AS part of a historical building and symbol of national unity in the Hsenwi region, the Saopha palace was renovated by the government and Tatmadaw for fulfilling the wish of the local people, said Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing at the inauguration ceremony of Saopha Palace of Hsenwi Saopha Hkun Hsang Tone Hung as the Hsenwi Saopha

Palace cultural museum yesterday morning.

Speaking on the occasion, the Senior General said that history cannot be destroyed and it is necessary to take lessons from the past to initiate a better system for the nation. The Senior General expressed his concept that the history of Saophas should be exposed and maintained. Hence, the Saopha palace was rebuilt by the government and Tatmadaw without losing original works as a symbol of national unity. Likewise, the Mongpun Saopha Palace is being renovated whereas arrangements are being made to rebuild the Kengtung Saopha Palace. These buildings are expected to attract local and foreign travellers for the development of the regions.

Shwegugyi Pagoda ancient inscriptions attract pilgrims during Thingyan holidays

THE ancient inscriptions from the 11th to 14th century (Bagan to Pinya periods) are gathered at Shwegugyi Pagoda in Kyaukse Township, Mandalay Region, and pilgrims can observe them during long holidays of the Thingyan Festival.

King Anawrahta, who founded the first Myanmar Empire and made Buddhism widespread under his reign, constructed 11 Ledwin districts (Pinle, Pynmana, Myittha, Yamon, Myingontaing, Panan, Tamoat, Thintaung, Makara, Tapyaktha and Khanlu) as fortified cities in Kyaukse plain where Samon, Sama, Zawgyi, Panlaung and Dohtawadi rivers are flowing. Those fortified cities are three in Myittha Township, five in Kyaukse Township and three in Sintgaing Township.

Tamoat old town, one of 11 districts, was located near Nyaungpinzauk village in the Kyaungpingon village-tract in the east of Panlaung River. The 25-acre wide fortress featuring a horseshoe arch was built. Tamoat Shwegugyi Temple is located near Nyaungpinzauk village on Kyaukse-TadaU Road, six miles away from the north of Kyaukse in the southeast of Tamoat old town.

It is one of nine cave temples built by King Anawrahta along the Panlaung River in the early Bagan period. King Narapatisithu rebuilt it as a double-storey cave temple in the late 12th century during the Bagan Period. The temple was decorated with inscriptions outside the temple (the grotesque art, animals and birds, humans, Nat, Brahma, and Kinnara characters). During the 684 ME Pinya period, a new temple was built with stupas and artefacts in the reign of King Oatsana, according to a pagoda history book noted

Seintalone mango fetches 120-180 Yuan per 16-kg basket

MYANMAR'S popular Seintalone mango has started to be conveyed to China, fetching 120-180 Yuan per 16-kilogramme basket, fruit traders from Muse said.

At present, quality influences price in the mango market. The prevailing price is pretty good at the beginning of the mango season.

Additionally, the Seintalone mango price hit a record high in the domestic market and a mango basket of 40-55 pieces (16 kilos) is priced at K50,000.

"The opening price is good this year. The price of mango is estimated at K50,000 per 16 kilos. The unpacked mango is not offered at a good price. It is traded at 120-180 Yuan per 16-kg basket," a fruit trader involved in the Muse depot said. Mango growers are asked to maintain quality control, fruit traders said. The growers are battered by the high cost of cultivation input and market reputational risks every year. Last year, low use of cultivation input brought down quality, causing postharvest diseases such as stem end rot and black spot in fruit.

Some traders did not even cover the cultivation cost due to the inferior quality of Seintalone mango.

Of about 200 mango varieties that originated in Myanmar, Seintalone, Shwehintha, Padamyar Ngamauk, Yinkwe, and Machitsu varieties are primarily grown. The foreign market prefers Seintalone varieties.

Ayeyawady Region possesses the largest mango plantation acres, having about 46,000 acres. Bago Region is the second largest producer with 43,000 acres and Mandalay has 29,000 acres of mango. There are over 24,000 acres in Kayin State, over 20,400 acres in Shan State and over 20,000 acres in Sagaing Region, according to the association. — NN/EM

Follow traditions and ethics in enjoying the Maha Thingyan festival

ALL nationalities wish to enjoy auspiciousness on New Year’s Day from the old one. Maha Thingyan festival is the most famous, attractive and crowded one among other festivals in all seasons. Myanmar’s Thingyan festival is a tangible cultural heritage of the nation. During the Maha Thingyan festival, people douse each other happily.

All Thingyan revellers should not forget the impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic. Their happy moves must be in line with the health protocol of Covid-19 issued by the Ministry of Health. They all need to take tolerance, patience and compassion among themselves in order to create a happy society in line with the traditions, customs and ethics of relevant regions and ethnicities during the traditional Maha Thingyan period.

Myanmar culture. They all have to control themselves to avoid moves of rudeness and careless activities. It is because the Maha Thingyan festival aims to change the old year to the new one in a smooth and happy manner.

The Ministry of Religious Affairs and Culture urges the people to join the Maha Thingyan festival with dos and don’ts in society to be free from unacceptable dangers. This year, plans are underway to arrange walking Thingyan activities in Mandalay, Nay Pyi Taw and Yangon on a grand scale. Moreover, the walking Thingyan activities will comprise Thanaka Thingyan, ethnic Thingyan and youth game Thingyan for the happiness of the young and old people.

All Thingyan revellers should not forget the impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic. Their happy moves must be in line with the health protocol of Covid-19 issued by the Ministry of Health. They all need to take tolerance, patience and compassion among themselves in order to create a happy society in line with the traditions, customs and ethics of relevant regions and ethnicities during the traditional Maha Thingyan period.

Currently, Myanmar era 1384 will come to an end. At the same time, the new Myanmar era 1385 will come. The Maha Thingyan festival will start in Myanmar on the 10th waning of late Tagu 1384 ME (14 April) and finish on the 12th waning of late Tagu 1384 ME (16 April). Afterwards, the 13th waning of early Tagu 1385 ME (17 April) will be Myanmar New Year’s Day.

People in Myanmar yearly perform various meritorious deeds during the Maha Thingyan festival period with auspiciousness by making donations such as serving the people from four corners of the nation with refreshments, offering meals to members of the Sangha, taking Sabbath, cleansing the Buddha images with water, listening to the Dhamma of the Lord Buddha, initiating themselves into the monkhood, serving senior citizens with bathing and shampooing, paying respect to elder persons and parents, releasing fish into the water as well as cattle into the pastureland.

In fact, the Maha Thingyan festival has been a happy, lovely and pleasant one for years. All participants in the festival need to take care of

Refreshing Thingyan, Cheerful Thingyan, Peaceful Thingyan

M AHA Thingyan (Water Festival) will fall at 06:12:08 in the evening on 14 April (Friday) 2023 (10th waning of Tagu 1384 ME).

King Taningangwe Planet (Sun) called “Barnuyaza”, who wears a glittering costume and holds an axe and sickle while riding a cow Lauthaba, is going to the west from the southeast. Pyaukkardaewi Angel who has accomplished her turn passes the head of Brahma to Rathakadaewi Angel and she receives it while sitting in a squatting position. Nandadaewi Angel wearing a vibrant and colourful costume is waiting for Thagyamin (Sakra-King of Devas). In 1384 ME Thingyan, the Atat Day (final day) of Thingyan falls on Sunday. This being so, Sunday can be traditionally regarded as Atasar Day.

What does Atasar mean? To quench the thirst for knowledge of Atasar, here is a brief explanation. Atasar Day falls on Sunday in 1384 ME. For instance, those who are born on Sunday are the ones who need to do good deeds, especially for good health and well-being as Atat Day falls on Sunday.

It is a tradition that Myanmar people welcome Thingyan Min with an Atar pot which is filled with water and springs of seven kinds of flora representing seven days of the week on the first day of Thingyan (Akya Day). Additionally, King Taningangwe Planet (Sun) called “Barnuyaza” is sent off. Those people born on the day that coincided with Atat Day are assigned to this. The ascending time of Maha Thingyan will fall on Sunday (16 April 2023) at 10:16:49 pm. Those people wearing clean, tidy and neat clothes offer flowers, water, candles and fragrant sticks to Buddha, do good deeds and share merit to Thingyan Min by saying, Sadhu Sadhu Sadhu (Well- Done). Consequently, it will bring success and positive outcomes to those merit makers in the shadow of angels, as per the treatise, the disclosure of the Buddha. If those born on Sunday failed to do so, they better have traditional Thingyan Rice dedicated to serving during Thingyan Atat Day and also make charity to others. Those who fail to do both actions will attract bad luck this year. Yet some Myanmar considered this as Sunday born cannot prevent ill fortune this year. Traditions, beliefs and customs concerning Atasar things are presented fleetingly.

Human beings and deities existed at the same time. Thagyamin (Indra, highest spirit Nat), and Brahma argued about the events regarding weddings, donations, and charity among others every two days. This way, Sunday and Monday, Tagu-Kason seasons and one year-two years appeared. Thagyamin commanded the Calendar era as well.

After that, I would like to share the history of Thingyan. When we peek back to the beginning of the Badda World where Buddhism conceived that five Buddhas arise. Brahma vividly plunged into a human world to enjoy the earth’s scent or to be resurrected in new life. Those Brahma who enjoyed the earth’s scent breathed into new life and developed as offspring in the womb as their skin was burnt and peeled. Then, they are turned into Mainma (female) and Yaukya which was later called Yaukkya (male).

Then, falling in love comes naturally and makes love. This way, their bright aura and energy diminished. Therefore, they were too terrified to ask for energy to cover the darkness. On the full moon day of Tabauung (Sunday), the sun appeared. Thanks to the sun called “Thuriya”, the fear of human beings faded away. Taningangwe (sun), which has 150 Yojana in circumference, is called accordingly. During the time of sunset, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune emerge simultaneously along with the moon which has 49 Yojana. As the moon appears as it is wished for, it is called Sanda (meaning wish).

Human beings and deities existed at the same time. Thagyamin (Indra, highest spirit Nat), and Brahma argued about the events regarding weddings, donations, and charity among others every two days. This way, Sunday and Monday, Tagu-Kason seasons and one year-two years appeared. Thagyamin commanded the Calendar era as well.

By Kaung Aung

Once, Thagyamin and Brahma argued about which day will be the world’s calamity astrologically for one and two years. They asked Kavalamain, who was skilled in the Vedas, what is right. The loser will be beheaded. The Kavalamain decided Thagyamin is right after careful calculation. As a result of this, Brahma’s head was cut off. If Brahma’s head was thrown into the ocean, the water would dry up. If it is thrown into the sky, there will be a drought. If it is placed onto the ground, it will catch fire and the plant will die. Seven goddesses (Nanda, Kanya, Zanthi, Gawratha, Mahawraka, Yathaka, Pyaukka) take turns holding the Brahma’s head in their hands. Two of them take care of the head, in turn, every 30 days.

A washing hair event was held to wash away the sins. Donation events have been held to offer Thagyamin since the beginning of the earth. Charity events, religious events to have a safe and auspicious year, and applying turmeric and pouring water are also carried out during Thingyan Atat Day.

Following this belief, Myanmar people annually hold events such as Pali chanting around the city by Sayadaw to share merits on Myanmar New Year Day, donation events, releasing animals, paying respect to elders by cutting nails, washing their hair, bathing them, celebrating feasts, taking a sabbath and offering flowers, water, candles, scented sticks to pagodas and temples.

During the auspicious Thingyan festival, people should refrain from intoxicants. Similarly, disrespectful behaviour and rude conversation between parents and children and among siblings should be avoided. Moreover, both killing individuals out of anger and getting into a conflict and arguments need to be avoided. As Thingyan is an auspicious occasion,

Persons in Buddhism follow four virtues practices; love, compassion, joy and equanimity during the Thingyan period. Upholding the virtue will bring peace to Myanmar indeed.

Emotional companionship linked to physical well-being: Research

“Since the COVID-19 pandemic, relationships have been facing unprecedented challenges, turbulence, and change,” says Dr Don. PHOTO: REPRESENTATIVE IMAGE/PIXABAY

PHYSICAL health is influenced by social ties, although the nature of this link is not specified. According to a new study published in Social Psychology and Personality Science, impact of your close relationships may alter how your body operates.

Previous smaller-scale studies have examined the connection between relationship conflict or satisfaction with stress levels and blood pressure. The new research examines the effects of positive and negative relationship experiences on the body, as well as how these experiences and health outcomes change from day to day.

Daily check-ins via their smartphone

Over the course of three weeks, 4,005 participants completed daily check-ins via their smartphone or smartwatch, providing assessments of their blood pressure, heart rate, stress, coping. Every three days, participants also shared reflections on their closest relationship, detailing their positive and negative experiences.

Researchers found that, on average, people with more positive experiences and fewer negative experiences reported lower stress, better coping, and lower systolic blood pressure reactivity leading to better physiological functioning in daily life. By contrast, variability - or daily ups and downs - in negative relationship experiences like conflict were especially predictive of outcomes like stress, coping, and overall systolic blood pressure.

Dr Don notes that one broader implication of this study is that it is important to consider how outside stressors - such as the COVID-19 pandemic - can affect people’s relationships, and therefore their physical health.

“Since the COVID-19 pandemic, relationships have been facing unprecedented challenges, turbulence, and change,” says Dr Don.

“What this means is that the COVID pandemic may have health implications not just because of the virus itself, but also indirectly as a result of the impact it has on people’s relationships.

That is, because the COVID-19 pandemic has created considerable strain, turbulence, and variability in people’s relationships, it may indirectly alter stress, coping, and physiology in daily life, all of which have important implications for physical well-being.”

Physiological effects

against interpreting the study as proof that relationship experiences have physiological effects. Instead, the findings contain associations from daily life that illustrate how relationships and physical health are often intertwined. Causal conclusions, Dr Don says, must be reserved for experimental studies.

In the future, Dr Don suggests that researchers look beyond outcomes like blood pressure and heart rate reactivity to gain a fuller understanding of how relationships may affect health. “It would be useful to examine other physiological states, such as neuroendocrine or sympathetic nervous system responses as outcomes of daily positive and negative relationship experiences, which may reveal different patterns of associations.”

Pigeon pea price rebounds to K2.4 mln per tonne

PIGEON pea price bounced back to K2.4 mln per tonne on 9 April in Yangon markets after a two-week fall.

Only the pigeon pea price is rising in the Yangon market. The price of black gram RC was K2,070,000 per tonne on 8 April.

The prices peaked at K2.1 million per tonne of black gram RC on 31 August 2022 and K2,175,000 per tonne of pigeon pea on 19 September 2022. The prevailing price of black gram RC has not reached a record high of K2.1 million per tonne. Yet, the pigeon pea price on 9 March 2023 has regained the highest price recorded in 2022.

The green gram prices touched a high of K3,915-4,030 per viss on 13 February 2023. The price remains unchanged at K3,750 per viss between 23 March and 8 April.

Before the Thingyan holidays, the chickpea prices were K4,600-4,800 per viss. The price peaked at K2.8 million per tonne.

The FOB price of pigeon peas was US$925/945 per tonne on 18 March 2023. The prices climbed to $950-970 per tonne on 8 April. Similarly, the FOB prices of black gram RC increased to $860-880 per tonne on 8 April 2023 from $785-805 per tonne on 31 August 2022.

Both the domestic pulses prices and FOB prices move up in recent days. The prices of black gram (urad) and pigeon pea (tur) in India are also rising. The urad fetched 7,500 rupees per quintal while the pigeon pea is priced at 8,200 rupees per quintal. The price is expected to climb up to 8,000 rupees for urad and 9,000 rupees for tur. The authorities concerned from India are closely observing the market to reduce the price hike in the pulses market depending on the stocks and imports.

Authorities in Myanmar are also monitoring the market and actions are being taken against the price manipulators on unreliable sources.

New Zealand highlights vaccination, isolation, masks to reduce COVID-19 impact this winter

COVID-19 prevention measures are highlighted to reduce the pandemic impact for the coming winter; New Zealand Minister of Health Ayesha Verrall said on Tuesday.

Verrall told a press conference that being up to date with vaccinations, staying home if unwell and wearing masks in healthcare settings remain key to minimizing the impact of COVID-19 and reducing pressure on New Zealand's health system over winter.

She said that mandatory measures for cases to isolate for seven days and retain the compulsory use of masks for visitors to healthcare settings will remain this winter.

Meanwhile, to help prepare the health system for the coming winter, the New Zealand government has added 32 new health sector roles to the Straight to Residence pathway of the Green List.

"The world is currently facing a global health worker shortage, so it is vital that New Zealand's immigration settings present a competitive offer to attract health workers to our shores," said Immigration Minister Michael Wood. — Xinhua

Viet Nam to ramp up vaccination amid high risk of importing wild polio virus

VIET Nam is accelerating efforts to vaccinate children against polio amid a global surge in a variant of the poliovirus, Vietnam News Agency reported on Tuesday.

The National Institute of Hygiene and Epidemiology has urged local health authorities to administer polio vaccinations to children, especially those born in 2021 and 2022, the two years when the COVID-19 pandemic occurred.

As a result of social distancing practices to limit the spread of COVID-19, childhood immunization rates for polio have dropped to the lowest level in the past 20 years, putting millions of children at risk of exposure to the preventable disease, said the epidemiology institute under the Ministry of Health.

Viet Nam uses two types of the vaccine in the fight to eradicate polio, oral polio vaccine (OPV) and inactivated poliovirus vaccine (IPV) given as a shot in the leg or arm. — Xinhua

England's health service set for 'catastrophic' doctors' strike

THE public health service in England was on Tuesday braced for "the most disruptive industrial action" in its history as junior doctors walk out over pay and working conditions.

The National Health Service (NHS) has been hit by waves of strikes in recent months as soaring inflation eats into wages and pandemic backlogs coupled with staff shortages increase workloads.

But the four-day walkout by junior doctors threatens to be the most serious action yet, with national medical director of NHS England Stephen Powis warning it will pile "immense pressures" on the service.

"This is set to be the most disruptive industrial action in NHS history, and the strikes tomorrow will bring immense pressures, coming on the back of a challenged extended bank holiday weekend for staff and services," he said on Monday.

"Emergency, urgent and critical care will be prioritized but some patients will unfortunately have had their appointments postponed."

Up to a quarter of a million appointments could be postponed, according to the NHS Confederation, which represents the whole healthcare system in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Family doctors are reported by British media to be closed for appointments for up to a week, as GPs are drafted in to provide cover for junior doctors.

The NHS Confederation's Matthew Taylor told Sky News the strikes "are going to have a catastrophic impact on the capacity of the NHS". The service has been "preparing extensively" for the strikes, said Powis, but added that the task was made "much more difficult" due to the "sheer numbers" of appointments that need to be rescheduled. The walkout will begin at seven am (0600 GMT) on Tuesday and run until the morning of 15 April. — AFP

Pharma CEOs say US abortion pill ruling threatens drug development

People wait in line to enter the J Marvin Jones Federal Building and Courthouse in Amarillo, Texas, on 15 March 2023. US abortion opponents are hoping for a national ban on a widely used abortion pill when their lawsuit against government drug regulators is argued Wednesday in the Texas court of a deeply conservative judge believed to be sympathetic to their cause. Galvanized after the US Supreme Court ended the nationwide right to abortion last June, anti-abortion forces are now targeting the prescription drug mifepristone in their campaign to win a total ban on the practice. PHOTO: AFP

HUNDREDS of pharmaceutical executives on Monday condemned a US judicial ruling outlawing a leading abortion pill, saying it threatens the development of needed medications in the United States.

Some 400 executives, including Pfizer CEO Albert Bourla and top management at Novartis, Biogen and Merck, signed a letter criticizing Friday's ruling by Texas federal judge Matthew Kacsmaryk that could block access to mifepristone nationwide.

"The decision ignores decades of scientific evidence and legal precedent," said the letter slamming Kacsmaryk's move to bar the drug 23 years after it was approved by the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

"Judge Kacsmaryk's act of judicial interference has set a precedent for diminishing FDA's authority over drug approvals, and in so doing, creates uncertainty for the entire biopharma industry," it added.

The letter described a reliable FDA as essential to high-risk investments on new treatments.

"Adding regulatory uncertainty to the already inherently risky work of discovering and developing new medicines will likely have the effect of reducing incentives for investment, endangering the innovation that characterizes our industry," the letter said.

Mifepristone has been used as part of a two-drug regimen by 5.6 million women since 2000.

But the drug's future has become the latest uncertainty in the wake of the US Supreme Court's June 2022 ruling outlawing national abortion rights.

Kacsmaryk, a conservative appointee of former president Donald Trump, said in his order that the FDA had used "unsound" reasoning at a time when it "faced significant political pressure" to greenlight the medication. — AFP

China, India “two exceptions” to global slowdown this year: World Bank chief

CHINA and India are “two exceptions to the slowdown” that the global economy is expected to experience this year, World Bank Group President David Malpass has said.

Malpass made the remarks in a media call ahead of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank Spring Meetings week, according to a press release posted at the worldbank.org on Monday.

“Global growth is expected to be weak this year, slowing to two per cent from 3.1 per cent in 2022.

For the US, we’re expecting a slowdown to 1.2 per cent from 2.1 per cent in 2022,” said Malpass.

“Several factors are weighing on the second half outlook: Oil prices have jumped back above 80 US dollars a barrel. The recent banking sector stress dampens activity. And inflation pressures persist. The US month-over-month core inflation has been rising over the last five months,” he said.

“I’ll note two exceptions to the slowdown: China and India. China’s GDP growth is rebounding to over 5 per cent in 2023, with strong private investment,” said Malpass.

“I note the stability of China’s currency and the countercyclical nature of its monetary policy,” he said. “India continues to be one of the fastest-growing major economies in the world. We’re looking for growth of 6.3 per cent in their FY23/24,” said Malpass. — Xinhua

Thailand’s investor confidence plunges in March

THAILAND’S investor confidence plunged in March from a positive to a neutral level as the local stock market fluctuated and weakened over concerns about the US and European banking crises, a survey showed Monday.

The country’s investor confidence index (ICI), which anticipates the market condition over the next three months, fell 21 per cent to 95.65 in March from a month earlier, according to Thai Capital Market Organizations (FETCO).

Only institutional investors’ confidence remained positive in March, while all other types of investors, retail, proprietary, and foreign, were less optimistic, FETCO Chairman Kobsak Pootrakool said in a written statement.

Respondents viewed the Southeast Asian country’s upcoming general election as the most supportive factor, followed by the Fed’s easing pace of interest rate hikes and rebounds in local tourism.

However, investors were most concerned about the fund outflow, followed by slowing Thai exports and the Fed policy rate hike to tame inflation.

Kobsak noted that the movements of key global central banks, notably the United States, Europe, and the United Kingdom, on using their policy rates to tame inflation remain under attention.

While locally, all eyes were on the pre-election political situation and the export contraction as a result of trading partners’ slowing economies, he said. — Xinhua

Markets track higher as investors await US inflation data

ASIAN and European markets mostly rose Tuesday after an Easter break that thinned trading volumes in the region, with focus now turning to the release of US inflation data later in the week.

The consumer and wholesale price reports due follow Friday figures that showed a continued healthy rise in jobs creation, reinforcing expectations of another Federal Reserve interest rate hike next month.

But the jobs report also soothed concerns that the world’s top economy was slowing too fast and could be on course for a recession, after last week’s sub-par manufacturing and services sector activity numbers.

However, analysts warned that the 236,000 jobs announced Friday could mark the last report to top 200,000 for some time and that it could turn negative within months.

“It does appear the US payrolls have seemingly steadied the ship after the market got a bit out-of-step with, or at least over-extrapolating, an imminent recession from the gloomy... data last week,” said SPI Asset Management’s Stephen Innes.

Wall Street provided a broadly positive lead, with all three main indexes recovering from early deep losses. The Dow and S&P 500 chalked up gains though the Nasdaq finished marginally lower.

Still, most of Asia enjoyed an upbeat day.

Tokyo, Seoul and Sydney rose more than one per cent while there were also gains in Hong Kong, Singapore, Seoul, Mumbai, Wellington, Taipei and Bangkok, though Shanghai and Taipei dipped.

London, Paris and Frankfurt rallied in the morning as trade resumed post-Easter.

China recovery ‘on track’

Data out of China showed consumer prices rose less than expected in March and factory costs dropped, suggesting there remains some weakness in the world’s second-largest economy even as it reopens after the lifting of Covid restrictions.

It does, however, provide the People’s Bank of China with room to unveil further growth-boosting measures.

The “economic recovery is on track but not strong enough to push up prices”, said Zhang Zhiwei at Pinpoint Asset Management. — AFP

Cuba announces surprise reversal of US dollar deposit ban

CUBA’S government on Monday announced a surprise lifting of its ban on US dollar deposits in banks, reversing a policy which had been in place across the communist island nation since June 2021.

“From this moment on, financial and banking institutions will accept cash deposits of US dollars in bank accounts,” said a Central Bank of Cuba (BCC) resolution published Monday in the country’s Official Gazette.

The Cuban government had announced the ban almost two years ago, saying at the time that the move was due to continuing difficulties caused by the ongoing US embargo. The policy reversal comes as the island faces its worst economic crisis in three decades, with mounting shortages of food, medicines and fuel worsening in recent weeks.

However it is also seeing its vital tourism industry pick up following a collapse during the pandemic, which the government cited as one of the reasons for the move on Monday. Cuba has been subject to broad US sanctions since 1962, hindering its government’s ability to transact in dollars. — AFP

China consumer inflation falls below 1% in March

CHINA'S consumer price inflation fell below one per cent in March, official figures showed Tuesday, a sign of weak demand as the world's second largest economy tries to recover from its pandemic-driven slump.

The March consumer price index (CPI) — the main gauge of inflation — came in at 0.7 per cent, down from the one per cent seen a month earlier, according to the country's National Bureau of Statistics (NBS).

Beijing is targeting an average inflation rate of three per cent for 2023, which is still far below the current rates of many developed economies.

Analysts had expected a faster pace in March, with economic activity picking up again after the abandonment of zero-Covid restrictions at the end of 2022.

The producer price index (PPI), which measures the cost of goods leaving factories, shrank for the sixth consecutive month, with prices falling 2.5 per cent -- indicating lower margins for businesses.

"Economic recovery is on track but not strong enough to push up prices," Zhiwei Zhang of Pinpoint Asset Management wrote in a note.

"This suggests the economy is still running below its potential," he added, suggesting the data made an interest rate cut more likely.

Fresh fruit prices rose 11.5 per cent year-on-year, and pork, the most consumed meat in the country, jumped 9.6 per cent.

The cost of fuel for transport fell 6.4 per cent.

Globally, commodity and food prices are rising, though China has remained relatively unscathed by increases linked to the war in Ukraine.

"We think consumer price inflation will rebound in the coming months as the labour market tightens again," analysts from Capital Economics said in a note.

"But it will be well below the government's ceiling of around three per cent, and the increase in inflation will be far smaller than what was seen elsewhere when they opened up." —AFP

ITALY on Tuesday unveiled a dazzling pavilion at the ongoing third China International Consumer Products Expo (CICPE), eyeing more China-Italy trade cooperation.

As the guest country of honour at this year's CICPE, currently being held on the resort island of Hainan, Italy built the pavilion in an area of about 1,800 square metres and has 147 brands participating in the expo, both figures more than double that of last year's edition.

Maria Tripodi, Italian undersecretary of state to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation, said that the expo marks a new phase of opening up and international communication, and that she expects Italian participants to win applause and recognition from the Chinese market.

Italy also set up a booth for the China-Italy Chamber of Commerce, displaying Italian products like jewellery, garments, accessories and gelato machines.

Paolo Bazzoni, chairman of the chamber, said that China is of great importance to Italian enterprises, and participating in the expo generates more opportunities for Italian brands to enter China and start more businesses in the huge Chinese market. — Xinhua

Airbus delivers fall as supply chain issues persist

AIRBUS reported Tuesday a drop in aircraft deliveries in the first quarter due to persistent supply chain issues, a setback for the European aerospace giant's ambitious goal for the full year.

Deliveries are a reliable industry indicator about a plane-maker's profitability as customers pay the bulk of their bills when they take possession of the aircraft.

Airbus said it delivered 127 aircraft between January and March, down 11 per cent from 142 a year earlier.

The number means the manufacturer will have to pick up the pace to reach its target of 720 units for the year compared with 661 in 2022. Airbus' suppliers are facing supply problems and struggling to recruit workers.

The slowdown in deliveries is also due to the growing share of A321 planes it must deliver, as the variety of parts needed for the single-aisle aircraft make it more susceptible to supply chain bottlenecks. — AFP

Bottlenecks in Viet Nam's transport infrastructure hinder foreign trade: experts

VIET Nam should consider removing bottlenecks in transport infrastructure as part of the efforts to develop the logistics sector and facilitate foreign trade in the southern key economic region, according to local experts.

The country should also develop inland waterway ports and foster regional connectivity in this region which consists of Ho Chi Minh City and Dong

The region, which accounts for 35 per cent of Viet Nam's GDP and more than 40 per cent of revenues and foreign trade, is in danger of stagnation due to bottlenecks in infrastructure, the newspaper said. — Xinhua

North Korean leader calls for more 'practical, offensive' war deterrence

NORTH Korean leader Kim Jong Un called for expanding the country's war deterrence capabilities in a "more practical and offensive" way, state media said Tuesday, to counter what it called "frantic" aggression by the United States and South Korea.

Pyongyang has opened the year with a flurry of weapons tests, including what state media has claimed are nuclear-capable underwater drones and the launch of two intercontinental ballistic missiles.

On Monday, Kim attended a meeting of the Central Military Commission to discuss ways to "cope with the escalating moves of the US imperialists and the south Korean puppet traitors to unleash a war of aggression," Pyongyang's Korean Central News Agency said.

Kim ordered that the country's deterrence capabilities be strengthened with "increasing speed" and in a "more practical and offensive" manner.

North Korea last year declared itself an "irreversible" nuclear power, effectively ending the possibility of denuclearization talks.

Earlier this year, Kim ordered the military to intensify drills to prepare for a "real war".

In response, Washington and Seoul have intensified defence cooperation, staging joint military exercises with advanced stealth jets and high-profile US strategic assets. — AFP

Japan PM Kishida to visit Africa ahead of G-7 summit in Hiroshima

PRIME Minister Fumio Kishida is scheduled to visit Egypt, Ghana, Kenya and Mozambique during Japan's Golden Week holidays starting late April, ahead of the Group of Seven summit in Hiroshima in May, the government said Tuesday.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Hirokazu Matsuno, the government's top spokesman, said at a regular press conference that confirming cooperation with major African countries to tackle global issues is "significant" for Japan, which holds the G-7 presidency for this year.

With the G-7 summit, which will be held in the prime minister's home constituency, fast approaching, Kishida has expressed his willingness to strengthen ties with the "Global South", a term that collectively refers to developing nations south of the equator.

Since Russia invaded Ukraine in February 2022, many developing countries, including in Africa, have sought to avoid taking sides.

Matsuno did not elaborate on the itinerary of Kishida's tour to the continent. The Golden Week period runs into early May. — Kyodo

Russia, Ukraine exchange 100 prisoners each

UKRAINE and Russia said Monday they had returned around 100 soldiers each in the latest prisoner exchange between the two warring countries.

Kyiv and Moscow have periodically carried out prisoner swaps since Russia invaded Ukraine more than a year ago.

"We are returning 100 of our people," the Ukrainian president's chief of staff Andriy Yermak said on Telegram.

"They are military people, sailors, border guards, national guardsmen."

Yermak said the exchange included troops who held out in Mariupol — the devastated port city captured by Russia last spring — and that some were "seriously injured".

He called the exchange "difficult" and thanked officials for "doing what may often seem impossible".

Yermak posted a video of women in uniform being greeted with flowers. Moscow said it had returned 106 of its servicemen in the exchange.

"As a result of negotiations, 106 Russian soldiers were returned from territories under Kyiv control," the Russian defence ministry said. It said they will be taken by plane to Moscow "for treatment and rehabilitation".

"All those that were freed will be given the necessary medical and psychological help," the ministry added. The previous Russian-Ukrainian prisoner exchange was last month. Authorities announced on 7 March that 130 Ukrainians were swapped for 90 Russian servicemen. — AFP

Philippines, US kick off largest-scale joint military drills amid criticisms

MORE than 17,000 Philippine and US troops on Tuesday kicked off the most extensive joint military activities in decades in the Philippines amid criticisms that it escalates tension in the region rather than peace and stability.

According to the Philippine military, the 18-day yearly exercise dubbed Balikatan involves 5,400 Philippine and 12,200 US troops, making it the largest iteration of the Philippines-US joint drills conducted in decades. About 100 members of the Australian armed forces join in the exercises, while a dozen countries, including Japan and Britain, are participating as observers.

Balikatan 2023 will be held in several areas including northern Luzon island, Palawan province, Batanes islands, and Zambales province from 11 to 28 April.

The drills will focus on maritime security, amphibious operations, live-fire training, cyber defence, counter-terrorism, humanitarian assistance, and disaster relief preparedness. The Philippines and the United States will deploy complex weapons systems, including a Patriot missile battery and the High Mobility Artillery Rocket Systems (HIMARS).

Hundreds of protesters, including League of Filipino Students members, held a “lightning rally” around 5 am local time Tuesday, a few hours before the official start of the Balikatan exercise in the Philippines. The students urged the Philippine government to trash the military agreements with the United States.

Protesters carried placards and banners denouncing the drills, urging Filipinos to oppose the joint exercises. Some activists hurled “paint bombs”, defacing the seal of the US Embassy in Manila to denounce the joint military training.

Another protest was held at the gate of a military camp while the opening ceremony was underway inside the main headquarters.

Anna Malindog-Uy, vice-president of the Manila-based think-tank Asian Century Philippines Strategic Studies Institute, warned that the staging of Balikatan will create instability and volatility in the ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) region and the wider Asia-Pacific region, adding that the Filipinos will be caught in the crossfire and suffer the most. Roland Simbulan, vice-chair of the Centre for People’s Empowerment in Governance of the Philippines, urged the Philippines to focus more on economic relations with all countries rather than spending on arms sales, which implies Balikatan and other joint military activities between the Philippines and the United States. — Xinhua

Iran says rapprochement with Saudi Arabia to positively impact on regional peace, stability

THE Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman said Monday that the resumption of diplomatic relations between Iran and Saudi Arabia will have positive impacts on regional peace, stability and security, Iranian official news agency IRNA reported.

Making the remarks at his first press conference in the current Iranian calendar year, Nasser Kanaani said the Beijing-brokered agreement between Iran and Saudi Arabia to normalize ties has met with “very positive reactions” in the region, and welcomed at the international level, according to the report.

The agreement would definitely have positive impacts on strengthening regional cooperation, so as to foster peace, stability and security in the region, as well as on boosting trade and economic relations not only between Iran and Saudi Arabia but also with other regional countries, Kanaani noted.

Meanwhile, he said that Iran and Saudi Arabia will exchange ambassadors after the reopening of their diplomatic missions.

China, Saudi Arabia, and Iran announced on 10 March that the latter two had reached a deal that includes the agreement to resume diplomatic relations and reopen embassies and diplomatic missions within two months.

In a meeting in Beijing on Thursday, Iranian Foreign Minister Hossein Amir-Abdollahian and his Saudi counterpart Prince Faisal bin Farhan Al Saud signed a joint statement announcing the resumption of diplomatic relations with immediate effect.

In order to build the East China Sea into a sea of peace, cooperation and friendship, more work should be advanced to build China-Japan relations that meet the requirements of the new era.— Xinhua

S Korea’s fire destroys forest, houses amid strong winds

A forest fire in South Korea’s northeast coastal city destroyed forest and houses, forcing hundreds of people to evacuate, Yonhap news agency reported on Tuesday citing relevant authorities.

The blaze broke out from a hill in Gangneung, about 170 kilometres east of Seoul, at around 8:30 am local time (2330 GMT on Monday).

The forest fire rapidly spread to private houses due to strong wind and dry weather. The wind with an instantaneous maximum speed of 30 metres per second blew over the eastern coastal areas. No casualties have been reported yet, but the fire was estimated to have burned around 103 hectares of forest, or the size of about 144 soccer fields, as well as dozens of houses. — Xinhua

FIFA predicts 2023 women's World Cup will be 'watershed' moment

FIFA has predicted the women's World Cup in Australia and New Zealand will be a "watershed" moment that propels the game to another level, with the target to eventually rival the men's version.

Women's football is already enjoying a surge in popularity in some countries, and the tournament looks set to spark further global interest.

With 100 days till kick-off, FIFA's chief women's football officer Sarai Bareman told NewsCorp Australia in comments published Tuesday that more than two billion viewers were expected to tune in, double the previous tournament in France, won by the United States.

Record attendance is also predicted, with 650,000 tickets already snapped up. The next phase of sales opened Tuesday.

Bareman said she believed the event would be a major turning point and a driver for social change, creating role models for young girls and helping promote gender equality.

"People will be saying, 'That was the watershed moment that changed everything and took the game to the next level,'" she said.

"And that's in every aspect -- commercially, participation, popularity and growth.

"I think people will really look back and choose the women's World Cup in Australia and New Zealand as that watershed moment where the growth, which is already exponential, just took off to the absolute next level."

Bareman, a New Zealand-born former Samoan international, said the ultimate goal was to grow the tournament to rival the men's and get females on equal footing in terms of pay.

"We know the men's World Cup is the primary source of revenue for FIFA and football, and that generates in excess of $US5 billion per edition, and that's a clear target for women's football," she said.

"We want to get to that level. The first World Cup for men was in 1930, it wasn't until 61 years later the first women's World Cup was introduced, we're still in our infancy as a product.

"But we have to look at what's happening in the men's game as an inspiration and a target, for me it's got to be in the billions and we have to keep pushing until we get to that level." — AFP

Lampard urges Chelsea to emulate 2012 shock run to Euro glory

FRANK Lampard has urged Chelsea to ignore the turmoil enveloping his struggling side as he invoked the memory of the Blues' incredible run to Champions League glory in 2012.

Lampard is back in charge of Chelsea until the end of the season after replacing the sacked Graham Potter last week.

After watching Chelsea crash to a lacklustre 1-0 defeat at Wolves in his first game in charge on Saturday, Lampard takes them to Real Madrid for a daunting Champions League quarter-final first leg on Wednesday.

Chelsea are languishing in 11th place in the Premier League after a dismal campaign that included Thomas Tuchel being sacked in September and Potter lasting only seven months before his dismissal.

The west Londoners have managed to progress to the last eight in Europe despite their wretched domestic form.

Knocking out holders Real would be a major upset, but Lampard knows all about defying the odds in the Champions League.

Sapporo may delay Winter Games bid to 2034: Japan Olympic chief JAPAN could push its Winter Olympics bid back four years to 2034 after corruption scandals related to the Tokyo Games, the country's Olympic chief has warned.

The northern city of Sapporo has been aiming to host the 2030 Games but Japanese Olympic Committee president Yasuhiro Yamashita told reporters that it would be "difficult to move ahead without gaining people's understanding".

His comments come as prosecutors investigate allegations of bribery and bid-rigging at the 2020 Summer Games in Tokyo, which were postponed to 2021 because of the pandemic. Local media reported Yamashita as saying that he would discuss the bid with Sapporo's mayor, who
