Myanmar, Thailand and Laos hold tripartite coordination meeting on transborder smog issue

The Senior General recounted that ASEAN Specialized Meteorological Centre (ASMC) stated the density of smog triggered by forest fire slightly happened in eastern Myanmar on 1 April 2023 and it worsened in northern Thailand and southern Laos. On 2 April, such an event slightly occurred in eastern Myanmar and northern Thailand but worsened in southern Laos. On 3 April, smog density lessened but its density was high in southern Laos. On 4 April, a high density of smog happened in eastern Myanmar, northern Thailand and southern Laos.

ASEAN Specialized Meteorological Centre (ASMC) predicted that the hot and dry climatic conditions may cause in May this year in GMS countries, with high air pollution along borders.

Currently, Myanmar is striving for reducing the fire hotspot measures in regions and states, especially in Shan State sharing borders with Thailand and Laos. In comparison with the areas of countries, some 56 fire hotspots happened in 1,000 square metres of area in Myanmar in 2022, 171 in Laos and 11 in Thailand.

In March 2023, Myanmar faced 32 fire hotspots in 1,000 square metres of area, Laos 117 and Thailand nine. Myanmar is cooperating with GMS countries to reduce 20 per cent of hotspots in 2022 as the Tenth Meeting of the Sub-Regional Ministerial Steering Committee on Transboundary Haze Pollution in the Mekong Sub-Region set 167,500 hotspots as a basic factor. So, Myanmar faced 37,977 hotspots in 2022, reducing 33 per cent rather than 56,419 in 2020.

The neighbouring countries will cooperate with each other in controlling the Transboundary Haze Pollution. The Senior General thanked Thailand for its cooperation in the air quality management enhancement project of Myanmar to reduce the content of PM2.5 in the atmosphere.

The ASEAN has adopted the Roadmap on ASEAN Cooperation towards Transboundary Haze Pollution Control. Hence, cooperation in management and development for controlling Transboundary Haze Pollution will be a key role in the future. Hence, Myanmar pledged to reduce the number of hotspots and conduct surveys on hotspots in line with the ASMC, take fire preventive measures and rehabilitation, raise the awareness for reduction of forest fire danger and cooperate with regional countries in transboundary haze pollution measures.

Further discussions with the Thai Prime Minister

As it is necessary to raise cooperation in observing the content of PM2.5 in the atmosphere, Thailand cooperates with Myanmar and Laos in solving the issue. So, Thailand is striving to reduce air pollution. He expressed his belief that those three countries would enhance cooperation with ASEAN countries in solving the transborder air pollution issue. Production of biogas and recycled clothes through recycling the waste will benefit the people.

New Year wish for the Myanmar Thingyan festival

The Thai Prime Minister expressed his wish for the Senior General and people healthy and happy as well as for the Lao Prime Minister and people successful in their work.

Additional discussions of the Prime Minister of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar

The Senior General said he would like to express two proposed points. The first one is to reduce hill-side cultivation at the border of three countries. Meanwhile, it is necessary to implement highland farmlands and produce fertilizers. The second one is to systematically dispose of waste through modern technology. The Senior General said he agreed with the discussions of the Thai Prime Minister for solving the transboundary air pollution issues. The Senior General expressed his best wishes for Thai and Lao Prime Ministers and their peoples to have physical and mental well-being during the Thingyan period of the New Year occasion.

Myint Myat.

Speaking on the occasion, the Vice-Senior General delivered a concluding speech, saying that those who will be military leaders in the future have to strictly follow the rules, disciplines, orders and directives issued by the Tatmadaw. All have to avoid indulgence and drinking which may harm health and fitness to enjoy the valuable soldier life as well as adjust income and spending. All servicemen have to totally avoid cigarettes, betel quids, liquor and narcotic drugs and follow religious and social advice for the improvement of morality.

The Vice-Senior General

continued to say that Tatmadaw is an institution to follow civil and military laws as well as war laws including Geneva Convention. Training on legal affairs is being given to all levels of Tatmadaw members. Action is taken against offenders in a transparent manner. Moreover, officers and other ranks need to understand and follow the Rules Of Engagement-ROE.

With regard to training measures, the Senior General gave guidance at the 78th Anniversary Armed Forces Day parade. He said: “All Tatmadaw members at different levels are to take continuous training for skilfully handling the modern arms and equipment and for having skills in relevant arenas. In so doing, the training sessions will comprise individuals and units in line with the training policies. Every Tatmadaw member is to correctly serve daily duties as part of taking the training. The qualification of the Tatmadaw depends on individual Tatmadaw members with the power of military equipment. So, everybody needs to emphasise the enhancement of their capacity.”

In the organizational measure, the Senior General delivered an address at the central leading committee meeting 1/2023 of the Tatmad-aw Organizing Central Leading Committee. He said: “Organizing is persuading other people to cooperate in any measures of their own accord. Organizational measures have two portions. The first one is to organize the Tatmadaw members and the second is related to the country. The organizational issue comprises individual organizing matters. Self-control can be defined as self-organizing to improve themselves in mental and disciplinary measures. If everybody does bad manners, they will face difficulties in all measures. A family without self-control will face lesser good chances for their life. If so, family life will be unhappy. So, everybody needs to improve themselves to be better.”

The Vice-Senior General urged them to understand the political system being exercised in the nation as they will serve the State duties in the future. Internal peace plays a key role in the democratic system based on the people. Hence, all citizens are to participate in ceasing the armed conflict.

The Vice-Senior General urged all to strictly follow the conventional military tactics, four military sectors and special military tactics in serving the military operations and security duties in assigned regiments and units. Moreover, they have to explain their assignments to the relevant units and abide by the war rules.

The Vice-Senior General took the salute of the cadet companies and left the parade ground.

After the parade, the Vice-Senior General together with Chief of the General Staff (Army, Navy and Air) General Maung Maung Aye, senior military officers from the Office of the Commander-in-Chief and the commander of Eastern Command met outstanding cadets and spoke words of honour. — MNA/TTA

Efficiently spend allotted funds without losing capital

THE State economic promotion fund was separately set up with K400 billion from the national natural disaster management fund to lend loans to local businesspersons at the soft interest rate in order to operate agriculture and livestock farms which can secure a quick win for the State.

As part of the development of the economy in relevant regions and states, some amounts of the State economic promotion fund were allotted to relevant ministries and regions and states. In this regard, K230 billion was allotted to the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation, K10 billion each to Kayah, Chin and Rakhine states, K8 billion each to Kachin, Kayin, Mon and Shan states and Taninthayi Region and K5 billion each to five self-administered zones and one self-administered division, totalling K330 billion.

They all have to emphasize the efficient use of cultivable lands, cultivation of crops under double cropping or mixed cropping patterns, operating agriculture and livestock farms together, and manufacturing value-added products with the use of domestic raw materials in the establishment of industries based on agriculture and livestock farming businesses. If so, these businesses will bring quick wins to businesspersons as well as the State.

agriculture and livestock farms together, and manufacturing value-added products with the use of domestic raw materials in the establishment of industries based on agriculture and livestock farming businesses. If so, these businesses will bring quick wins to businesspersons as well as the State.

Hence, local authorities and all businesspersons have to strive to secure greater processes in the manufacturing of quality processes not only for local consumption but for export purposes. Consequently, they can earn foreign exchange as income whereas the government can earn revenue from its earnings.

The funds without losing capital will benefit micro, small and medium-sized enterprises to boost their quality production in relevant regions and states. As such, those organizations and businesses need to spend the allotted funds under the financial rules and regulations for achieving success in their products under the economic objectives adopted by the State.

The Language of Writing Systems

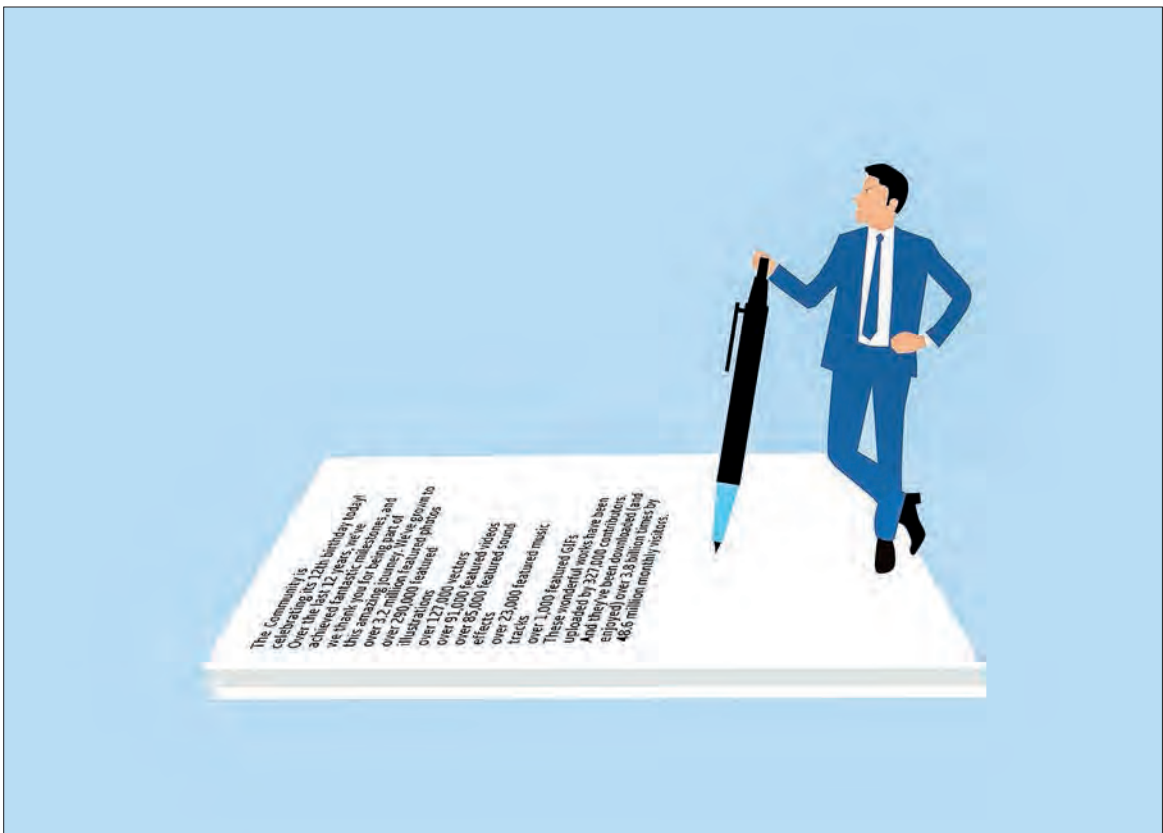

By Hu Wo (Cuckoo's Song)

WE will all have heard it said that one's food is another's poison by Lucretius, the Roman philosopher. So far as I am concerned, this saying may tell us that someone's ease is likely to be someone else's difficulty pretty often. Similarly, one of the four language skills really might be hard for anyone if he has no mastery of that skill. The listening skill can be termed a mixture of hearing something well and paying attention to it while the speaking skill is the ability to speak out what we want with fluency and accuracy or not. The reading skill is known as the competency in absorbing knowledge and information from books, and even audio or videos, as a receptive skill whereas the writing skill, will be a sort of linguistic skill that proves a learner's greatest potential capacity for studying language and literature. Although the first three skills of language would be constantly coming and going to learners, the writing skill will always have provided the proof of the pudding on their written papers as a productive skill. In other words, it is quite easy to establish the rights or wrongs of subject matter and spelling from their writing by having a look at it for a long time. Thus, personally speaking, listening is the most difficult skill in a language. Here, I shall cite facts and figures about several writing systems possibly arising in the language – report writing, persuasive writing, narrative writing, expository writing, descriptive writing, and creative writing – by quoting from Longman Advanced American Dictionary.

Prior to the language of six writing systems, let me describe the foundational structure of text organization. Many texts in a language usually follow a predictable format of organization, even though the length and style differ depending on the purpose of the text. Their basic organizational structure is comprised of four main parts: 1) title, 2) introduction, 3) body, and 4) conclusion. Firstly, the title points out the topic of the text and it is sometimes stated in a clever or unusual way in order to draw the reader's attention. Secondly, the introduction sets up the topic of the text in a way that makes the reader want to continue reading, especially beginning with a hook that could be an anecdote, a question or series of questions, a quotation, a vivid description, or a surprising statement. After the hook, either in the same paragraph or in a new one, the writer tends to introduce the general topic of the text and gives some background information. At the beginning, middle or end of the introduction, he likes to give the central idea which includes the topic of the text as well as the controlling idea, that is, the writer's purpose, point of view, opinion, or attitude concerning the topic. Thirdly, the body supports the central idea in body paragraphs, where some topics are developed in only one paragraph, but other topics call for two or more paragraphs. The opening sentence(s) of each body paragraph refers to information from the previous paragraph, and initiates the new topic; this is called a transition. The transition might be one or more sentences, relying on how complex the topics are. The sentence or part of the sentence that starts off the new topic is often called the topic sentence of the paragraph. Also, details such as facts, examples, descriptions, anecdotes, reasons, steps in a process, or references to authoritative sources develop and support the topics in the body paragraphs. Fourthly, the conclusion says the reviewer's recommendation whether it is directly stated or implied. The central idea is usually restated in the conclusion by using synonyms to rephrase it and by changing the sentence structure. A satisfactory ending is founded on the central idea and purpose, especially ending with a call for future action in which the writer wants the reader to do something, an unanswered question that the writer wishes the reader to think about, or a prediction for the future.

A piece of writing is unified when all of the sentences in the text are connected with the central idea. Cohesion happens when the relationship among ideas is clear and unambiguous, and the sentences in the text flow critically or logically. Then, cohesion is accomplished through the use of grammatical patterns and vocabulary. There are many good ways to achieve cohesion. Repeating key terms, the most important words in essays, make the reader give attention to the main theme. It also helps link different parts of an essay together. And also, repeating grammatical patterns, which means using a similar sentence structure and word choice in essays, particularly at the beginning of a body paragraph, helps relate different parts of an essay together so that it is more cohesive. Next, the second time we mention a noun in a sentence, it is better to use a pronoun to replace it. Substituting a pronoun for a full noun or phrase like this avoids repetition, which can make our writing sound boring and stiff. And again, linking words and expressions help us to join ideas, sentences, and paragraphs together in an explicit way. We can use them to show what order something happens in, for giving reasons, for adding information and so on. Last but not least, using a synonym adds variety and interest to our writing. It helps to attach sentences or ideas together by saying the same thing in a different way, too.

When we first learn a language, we normally learn the basic words and phrases that occur most frequently in speech and writing. Due to their broad meaning and usage, words such as 'be', 'have', and 'do' are extremely useful. However, once these keywords are learned, vocabulary acquisition typically slows down. That is because we can express most of what we want to say, although perhaps not very precisely. If we want to go on making progress, mainly if we have academic or professional goals that require a high level of proficiency, we must learn more formal and precise ways of expressing our ideas. This is when a thesaurus can be very helpful. It will almost certainly have a more limited usage than the simpler word we are replacing. When reading, we had better get into the habit of noticing words that express simple ideas in a more formal, precise manner. What is more, linking words of time or sequence helps us join ideas, sentences, and paragraphs together in a clear way as well.

The purpose of an informative essay is to pass on information to the reader. Regardless of the subject, the essay needs to present factual information on a topic that is certain to be unfamiliar to the reader. Informative essays have i) the introduction with the central idea or topic, the controlling idea, a hook, and background information about the topic, ii) the body with details about the topic, transitions from old information to new information, words that let the reader know when the writer is certain and when he is hedging, and use of specific tenses – the present simple, the present perfect, the past simple, and the past perfect, and iii) the conclusion with a re-statement of the central idea or topic, and a satisfactory ending. In academic writing, it is important not to overstate a point or make an absolute claim that we cannot support. Hence, it is of great consequence to be able to express degrees of uncertainty as well as certainty. When writers are not sure about some information, they hedge. Writers hedge to qualify what they are writing, to avert making statements that are overly broad or making assertions that have not been completely proven or cannot be verified.

A review is a particular type of persuasive writing, which is also a report on a book, short story, poem, movie, play, piece of music or art, or exhibition. The purpose of a review is to introduce the reader to the piece, express the reviewer's opinion about it, and finally persuade the reader that the piece is or is probably not worth reading, seeing, or hearing. Amongst various types of reports, book reviews are one genre of persuasive writing that usually contains a brief overview of the content of the book, followed by a commentary on its strengths and weaknesses. These book reviews can be of fiction or non-fiction books. On the first hand, reviews of fiction books, such as a novel, commonly have an overview that contains some basic information about the plot (basic story), the setting (physical environment, period of time), and the characters (people, animals), without revealing information that tells the end of the story and spoils the reader's enjoyment. On the other hand, reviews of non-fiction books, such as popular science books, have an overview that generally contains an outline of the basic theories, concepts, or arguments presented in the book. In both fiction and non-fiction reviews, the reviewer, in the main, uses descriptive language and provides short excerpts, quotations, and/or specific examples from the book. Those support the reviewer's opinion of the book and give the reader an idea about the content of the book. The introduction of a book review must contain the author's full name, his personal profile, the title of the book, the genre of writing, the audience, themes, and the indication of the reviewer's opinion. The first time the author's name is mentioned, the reviewer uses his or her full name, but later, only the last name is used. When reporting what an author has written, reviewers use a variety of reporting verbs and expressions like 'say', 'write', 'argue', 'believe', and 'think'.

The general purpose of persuasive writing, too, is to convince the reader to agree with the writer's opinion on an issue. Effective persuasive writing certainly contains vivid, persuasive language. There are still other types of persuasive writing: editorials, op-ed articles, letters to the editor, persuasive essays, and persuasive speeches. In the introduction of these persuasive types are a clear description of the issue and why it is important, and a thesis statement that clearly states the writer's opinion on the issue; in their body are i) factual evidence to support the writer's opinion, particularly data such as percentages, statistics, and clear comparisons, ii) references to opinions from experts on the issue, iii) arguments that support the writer's opinion, iv) a presentation of the arguments of the opposing side, and v) counter-arguments that respond to the opposing side's arguments; in their conclusion are a forceful restatement of the writer's opinion, and an appeal to action, requesting that the reader do something. In good persuasive writing, the writer must not only present his own strongest arguments but also try to imagine all arguments on the opposing side, present them, and then demonstrate that they are wrong. Often the writer's argument will seem more persuasive if he makes a concession before demonstrating why he disagrees with the opposing side. When making a concession, the writer agrees that some part of the opposing argument is correct, while still arguing that the opposing argument is mostly wrong.

A letter to the editor is a specific type of persuasive writing in direct response to a newspaper op-ed or editorial. The writer gives his own opinion or perspective on the issue addressed in the op-ed or editorial, agreeing or disagreeing with it. Letters to the editor are usually short and direct. The introduction is generally a simple statement of agreement or disagreement, along with a reference to the original article and its writer in parentheses. This is the letter writer's 'thesis statement'. The body of the letter is also brief, usually just one or two paragraphs. In the body of the letter, the writer presents the reasons for his opinion. These can be based on both the writer's personal experience and factual evidence. In the conclusion of the letter, the writer often includes a request that the reader takes action. This request is the writer's 'call to action'. It either contradicts or supports the original writer's call to action.

A narrative is a story about events that had happened. It is chronologically told in the order in which the events occurred. By and large, writers compose narratives when they write about historical events or true stories about people's lives – biographies, autobiographies, and memoirs. The fundamental structure of a historical narrative is i) the introduction to the characters, setting, background information or interesting details that the reader needs to follow the story, information about why this event is significant or this person is important, and description of the significant problem or conflict, ii) the body with the story, describing what happened and answering the questions who, what, when, where, why, and how, paragraphs or sections organized by time periods and including interesting details, many time words and expressions, a chronological order, or a pattern which clearly signals any shifts in time in order that readers can tell the story is moving forwards or backwards from the 'now', details or descriptive language to bring the story alive, and iii) the conclusion with the description of the end of the story that solves the problem or conflict in a satisfactory way and a comment on the significance or importance of the subject.

An expository essay is an essay in which the writer shares information with the reader, supporting the main points with factual information. Noticeably enough, the writer's personal experience or point of view is not usually included in an expository essay, except maybe as a hook to get the reader interested in the essay. Several types of expository essays involve cause and effect, compare and contrast, classification, and problem and solution. Sometimes, the writer of an expository essay will use more than one pattern of organization in the essay, and the choice of organizational pattern is dependent on the writer's topic and audience. A compare and contrast essay is a kind of expository writing whose purpose is to point out the similarities and/or differences between two things. In some compare and contrast essays, there is a focus on similarities; in others, the focus is more on the differences. In others, the similarities and differences are discussed evenly. The compare and contrast organizational patterns are used in many disciplines or areas of

Union Minister U Maung Maung Ohn sprinkles water on artistes and staff of MRTV in Yangon yesterday.

UNION Minister for Information U Maung Maung Ohn met members of the motion picture censorship board and video censorship board in Yangon yesterday. During the meeting, the Union minister said the meeting intends to discuss cordially with censorship members to broadcast Myanmar movies, international dramas, films, movies with Myanmar subtitles and series in line with the Motion Picture Law and Television and Video Law.

The arts for movies need critical thinking and extreme creation can cause toxicity to the public and the creation may be weak if there is strict restriction.

Therefore, the creators should initiate proper entertainment and the censorship members should censor following the six regulations based on the stipulations of Motion Picture Law and Television and Video Law. The censorship board censored the movies in detail and gave suggestions not to be toxic movies for the public.

The Union minister then appreciated the efforts of censorship members who censored 20 episodes of Myanmar series, nine Myanmar movies, 38 international movies, 10 Myanmar videos, one Karaoke, 776 international dramas (Myanmar subtitle) that were broadcast via TV channels, 57 international dramas (Myanmar subtitle, voice-dubbing in the Myanmar Language), 35 Myanmar dramas, 23 documentaries and five Myanmar movies.

Chairman of Myanmar Motion Picture Organization U Kyi Soe Tun, Myanmar Broadcasters Association Chairman U Ye Naing Soe, and MRTV Director-General U Ye Naing reported on the measures for censorship, broadcasting programmes and supervision of online media.

Then, other attendees coordinated the discussion and the Union minister concluded the meeting.

study, for example, science, literature, social studies, and history. It is of the essence that the writer's main points are easy to follow. In this connection, the use of clear signal words indicating whether the writer is addressing a similarity or a difference is an essential feature of compare and contrast essays. It is also vital that the supporting evidence be well-researched, relevant, and clearly presented. When writing a compare and contrast essay, the writer cannot simply state that two things are similar or different; he must impart those statements with details, facts, observations, and examples.

A cause-and-effect essay is another kind of expository essay that explains the causes or reasons for an event or natural phenomenon. Writers must take care of only facts and make sure that there is a clear relationship between causes and effects or reasons and results. If the relationships between events or phenomena are not absolutely certain, it is of great magnitude to apply appropriate hedging language. There are scores of ways of expressing cause-and-effect relationships. Some state the cause-and-effect relationship directly – for instance, the words ‘because’ and ‘so’ clearly mark the cause and effect in a sentence. Other ways of expressing cause and effect are less direct, and the cause-and-effect relationship is merely implied rather than stated directly – by way of illustration, the time word ‘when’ is sometimes used to suggest that one thing leads to another. Writers might use less direct ways of expressing cause and effect if the facts suggest but do not prove a clear cause-and-effect relationship.

It can be seen that in descriptive writing, writers use vivid, descriptive details to make sights, sounds, smells, tastes, textures, and feelings come alive for readers. As we probably know, descriptive writing is used in many types of writing, including expository, narrative, and persuasive. Poets are writers that use a lot of description, and in all types of poetry, these persons choose their words carefully, communicating a lot of meaning in very few words. A thesaurus can be particularly helpful when they select words to communicate the exact meaning. In addition, prose poems look like regular text (prose) that we might find in a story or essay, which has a theme or main idea of what the writer is describing. They consist of full sentences but use poetic techniques – similes, metaphors, sensory descriptions, strongly evocative, vivid language, and sound devices – to bring a person, place, thing, or event alive. Usually, they are short, most notably in one paragraph, though there is no exact limit on how long a prose poem can be. As always, the topic or theme is set in the first sentence.

A literary analysis, a form of creative writing, is an essay in which the writer responds to a literary work – a poem, short story, or novel. In the response, the writer closely examines one or more literary elements as well as literary devices, involving protagonists, settings, narratives, plots, conflicts, perspectives, themes, interpretations, similes, metaphors, and meters. The writer even comments on the quality and significance of the work and provides his own interpretation of the meaning of the work. The elementary structure of the literary analysis is arranged in the order of i) the introduction with identification of the work or works being discussed, the writer's general opinion of the author, and the thesis statement that, as usual, includes the general opinion of the work, ii) the body with the retelling of relevant parts of the plot, interpretations of the work, support for the writer's interpretation through clear examples and quotations from the work whether interpretations can come before or after the examples and quotations, precise, descriptive language describing opinions or judgments, based on a close examination of one or more of the literary elements, and clear and effective organization, and iii) conclusion with a summary of the writer's overall opinion of the work and the author.

To put it in a nutshell, writing is the most difficult. If and when anyone ever thinks that writing is just a piece of cake, I myself can say only ‘Try it’. Of course, the art of writing is a grand strategy that has been passed through different golden ages until now, viz. the first golden age of poetry, the second golden age of drama, and the third golden age of short stories, to the best of my knowledge. The very first step towards writing is none but a future writer's reading and then his tremendous drive to write.

Good readers turn out to be great writers. A writer must have got the habit of searching multilingual dictionaries for vocabulary, a good command of essential grammar of the language in his use and enough study on language, literature or sample writing besides watching modern, current or trendy usages in the papers, journals or magazines. Should anyone write an essay, he needs to have studied as many modelled essays by essayists to the core as he can afford so as to imitate their thinking process of subject matter in the essay. Without any example reading such as great works of literature or classics, writers will lose or meet an auto-stop in the sequence of thoughts in a piece of writing for sure. In general, there can be found five categories of writing in terms of subject matter – descriptive, narrative, expository, reflexive, and imaginative. Every writer can get started with their journey to successful writing by having a bash at what writing style they like. Never must the writer forget to take hold of discontinuous diligence to write and give adequate time for writing, under any circumstances.

to China and Europe.

India has growing demand and consumption requirements for black grams and pigeon peas. According to a Memorandum of Understanding between Myanmar and India signed on 18 June 2022, India will import 250,000 tonnes of black gram and 100,000 tonnes of pigeon peas (tur) from Myanmar for five consecutive years from 2021-2022 financial year to 2025-2026 FY. This G-to-G pact will not affect the pulses' annual quota set by India. Myanmar's exporters are also entitled to deliver the pulses to India under that annual quota.

The prevailing price of black gram is K2,055,000 per tonne, while pigeon peas fetch K2,380,000 per tonne and green gram is priced at K2,416,000 per

Airbus to open 2nd plane assembly line in China, double output

EUROPEAN planemaker Airbus said Thursday that it will double its production capacity in China, as it seeks to bolster its footprint in a crucial market and sidestep potential geopolitical risks.

Asia and China in particular are key targets for both Airbus and its American rival Boeing, which are looking to capitalize on surging demand for air travel by a rapidly expanding middle class.

“It makes a lot of sense for us, as the Chinese market keeps growing, to be serving local for the Chinese airlines, and probably some other customers in the region,” Guillaume Faury said during a trip to China, where

Samsung expects first quarter profit to plunge 95%

SAMSUNG Electronics said Friday it expected first-quarter operating profits to plunge more than 95 per cent on-year to a 14-year low, as memory chip sales were hammered by a global downturn.

Weak demand and steep profit fall also led the tech titan to announce it will scale back memory chip production in a “meaningful” manner.

The firm said in a regulatory filing that January-March operating profits were expected to drop 95.7 per cent to 600 billion won ($455 million), their lowest level since the first quarter of 2009.

The anticipated drop in profits was because of “continuing weak demand for IT products that have aggravated the performances of all sectors”, Samsung said in the statement.

“We are cutting memory chips production to a meaningful level,” it added, saying the company had “stockpiled enough supplies of certain memory chips products to meet changing market demand down the road”. — AFP

Vietnamese garment industry suffers in Q1 as retailers cut orders

VIETNAMESE garment makers felt the impact of a global slowdown dampening demand in their key markets as the industry’s exports dropped 17.4 per cent to 7.2 billion US dollars in the first quarter from a year earlier, according to the country’s General Statistics Office.

Textiles and garments, Viet Nam’s second-largest export earner after smartphones and electronics, have been hit as consumers in the US, Europe and other big markets cut spending on clothing, said Cao Huu Hieu, chief executive of the country’s top textile and garment maker Vinatex.

Vietnamese manufacturers are faced with a sharp decline in orders as global demand has shrunk by over 60 per cent, resulting in a contraction of up to more than 63 billion US dollars in the global textile market, Hieu added.

Local companies had to cut about 20 per cent of their production and many had been forced to reduce their workforce, said Nguyen Huu Tuan, a senior executive of listed Thanh Cong Group.

Other firms also reported a drop of more than 20 per cent in both order quantity and value, Pham Xuan Hong, chairman of the Ho Chi Minh City Textile and Garment — Embroidery Association, told local media. The hit to the textile and garment industry puts further pressure on Viet Nam’s economy in the first quarter which grew at the second-lowest rate since 2011. — Xinhua

New chief Sato to embark on EV push as Toyota plays catch-up

REVIVING up the electric vehicle business is the first priority for Koji Sato as the new chief executive of Toyota Motor Corp strives to sharpen its competitive advantage as the world’s No 1 automaker.

The 53-year-old veteran engineer has pledged to address energy security and carbon neutrality, and aims to transform Toyota from a conventional auto manufacturer into a mobility company at the same time. The world’s largest auto seller is the leading maker of gasoline-electric hybrid vehicles but lags behind in pushing all-electric vehicles.

Toyota currently offers several green technology options rather than focusing on EVs under a “multi-pathway strategy” that is sometimes considered a factor behind its relatively slow shift to battery-powered vehicles. — Kyodo

Xi, Macron call for early resumption of Ukraine peace talks

CHINESE President Xi Jinping and his French counterpart Emmanuel Macron on Thursday called on the international community to work toward an early resumption of peace talks to end Russia's war in Ukraine, following their talks in Beijing.

The two leaders, who jointly met the press, also shared the view that nuclear weapons shall not be used and a nuclear war shall not be fought in Ukraine.

Xi emphasized the need to stay rational and exercise restraint so that actions that will further aggravate the Ukraine crisis can be avoided. He also said in seeking a political settlement of the Ukraine crisis, "the legitimate security concerns of all parties" should be taken into account.

Later Thursday, European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen joined Xi and Macron for a three-way summit meeting after holding separate bilateral talks with the Chinese leader.

Von der Leyen said she encouraged Xi to reach out to Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy, and the Chinese leader expressed his willingness to speak with him "when conditions and time are right". She told a press conference this was "a positive element". — Kyodo

White House blames bad intel, Trump for traumatic Afghan exit

THE White House on Thursday released a long-awaited review of the US exit from Afghanistan, laying blame on Donald Trump and a huge intelligence failure, but defending overall US conduct of the traumatic operation.

The classified review was sent to Congress, where the Republican majority in the House of Representatives is investigating what it says is President Joe Biden's failures during the August 2021 withdrawal.

Presenting a declassified summary, National Security Council spokesman John Kirby conceded mistakes had been made in the exit, which saw the Taliban seize control of Afghanistan within weeks, forcing the last American troops and their allies into a desperate evacuation.

"Ending a war, any war, is not an easy endeavor, certainly not after 20 years," Kirby told reporters. "It doesn't mean it wasn't worth doing — ending that war in Afghanistan."

The White House largely blamed Biden's predecessor Donald Trump for creating the conditions leading to the rout.

But it also acknowledged that US intelligence services had failed to understand the Taliban's strength and the weakness of Afghan government forces that Western countries had spent years propping up.

"Clearly we didn't get things right" on intelligence, Kirby said. — AFP

China, Japan to hold high-level maritime dialogue in Tokyo on 10 April

CHINA and Japan will hold high-level dialogue on maritime affairs next Monday in Tokyo, according to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, the first in-person bilateral meeting on the topic since May 2019.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Mao Ning said Friday that officials in charge of foreign affairs, defense, and maritime law enforcement will be among the participants. They will discuss when the two countries will start operating a hotline between their defence authorities, a source familiar with bilateral ties said.

Russia's Lavrov arrives in Türkiye: official

RUSSIAN Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov arrived in Türkiye on Thursday, a Turkish official told AFP, for talks that include the future of a key deal that allows grain exports from Ukrainian ports through a safe corridor in the Black Sea.

Lavrov met with his Turkish counterpart Mevlut Cavusoglu during a fast-breaking dinner in the capital Ankara.

He is due to address a joint news conference with Cavusoglu and meet with President

Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

NATO member Türkiye, which has good ties with its two Black Sea neighbours, is pushing Russia and Ukraine to resume peace talks, hoping to build on past diplomatic endeavours last year.

"Despite the complication of the international situation, the Russian-Turkish political dialogue, primarily at the level of the heads of the two states, continues," the Russian foreign ministry said in a statement ahead of the visit.

Lavrov, who last visited Türkiye in June, will also discuss with Turkish officials the grain deal, which the Russian foreign ministry said was extended "as a gesture of goodwill for another 60 days".

Türkiye has pushed for a 120-day extension in compliance with the original agreement.

Charles backs probe into UK monarchy’s slavery links

BRITAIN’S King Charles III is supporting research into the historical links between the monarchy and the transatlantic slave trade, Buckingham Palace said on Thursday.

A month ahead of his coronation, the palace said that academics will gain greater access to royal archives, and that Charles takes the issue “profoundly seriously”.

Charles’s 17th century predecessor King James II was the largest investor in the Royal African Company, which became a brutal pioneer of the transatlantic slave trade.

Last year, Charles told a meeting of Commonwealth leaders that in order to “unlock the power of our common future, we must also acknowledge the wrongs which have shaped our past”.

But there was no apology from the then-heir to the throne for the royal family’s involvement in the transportation and selling of people for profit.

A royal spokesperson said that since inheriting the throne from Queen Elizabeth II, Charles had continued his pledge to deepen his understanding of slavery’s impact with “vigour and determination”.

James II, who was deposed in 1688, was not the only one of Charles’s forebears who was complicit in the slave trade. In 1689, according to a previously unseen document published by The Guardian newspaper, Royal African Company shares worth £1,000 were transferred to King William III from slave trader Edward Colston. — AFP

Gabon cuts presidential term to five years before election

FIVE months before elections, the parliament in Gabon on Thursday voted to reduce the president’s term from seven to five years.

The vote amends the Constitution and also turns the presidential election into a single round.

Sections of the opposition criticised the changes, in particular the end of two rounds of voting, as a means of “facilitating the re-election” of Ali Bongo Ondimba. — AFP

Israel strikes Lebanon, Gaza after rocket salvo from Lebanese soil

ISRAEL launched air strikes before dawn on Friday in the Gaza Strip and Lebanon, saying it was targeting Hamas in retaliation for several dozen rockets fired at Israel from both territories.

The strikes were launched around 4:30 am Israeli time (0130 GMT), hitting both the Gaza Strip and southern Lebanon, according to an Israeli army statement.

Explosions were heard by

AFP in Lebanon’s Tyre region as well as the Gaza Strip, where Israeli air raids had begun before midnight.

Tensions have soared between Israel and Palestinians during what is both the Jewish Passover and the Muslim holy month of Ramadan, prompting condemnations and calls for restraint from abroad.

The latest flare-up of violence comes after Israeli police clashed Wednesday with Palestinians inside Jerusalem’s Al-Aqsa mosque — Islam’s third-holiest site.

On Thursday, Israel’s army said more than 30 rockets had been fired from Lebanese territory into Israel in the largest escalation along the frontier since Israel and Hezbollah fought a 34-day war in 2006. — AFP

THE drawing-lot ceremony for the 32nd SEA Games National Football Tournament, which will be hosted by Cambodia, was held on 5 April, and Myanmar national men's football team went into Group A.

All 10 Southeast Asian countries will participate in the SEA Games men's football tourney, except for Brunei, and it will be divided into two groups of five teams.

Myanmar is included in the Group A with host Cambodia, Indonesia, the Philippines, and Timor Leste, while defending champion Viet Nam is placed in Group B with Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, and Laos.

Team Myanmar has a better chance to advance to the semi-finals according to the group position, as Myanmar's main competitors are host Cambodia and team Indonesia.

Group B is tighter than Group A as the current champion Viet Nam, ASEAN powerhouse Thai and Malaysian teams are expected to compete for the semi-finals.

The Myanmar team was eliminated from the group stage in the last Viet Nam SEA Games.

The Myanmar U-22 team has been taking training for the SEA Games since the last week of March, and is preparing for training with 36 preliminary players.

Villa revival restores Emery's Premier League reputation

UNAI Emery is finally winning admirers in the Premier League after revitalising Aston Villa just five months into his redemptive return to English football.

Villa were languishing just above the relegation zone when Emery was hired following Steven Gerrard's sacking after an underwhelming 11-month spell in charge. Energised by the Spaniard, Villa have climbed to seventh in the table thanks to an impressive run of 10 wins from 16 league games.

Since the 51-year-old's first game in early November, only leaders Arsenal and second-placed Manchester City have earned more than Villa's haul of 32 points. Villa host struggling Nottingham Forest on Saturday aiming to move closer to the sixth-place finish that would mean a return to European football for the first time since the 2010/11 season. Emery initially targeted the top 10, but now he is setting his sights higher. "In my mind is to have always the objective, and one of them is to try and be close and take the option (to get into Europe)," he said. "We are very proud of our work. We are very proud of our supporters. We are very happy.—AFP

Klopp calls for Liverpool reaction against Arsenal

JURGEN Klopp says his struggling Liverpool team must show "reaction after reaction" when they face Premier League leaders Arsenal at Anfield on Sunday.

The Reds are 10 points behind fourth-placed Manchester United and face an uphill task to qualify for next season's Champions League.

Liverpool have taken just one point from their past three games — all away — but have won nine of their 13 league matches at Anfield this season.

"We are at home and still have to show reaction after reaction — we have to — and improvement," Klopp said on Friday.

"That's what we will absolutely try on Sunday."

A much-changed Liverpool side drew 0-0 at Chelsea in midweek after defeats at Bournemouth and Manchester City.

"We have to change, we have to find a basis we can build on," said Klopp, whose side hammered Manchester United 7-0 in their last home game in early March.

"First step: intensity, desire, passion. Good at Chelsea, really, that was good. The rest, not so much. But it's fine — let's go from there."

Klopp, who admitted his team were low on confidence, said the Anfield factor could be crucial. — AFP
