Our government is working towards the welfare of the people and the future of the Union “TODAY, the Tatmadaw is taking on national responsibility and is acting in accordance with the Constitution. This happened because officials of the previous government, political representatives and election officials violated the constitution and existing laws. Our country’s founding democratic system has withered. These issues should not happen again. Action must be taken to prevent abuse of democracy, the establishment of a dictatorship in the name of democracy, and the establishment of personal influence over the institution. Action must be taken to prevent major vote fraud in the elections. For this, we need to build the foundations now. The basics need to be strong. In order to do these things, our government is working towards the welfare of the people and the future of the Union.

the manufacturing of value-added products in the industrial zones and the provision of the technical and monetary assistance inter alia. Next, U Kyaw Swa Win, the chairman of MSMEs in Nay Pyi Taw, and some manufacturers submitted progress reports on the effectuation of industrial and agricultural development activities. They demanded providing of legal protection and means and instruments of production in addition to the plots of land and the buildings. They also presented the situation on the export of value-added products. They also asked for low-interest loans needed for investment in their businesses. Then, SAC Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing responded to the presentations. He said, “Arrangements are underway to issue low-interest loans to MSMEs. The plots of land will also be granted to the Nay Pyi Taw MSMEs Office. Pyinmana abounds in bamboo plants, and so, people are felling bamboo plants indiscriminately, causing forest degradation. So, there is an utter need to do reforestation. People are found to be using bamboo more as food than as a product. If we can add value to bamboo products, using modern technologies, we can earn better income. Afterwards, Union Ministers concerned gave explanations regarding the matters raised by the entrepreneurs. The SAC on its part has been providing necessary assistance. Then, the Vice-Governor of the Central Bank of Myanmar discussed the issuance of loans for making investments, repayment of the loans and debt restructuring. Next, the Nay Pyi Taw Council Chairman explained how they are bringing about economic development amidst the dramatic difficulty. Then, the SAC Chairman said among other things that if the trade deficit could be reduced, the national economic growth would be achieved, that a developing nation like Myanmar is required to boost investment in addition to the promotion of trade, that SAC is doing its utmost to reduce the foreign debts, that earning of foreign currency can be made through manufacturing and exporting of the agricultural and livestock breeding products and that as the rural people account for over 70 per cent of the country’s population, we are doing chiefly the businesses of agriculture and livestock breeding. Next, matters concerning the development of the Nay Pyi Taw Council Area were discussed. The SAC Chair emphasized the need to fully utilize natural resources in an environmental-friendly manner. Next, he explained the reasons for the price hike, saying, “Rise in prices of the commodities can be attributed to higher costs of production. It also happens when the supply and demand are not in equilibrium. It is necessary to be aware that the price hike can adversely affect national security as well as the peace and stability of the State. It need not forget that there have been political uprisings caused by the sky-high prices of commodities.” If we can boost agricultural production, we can obtain the raw materials for cultivation. And if we can manufacture quality products and use quality packaging, we can boost our export. If we can manufacture personal goods domestically, we need not import them. This is the reason why I am encouraging import substitution industrialization. Regarding electricity, the Prime Minister said that attention should be paid to the production of solar power; that care is needed to be taken not to waste water, that loans will be issued in accordance with the rules and regulations and that collective effort should be exerted to effectuate the national economic development. Lastly, the Senior General emphasized the development of human resources before giving good news that Nay Pyi Taw State Academy will be opened in the not-distant future. Then, SAC Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing accompanied by those attending the ceremony went round the value-added products exhibited by the MSMEs in Nay Pyi Taw Area.—MNA

Analyze true and false information for every event

IN THE information age, most people are always of hunger for catching news and information benefiting them and for improving their lives and environs. It is the nature of the information technology age.

But there is an important factor that true information can benefit society as well as build a better world whereas misinformation intends to destroy society, bringing disadvantages to the world. As such, all news hunters need to choose and analyze the information whenever they have.

Misinformation, disinformation, false news, fake news, fabricated news and extorted information never bring advantages to society but accumulate the society with disadvantages. Various items of information including both true and false ones are manipulated by the media. In this regard, the role of media is of importance. It is because powerful media can monopolize the circulation of information and situations based on true and false.

As such, information users need to analyze whenever they see any item of information. So also, people need to notice the nature of media which produce the information. Some media and news agencies are righteous in releasing information and news without bias but some media outlets issue news items based on correct and wrong facts as they like with attention to manipulate the media arena for the sake of their interests.

Currently, most of the various types of media outlets located across the world as well as in Myanmar are attempting to seek benefits for their businesses. Although the incident is correct as released by the government, merged media outlets can change the situation with their influential power in the media arena by shifting the true information with the fabricated ones. So, it is noticeable that the nature of media outlets is always shaking the information arena based on their techniques and partners.

Hence, news users need to notice the information and its sources. Only when people can carefully analyze the news items based on every event can they approve the information about what event is right and what is wrong. In this regard, people can gradually find what media outlets release information without bias, what news agencies try to attempt to monopolize the media arena with the use of various ways and means and what media agencies issue the correct information mixed with false news.

Practically, people can understand the nature of information what is a universal truth, and what is based on pretending the world. Whatever it may be, truth and correctness are universal truths. Misinformation and false and fake news cannot influence true news forever.

90,000 Brahminy ducks perished because of cannibalism

By Win Myint Han

(First National Insurance General Co)

LONG ago 90,000 golden Brahminy ducks (ဟင်္သာ) were living in a golden cave in the Satetakote mountain. They did not go out during the four rainy months. If they did, they would fall into the sea, as they could not fly with their rain-laden wings. Whenever a rainy season drew near, they collected Salay paddies growing naturally uncultivated near the Zartasara lake and stored them in the cave to their capacity, feeding on them throughout the wet season. A spider who was as big as a cartwheel and named Ohnnanabi, wove one layer of cobweb per rainy month across the mouth of the golden cave to seal it. A viscous thread of the web was as thick as a tether used for tying bullocks. The ducks offered double helpings of food to a strong one to breach the cobweb barrier. When the wet season ended, that hero preceding all the other ducks formed a passage through the four layers of the web by biting them open and going out, followed by the others.

One particular rainy season lasted five months. When no more food was left four months later, having discussed amongst themselves what they should do, the grown-up and strong ducks started eating the eggs, meaning. “As long as we are alive, we could have eggs”. Then they ate the young and tender ducks, finishing with the old and frail ones. When the rain stopped at the end of the fifth month, five layers of the web had been already spun by the spider. The surviving ducks were getting weak because of having eaten the flesh of their own species. The leading duck who got double quotas of the food ration succeeded in biting open the four layers of web only, failing to pierce the fifth one where it got entangled. And the blood-thirsty spider sucked the blood of the duck after beheading it. The spider drank the blood of all the remaining ducks too, as they were incapable of holding layer five and stuck fast thereto. In that way, the entire colony of the Brahminy ducks of the Duttarahta species was exterminated. (Extracted and translated from volume 5 (page 714) of the illustrated 550 stories translated and compiled by venerable Mingala Bonkyaw Nyaunkan Sayadaw)

The analytical evaluation of the story mentioned above

Almost all Myanmar having come of age might have heard the saying, “Don’t rejoice, if a pimple grows at the tip of or under the (your) chin.” It is a warning for one not to feel glad if what is afore-mentioned happens to one. But at the same time, the saying purportedly implies that one should rejoice, if a pimple grows anywhere other than on one’s chin, making it very funny. Who would really feel happy, if a pimple sprouts wherever on his/her body? It could cause even death in a worst-case scenario if tetanus germs enter the wound after it is squeezed excessively and treated carelessly. That is why every saying, dictum and the like even though surviving now after passing through many ages should not be taken for granted.

Accordingly, what one has to bear in mind is that even an ancient dictum should be considered and reasoned critically whether it is logical, reasonable and still applicable to the present time and conditions, by making use of one’s own common sense etc.

The Lord Buddha, the sui generis whom all 3 kinds of man: human beings, celestials (နတ်) and super-celestials (ဗြဟ္မာ) worship and rely on, had expounded as follows once and for all in His Kaysamoatti Discourse (ကောသမုတ္တိတရား) to the Kalama princes (ကာလမဓဇ်သားများ).

“Never accept the sermon learnt from hearsay as absolutely true. Never accept the sermon in question as absolutely true, only because it has been accepted and passed down as true from generation to generation by your ancestry. Never accept the sermon in question as absolutely true, only because it conforms and agrees to one of the scriptures studied and accepted by you as true. Never treat the sermon in question as absolutely untrue, only because it does not tally with and agree to the opinion finally held by you after careful consideration and criticism thereof by making use of all available methods and norms. And so on and so forth ... Only if you yourselves vividly come to discover that Greed, Anger and Ignorance inherent in you are duly reduced in consequence of your meditation pursuant to that sermon, accept it as absolutely true and keep meditating”. {The full text is not cited to avoid lengthiness}

As such we have to find out, what no one had ever attempted before, whether the Claim that cannibalism had resulted in the total extinction of all the 90,000 hapless ducks is correct, logical, reasonable and acceptable, by making use of our own common sense, general knowledge, experience, logical and reasoning powers etc., based on the above principles clarified by the Awakened One in so far as they were applicable. Up to date we have been hearing that Duttarahta species (those 90,000 ducks) had ceased to exist owing to cannibalism, quoted every now and then in books, conversations and media etc. Let’s consider the pros and cons.

As the story goes, the Brahminy ducks had to stay inside the cave throughout one entire rainy season, as they could not fly outside with their rain-soaked wings.

IF one asks who have cetana (goodwill) towards young people, the answer will be unanimous: it is the parents followed by the teachers and the writers who have devoted their lives to cultivating the youth, putting the latter onto the correct path. The writer of this book is a teacher known as Saya Aung Thin.

Saya U Aung Thin has devoted his life to cultivating the youth. He spent most of his time on youth, organizing the development of the youth reading associations, giving lectures and educational talks and writing books on ethics and culture as well as on education. Additionally, he has relentlessly conducted talks and also written a lot consistently with a view to developing the lives of the youth by promoting their personality. This book is also aimed at the youth.

The book deals with Mangala Sutta. However, he wrote in a reader-friendly style so that young people will have no difficulty understanding the preaching of Buddha. Although this book is dedicated to the younger generation, it is also useful for the rather mature people who may have missed some important points because there are always things which may seem easy upon superficial observation but are really difficult to get the point.

He said, “Our Buddhists have all started to say prayers since childhood. We would say Okasa, Okasa, Okasa every day. Well, if one asks what Okasa means, there will be only a handful of Buddhists who know what it implies. The same goes for Mangala.

“You’ve all started with Okasa first before you began to recite Mangala Sutta. How can you understand Mangala Sutta even when you do not know what Okasa suggests?

“Not only Mangala Sutta but also Dhammacakkappavattana Sutta are not understood well by the Buddhists. Matter-of-factly, Dhammacakkappavattana Sutta is the summary of All Dhammas which will lead the listeners and/or readers into the attainment of Nibbana. Most of our Buddhists are contented with reciting the Dhammacakkappavattana Sutta, not trying to contemplate the very essence of Buddha Teachings. Saya U Aung Thin has exerted his effort, trying to explain the in-depth meaning of the difficult Pali words embedded in Mangala Sutta. In the section that deals with Puja ca pujaniyanam i.e., paying homage to those who deserve homage, he said, “In this regard, I’d like to put one point I want you to be aware of. The word ‘Sangha’ does not refer to a particular monk; this word is a collective noun, referring to the entire mass of monks, who are abiding by the disciplinary rules of Buddha. So, if you happen to see a monk who fails to stick to the Vinaya Rules, you ought to blame that particular monk only. As he is not representing the entire mass of Sangha, you should not have disrespect for Sangha. Please try to differentiate between Sangha and monk.”

Yadana Laing Gu by Nat Nwe

I would like to introduce a book published by the Publishing House called Seikku Cho Cho. This book is nothing but a textbook once prescribed for matriculation students. The title of the book is, “The Treasure of a Kingdom” written by P. F. J. Simms. Saya Nat Nwe seems to have thrown an arrow at three birds simultaneously. First, he aims to help the matriculates understand the prescribed text thoroughly. Secondly, he wants the general readers to be familiar with the prescribed texts. In third place, he wants to enable those who want to study translation methods to learn how to translate English into Myanmar.

This bilingual book includes 17 chapters with the Myanmar text coming first followed by the English version in the second part.

The chapters are: The manuscript; Death comes quickly; I am in danger; A way to escape; Dr Vong visits my rooms; We study the clues; The manuscript is stolen; Who is Dr Vong; The search begins; Pridiyakorn makes a final decision; The gully; We are the quarry; We find the cave; Trapped; Ordeal by water; The fight with Vong; and Return to safety.

At the commencement of Chapter 1, the writer introduced his main character as follows: My name is Prasert. A year ago, I left Chulalongkorn University in Bangkok and went to London to continue my studies and take a Ph. D in History. I found very pleasant rooms near Bedford Square. My teacher was Philip Martin, who is a great friend of my family and about my age. The winter passed uneventfully.

In the title chapter i.e. We find the cave, he wrote: So, we started up the ravine. We understood then about the darkness. For the sides pressed in upon us, sometimes almost seeming to touch each other; and the air felt cold and wet above us. In my opinion, the book will benefit both the students and those learning how to translate English into Myanmar.

They usually collected and stored enough food for each four month wet season. But that particular rainy season extended to the fifth month and all the stored food had been already eaten up after four months. In order to remain alive, the grown-up and strong ducks ate up the eggs first, then the young and the old later. (given)

We believe that those cannibals had taken a very right, resourceful and decisive measure by devouring their fellow ducks. Why? Because they had no other alternative. Unless they ate up their own brethren, all the 90,000 ducks without any exception would surely die of starvation, as there was totally no food left inside the cave on the one hand and they could not venture out on the other. The kind of death facing all the 90,000 ducks if the stronger ones were saintly by not resorting to cannibalism, was a very slow and painful one. First and foremost, without food intake they all would become weaker and weaker, thinner and thinner, suffering the unbearable sensation of overpowering hunger coupled with diminishing strength and they all would eventually die woefully.

Out of the 90,000 ducks, the cannibals might be at least one-third i.e. about 30,000. Therefore, when the rainy season ended after the fifth month, the said 30,000 ducks would remain alive, hale and hearty. If they were too good to practise cannibalism, there shall be absolutely no survivors at that time. Even if all those survivors (cannibals) were finally killed by the spider, as the story goes (which is very illogical and unreasonable), the cannibalism at worst had enabled them to stay for some more days up to the end of the month 5 well-fed. As there were practically no other means of preserving their dear lives, the cannibals deserved not to be condemned as too selfish, too cruel, too ruthless and so on for what they had done. Because even the human mother mostly cited as the champion of parental love has no choice but to stand on her own son, since she can no longer tolerate the heat, when the earth itself is burning (ကမ္ဘာမီးလောင်သားကောင်ချင်း), as the famous proverb indicates.

Hence which is better and more desirable: either the demise by starvation of all the 90,000 ducks together or the preservation of about 30,000 lives for some more days by cannibalism?

As the story unfolds, if the leading cannibalistic duck could have penetrated the four layers of the web, then only layer five remained intact by the time it was killed. Consequently, the other ducks following the leader must be able to easily hole the remaining layer, because they still had fully conserved their strength, as they need not make any physical exertion in easily passing through the four layers already breached open by the leading martyr. It is relevant, reasonable and undeniable that if the leading duck could have pierced the four layers – alone, then the remaining birds about 29,999 strong each with full conserved energy and advancing one after another must be able to force an opening in the sole remaining layer, the fifth (which was by no means different from four others) easily. Even if each bird could bite only a little bit, the combined efforts of the first 20, 25 birds would have, penetrated layer five eventually, let alone the remaining more than 29,000.

It is learnt that the spider was as big as a cartwheel and could produce a viscous thread as thick as a rope used for tying bullocks. (given) Accordingly, it can be safely deduced that its body needed daily a big amount of food which was hardly available even in fine weather let alone in rainy seasons. It could not also go outside to find food, as the rain could kill it. It is also amazing how that predator had survived that long, as it could not have caught even a single duck during the many past four-month rainy seasons in the first place. (No argument against the assertion that the spider drank the blood of about 30,000 ducks combined in one sitting only, is made not to lengthen this text.)

Finally, it was alleged that the cannibals were getting weak as a result of the cannibalism which we find most sceptical. In the animal world snake eats a snake, fish eats fish, a bird eats a bird and so on and so forth. As far as human beings are concerned cannibalism was never cited as a cause which makes the eaters weak. Consider Pawrisara (ပေါရိသာာရ). We have never come across any one statement which says so, based on modern science.

In the Darrana Sutta (ဓာရဏဝရိတ်) the Lord Buddha was described and characterized twice as always guided invariably in all His deeds physical, verbal and mental by His intellect, having nothing to do with cracking a joke, uttering and doing something carelessly, preaching a sermon without careful reasoning and above all no deed was ever done without being duly deliberated and mulled over by His intellect.

Hence it is impossible that the Awakened One is omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent (သဗ္ဗညုတဉာဏ်တော်) and endowed with the unlimited extent of luck and intellect (ကံတော်အနန္တ၊ ဉာဏ်တော်အနန္တ) would cite such a most flawed, unreasonable and illogical tale as the captioned one (as pointed out above).

Accordingly, the extermination of the 90,000 Brahminy ducks was not caused by cannibalism. ■

Particle physics pushing cancer treatment boundaries

RESEARCHERS at Europe’s science lab CERN, who regularly use particle physics to challenge our understanding of the universe, are also applying their craft to upend the limits to cancer treatment.

The physicists here are working with giant particle accelerators in search of ways to expand the reach of cancer radiation therapy, and take on hard-to-reach tumours that would otherwise have been fatal.

In one CERN lab, called CLEAR, facility coordinator Roberto Corsini stands next to a large, linear particle accelerator consisting of a 40-metre metal beam with tubes packed in aluminium foil at one end, and a vast array of measurement instruments and protruding colourful wires and cables.

The research here, he told AFP during a recent visit, is aimed at creating very high energy beams of electrons — the negatively charged particles in the nucleus of an atom — that eventually could help to combat cancerous cells more effectively.

They are researching a “technology to accelerate electrons to the energies that are needed to treat deep-seated tumours, which is above 100 million electron volts” (MeV), Corsini explained.—AFP

Sharks can help large ocean fishes scratch itches: Aussie study

SHARKS are the preferred scraping surface for large pelagic fishes, with a positive impact on teleost fitness by reducing parasite loads, according to a study published Wednesday in the journal PLOS One.

By analyzing video records of over 100,000 individuals across the Pacific, Indian and Atlantic Oceans, Christopher D H Thompson and Jessica Meeuwig from the University of Western Australia found that big fishes living in the open ocean, like tunas, prefer to scrape on sharks, rather than on other fish species.

“Tunas were quite orderly, lining up behind the shark and taking turns to brush against the tail. Rainbow runners were unruly, forming a school around the back half of the shark and darting out in turns to bump against its body,” the researchers said, when detailing different scraping behaviours between various fish species.— Xinhua

US CDC concerned for new Omicron subvariants

THE US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is closely tracking a wide range of Omicron sublineages, including three drawing recent attention, the agency said on Friday.

The three new subvariants are BQ.1, BQ.1.1 and XBB. BQ.1 and BQ.1.1 are offshoots of the BA.5 subvariant, which has been dominant in the United States for months, according to the CDC.

CDC data show that BQ.1 and BQ.1.1 seem to be spreading relatively quickly so far, but they are still a small proportion of overall variants. The CDC is also keeping a close eye on XBB based on international reports, although it is still very rare in the United States. —Xinhua

Singapore reports 7,247 new COVID-19 cases

SINGAPORE reported 7,247 new cases of COVID-19 on Friday, bringing the country's total tally to 2,053,370.

Of the new cases, 639 were detected through PCR (polymerase chain reaction) tests and 6,608 through ARTs (antigen rapid test), according to statistics released by the Ministry of Health.

Among the PCR cases, 624 were local transmissions and 15 were imported cases. Among the ART cases with mild symptoms and assessed to be of low risk, there were 6,361 local transmissions and 247 imported cases. —Xinhua

Over 1 mln children in Philippines unprotected by routine vaccine: UNICEF

UNICEF said nearly 1.5 million Filipino children have yet to receive or complete their polio vaccine, making 67 provinces in the country at high risk for polio infections. PHOTO: UNICEF/FILE

MORE than one million children in the Philippines have yet received a single dose of routine vaccine, the United Nations children's fund (UNICEF) said on Friday.

UNICEF said nearly 1.5 million Filipino children have yet to receive or complete their polio vaccine, making 67 provinces in the country at high risk for polio infections.

Polio is a highly infectious disease that can cause paralysis or death. Complete vaccination for polio according to schedule is the most effective way to protect children from this disease.

Meanwhile, all regions in the Philippines are also at high-risk for a measles outbreak, said the UN agency, citing a 2022 World Health Organization Risk Assessment.

UNICEF Philippines Representative Oyunsai Khan Dendevnorov told a press conference that the increasing number of children at risk of measles, polio, and other vaccine-preventable diseases "must be treated as a public health emergency that needs urgent action."

She said the COVID-19 pandemic "highlights the need to strengthen primary health care," urging the authorities to prioritize investments and bolster human resources to reach zero-dose children. — Xinhua

COVID-19 cases bounce back in Finland

THE Finnish Institute for Health and Welfare (THL) on Friday reported an increase in the presence of COVID-19 in its wastewater sampling.

According to the THL's monitoring report, the country's current COVID-19 situation is about as bleak as it was at the beginning of this year.

THL leading expert Tarja Pitkanen told national broadcaster Yle that the country is currently on the crest of a wave caused by the Omicron variant of the virus.

Omicron was first detected in Finland in early 2022. The number of confirmed cases was relatively low in August, but the trend appears to be reversed now, she said.

The coming weeks will show whether the levels of COVID-19 detected in wastewater will exceed those recorded at the beginning of this year, she said. She added that the Omicron subvariant BA.5 has become the dominant strain of the virus in Finland, with subvariants BA.2 and BA.4 also detected in certain parts of the country. —Xinhua

Hong Kong broke law by scrapping vaccine exemptions: court

HONG Kong's government broke the law when it invalidated thousands of certificates exempting people from coronavirus vaccinations, a court ruled Friday, in a rare rebuke of the city's strict pandemic controls.

Coronavirus jabs are not mandatory in Hong Kong, but the Chinese city uses a QR healthcode system that denies unvaccinated people access to many public premises.

Police have accused seven doctors of issuing fraudulent exemptions in recent months in a city where coronavirus vaccine hesitancy is pronounced, especially among the elderly. After arresting the medics, local authorities announced some 20,000 exemption certificates would be declared invalid. But High Court judge Russell Coleman ruled that such a move was not supported by Hong Kong's public health laws. "A government minister gets his or her legal powers from legislation — and not from an announcement made in a press release," Coleman wrote on Friday.

Hong Kong's unelected government has used emergency powers to pass some of the strictest pandemic rules in the world — including compulsory mask wearing and bans on large outdoor gatherings — which remain in place to this day. —AFP

EU agrees 'roadmap' to contain energy prices

EU leaders on Friday reached agreement on a "roadmap" aimed at putting in place measures within weeks to shield European consumers from soaring energy prices.

The accord came after 11 hours of wrangling over broad proposals to lower energy bills as gas prices pushed skywards by the war in Ukraine.

The bloc's 27 member states have been squabbling for months over which joint initiatives to adopt, riven by the fact that energy mixes in the countries vary greatly. While the announcement of the summit text made a public show of unity, it was clear that the coming negotiations would remain difficult. One step in that would come next week with a meeting of EU energy ministers in Luxembourg.

The summit agreement set out a "solid roadmap to keep on working on the topic of energy prices", European Commission chief Ursula von der Leyen told a media conference.

At least 15 EU countries — more than half the bloc — are pushing for an ambitious cap on prices and are increasingly unsettled by strikes and protests over the cost of living spreading across France, Belgium and other member states. PHOTO: JOE KLAMAR/AFP

The published text calls on the European Commission and EU countries in coming weeks to find ways to shield consumers from the high prices "while preserving Europe's global competitiveness... and the integrity of the Single Market".

European Council President Michel said, "the energy crisis represents a threat to the internal market" of the EU and stressed "maximal coordination" was needed to protect it.

UK reports further bleak economic data

UK government borrowing surged and retail sales slumped in September, official data showed Friday, dealing a further economic blow to a country in political crisis.

Public sector net borrowing stood at £20 billion ($22 billion), the second-largest September level on record, as decades-high inflation sees interest on debt repayments balloon.

Retail sales volumes tumbled 1.4 per cent as sky-high prices curbed consumer purchasing. The figure was better, however, than the 1.7-per-cent slide in August.

The data comes one day after Prime Minister Liz Truss resigned in the wake of markets turmoil triggered by her budget of tax cuts funded by debt.

The public borrowing figure exceeded analysts' consensus of £17.2 billion, which was already far above the government's own prediction.—AFP

S.Africa paves way for cryptocurrency regulation

SOUTH Africa's financial watchdog on Thursday declared cryptocurrency a financial product, paving way for the regulation of the assets in the continent's most advanced economy.

The announcement comes in the wake of financial institutions and watchdogs around the world grappling on how to regulate digital currencies.

The decision by the Financial Sector Conduct Authority (FSCA) means financial firms dealing in cryptos will have to apply for licensing next year between 1 June and 20 November.—AFP

Floods to hurt Australian GDP growth forecast, push up vegetable prices: treasurer

A man films flooded streets due to torrential rain in the Camden suburb of Sydney in July. PHOTO: AFP

FLOODING in Australia's south-east will harm the country's projected economic growth, the treasurer has confirmed.

Ahead of handing down his first federal budget on Tuesday, Jim Chalmers on Friday said modelling suggests floods in Tasmania, New South Wales and Victoria will wipe 0.25 per cent off gross domestic product (GDP) growth in the final quarter of 2022. Thousands of homes and businesses have been affected by the floods, with more rain expected over the weekend.

The Treasury forecasts the floods will drive the price of fruit and vegetables up by 8 per cent over the next six months.

However, inflation is still expected to peak at 7.75 per cent. Chalmers said the big ongoing contributor to inflation increasingly will be the impact of these natural disasters and the impact of higher electricity prices.

The Labour government said its first budget since winning May's election will have a focus on addressing the rising cost of living. It will include about 1.5 billion Australian dollars (about 877 million US dollars) in previously announced emergency payments for flood victims and a three billion Australian dollars (1.8 billion US dollars) reserve fund to respond to future disasters.

"We don't know yet whether that three billion Australian dollars will be sufficient but we consider it prudent," Chalmers said in a press conference in Canberra on Friday.—Xinhua

Portugal distributes financial aid amid record inflation

PORTUGAL began on Thursday to pay financial aid of 125 euros (122 US dollars) to each worker in the country to minimize the impact caused strong domestic inflation.

According to the Ministry of Finance, 5.8 million people, or nearly half of the country's population, are set to receive a non-taxable deposit in their bank accounts.

Adults who make less than 2,700 euros (2,639 dollars) per month and are not receiving pensions are entitled to the payments. Families with children, regardless of the monthly income, will have an extra benefit of 50 euros (49 dollars) for each person under 24 years of age.

The measures are part of a state package called "Families First" that focuses on reducing the impact of inflation in Portugal.—Xinhua

Google fined $162 mln
by Indian watchdog
over market dominance

GOOGLE has been fined more than US$160 million by India's anti-trust watchdog after a probe found the tech behemoth was abusing its commanding position in the local smartphone market. The California-based company's Android mobile operating system is by far the dominant player in India and is run on 95 per cent of all the country's smartphones, according to research agency Counterpoint. But the Competition Commission of India (CCI) said Google had configured the platform to unlawfully crowd out rivals to its popular apps, including YouTube and web browser Chrome. Android had a suite of Google apps pre-installed on its phones, including the company's own search engine, "which accorded significant competitive edge to Google's search services over its competitors", a CCI statement said late Thursday. —AFP

India's Reliance reports mixed results as taxes hurt oil business

INDIAN conglomerate Reliance Industries reported mixed quarterly results on Friday, with weakness in its core oil-refining business hurting profits even as its retail and telecom arms posted strong earnings. Reliance, which is owned by Asia's second-richest man Mukesh Ambani, reported a net profit of 136.56 billion rupees ($1.65 billion) between July and September, 0.2 per cent lower than the same period last year. From the June quarter, net profit declined 24 per cent from 179.55 billion rupees. Revenues from operations increased 33.7 per cent on-year to 2.33 trillion rupees, helped by strong contributions from Reliance's newer consumer-facing businesses.

"I am pleased with the record performance of our consumer businesses which continue to scale new milestones every quarter," chairman and managing director Ambani said in a statement. L'Oreal confident beauty will beat inflation beast

FRENCH beauty products giant L'Oreal beat third-quarter sales expectations and expressed confidence Thursday about the outlook despite global economic uncertainty and rampant inflation. Sales at the world's top beauty company shot 19.7 per cent higher in the July through September period to 9.58 billion euros ($9.34), beating the analyst consensus of 9.29 million compiled by Bloomberg. "In a context of unprecedented volatility, marked by the public health restrictions in China and inflation in the Western world, L'Oreal achieved a very solid quarter," said chief executive Nicolas Hieronimus. "The global beauty market remained dynamic, and consumers' appetite for beauty products is intact," he added. Nine-month sales were up 20.5 per cent to 27.94 billion euros at the firm that owns the Maybelline New York and Garnier brands. "Despite the current uncertainties, we remain confident in the outlook for the global beauty market... and confident in our ability to outperform the market and achieve another year of growth in sales and profits in 2022," Hieronimus added. —AFP

Guinea junta agrees return to civilian rule in 2 years

GUINEA'S ruling junta has agreed to restore civilian rule in two years, after facing sanctions over its original plan for a three-year transfer of power; the West African bloc ECOWAS said Friday. West African leaders had last month suspended Guinea from the bloc and imposed sanctions on a number of individuals following a military coup.

"In a dynamic compromise, experts from ECOWAS and Guinea have jointly developed a consolidated chronogram (timetable) for a transition spread over 24 months," ECOWAS said in a report following a technical mission to the country published on social media by the junta. The country's military leader, Colonel Mamady Doumbouya, said in an address broadcast on state television that the timetable would take effect from 1 January 2023.—AFP

Ukraine says threat 'growing' of new offensive from Belarusian territory

KYIV said Thursday increasingly hostile statements from Belarus and Russia and the deployment of a joint force signalled a "growing" threat of an offensive launched by Moscow from Belarus, north of Ukraine.

This comes after the creation of the new force between Minsk and Moscow, tasked with defending the Belarusian borders, was announced last week.

"The aggressive rhetoric of the military-political leadership of Russia and Belarus is intensifying," Deputy Chief of the Ukrainian General Staff Oleksiy Gromov said during a briefing.

"The threat of the resumption of the offensive by the Russian armed forces on the northern front is growing," Gromov said.

An offensive could be launched "to the west of the Belarusian border, to cut the main logistical arteries for the supply of weapons and military equipment to Ukraine" from countries west of Ukraine, including from Poland.

Earlier on Thursday Belarusian security services (KGB) said "almost every day we see increasing intelligence activities from the Ukrainian territory and attempts to violate the Belarusian airspace" in a statement quoted by state-run agency Belta.

On Monday, Minsk said up to 9,000 Russian soldiers and around 170 tanks would be deployed to Belarus as part of the task joint force. —AFP

Russia says discussing Red Cross access to bombed Ukraine prison

RUSSIA said Thursday the Red Cross had permission to visit Olenivka prison, where dozens of Ukrainian prisoners of war died in a July bombing strike, but was blocked by the security situation.

Kyiv earlier this week accused the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) of "inaction" over Ukrainian prisoners held by Russia, saying a lack of visits to detained soldiers and civilians left them vulnerable to being tortured. The ICRC meanwhile has said it shares in the frustration, though stressing it could only conduct such visits when it was granted authorization and security guarantees. The organisation has been urging both sides to provide more access to their prisoners of war, and has voiced particular concern about the lack of access to the prison in Kremlin-controlled Olenivka in eastern Ukraine.—AFP

US restores defence talks but says no Russian interest in ending war

THE US and Russian defense chiefs spoke Friday for the first time in months but Secretary of State Antony Blinken said he saw no interest from Moscow for broader talks to end the Ukraine war.

Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin "emphasized the importance of maintaining lines of communication amid the ongoing war against Ukraine" during the call with his Russian counterpart Sergei Shoigu, said a US spokesman, Brigadier-General Pat Ryder.

Russia's defence ministry confirmed the call and said the two discussed Ukraine without further details.

The defense chiefs last spoke on 13 May when Austin urged Moscow to implement an "immediate ceasefire" in Ukraine.—AFP

Explosions rock gov't-controlled oil port in Yemen's Hadramout

TWO loud explosions ripped through a key government-controlled oil port in Yemen's southeastern province of Hadramout on Friday, a security official told Xinhua.

"Initial reports indicate that the Houthis militia launched an attack against Dhabah oil port using explosive-laden drones, causing explosions in the government-controlled area," the local security official said on condition of anonymity.

He clarified that the attack occurred while local authorities were preparing the shipment of crude exports to the global markets.

"Hours before the arrival of an exporting oil tanker to receive the shipment, two simultaneous explosions rocked the vicinity of Dhabah port that's completely secured by government forces," he said.—Xinhua

AU convenes meeting on Ethiopia peace talks

THE African Union's conflict resolution body was set to convene Friday to discuss the war in northern Ethiopia and looming peace talks aimed at ending nearly two years of bloodshed.

GIORGIA Meloni, leader of the far-right populist Brothers of Italy (FdI) party, became Italy's first woman prime minister on Friday.

The official announcement came after she met with the country's President, Sergio Mattarella, at the Quirinale Presidential Palace here in the afternoon.

Meloni received the mandate to form a new cabinet less than a month after her victory in the country's snap election on 25 September.

Her new cabinet, which will include 22 ministers, will be sworn in on Saturday, Ugo Zampetti, secretary-general of the Presidency of the Republic, told reporters.

Meloni's FdI party won 26 per cent of the vote in September, and she will now lead the country in a right-wing alliance with Matteo Salvini's League party and former Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi's centre-right Forza Italia, each of which snagged just over 8 per cent.

Next week, the new government will face confidence votes in both houses of Parliament.

Meloni's government is set to command a comfortable majority in both houses of Parliament (Chamber of Deputies and Senate).

Greek coastguard rescues 75 migrants at sea

GREECE'S coastguard on Friday said it had rescued 75 migrants on board a sailboat caught in stormy seas south of the Peloponnese peninsula.

The 69 men and six women were in good health after the sailboat was safely towed to a local port, the coastguard said in a statement.

Their nationalities were not disclosed. Greece has seen increased migration traffic this year, often carried out under adverse weather conditions.

At least 30 people drowned in two migrant boat sinkings near the Peloponnese and the island of Lesbos earlier this month.

Greece, Italy and Spain are among the first ports of call for people fleeing Africa and the Middle East in search of safety and better lives in the European Union.

The Greek coastguard says it has rescued about 1,500 people in the first eight months of the year, up from less than 600 last year.—AFP

Erdogan to discuss NATO bid with Swedish PM in Türkiye: report

PRESIDENT Recep Tayyip Erdogan has accepted a request from Sweden's new prime minister to visit Türkiye for talks aimed at overcoming Ankara's objections to Stockholm and Helsinki's bids to join NATO, local media reported on Friday.

"Sweden's new prime minister requested an appointment. I told our friends to 'give an appointment.'... We will discuss these issues with him in our country," Erdogan was quoted as saying by private NTV television on his plane back from Azerbaijan.

Swedish Prime Minister Ulf Kristersson said Thursday he was ready to head to Ankara to urge Türkiye to back bids by his country's bid to join the alliance.

Sweden and Finland earlier this year tore up their long-standing policies of non-alignment in the face of Russia's war on Ukraine and launched their bids to join the US-led military alliance.

The move has received strong backing from the vast majority of the alliance's members but Erdogan has stalled the process over accusations the Nordic neighbours are havens for Kurdish militants hostile to Ankara. Kristersson said he aimed to show the Turkish leader that Sweden and Finland "actually do what we promised" to fulfil a deal with Ankara to clear their path into NATO.

Erdogan said Ankara's position remained unchanged, calling on Sweden and Finland to deliver "these terrorists" sought by Turkish authorities.

"Unless they are sent back to us, things will not work at the parliamentary stage," he threatened.—AFP

Press Release by Central Bank of Myanmar on Statement of FATF Chairman T. Raja Kumar

1. The plenary session of Financial Action Task Force-FATF was held on 20 and 21 October in Paris, France. The events were attended by the Myanmar delegation, delegates representing the International Monetary Fund, 106 members of the global network and observer organizations, the United Nations, the World Bank, Interpol and the Egmont Group of Financial Intelligence Units. Chairman of FATF T. Raja Kumar issued statements regarding Myanmar.
2. Although Myanmar was put on high-risk jurisdictions subject to a call for action from jurisdictions under increased monitoring, it is here announced that it is not the jurisdictions subject to an FATF call on its members and other jurisdictions to apply countermeasures faced by North Korea and Iran which are now on the black list.
3. World countries and regions including Myanmar must follow the 40 recommendations of FATF. They include Anti-Money Laundering-AML, Countering the Financing of Terrorism-CFT and Targeted Financial Sanctions of Proliferation. Although Myanmar is not an FATF member country, it is a member of the Asia-Pacific Group on Money Laundering-APG.
4. Myanmar is following FATF recommendations, and although it was not compliant with over 20 standards out of 40 recommendations in the initial stage, it now meets 24 standards.
5. Myanmar was on that list between June 2011 and February 2016, and efforts are now being made to be removed from that list based on experiences, and it has already drafted the Action Plan to be implemented in the coming year.
6. Myanmar will have to face the Enhance Due Diligence-EDD in money transferring processes to foreign countries and the banks concerned can regularly operate their procedures such as making similar enquiries and collecting remittance documents. Despite the high-risk jurisdictions being subject to a call for action, it is not a risk factor for Myanmar so people need not worry about it, and manipulations should not be done in the currency market. Actions will be taken against such doings that do not comply with the rules and regulations of the Central Bank of Myanmar.

Prices remain stable in Yangon market despite forex fluctuations

THE exchange rate abruptly rose in the market due to the financial announcement on the evening of 21 October.

However, the exchange rate is used in the real situation and it depends on sellers and buyers. During three successive holidays from 22 to 24 October, they are not market prices and so sellers of imported products suspended their operations to know the situation yesterday.

Ma Nyein Aye who runs printing and copying services in Kyauktada told the Global New Light of Myanmar (GNLM) that she could not buy paper at shops near the Sule Pagoda as the products were out of stock. The retail price of paper rose by K500/1,000 than the original prices.

who have products sell them by increasing about K1,000 per viss. It is K5,500 per 50-viss bottle of vegetable oil, said a customer.

In the Bayintnaung market, sales were increasing than the normal day at retail shops yesterday, said an owner. The products purchased in Yangon were transported to the countryside before the holidays and so the trucks were needed yesterday, said a business person who operate truck services to delta region.

There was no panic buying of rice and the transactions were normal at the pharmacies and shopping centres yesterday, it is learnt.

In the past, unusual financial cases sparked panic buying of commodities but now it seems like to be a normal case and nothing changes. The palm oil price becomes drastically high and the merchants wait and watch the situation suspending the sale of their imported goods.

"Dollar prices were unstable beginning yesterday. We are worried that imported products prices would be higher. Some buy five-litre oil bottles. Now, prices would not higher during holidays," Ma Aye Min from Dagon Myothit (South) Township told the GNLM.

Buyers and sellers are waiting for opening prices on 25 October and the real market situation can be known at that time as well as the commodities process, said a market analyst.—TWA/GNLM
