Quality mango expected to fetch good price from resumption of Myanmar-China border trade

QUALITY mango is likely to be offered at a high price during the mango season following the resumption of Myanmar-China border trade channels amid the drop in mango yield, as per Myanmar Mango Market and Technology Development Association (Mandalay).

“Majority of Myanmar’s mango exports goes to China. Only a small volume is sent to Singapore, Thailand and Russia. The quality mango is expected to fetch good prices on account of the ease in border trade routes. However, it is hard to find quality ones. The output of mango drops due to flower bud damage. The production rate drastically fell in some areas. Moreover, there might be weather impacts in upcoming months”, said U Kyaw Soe Naing, secretary of the association.

Myanmar primarily exports Seintalone (Diamond solitaire), Shwe Hinth, Padamyar Ngamauk, Yinkwe and Machitsu mango varieties.

There are over 200 mango varieties grown in the country, covering over 257,000 acres. The commercially valued mangoes are Seintalone, Shwe Hinth, Padamyar Ngamauk and Maethi. —Maung Aye Chan/EM

YGEA raises gold reference price as spot gold price glistens

GOLD price climbs to a new peak of $2,025 per ounce. Consequently, the Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association hiked the reference rate to K2,385,700 per tical (0.578 ounce or 0.016 kilogramme).

On 1 April, YGEA set the reference rate of the pure gold at K2,319,700 per tical as the spot gold price stayed high at $1,969 per ounce.

The figures indicated an increase of K66,000 per tical for the reference rate and $56 per ounce for sport gold price within five days.

The yellow metal hit a high of K2,965,000 per tical in the unofficial domestic market.

Therefore, there is a price difference of over K640,000 per tical between the YGEA’s reference price and the price in the unofficial market.

YGEA calculated the price depending on the Central Bank of Myanmar’s reference exchange rate of K2,100, with some addition, while the US dollar is exchanged at K2,870 in the unofficial forex market.

The US dollar exchange rate influences domestic gold prices.

Following the bankruptcy of a US bank in early March, the gold price soared. Despite the gold gain in the global market, Myanmar’s forex market sees no movement at all. Consequently, YGEA requested its members not to buy them competitively, tracking the upward trend in the gold spot price, as per YGEA’s statement released on 20 March.

Afterwards, the YGEA called for the members to make gold transactions with only immediate payment and avoid verbal transactions over calls without having any physical stocks.

The YGEA is not bound to have any responsibilities for market manipulation in the unofficial market. As a result of this, its members are asked to strictly adhere to the rules and regulations of the association while making gold transactions.

At present, the authorities concerned are attempting to deal with market abuse and inspecting and prosecuting market manipulation is being undertaken.

Moreover, the Central Bank of Myanmar will inspect those manipulators to interfere with market stability through digital platforms, according to the notification dated 20 March.

The soaring dollar exchange-ing at over K4,500 drove the pure gold price up to a record-high of K3.7 million per tical in late August 2022.

For the gold price to decline, the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation has been selling gold ingots under the competitive bidding system in Yangon, Mandalay and Nay Pyi Taw.

With an aim at reducing gold prices, the YGEA and Mandalay Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association sold gold bullion supplied by the executive members and the members as well. — NN/EM

Myanmar generated an income of $853 million from 2,261,201 tonnes of rice and broken rice exports in the last FY2022-2023.

Myanmar primarily sent rice and broken rice to China (over 750,000 tonnes), followed by Belgium (323,000 tonnes), Bangladesh (239,000 tonnes), the Philippines (202,000 tonnes), Poland (over 120,000 tonnes), and Spain (over 115,000 tonnes).

Myanmar has been exerting concerted efforts to grow 10 per cent yearly in the rice export sector. To raise foreign income, it has been prioritizing the exportation of high-grade rice and boosting export volume, MRF stated.

The students from the level of upper primary school have to choose many options for spending the summer holidays joining sports courses, playing music, computer courses, spoken English and other language courses, physical culture and body fitness courses, swimming, martial arts, basic football and volleyball courses and so on.

These courses can broaden the horizon of the children and help enhance the critical thinking, initiative and creative capability of school children. Moreover, possessing skills and techniques in the training courses will help improve the heart and confidence of those children to face possible challenges and to have the capacity to overcome these challenges and difficulties without relentless efforts.

The Keenness of children in the practical and theoretical training courses helps them not derail from the appropriate ways of their lives as they chose. Active and confident youths are capable of defying threats of narcotic drugs and persuasion of wrong and unsuitable ideologies posed by unscrupulous persons backed by selfish politicians.

As such, not only parents but teachers as well as elder persons from the society need to pave the best ways for the student youths to efficiently spend their summer holidays to widen their scopes to some extent to stay away from malpractices and wrong persuasions. As the future of those students is inseparable from the enhancement of human resources of the State, all the people are to give a helping hand to student youths for translating the summer holidays into a valuable period.

Episode: 9

Lewis Leigh Fermor was born on 18th September 1880, the eldest of six children of Lewis Fermor and his wife Maria James. He was educated at Wilson’s Grammar School in Camberwell and studied metallurgy at the Royal School of Mines, where he took a BSc in 1907 and a DSc in 1909.

On the 13th of April 1930, Pascoe handed over the charge of the office of Director to L. L. Fermor and left India on long leave preparatory to retirement. The end of the decade was marked by a great business depression, and Fermor was still officiating when, early in 1932, the Government of India considered the financial position justified a general retrenchment in the cadre of all Civil Services and a ‘cut’ in all salaries. In consequence, when Pascoe’s retirement became effective on the 6th of April 1932, and Fermor became Director, the Geological Survey of India had lost the services of several valuable officers namely, Cotter, Brown, Jones, Banerji, Leicester, B. B. Gupta, and the experienced Chemist W. A. K. Christie. The harmful effects of this drastic retrenchment of the personnel of the survey were felt later at the time of the Second World War.

When Fermor became Director he had already established a secure place for himself in the mining and geological world through his outstanding work in connection with the description of the manganese-ore deposits of India and the discussion of their genesis and relationship to the Archaean rocks containing them. A petrologist of high order Fermor had discovered and described a number of new manganese minerals. After a service of 33 years, Fermor retired on the 7th of November, 1935.

In Burma, E. L. G. Clegg continued the mapping of the Mogok Stone Tract that had been commenced in pre-retrenchment days by Coggin Brown and A. K. Banerji. Clegg was joined at a later date by L. A. L. Iyer. Bradshaw assumed charge of the duties of the Resident Geologist and Official Member, Yenangyaung, and Singu Oilfield Advisory Boards at Yenangyaung. V. P. Sondhi continued his work in the Northern and M. R. Sahni in the Southern Shan States.

Publications

The series of publications on the correlation of the Archaean formations in various parts of India, which he wrote before and after his retirement, testified to Fermor’s profound knowledge of these rocks, inexhaustible patience, ceaseless energy, and a love of science which became his second nature.

Of papers in the Records, mention may be made of Coggin Brown and Sondhi’s Geological account of reconnaissance in the southern Shan States. There are two reports regarding Geological Reconnaissance in the Southern States; Taunggyi to Hopong and the Geology of the country between Kalaw and Taunggyi, Southern Shan States. The latter is a comprehensive report which included physical geology, a List of formations, Kalaw Red Beds, Coal measures, the Plateau lie to the east and north of Myelat respectively.

The area consists of an elevated tableland, for the most part, approximating 4,000 feet above the sea-level and lying beyond the outer hill ranges which divide it from the plains of Upper Burma further west; but it is itself traversed by parallel north and south ridges rising to over 5,000 feet and by inter-mountain valleys which, in the case of Yawngnhe valley, descend to 2,900 feet above sea level.

Within this region rocks of Ordovician, Silurian, Devonian, Permo-Carboniferous, Jurassic, Cretaceous, and Plio-Pleistocene ages occur and it forms indeed a key area to the study of the geology of the whole of Southern Shan States, while it’s known mineral deposits include ores of copper, silver and gold, lead, tungsten, and antimony, together with coal and lignite.

Previous Observers: During the field season of 1864-65 F. Fedden of G.S.I travelled through the Shan States from south to north. Entering the hills near Yamethin, 110 miles south of Mandalay, he crossed the Myelat on his way to Keshi Mansam and the Salween.

In 1887, E. J. Jones of G.S.I., visited various localities to investigate coal, lignite, and other mineral deposits. As the country was then only just recovering from widespread banditry and as the only map available was on the scale of 16 miles to 1 inch, Jones could make no attempt to survey geological boundaries and confined his attention strictly to the mineral occurrences.

In the season 1899-1900 C. S. Middlemiss made a geological reconnaissance in parts of the Southern Shan States and Karenni. This work is of fundamental importance in Shan geology and we, therefore, devote some attention to it here. He split up the geological fabric of the hills into a number of zones of distinctive character as regards composition and stratigraphy, as follows:-

1. Gneissic and metamorphic zone.
2. Great Limestone zone.
3. Purple Sandstone zone.

4. Sub-recent conglomerates, sands, and loams.

The gneissic and metamorphic zone is well exposed in sections along the motor road from Thazi to Kalaw between Hlaingdet (mile 9) and Pyinyaung (mile 31). The first rocks met with are well-foliated micaceous and hornblendic gneisses, intruded by veins of pink syenite, white pegmatite granite, and fine grey microgranite with biotite and muscovite. A little to the east of Pyinyaung the road enters the first of Middlemiss’s Great Limestone zones. The Purple Sandstones zone is very well seen in excellent exposures along the main road between a point four miles east of Pyinyaung and Kalaw. The purple rocks we now believe to be of probable Cretaceous age, as suggested first for similar strata in the Northern Shan States by C. L. Griesbach in 1901.

At the time Middlemiss was working here, T. H. D. La Touche was commencing his investigations into Northern Shan geology which culminated in the publication of his memoir and maps of the greater portion of the Northern Shan States.

Early in 1922, G. de P. Cotter spent a month on the Loi-an coal-field near Kalaw and produced a detailed report on that field and other associated coal occurrences. He proved that the Coal Measures contain a flora of the Middle Jurassic age and regarded the purple and red sandstones and conglomerates of the Kalaw neighbourhood as Upper Jurassic or Cretaceous.

Captain F. W. Walker worked with Dr Cotter and on the latter’s departure from the area, continued the systematic survey of sheets 93 D/10 and 14. He, like other geologists before and after his time, failed to realize that the rocks of the range separating the Heho and Yawngnhe valleys do not belong to the Plateau Limestones.

In June 1925, Clegg paid a visit to Mawson. He described the area as consisting of rocks of the Plateau Limestone formation.

C. S. Fox spent a few days at Kalaw in January 1929 and was fortunate to discover ammonites in the Red Beds there which, according to Dr Cotter, are of Cretaceous age, thus supporting the opinions originally advanced by Griesbach and by Cotter himself. In seasons 1930-31 he was joined by V. P. Sondhi who is responsible for the whole of sheet 93 H/1 and has completed parts of sheets 93 D/9, D/10, D/13, and D/14, including the different terrain west of the longitude of Kalaw.

By THAN HTUN (GEOSCIENCE MYANMAR)

Physical Geology

When the traveller to Kalaw by road reaches the crest of the final ascent just outside the town, he crosses the watershed of two great river systems, the Irrawaddy and Salween. By the railway route, it is traversed, together with the boundary line between Burma and the Shan States, at Myindaik, the first railway station below Kalaw. The western mountain ranges, Shan tableland and its ridges and old lake valleys, and drainage, are described in some detail.

The floating islands of Lake Inle: According to Dr N. Annandale, who was helped in the geological aspects of his investigation by Captain F. W. Walker, ‘Many different kinds of plants take part in island’s formation, but those of primary importance are certain large grasses and sedges that send out long floating runners from which new upright stems arise. Floating plants such as duckweed become entangled amongst these runners, and at the same time submerged weeds, especially a species of Ceratophyllum, grow up to the surface, where their upper parts are killed by the heat of the sun or the growth of algae. The mass of vegetation thus entangled is further agglutinated by the luxuriant growth of algae belonging to the family Rivulariaceae which forms large brownish masses. These elements of the island-in-the-making both decay and grow. Their decay forms a kind of fen-peat that is prevented from sinking by their floating and growing parts. A floating island covered with rich soil is thus formed, and plants of a great variety of species grow up upon it, forming dense entangled masses.

List of Formations

The formations met within the area were treated in the following order:-

Alluvial and travertine (Recent), Residual deposits and upland palms (Sub-Recent), High-level terraces (Pleistocene), Lacustrine deposits (Late Tertiary), Red Beds (Cretaceous), Coal Measures (Loi-an series) (Jurassic), Upper Plateau Limestone (Permo-Carboniferous), Lower Plateau Limestone (Devonian-Carboniferous), Silurian, and Ordovician rocks.

Kalaw Red Beds: Several very good sections of the different members of the Kalaw Red Beds are visible along the road in the Taungwindwin Valley and were originally described by Middlemiss. This stream has cut a well-defined deep course along the strike of these rocks. The conglomerates, which form perhaps the most remarkable feature as well as the greater bulk of the formation, are of varying texture, compactness, and composition and occur at different horizons. The narrow, sharp ridge along the valley on the east is formed by a coarse conglomerate band containing large boulders of hard, purple sandstone and smaller ones of limestone, embedded in a red, sandy calcareous matrix. And the high, rugged hill range flanking the valley on the west is built for the most of a coarse soft conglomerate remarkable for the large size and angularity of its sandstone boulders and the low proportion of its calcareous contents. Excellent exposures of the Kalaw Red Beds are to be seen about Kalaw itself, in the railway cuttings between Myindaik and Kalaw along the main road to Thazi for some miles. From the soft, friable, reddish-purple sandstones and shales, dipping westwards at about 25° in the small hillock, crowned with a pagoda, between the railway Station and the Kalaw Hotel, as noted above Dr Fox obtained ammonites of Cretaceous age and thus substantiated Griesbach’s opinion on the age of similar rocks in the Northern States.

The main ore body of the Bawzaing mine: leased by the Shan States Silver-Lead Corporation, Limited., this one occurs in a wide, nearly vertical, irregular fissure with ragged walls, trending approximately N. 20° W. obliquely across the strike of the country rocks. The fissure is filled with mineralized clay containing irregular limestone blocks of all sizes. Within this fissured zone there is an ore shoot with a decided pitch to the south and of very varying width, up to a maximum of 70 feet. The ore shoot was encountered in the Bawzaing shaft at about 75-80 feet from the surface, but in the Theingon shaft, 750 feet away, it was not met until a depth of over 124 was reached. It varies between 175-200 feet in height and, thinning out both above and below, displays a roughly lenticular section, as the main fissure pinches in at both the northern and southern ends of the ore shoot. The Bawzaing shaft is 400 feet in depth with levels of 120, 200, and 331 feet respectively. The Theingon shaft is 575 feet deep with five corresponding levels from it. The ore reserves estimated in April 1930, were 185,400 tons, averaging over seven per cent lead.

Action to be taken against poachers of berried giant freshwater prawns

A fisherman casts a net from the boat and catches fish and shrimp in the river.

Freshwater prawns.

THE Department of Fisheries announced that poachers will be prosecuted under the Freshwater Fisheries Law if they catch berried lobsters.

The Department of Fisheries issued a notification not to catch, kill, transport, store, and trade giant prawns that are full of eggs from April to June.

If the ban is violated, action will be taken according to the provisions of the Freshwater Fisheries Law, stated the notification of the Department of Fisheries, the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation.

There are thousands of giant prawns preparing to lay their eggs in rivers, streams and lakes across Myanmar.

It is known that due to the capture and killing of these giant prawns, the larvae cannot grow and the breeding grounds are destroyed.

To ensure the long-term sustainability of freshwater prawns, and to start protection for reproduction within the specified period of three months, it is urged to protect freshwater prawns that are spawning all over the country from April to the end of June.

According to the Department of Fisheries, the period from April to June 2023 is marked as the no-fishing season in Myanmar seas for three months.

If any provision of the Freshwater Fisheries Act is violated, offenders shall be subject to: -

- (a) suspension and revocation or cancellation of the lease or tender licence;
- (b) confiscation of fishing vessels, fishing equipment, fish and other evidence as public revenue, distribution or other appropriate management;
- (c) the fishing vessel and fishing gear will be returned either to the person who has the right to work in the fishery business or the owner with a sufficient guarantee or allowed to resume operation;
- (d) permit the owner or licensee to redeem the fishing vessel and fishing equipment on payment of an appropriate fine;
- (e) proceeds from the sale and fines shall be deposited in the bank. —TWA/KZL

Japan govt survey finds 1.5 million living as recluses

NEARLY 1.5 million working-age people in Japan are social recluses, according to a new government survey, with a fifth citing the Covid-19 pandemic as the main reason for their withdrawal.

The poll is Japan’s first official comprehensive probe into the prevalence of “hikikomori”, or “shut-ins” — a phenomenon affecting a broad swathe of society, from teens to the elderly.

Reasons for retreating from the country’s notoriously conformist and work-focused society range from unemployment to depression or bullying at school or in the workplace.

Hikikomori range from people who only go out to shop for groceries or to pursue hobbies, to more extreme cases who rarely leave their homes at all, the Cabinet Office survey says.

It found that around two per cent of the respondents aged between 15 and 64 had withdrawn from society to some extent, percentages that officials estimate amount to 1.46 million people.

The most common reason respondents gave for their social withdrawal was “quitting jobs” in the survey released Friday.

This was closely followed by the pandemic, which was cited as the main reason by 18 per cent of recluses aged 15-39 and 20 per cent of those aged 40-64.

“It seems that some people happened to meet our definition of hikikomori because they were discouraged from going outside by Covid and so ended up having less contact with society,” Cabinet Office official Koji Naito told AFP on Wednesday.—AFP

Red Cross to cut 1,500 jobs over funding crunch

THE Red Cross announced Tuesday that it would cut 1,500 jobs over the next 12 months in a drive to slash costs due to a funding crunch.

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) said an expected drop in humanitarian assistance budgets over the next two years was forcing it to make significant cuts.

“ICRC will need to be more deliberate in directing efforts towards programmes and places where we can have the greatest impact, in line with our mandate to provide life-saving relief and protection services to people living through armed conflict and violence,” it said in a statement.

The Geneva-based organization said that its governing board on 30 March had approved 430 million Swiss francs ($474 million) in global cost reduction through early 2024.

While the exact details and timelines for the cuts were still being worked through, ICRC said it was clear that “approximately 1,500 jobs worldwide will have to be cut over the coming 12 months.”

“The number of people impacted will be minimized as much as possible by reducing positions first and foremost through a recruitment freeze and natural turnover,” it stressed.

The cuts also mean that “at least 20 of currently 350 locations around the world will close,” ICRC acknowledged, adding that it would “also be scaling back and closing some of our programmes”.

It said it still remained unclear how many people currently receiving aid would need to do without due to the cuts.

The ICRC has 20,000 staff spread across more than 100 countries. ICRC initially appealed to donors for 2.8 billion Swiss francs for its work this year.— AFP

Liberal US judge wins key state election with abortion at stake

The US Supreme Court last year overturned its landmark Roe v. Wade ruling, striking down the nationwide right to an abortion and leaving the decision on whether to allow the procedure up to individual states. PHOTO: AFP/FILE US abortion rights advocates were overjoyed Tuesday, after media projections showed a liberal judicial candidate winning a closely-watched election in Wisconsin, flipping the northern state’s supreme court from conservative control.

With Janet Protasiewicz’s victory, reported by CNN and NBC News, Wisconsin’s top court will have four progressive justices against three conservatives.

The election was considered one of the most important of the year in the United States, with the right to an abortion and other key issues in the state likely to hinge on its outcome.

The US Supreme Court last year overturned its landmark Roe v. Wade ruling, striking down the nationwide right to an abortion and leaving the decision on whether to allow the procedure up to individual states.

Because several states, including Wisconsin, had enacted laws banning abortion before the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision, legal disputes quickly emerged over their status.— AFP

Georgia’s jailed ex-leader seeks medical evacuation to Poland

GEORGIA’S jailed and ailing ex-president Mikheil Saakashvili said Tuesday he will urge Europe’s top rights court for help to receive medical treatment in Poland.

Doctors say Saakashvili, 55, risks death from a number of conditions he developed in custody. The pro-Western reformer has been in custody since his return from exile in Ukraine in 2021.

Georgian president from 2004 to 2013, Saakashvili was sentenced in absentia to six years in jail for abuse of power — a charge he has rejected as trumped-up and politically motivated.

In a letter to AFP on Tuesday, Saakashvili said he “will turn in the coming days to the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg so that I am allowed to be taken to a hospital in Poland”. Doctors say he has lost over 50 kilogrammes (110 pounds) in prison.

The government “is not allowing Polish doctors to visit me in hospital” in Tbilisi, he said, adding that it was his “last chance to survive”. In March, an EU diplomat confirmed to AFP that a decision has been taken to allow Polish doctors to examine Saakashvili but the plan did not materialise.

Georgia’s Justice Minister Rati Bregadze has said Saakashvili’s lawyers failed to submit a formal request, a claim they deny. — AFP

India’s ‘brown beauty’ make-up influencers go global

Indian make-up influencer Debasree Banerjee has found fans across the world with a simple mantra: brown is beautiful. PHOTO: AFP

UNDER the glow of a ring light in the spare bedroom of a Mumbai high-rise apartment, Indian make-up maven Debasree Banerjee has found fans across the world with a simple philosophy: brown is beautiful.

Banerjee’s audience includes women from as far afield as the Middle East and United States who also have a deeper complexion but have historically been overlooked by the cosmetics industry.

“I actually have a lot of followers who are outside India, and I feel like it’s probably because our skin tones match,” Banerjee told AFP.

“They can see how the product looks like on my skin tone, how the lip-stick applies on my skin tone, and just have that sense of belongingness.”

Banerjee, 34, began experimenting with make-up videos in her spare time a decade ago, after graduating from university and moving to Mumbai to work in sales.

She is now a full-time beauty and lifestyle influencer, teaching more than half a million followers how to beautify themselves on Instagram and YouTube.

Early inspirations included British beauty content creators Tanya Burr and Fleur De Force

-- both white and with millions of followers between them.

But Banerjee said she had found no role models who resembled her.

She credits Rihanna for the seismic shift towards greater inclusiveness in the cosmetics industry.

In 2017, the pop superstar launched her make-up line Fenty Beauty, which offered 40 shades of foundation and turned her into a billionaire.

While other international brands have tried to keep up, many still have “miles and miles to go” before they can be considered truly inclusive, she added.

‘Learning to love ourselves’

Cheap internet data, rising income levels and the world’s largest population of young people have fuelled an explosion in India’s beauty and personal care market.

The industry is now worth $15 billion nationally each year, with Euromonitor projecting that figure will double by 2030.

German economy to grow in 2023 as outlook brightens

THE German economy, Europe’s largest, is expected to dodge a recession and grow by 0.3 per cent this year thanks to a drop in energy prices, leading economic institutes said Wednesday.

“The economic setback in the winter half-year 2022/2023 is likely to have been less severe than feared,” Timo Wollmershaeuser from the Ifo institute said in a statement.

“The main reason for this is a smaller loss of purchasing power as a result of a significant drop in energy prices.”

Inflation, however, will only ease slightly to six per cent, from 6.9 per cent in 2022.

In their previous forecast last autumn, the researchers were still expecting Germany’s economy to shrink by 0.4 per cent, after Russia’s invasion of Ukraine sent energy and food costs surging.

But a 200-billion-euro government relief package, including a cap on gas and electricity prices, combined with mild winter weather and efforts to diversify gas supplies have helped Germany’s economy cope better than expected.

Easing supply chain bottlenecks and China’s relaxation of Covid-related restrictions have also buoyed the country’s export-oriented economy.

The forecast -- unveiled by the Ifo institute, the Kiel Institute for the World Economy, the Halle Institute for Economic Research and the RWI Leibniz Institute for Economic Research -- is more optimistic than the government’s own estimates.

Berlin, which had also initially predicted a recession for 2023, has more recently upgraded its forecast to 0.2 per cent growth.

The brighter outlook was evident in separate data released by statistics agency Destatis on Wednesday, which showed a surprise jump in new factory orders in February.

New orders, seen as an indicator of future industrial activity, surged by 4.8 per cent on the previous month thanks to strong domestic and eurozone demand.—AFP

Cryptocurrency surges as Musk changes Twitter logo to ‘meme dog’

A meme-inspired cryptocurrency’s price jumped on Tuesday after Elon Musk changed the bluebird logo of Twitter to a dog associated with the digital token, despite the mogul being sued over his previous promotion of the coin.

Musk bought Twitter in October last year for $44 billion and has since slashed the workforce, introduced paid-for accounts and reinstated banned users including former president Donald Trump.

His decision to change the logo to a Shibu Inu dog, whether permanent or another short-lived joke, caused the price of dogecoin to surge by more than 20 per cent, from below $0.08 to more than $0.10.

The Twitter chief has 133 million followers and has long used the platform for self-promotion and humour, occasionally also promoting dogecoin, a highly volatile cryptocurrency initially created as a joke.—AFP

New Zealand unveils surprise half-point rate hike

NEW Zealand’s central bank hiked interest rates Wednesday for the 11th time in a row as it fights to bear down on “high and persistent” inflation.

The Reserve Bank of New Zealand boosted the key official cash rate by a larger-than-expected half a percentage point to 5.25 per cent, and it left any future move in the balance.

“Inflation is still too high and persistent, and employment is beyond its maximum sustainable level,” the bank said in a statement after the decision.

Consumer prices rose 7.2 per cent in the year to December 2022, official data show.

New Zealand’s economic growth is set to ease through 2023, the central bank said, citing a global slowdown, higher interest rates and slower home building activity.

The RBNZ’s policy-making committee — which targets an inflation rate of 1-3 per cent — said the rate of any moderation in core inflation and domestic demand “will determine the direction of future monetary policy”.

The rate rise, which contrasted with Australia’s decision to pause the previous day after 10 successive hikes, drew some criticism from unions.

The central bank should pause before considering any further upward move, said New Zealand Council of Trade Unions economist Craig Renney.—AFP

Australian opposition to fight
Aboriginal ‘Voice to Parliament’

Australia’s centre-left government wants to change the constitution to empower the Indigenous population, which is persistently plagued by poorer health, lower incomes and higher rates of incarceration. PHOTO: REPRESENTATIVE IMAGE/ THE AUSTRALIA

A push to recognize Aboriginal Australians in the country’s constitution suffered a major blow Wednesday, as the conservative opposition party said it would fight against the proposed reforms.

Australia’s centre-left government wants to change the constitution to empower the Indigenous population, which is persistently plagued by poorer health, lower incomes and higher rates of incarceration.

But it first needs the public to agree to a proposal to give Aboriginal people the right to be consulted on legislation that affects them — a so-called Indigenous Voice to Parliament — in a binding referendum later this year. Opposition leader Peter Dutton said he was resoundingly against Prime Minister Anthony Albanese’s proposal, shredding hopes that it would sail through on a tide of bipartisan support.

“It should be very clear to Australians by now that the prime minister is dividing the country,” Dutton told reporters, before confirming he would campaign to sink the plan.

Dutton said he supported constitutional recognition for Indigenous people in principle, but he could not back the government’s proposal because it was divisive and lacked detail.

“I don’t think this is in our country’s best interest,” he said.

It is rare for referendums to succeed in Australia without support from both sides of the political spectrum — in the past 120 years only eight of 44 referendums have passed.

Polls show that about 54 per cent of Australians back the constitutional change, but support has been slipping and there are lingering questions about how the Voice would work.—AFP

Three inmates dead in latest
Ecuador prison riot

THREE inmates died in Ecuador on Tuesday in the latest burst of rioting in its maximum security prison system, the government said.

The SNAI agency overseeing the prison system said the violence broke out at La Roca prison in the port city of Guayaquil, a growing nerve center in the global drug trade where a state of emergency was declared only three days earlier.

After the fighting erupted, prison agents, police and the military activated security protocols with which “control was retaken”, the SNAI statement said.

The maximum security facility has a capacity for some 150 inmates and was housing 23 prisoners at the time, most of them leaders of drug trafficking gangs engaged in a bloody struggle for power inside the prisons and on the streets.—AFP

Long NATO delay spells trouble for Sweden and alliance: experts

WHILE Finland Tuesday became a full NATO member, Sweden’s membership bid remains blocked, an “embarrassing” delay if short-lived but which could make Sweden more vulnerable and create problems within NATO if it drags on, experts told AFP.

Finland became the 31st member of the military alliance after securing the last two ratifications needed from Hungary and Türkiye last week.

Finland and Sweden abandoned decades of military non-alignment and applied to join NATO in the wake of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine, stressing they wanted to walk in lockstep. But Ankara and Budapest have refused to ratify Sweden’s bid, following a litany of disputes.

Whether the delay becomes a real problem depends on how long it lasts, according to experts. “If we are talking about months, it’s embarrassing, but not really a major problem,” Robert Dalsjö, an analyst at the Swedish Defence Research Institute (FOI), told AFP.

However, should the process drag on, it could complicate both Sweden’s and NATO’s defence planning in the region.

Ukraine’s Zelensky arrives in Poland

UKRAINE’S President Volodymyr Zelensky arrived in Poland on Wednesday, Warsaw said, the latest of his rare trips outside the country since Russia’s invasion.

“The president has crossed the Polish border, he is on Polish territory,” Marcin Przydacz, a senior official with the Polish presidency, told TVN24 television.

NATO member Poland borders Ukraine and is a key ally in Kyiv’s defence against Russia and is hosting an influx of Ukrainians who have fled the war.

During the visit, Zelensky will meet his Polish counterpart, Andrzej Duda and is due to deliver remarks in the historic centre of the Polish capital.

Discussions with Polish Prime Minister Mateusz Morawiecki are also planned.

Macron’s visit to boost China’s ties with France, EU: spokesperson FRENCH President Emmanuel Macron will pay a state visit to China from 5 to 7 April at the invitation of Chinese President Xi Jinping, the Xinhua news agency reported on Wednesday.

China hopes to take French President Emmanuel Macron’s state visit to China as an opportunity to boost ties with France and the European Union (EU), a spokesperson said on Monday.

Chinese foreign ministry spokesperson Mao Ning made the comment at a regular news briefing in response to queries on Macron’s state visit to China .

During the visit, Chinese President Xi Jinping will meet with Macron to map out the future development of bilateral relations, deepen China-France and China-EU cooperation in various fields, and have an in-depth exchange of views on major international and regional hotspot issues, Mao said.

Chinese Premier Li Qiang and top legislator Zhao Leji will meet with Macron, respectively, Mao said, adding that Macron will also visit Guangzhou, the capital of Guangdong Province.

China and France are permanent members of the UN Security Council and major countries in the world. In recent years, under the strategic guidance of the two heads of state, China-France relations have maintained sound development, enjoying effective strategic communication, fruitful practical cooperation, and sound communication and coordination in international and regional affairs, the spokesperson said.

Defendant Trump slams criminal charges as ‘insult to our country’

DONALD Trump offered a full-throated defence of his conduct Tuesday in his first public remarks since being charged over hush money payments to a porn star, blasting the criminal prosecution as “an insult to our country”.

Hours earlier the 76-year-old former US president pleaded not guilty to 34 felony counts in a dramatic hearing in New York that transfixed the nation — and began the countdown to the first ever criminal trial of an American president.

“I never thought anything like this could happen in America — never thought it could happen,” Trump told an audience of several hundred donors, political allies and other supporters after returning to Mar-a-Lago, his beachfront mansion in southern Florida.

“The only crime that I’ve committed is to fearlessly defend our nation from those who seek to destroy it... It’s an insult to our country.”

Trump — the frontrunner in the race for the 2024 Republican nomination — said from a stage festooned with American flags in an opulent gold-and-cream ballroom that “radical left” prosecutors across the country were out to get him “at any cost”.

Jacinda Ardern delivers final speech to New Zealand parliament

FORMER New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern bowed out of parliament on Wednesday, making an impassioned plea during her tearful final speech to “please take the politics out of climate change”.

Ardern shocked New Zealand earlier this year when she announced she was stepping down as prime minister and retiring from politics, saying she no longer had “enough in the tank”.

Draped in a korowai — a traditional Maori feather cloak — Ardern recalled her humble beginnings in a working class family, and how she never expected to lead the country.

“It was a cross between a sense of duty to steer a moving freight train... and being hit by one,” she quipped during her valedictory address.

“And that’s probably because my internal reluctance to lead was matched only by a huge sense of responsibility.”

Ardern steered New Zealand through natural disasters, the Covid-19 pandemic and the 2019 Christchurch mosque massacre — in which a white supremacist gunman killed 51 Muslim worshippers.

Clashes erupt as Israel police enter flashpoint Jerusalem mosque

ISRAELI police arrested more than 350 people after clashes erupted inside Jerusalem’s flashpoint Al-Aqsa mosque early Wednesday when officers entered to dislodge “agitators” in a move denounced by the Palestinian Islamist movement Hamas.

Palestinian militants responded with rocket fire into Israel from the Hamas-ruled Gaza Strip, prompting retaliatory Israeli air strikes. The violence came with tensions high in annexed east Jerusalem as the Muslim holy month of Ramadan coincides with the Jewish Passover holiday.

Hamas, which rules the Gaza Strip, called on Palestinians in the West Bank “to go en masse to the Al-Aqsa mosque to defend it”.

Israeli police said they had entered the mosque to dislodge “agitators” who had barricaded themselves inside with fireworks, sticks and stones, making more than 350 arrests.

The mosque compound in east Jerusalem’s Old City has long been a flashpoint for violence between Palestinians and the Israeli security forces, particularly during Ramadan, which draws tens of thousands of worshippers to Al-Aqsa.—AFP

Aleksander Ceferin re-elected
UEFA president until 2027

ALEKSANDER Ceferin was re-elected unopposed for a third term of four years as president of UEFA at a meeting of European football's governing body in Lisbon on Wednesday.

The 55-year-old Slovenian lawyer, first elected in 2016 following the downfall of Frenchman Michel Platini, will now remain in the role until 2027.

"I would like to thank you from the bottom of my heart for your unanimous support. It really means a lot to me," Ceferin told delegates at the UEFA Congress in the Portuguese capital.

"It is a great honour but mainly it is a great, great responsibility, towards you and towards football."

Serie A condemns racism after Juventus fans abuse Lukaku

SERIE A condemned on Wednesday "all instances of racism" in Italian football after Romelu Lukaku was abused during Inter Milan's cup semi-final clash at Juventus.

Lukaku scored a stoppage time penalty which secured Inter a 1-1 draw in Tuesday's first leg but was then sent off after his celebrations in front of the Juve fans earned him a second booking.

The Belgium striker held his finger to his mouth and told supporters to "shut up", but reports of monkey chants were only confirmed late on Tuesday by his representatives Roc Nation after neither Inter nor Juve made any mention of them post-match.

"Serie A strongly condemns all instances of racism and any form of discrimination," Italy's top division said in a statement. — AFP

Iran beat Myanmar 1-0 in Asian Qualifiers for Women's Olympic Myanmar women's national football team suffered a 0-1 defeat to Iran in the first match of the Asian Qualifiers Round 1 for the Women's Olympic Football Tournament Paris 2024 played at Thuwunna Stadium in Yangon yesterday.

Myanmar team head coach Daw Thet Thet Win used his favourite line-up including May Zin Nwe, Moe Ma Ma Soe, Zune Yu Ya Oo, Yu Par Khaing, Naw Htet Htet Wai, Win Theingi Tun, San Thaw Thaw, Khin Mo Mo Tun, Captain Khin Marlar Tun, Phyu Phyu Win, and Myat Noe Khin.

Since both teams are strong, they started attacking from the kick-off.

Team Myanmar had many opportunities to score in the first half, but due to misunderstandings between the striker and the midfielders, they were unable to convert the chances into goals. The Iranian team also played with tough defensive play and counterattacks, and the first half ended with a 0-0 score.

In the second half, team Iran was able to take advantage of the Myanmar team's defensive weaknesses and occupied a lot of space.

At a time when the power of the Myanmar team was losing, team Iran broke the deadlock with the header of Afsaneh Chatrenoor in the 52nd minute.

After getting the goal, Iran's players played more cleverly and controlled the result of the game.

The players of the Myanmar team continued to lack understanding and missed many chances until the final whistle.

Win Theingi Tun's kick was saved by the Iranian goalkeeper and Pont Pont Pyae Maung's long shot hit the crossbar, so Team Myanmar suffered a loss.

Since Myanmar lost the match against Iran 1-0, they will only be able to advance to the next round if they can get a decisive victory in the second match. — KZL
