires learning from early childhood. When at work, we do the learning in a different way — i.e., continuous learning, which involves the reading of books and holding discussions about the books read. The participants are required to listen to, discuss and do the creation based on the lessons learned.

To enable the learners to read, study and share, we need books, which are distributed around the globe extensively. With the passage of time, the learning materials have changed, commencing from stone inscriptions to palm leaf manuscripts, to books and to electronic books. The changes in technology have created different formats; yet, the very essence is the same. As known to you all, we, the Myanmar, have set a very value on books and literature. This fact is obvious in the following sayings: one word is equal to one pagoda; wisdom lies in literature, and books are friends of the people. Thanks to this high value we hold, we could have preserved our literature and culture for a thousand years or so. Looking back, we will see that we have been under the yoke of colonialism for more than a century. Nevertheless, there are certain colonized countries that have lost their literature and culture while other colonized countries have had their literature and culture affected. Our ability to have maintained the literature and culture can be attributed to the words of advice by Reverend Maha Ratthasara, whose eight famous words we have had to learn since childhood: Thu, Si, Pu, Ba, Wi, Li, Thi, Da, which calls for learning every day — the continuous learning.

Since the pre-independence period, Sarpay Beikman has consistently been performing literary duties to its utmost until today, disseminating knowledge among the people. It is a great institution which we are all very much proud of.

The background history of Sarpay Beikman dates back to 7 June 1947. This was the day on which a conference was held in the building called Sorrento Villa to draw the two-year economic development plan of the Union of Myanmar. The conference was attended by our national leader General Aung San. He said, inter alia, that a translation department should be opened with the objective of enabling the people to be possessed modern knowledge so that people can contribute their part towards national development. In compliance with the guidance of General Aung San, officials led by Prime Minister U Nu and the people from the literary world founded the Burma Translation Society-BTS, on 26 August 1947, which was the beginning of Sarpay Beikman. The first Governing Council was formed with 12 people chaired by Prime Minister U Nu himself. Later, the council grew into one with 15 councillors. On 15 January 1948, the first BTS office was temporarily opened on the Judson College Campus by renting the residence of Professor Dr Hla Bu. Then, with the growing number of office staff, the BTS office was moved to the Sorrento Villa Building located at No 361, Pyay Road, Yangon. And the name was changed to Sarpay Beikman.

The motto was written in the Myanmar Language by Sayagyi U Wun (Min Thu Wun), which was translated into English by Saya K (U Khin Zaw), who was the first librarian of the University of Yangon and who founded in the post-war period BBS. The English motto is: “Light, where darkness was”. Later, the printing and publishing activities developed, demanding a new place, and so, a plot of land at the corner of Merchant Road and 37th Street was purchased to construct a new building to be opened as a branch office in the downtown area.

The new Sarpay Beikman building was opened on 5 May 1955 by then Prime Minister U Nu. This building is now more than 67 years old. With the objective of opening the eyes of the public, the Luhtu Ahlin, the Luhtu Eik Hsaung and Luhtu Tekkatho were first published. In 1954, Myanmar Encyclopaedia Volume I [Ka-Kon] was published, and in 1977, Vol 15 was published. These are the landmarks. Sarpay Beikman also published the school textbooks, the Terms Bank, 50-year Sarsin, Sarpay Beikman Magazine, Pyithu Letswe, Thutapadetha and Shwe Thway (children journal).

In March 1956, Sarpay Beikman Library was founded while Sarpay Beikman Association was established in 1960. The literary conferences, the paper-reading sessions and the international book year ceremonies are held every year. Additionally, for the development of Myanmar literature, the Sarpay Beikman Manuscript Award was created. Then, this award was extended to Fine Arts Award, the National Literary Award and the Sarpay Beikman Manuscript Award. Commencing in 2001, the Lifetime National Literary Award for Literary Achievement, which is the highest national award, has been given. Now, we have already conferred this award on 34 great writers. Sarpay Beikman has not only published great books which bring benefit to the nation but also nurtured writers. I would like to express my sincere appreciation and pay respect to those writers of different periods who have widened the scope of knowledge of the people and at the same time brought benefit to the nation. Most of the national literary award winners were produced by Sarpay Beikman. In co-operation with Tun Foundation, Myanmar Encyclopaedia books are being edited, and now, Volume I [Ka-Kote] has been updated and published again. I myself have read the books published by Sarpay Beikman since my youth. And I have been a member of Sarpay Beikman Library Association, and so, I rarely missed the books, magazines and journals published by Sarpay Beikman. The knowledge I have gained from reading these books is invaluable, and they are still useful these days. And the reading habit has made me learn continuously. I believe those who are of my same age, those who are my seniors and those who are my juniors have had a golden opportunity to keep pace with the modern world thanks to the publications of Sarpay Beikman. And it is also believed that the readers must have applied the experiences they gained from reading these publications to nation-building activities and those activities will contribute to the development of their communities concerned at least.

Currently, our country has trodden on the path to genuine, disciplined multi-party democracy, which suits our country’s national characteristics and culture. Additionally, the democratic system must have an education system which will not adversely affect our culture. The education system is aimed at not teaching democratic politics; it should be aimed at developing good democratic practices. The education system should focus on continuous learning. To be able to do so, all citizens are needed to be well educated. We should be aware of the advice given by former United Nations Secretary-General U Thant who has told us about the link between education and democracy.

“Democratic system is the most difficult among the systems governing the country. The people must have adequate knowledge and rationality for achieving success in democratization. Education is the genuine basic foundation of the State. The democratic system will cause chaos in the country with lack of knowledge.” Hence, priority must be given to enabling all the citizens to have an educational qualification in order to ensure the strengthening of multipart democracy and build the Union based on democracy and federalism which are two political visions of the nation. The 3-Rs literacy campaign was vigorously launched in the country for our citizens who were weak in education due to the wars. But,

Similarly, the prices of low-grade paddy prices (Emahta variety) were under K900,000 per 100-basket on 1 August. The prices rose over K1 million on 25 August. Low inventory and strong demand from millers and traders in Yangon and other domestic markets elevated the paddy price are contributing factors to the paddy price rise.

Following higher paddy prices, rice prices have also gained moved in the range of K36,000-51,000 per bag.

Myanmar Rice Producers and Planters Association, Myanmar Rice Millers Association, and traders and brokers engaged in Wahdan Rice Wholesale Centre and Bayintnaung Rice Wholesale Centre have been working together to offer fair prices for Shwebo Pawsan and other rice varieties to the consumers at the Wadan Wholesale Centre in the working days between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Domestic sugar prices on the rise tracking global influences

DOMESTIC sugar price stays high as global sugar prices strengthen, U Win Htay, vice chair of Myanmar Sugar and Sugarcane Related Products Association told the Global New Light of Myanmar.

At present, the FOB price of sugar hit US$550 per tonne tracking the dollar gains.

“When we calculate sugar price on the exchange rate. The international sugar price is $550 per tonne. Consequently, domestic sugar prices peaked at over K2,000 per viss. The domestic sugar price is correlated with global sugar prices,” U Win Htay elaborated.

However, domestic sugar price is lower a bit although it is determined by the international sugar price index. The sugar price is K2,260 per viss (a viss equals 1.6 kilogrammes) in the domestic market. Domestic sugar prices stood at only K900-1,000 per viss in the previous years.

There are approximately 450,000 acres of sugarcane across the country, with annual sugar production of 450,000 tonnes. In addition to the domestic consumption, the remaining was shipped to China and Viet Nam in the previous years. This year, it is only exported to Viet Nam, the association stated.

“The sugar consumption per capita is estimated at eight kilogrammes. If we calculate it with the whole population of over five million, the domestic consumption totals about 350,000-400,000 tonnes. Therefore, only a small volume of sugar is left for exports beyond self-sufficiency. Earlier, Myanmar delivered syrup to China. During the pandemic, syrup export halted amid China’s strict virus policy. So, we will convey the surplus sugar to Viet Nam via maritime trade for now,” U Win Htay continued.

Sugarcane is commonly found in the upper Sagaing Region, followed by northern Shan State. It is also found in the western and eastern Bago Region, Yangon Region and Mandalay Region.

The sugarcane is grown in December-January. It can be harvested from November to February of the following years. The sugarcane growing rotation cycle lasts four years in Myanmar.

Some sugar companies offered the price of sugarcane at K80,000 per tonne for the upcoming sugarcane season 2022-2023. — NN/GNLM

Pure gold price hit record high of over K2.8 mln per tical in domestic markets

THE price of pure gold reached an all-time high of over K2.8 million per tical (0.578 ounce or 0.016 kilogramme) in the markets, said gold traders.

The record price is attributed to the Kyat depreciation against the safe-haven US dollar. The exchange rate against a US dollar is worth over K3,000 in the unofficial forex market.

Despite the price spike in the markets, Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association set the pure gold price at K2,055,000 per tical on 26 August.

The association determined the price depending on the Central Bank of Myanmar’s reference exchange rate against a dollar at K2,100, YGEA Chair U Myo Myint told the Global New Light of Myanmar (GNLM).

There is a large gap of over K700,000 between the market price and the YGEA’s set price. The black market might arise again following the soaring dollar, resulting in the suspension of gold bar transactions, he stated.

The authorities also interrogated some gold traders and currency exchange operators accordingly in end-July.

During the end of September 2021, a dollar value hit an all-time high of over K3,000 in the gold exchanges and consequently, the pure gold reached a high of K2.22 million per tical.

Under the guidance of the Central Committee on Ensuring Smooth Flow of Trade and Goods, the Monitoring and Steering Committee on the Gold and Currency Market was formed on 17 December 2021 as gold and currency market stability play a crucial role in trade facilitation.

The objectives of the committee are inspecting and prosecuting market manipulation, checking if there is compliance with payment rules in the domestic market, proceedings against those unscrupulous traders who intend to interfere with the free and fair operation of the market under the existing laws, by-laws and regulations in line with the official directives, illegal foreign currency holding, illegal trade and taking legal actions against price manipulators. — NN/GNLM

Expose, arrest
illegal traders, seize illegally
imported goods

LEVYING taxes for the State is a vital role in the development of the State. Practically, a large sum of taxes which should inflow into the State fund is lost in various ways and means due to corruption, bribery and illegal trade committed by unscrupulous traders and businesspersons.

Officials concerned and relevant departments need to inform the people about losses in illegal trade on a wider scale through the media sector while making efforts for levying taxes for the State as a national duty.

In preventing illegal trade activities, staff members assigned duties need to take action against the offenders and seize the illegally imported goods beyond the import declarations. In this regard, relevant task forces and departments must stay away from illegal trade activities and corruption.

Myanmar is marching towards the status of economic development of the nation not only for the State economy but for booming the private economic sector. As such, the government and the business persons are really responsible for doing business in a correct way without committing malpractices and breaking the laws for the interests of the State and the people.

that the Anti-Illegal Trade Steering Committee adopted the best policy for the prevention of illegal trade, the commodities without paid tax and quality guarantee will flow into the country in a short time.

Special task forces and OSS members need to effectively seize the illegally imported goods. On the other hand, they have to pave the right way for traders and businesspersons to correctly operate the trading process as much as possible. While arresting the persons who operate their trading in the wrong way, officials should help traders and businesspersons reach the correct way of doing business and trading.

Myanmar is marching towards the status of economic development of the nation not only for the State economy but for booming the private economic sector. As such, the government and the business persons are really responsible for doing business in a correct way without committing malpractices and breaking the laws for the interests of the State and the people.

A FRIEND in need is a friend indeed. Do-gooders in need are Myanmar people indeed. They are well known for their kindness and generosity, traditionally or in an emergency.

Take a look at any place in Myanmar. There is no ward or village tract that does not have an ambulance vehicle on its own. It is in addition to many social associations that existed on a self-help basis. They are generally formed with a view to either flourishing religion or enhancing welfare or saving lives or assisting funerals. They stand and operate on assistance and donations from people.

It sounds good and looks great.

But there is a piece of the jigsaw missing to get a complete set of arrangements for saving lives at a community level. It is none other than a first aider. For emergency response, a person in need is the first aider indeed, not onlookers standing around or taking photos for online media posts. In most real situations, laypersons such as family members, friends, neighbours or bystanders are the first ones who assist the injured for survival before the trained first aiders or paramedics arrive on the scene.

Time is important to save lives. Within four minutes after breathing stops, the victim's heart stops beating. Within four to six minutes after breathing stops, the victim's brain ceases functioning. Then there is an irreversible occurrence of death. In the first few minutes of traffic accidents, there is over 50 per cent of deaths from the crash. The above statistics point out that a trained first aider on the scene in the nick of time can make a real difference and save lives.

It is a crucial window time for a victim in the first minutes after a serious injury as the prompt effort for life-saving matters most. With proper first aid performed, the victim can survive from inhalation of toxic gases in a confined space, or from asphyxiation due to airways blocked, or from profuse bleeding due to massive cuts/wounds, or from a severe degree of burns in contact with fire or acid. First aid treatment is the most essential step in intervention for the victim to improve the chance of survival before proper medical treatment.

Therefore, first aid treatment is a prelude to medical care to avoid severity or fatality. First-aid training and assignment of first aiders are legally necessary at the workplace. Though there is no such legislation, communities shall follow suit on a necessary basis. Not being content with an array of materialistic emergency facilities, personal capabilities of saving lives shall be engaged in all human habitat areas. No community shall be left untouched. As long as people are concerned, there shall be some proportionate people with trained knowledge of first aid. It is even better to have at least a trained first aider in every household which is the same goal of the Myanmar Red Cross Society. If not, a ward or a village tract shall strive to have one in a ten-household group or a street-wise group. If so, there will be a pool of trained first aiders who are available individually or in a team to attend to any injury cases in their habitant areas round the clock and seven days a week (24/7). Elsewhere too, they can render their first aid to the victims who come across.

First aid treatment primarily covers two types (1) injuries & care, and (2) emergencies & care. The former is with eye injuries, cuts, blisters, burns, strains & sprains, breaks & fractures, shock, heat-related illness and choking while the latter with automated external defibrillators (AED), cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), and steps for first aid with Drs ABCD, acronyms of Dangers, Responsive, Send for help, Airway, Breathing, Compression and Defibrillator.

Further and detailed knowledge can be obtained through face-to-face training sessions for which all communities shall look into and materialize as part of people's well-being.

Before the ambulance vehicle flashes a light and/or blares a siren, there should be a guardian angel who is a first aider being readily or arriving immediately at the scene attending to the victim simultaneously. It ensures that every community in Myanmar is guaranteed safer and more resilient against any home/work/road accidents through community care with first aid – the equitable and sustainable social protection system.

Global monkeypox cases dropped last week: WHO

According to the WHO's latest situation report issued Thursday, some 23 countries reported an increase in the weekly number of cases. Iran and Indonesia reported their first cases in the past seven days.

MONKEYPOX cases fell by a fifth last week as infections in Europe dropped but the outbreak is going through "intense transmission" in the Americas, the World Health Organization said Thursday.

The WHO sounded the alarm for Latin America in particular, pointing to a lack of awareness and public health measures to control the spread of the virus.

A surge in monkeypox infections has been reported since early May outside the African countries where it has long been endemic.

The WHO triggered its highest level of alarm on 24 July, classifying it as a public health emergency of international concern, alongside Covid-19.

There have been 45,355 cases and 15 deaths this year, across at least 96 countries, according to the WHO's dashboard.

After four consecutive weeks of increase, the number of monkeypox cases newly reported dropped by 21 per cent last week compared to the previous seven days, from 5,907 to 5,213.

"In the early stages of the outbreak, most reported cases were in Europe, with a smaller proportion in the Americas," WHO chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus told a press conference.

"That has now reversed, with less than 40 per cent of reported cases in Europe and 60 per cent

Peru (1,207), Canada (1,206) and the Netherlands (1,136).

According to the WHO's latest situation report issued Thursday, some 23 countries reported an increase in the weekly number of cases. Iran and Indonesia reported their first cases in the past seven days. Sixteen countries have not reported new cases for more than 21 days, the maximum incubation period of the disease.

Among cases with sexual orientation reported, 96 per cent identified as men who had sex with men. The median age of cases was 36. A sexual encounter was the most commonly reported type of transmission, at 82 per cent.

"The majority of cases were likely exposed in a party setting with sexual contacts," said the WHO. Among cases with known HIV status, 45 per cent are HIV positive, it added.

the future of the State is not sufficient with just learning education. It is necessary to have constant reading and learning. To do so, it is necessary to build the infrastructures, schools, learning centres, books, publishing organizations, writers, researchers, libraries and motivators. These infrastructures must be genuine and noble for the nation, national, literature and culture of the country. It is necessary to disseminate the knowledge without isms. Literature must be free from toxicity. It can be seen that some books published after 2011, especially after 2015 and talks under the literary talks led to a highly divided society against democracy for our country. So, we have to consider it not happening again.

According to the pilot census released in 2019, some one-third of our population is weak in education. So, the government is prioritizing education promotion plans for the citizens. The Constitution stipulates that efforts shall be made for every citizen to learn basic education primary education. Our government carries out the tasks exceeding the target for all citizens to reach the KG+9 (basic education middle school level). It shows we are basically building the future of the State and democracy. All ethnic national people will have a chance to enjoy the fruits of higher education standards and the development of the future nation. We have to strive for encouraging all literates to read and all readers to have better knowledge so as to keep the spirit of nation-building endeavours in their minds.

In building the nation with the strength of human society with high knowledge and a white soul, the Sarpay Beikman had effectively done the assigned tasks and must try to participate in similar tasks at present and in the future. This effort of the Sarpay Beikman is serving the national duty with the literary power. Due to reading good fiction and non-fiction books published by the Sarpay Beikman, the people will have national characters and a nationalistic spirit endowed with knowledge and skill and it will increase the number of educated new generations who will adore their own culture, language and customs. Only when those educated new generations emerge will the future image of the State be brighter.

In accord with the theme of Sarpay Beikman's "Light, where Darkness was", the good literary works were published without dogmatism and literary views which may harm the national cause but with the aims of turning out good and able citizens equipped with a good attitude, ideas and knowledge in line with the 38 auspicious ways. Only when the number of educated youths increases will a new human society emerge for leading the development of Myanmar's social economy. In the efforts of the Sarpay Beikman in nation-building endeavours, I honour all officers and staff who have served at the Sarpay Beikman within 75 years.

In conclusion, as our government is building a better State and socio-economic lives prioritizing the interests of the State and ethnic national people in line with the motto of the government "Keep Moving Forward to Achieve Our Goal", I believe that the Sarpay Beikman is also participating in the work process with the strength of literature.

Now, the Sarpay Beikman has been actively serving the literary works till the Diamond Jubilee period along with the implementation of the national cause. So, I wish the long-term existence of the Sarpay Beikman from the Diamond Jubilee celebration to many future years by serving the greater nation-building tasks, developing the nation and production of good literary works in the future. And, may the Sarpay Beikman strive for nation-building endeavours with greater efforts.

Thank you all.

UN high-seas biodiversity treaty struggles to leave port

A two-week negotiating session on a treaty to protect the high seas wraps up Friday, with UN observers holding their breath that the long-stalled deal can cross the finish line.

After 15 years, including four prior formal sessions, negotiators have yet to reach a legally binding agreement to address the growing environmental and economic challenges involving the high seas, also known as international waters -- a zone which encompasses almost half the planet. Many had hoped that this fifth session, which began on 15 August at the United Nations headquarters in New York, would be the last and yield a final text on "the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity beyond national jurisdiction," or BBNJ for short.

The High Ambition Coalition, a group of some 50 countries led by the European Union, had even called for a comprehensive BBNJ deal to be finalized by the end of the year.

But according to international environmental group Greenpeace, the talks are on the brink of failure because of what it considers "the greed of countries in the High Ambition Coalition and others like Canada and the United States." One of the most sensitive issues revolves around the sharing of possible profits gained from developing genetic resources in international waters, where pharmaceutical, chemical and cosmetic companies hope to find miracle drugs, products or cures.

Such costly research at sea is largely the prerogative of rich nations, but developing countries do not want to be left out of potential windfall profits drawn from marine resources that belong to no one.—AFP

Pakistan declares emergency as millions affected by floods

HEAVY rain pounded parts of Pakistan Friday after the government declared an emergency to deal with monsoon flooding that it said had affected more than four million people.

The annual monsoon is essential for irrigating crops and replenishing lakes and dams across the Indian subcontinent, but each year it also brings a wave of destruction.

The National Disaster Management Agency (NDMA) said Friday that more than 900 people had been killed this year — including 34 in the last 24 hours — as a result of the monsoon rains that began in June. Officials say this year's floods are comparable to 2010 — the worst on record — when over 2,000 people died and nearly a fifth of the country was under water. "I have never seen such huge flooding because of rains in my life," octogenarian farmer Rahim Bakhsh Brohi told AFP near Sukkur, in southern Sindh province. —AFP

COVID-19 SITUATION UPDATE

North Korea says new fever cases were flu, not Covid NORTH Korea said Friday that the fever cases it detected earlier this week were found to be influenza, and not a Covid-19 resurgence as initially suspected.

The state media announcement came a day after authorities said they had locked down parts of Ryanggang province — which borders China — after finding four new “fever” cases there.

North Korea refers to “fever patients” rather than “Covid patients” in case reports, apparently due to a lack of testing capacity.

The official Korean Central News Agency (KCNA) said Thursday that the new cases were “suspected of being infected with the malignant epidemic” — just two weeks after the country declared victory over Covid-19.

But on Friday, it said they were actually not Covid infections, and that the lockdown in the area had been lifted.

“All the fever cases... in Ryanggang Province were ones with influenza,” KCNA said, citing data from the state emergency epidemic prevention headquarters.

“The fever cases recovered with normal temperature.” The isolated nation, which has maintained a rigid blockade since the start of the pandemic, confirmed an Omicron outbreak in the capital Pyongyang in May.

North Korean leader Kim Jong Un — who also fell ill during the outbreak — declared victory over the virus earlier this month and ordered the lifting of the country’s “maximum emergency epidemic prevention system” as officially reported cases fell to zero.

North Korea has recorded nearly 4.8 million “fever” cases and just 74 deaths for an official fatality rate of 0.002 per cent, according to state media.— AFP

Naomi Osaka headlines as Pan Pacific Open returns after Covid

HOME favourite Naomi Osaka will defend her title at the Pan Pacific Open in Tokyo next month, organizers said on Friday, as the tournament returns for the first time since the pandemic.

Four players currently ranked inside the top 10 will compete in the 17-25 September event, including two-time Grand Slam winner Garbine Muguruza and fellow Spaniard and world number four Paula Badosa.

Japan's Osaka beat Russia's Anastasia Pavlyuchenkova in the 2019 final but the tournament was cancelled for the past two years because of coronavirus.

ings and lost in the first round of the ATP/WTN Cincinnati Masters last week.

Australian national airline posts 3rd-year of pandemic losses

AUSTRALIA'S national airline, Qantas, has posted its third consecutive year of losses bringing the total toll from the COVID-19 pandemic to nearly seven billion Australian dollars (about 4.83 billion US dollars).

Revealed in the airline's results for the financial year from 1 July 2021, to 30 June 2022, released on Thursday, the airline suffered a statutory loss of 860 million Australian dollars (about 594 million US dollars), an improvement from the previous financial year's loss of 1.7 billion Australian dollars (about 1.17 billion US dollars).

“The past year has been challenging for everyone. We had to ramp down almost all flying once Delta hit and stay that way for several months before ramping back up through multiple Omicron waves as we all learned to live with COVID-19 in the community,” said Qantas CEO Alan Joyce alongside the results announcement. Despite the continuing fall into the red, the airlines group maintained confidence in the recovery, indicated by a stock buyback of 400 million Australian dollars (about 277 million US dollars), the first return of capital to shareholders since the beginning of the pandemic.—Xinhua

‘Rising Monkeypox cases will not lead to HIV’: Top ICMR scientist

A top scientist of the Indian Council of Medical Research-National Institute of Virology on Monday stated that the rising Monkeypox cases will not lead to human immunodeficiency virus (HIV).

In an exclusive interview with ANI, Dr Pragya Yadav, a senior scientist at ICMR-NIV, Pune said, “Spike in Monkeypox cases will not lead to HIV. These Monkeypox cases would have been tested for HIV during the detailed diagnosis to rule out other sexually transmitted infections (STIs).”

While discussing the potential for asymptomatic monkeypox patients and the importance of serological monitoring, Dr Yadav said, “The Monkeypox cases could be asymptomatic. In order to conduct such studies, an ELISA assay is currently being developed.”

Asked about the effectiveness of the smallpox vaccine against Monkeypox, she stated that the smallpox vaccination is 86 per cent effective at preventing monkeypox.

Dr Yadav commented on the first occurrence of Monkeypox-related mortality in Kerala, saying, “The other aetiology for the encephalitis in the death case was not discovered and the patient was already confirmed to have the disease. Therefore, Monkeypox may have been the likely cause of death.”—ANI

Japan retains economic view in Aug., warns of rising prices impact

THE Japanese government on Thursday kept intact its assessment that the economy continues to recover from the coronavirus pandemic fallout, but warned of rising commodity prices taking a toll on households and businesses.

“The Japanese economy is picking up moderately,” the Cabinet Office said in the overall assessment for August, while upgrading its view on industrial production and public investment.

As for short-term prospects, the monthly report warned of downside risks derived from “a slowing down of overseas economies due to global monetary tightening” and called for attention to the “impact of price increases on households and businesses and supply-side constraints”.

By component, the government revised upward its assessment of industrial production for the first time in seven months, saying it is showing signs of picking up as the impact of Chinese lockdowns prompted by the pandemic gradually recedes.

It also upgraded its view on public investment, reflecting progress in public works projects, a government official said.

The report said private consumption continues to pick up moderately, reflecting recovery in use of transportation during the summer holidays and the holding of major summer festivals for the first time in three years,

German economy grew in second quarter, better than feared

Europe's biggest economy has been slowing as inflation soars, with Russia's invasion of Ukraine sending energy and food prices through the roof. PHOTO: AFP/FILE

GERMANY'S economy grew slightly in the second quarter, an upgrade from a previous estimate of stagnation, revised official data showed Thursday, pushing back the spectre of recession.

Output expanded by 0.1 per cent in the April to June period, according to the federal statistics agency, which had previously projected zero growth.

The economy was propped up by both private and public domestic demand, with spending by the state up by 2.3 per cent.

Private spending rose 0.8 per cent from the previous quarter as the end of Covid-19 restrictions brought more tourism and restaurant dining.

Europe's biggest economy has been slowing as inflation soars, with Russia's invasion of Ukraine sending energy and food prices through the roof.

Germany has been highly reliant on supplies of Russian gas to meet its energy demands, but Moscow has slowly dwindled supplies since the start of the war.

The threat that Russia could cut deliveries completely has raised the possibility of shortages over the winter and brought Germany closer to rationing supplies, with a punishing impact on business.

Even if the latest data offered Germany some reprieve from negative growth, economic indicators in the last days are painting a pessimistic picture.

Qatar to invest $3b in Pakistan economy

QATAR said on Wednesday it would invest $3 billion in Pakistan's economy.

S Korea strikes nuclear power plant export deal, 1st in 13 years

SOUTH Korea announced Thursday it has struck a deal to build a nuclear power plant in Egypt, its first such contract in 13 years.

Under the deal worth three trillion won ($2.25 billion), a South Korean company will reportedly supply the equipment and a Russian firm will be in charge of constructing the reactors at Egypt's first nuclear power plant in the northern city of El Dabaa.

The project between the two state-run enterprises, is South Korea's biggest nuclear power plant export, according to the country's media. The Asian nation won the bid to build the Barakah nuclear power plant in the United Arab Emirates in 2009.

The South Korean company said it is aiming to begin commercial operations of the power plant in Egypt in 2028.

Trump social media platform faces money woes, modest following SIGNS are growing that Donald Trump's social media platform Truth Social is in financial trouble, with just a modest following six months after launching.

Fox Business Network reported Thursday that the platform has halted payments to the company that hosts it, RightForge, and owes $1.6 million. The platform's parent company, Trump Media and Technology Group, did not respond to a request for comment.

A RightForge spokesman would not comment on the reports that Trump Social is not paying its bills.

"RightForge was on the ground floor of building Truth Social and will continue to support president Trump in his endeavors," the company said.

Meanwhile the parent company's merger with Digital World Acquisition Corp — a blank check company formed specifically to carry out a merger — has yet to take place, 10 months after the announcement that it would happen. This fusion is supposed to bring in fresh funding for the Trump platform.

DWAC published Thursday a call for a special shareholders meeting 6 September at which investors will be asked to approve a one-year delay for carrying out the merger, until 8 September of 2023.—AFP

Christie's to auction Microsoft co-founder Allen's $1bn-plus art collection

CHRISTIE'S announced plans on Thursday to auction the art collection of late Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen, which it estimated to be worth more than $1 billion.

The November sale of more than 150 pieces spanning 500 years of art will be "the largest and most exceptional art auction in history," Christie's said in a statement.

The works will include "La montagne Sainte-Victoire" by French painter Paul Cezanne, valued at more than $100 million, the auction house said.

It is holding the auction with the late billionaire's estate. Christie's said all proceeds will go to charitable causes, as per the wishes of Allen, who was an avid art collector, innovator and philanthropist.

Allen, who died in 2018 at the age of 65, co-founded Microsoft with Bill Gates in 1975. Together, they came up with the PC operating system that made a fortune for the US technology giant.

Allen left the company in 1983, due to health problems and a deteriorating relationship with Gates, who remained in charge of Microsoft until 2000.

The auction record for a private collection was set this spring by the US couple Harry and Linda Macklowe, with $922 million fetched in auctions conducted by Sotheby's.

Other than the work by Cezanne, the Allen collection features a work entitled "Small False Start" by American painter Jasper Johns, valued at more than $50 million, The New York Times reported.— AFP

S Korea working to solve wartime labour issue: Japan official

A senior Japanese Foreign Ministry official said Friday that South Korea is working toward a resolution of the long-pending issue of wartime labour compensation that has soured bilateral relations.

The official told reporters that he could see “efforts were being made by Yoon Suk Yeol’s administration”, but did not elaborate.

He made the remarks following a meeting between Takehiro Funakoshi, director-general of the ministry’s Asian and Oceanian Affairs Bureau, and his South Korean counterpart Lee Sang Ryeol in Tokyo.

The official made the remarks when asked about the current state of Seoul’s domestic discussions regarding the wartime labour issue under the leadership of Yoon, who took office in May with a pledge of thawing icy ties with Japan.

The meeting came amid media reports that the South Korean Supreme Court may finalize soon, possibly within this month, a court order to liquidate assets in South Korea seized from Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd.

RUSSIA-UKRAINE CONFLICT

Russia says killed over 200 Ukraine troops in rail strike

RUSSIA’S defence ministry said Thursday that it killed over 200 Ukrainian troops in a railway station attack in central Ukraine that Kyiv said left 25 people, including children, dead.

“As a result of a direct hit by an Iskander missile on a military train at the Chaplyne railway station in the Dnipropetrovsk region, more than 200 servicemen of the reserve of Ukraine’s Armed Forces and 10 units of military equipment were destroyed,” the ministry said in its daily briefing.

It added that the train was “en route to combat zones” in the eastern Donbas region that

Ukraine’s state railway company said three of its employees were killed and four others injured. PHOTO: UKRAINIAN RAILWAYS/AFP

Grain prices ease back but fertilizer costs growing risk

GRAIN prices have dropped sharply from the record highs they reached following Russia’s invasion of Ukraine, but another menace to global food security remains: a shortage of fertilizer.

The conflict sparked fears of famine in poorer countries reliant on agricultural goods from Ukraine and Russia, two nations that were responsible for nearly a third of global wheat exports last year. Wheat prices reached a peak of nearly 440 euros ($440) a tonne on the European market in mid-May, double the level of one year ago, as crucial Ukrainian shipments were stuck at port due to a Russian naval blockade in the Black Sea. But prices have fallen to around 300 euros in August.

“The situation began to calm down at the end of May, beginning of June with the first reassuring harvest forecasts for Europe and the resumption of Ukrainian exports, first by road and rail, then by sea,” said Gautier Le Molgat, analyst at consultancy Agritel.—AFP

Latvia removes controversial Soviet monument

LATVIA on Thursday took down a Soviet-era monument in Riga following Russia’s invasion of Ukraine, despite protests from the Baltic state’s ethnic Russian minority to keep it.

Demolition machinery was used to remove the 79-metre (259-foot) World War II memorial, which has become a rallying point for pro-Kremlin supporters in Latvia, according to an AFP journalist at the scene.

Latvia, like fellow Baltic states Estonia and Lithuania, is a NATO and EU member that has shown strong support for Ukraine in the conflict with Russia.

Built in 1985, the Monument to the Liberators of Soviet Latvia and Riga from the German Fascist Invaders had featured statues of soldiers and a woman surrounding a central obelisk.

Local officials were forced to take down the monument after parliament voted to remove all remaining Soviet statues, plaques and bas-reliefs by mid-November.

Nearly 100 dead in attacks on Ukraine healthcare: WHO

THERE have been 473 verified attacks on healthcare in Ukraine since Russia invaded six months ago, which have killed nearly 100 people, the WHO said Wednesday.

The World Health Organization’s Europe chief Hans Kluge branded the attacks “unconscionable”.

As well as the 98 people known to have been killed in verified attacks on healthcare, at least 134 others were wounded, the WHO’s figures showed.

Nearly 400 of the attacks hit health facilities. Dozens of attacks struck transport, including ambulances, while warehouses, supplies, personnel and patients were also damaged.

Jarno Habicht, the WHO’s representative in Ukraine, said the number of attacks on health care was unprecedented.

“These attacks are not only a violation of international law, they are also a barrier for many who need health care during the war,” he told reporters in Geneva, via video-link from a bunker in Dnipro.

Although the war had had a devastating impact on the health and lives of Ukraine’s people, the health system had not collapsed, said WHO chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus.—AFP

Pope Francis asks North Korea to invite him to visit

POPE Francis has asked Pyongyang to invite him to North Korea, saying in a televised interview on Friday that he would not turn down a chance to visit and work for peace.

A potential papal visit to the isolated, nuclear-armed country was previously floated in 2018 when Seoul's former president Moon Jae-in embarked on a round of diplomacy with Pyongyang's leader Kim Jong Un.

Moon, who is Catholic, said during a summit that Kim told him the pontiff would be "enthusiastically" welcomed.

Pope Francis replied at the time that he would be willing to go if he received an official invitation.

But Pyongyang has largely cut off contact with Seoul following the collapse of a second summit between Kim and then-US president Donald Trump in 2019, which has left talks at a standstill.

"When they invite me -- that is to say, please invite me -- I won't say no," Pope Francis told South Korea's state broadcaster KBS in an interview that aired Friday.

"The goal is simply fraternity," he added.

Ties between North and South Korea have been at a frosty low since Seoul inaugurated a hawkish new president, Yoon Suk-yeol, in May.

Yoon offered aid to the North in return for denuclearization, but Kim's regime ridiculed the plan.

More US states ban abortion as Democrats push back

ABORTION became illegal in three more US states on Thursday, further restricting access to elective terminations for millions of women despite some signs of popular and judicial pushback.

Two months after the Supreme Court struck down the constitutional right to abortion, nearly 21 million women have already lost access to the procedure in their home states, according to an analysis by The Washington Post.

And with Idaho, Tennessee and Texas joining 10 other Republican-controlled states on Thursday in implementing near-total bans on abortion, that number is set to rise. Another dozen states are expected to follow suit with their own restrictions. The laws in Idaho, Tennessee and Texas were "triggered" after the Supreme Court on 24 June overturned the landmark 1973 "Roe v. Wade" decision enshrining a woman's right to an abortion and allowed states to set their own laws.—AFP

Colombia dangles olive branch to drug lords

COLOMBIAN drug traffickers facing charges in the United States will avoid extradition if they turn themselves in, the new leftist president Gustavo Petro said Wednesday.

Petro said members of the powerful and heavily armed Gulf drug cartel will enjoy "legal benefits" if they quit the narcotics trade and surrender but he did not specify if this meant not having to serve prison time, as happened with leftist guerrillas under a 2016 peace accord.

"A drug trafficker who negotiates with the government," Petro told a press conference, "will not be extradited".

Petro, the first leftist president in Colombia's history, took power on 7 August.

He said he would negotiate with the United States on how to implement the non-extradition offer. After four decades of international efforts to fight the drug trade, Colombia is still the world's largest cocaine producer and the United States is the biggest consumer of the drug.—AFP

Australia launches formal inquiry into ex-PM's secret power grab

AUSTRALIA on Friday tapped a former high court judge to investigate ex-prime minister Scott Morrison's decision to secretly appoint himself to several key ministerial portfolios.

Incumbent Prime Minister Anthony Albanese announced the creation of the inquiry, saying the country's system of "parliamentary democracy" had been tested.

During the Covid-19 pandemic, conservative leader Morrison appointed himself to the ministries of health, treasury, finance, resources and home affairs without telling colleagues or the public.

Albanese said the inquiry was essential "to ensure that this can never happen again".

The probe will be led by former high court judge Virginia Bell and will report by 25 November.

"We need to have a quick and appropriate inquiry," said Albanese, adding this is "not about the politics, but how this happened, why this happened and who knew about it."

He did not rule out Morrison or other former government ministers from being compelled to give evidence if necessary.—AFP

Woman on trial over rare 'jihadist' attack in Switzerland

IN a rare case of alleged Islamist "terrorism" in Switzerland, a woman will go on trial next week over a brutal knife attack on two shoppers at an upscale department store.

The woman, who cannot be named, allegedly tried to slit the throats of two women shopping at the Manor store in Lugano, in Switzerland's southern, Italian-speaking Ticino region on 24 November 2020.

The defendant, 28 at the time, is suspected of committing a "jihadist knife attack" and had "intended to kill her victims and to commit a terrorist act on behalf of IS" (the Islamic State group), the attorney-general's office said earlier this year.

When her trial opens at the Federal Criminal Court in Bellinzona, near Lugano, on Monday, she will face charges of attempted murder and violating laws against association with Al-Qaeda, IS and related groups.—AFP

GERMAN car manufacturer Audi will become an engine supplier in Formula One for the first time in the 2026 season, chairman Markus Duesmann announced on Friday. Audi will announce the team they will supply by the end of the year although it is widely expected to be Sauber, who presently race as Alfa Romeo with a Ferrari engine.

Those expectations moved closer to reality when Alfa Romeo announced in a statement later on Friday they would cut ties with Sauber “at the end of 2023”.

The Audi announcement was made at Spa Francorchamps, the venue for Sunday’s Belgian Grand Prix with Formula 1 President and CEO Stefano Domenicali and Mohammed ben Sulayem, President of the International Automobile Federation (FIA), motorsport’s governing body present.

Arsenal boss Arteta hints at deal to replace Pepe

MIKEL Arteta said on Friday Arsenal could sign a replacement for Nicolas Pepe after the Ivory Coast winger left the Premier League leaders to join Nice.

Pepe’s loan move to Ligue 1 has increased the chances of Arsenal making another move into the transfer market before the summer window closes on 1 September.

Arsenal has been linked with a move for Wolves winger Pedro Neto and Arteta admitted he could adapt his transfer philosophy after prioritizing early deals for Manchester City duo Gabriel Jesus and Oleksandr Zinchenko at the start of the window.

“We have done it in a different way. At the start of the window we signed players before getting other players out,” Arteta told reporters. “Now we have done something different, we have let a player go and maybe we’ll be able to recruit somebody.

“But it’s not a guarantee because the players are still not here. What I guarantee is the day the window closes, for me this is the best team in the world and I will try to get the best out of them, that’s it.”

Arsenal are the only club to boast a perfect start to the Premier League season with three successive wins. They host Fulham on Saturday looking to consolidate their surprise position at the top of the table.—AFP
