Build a new and young country with changes and progress

MYANMAR is home to ethnic-national brethren through thick and thin. The government places an emphasis on national unity and the development of more than 100 ethnicities. As a Myanmar saying goes: Command your man and do it yourself, all ethnic nationalities need to uplift themselves on a self-reliant basis for their improvement.

The University for the Development of the National Races of the Union is a basic factor to improve all ethnic national brethren. Such an academic institution established for many decades has been turning out qualified academicians and technicians in relevant arenas so as to benefit the national brethren residing in all parts of the nation.

Today's elders were young in the past. Today's youths will be elders in the future. Everything is changing. But the country will persistently exist as new generations are building the country year after year. So, the country is new and young with changes and progress.

Only when teachers teach the nature of a genuine, disciplined democratic system and good democratic practices to ethnic-national youths will they be reliable persons with democratic knowledge in building the Union based on democracy and federalism. In this regard, those youths must have the knowledge to preserve the national character and culture of the country.

Youths are a reserved force for the future nation. Hence, the University has been nurturing the ethnic youths to become reliable ones for their native areas as well as the State. Those graduates from the university who are loyal to the country have to serve their duties to forge the national spirit and patriotic spirit of youths from the border region and to train those youths to follow prescribed laws, rules and regulations.

Today's elders were young in the past. Today's youths will be elders in the future. Everything is changing. But the country will persistently exist as new generations are building the country year after year. So, the country is new and young with changes and progress.

Harmonization exists between political stability and development

By Maythu Lwin

POLITICAL stability is truly the bottom line for national development which is the truth for every nation. The Republic of the Union of Myanmar has struggled with armed conflicts for over 70 years which is the main culprit for a lag in development. Losses to the nation are still countless due to political instability. Under State Administration Council's supervision, actions are being taken to revive the NCA peace process which was initiated on 15 October 2015. State Administration Council Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing highlighted the importance of prompt implementation of NCA "As NCA was drawn by stakeholders in accord with the proposals of ethnic armed organizations, only when all walk on that way will the peaceful and tranquil State, we all aspire to. Hence, it is necessary to leave a peaceful legacy for prosperity and quickly implement the peace process" as an honour of the 67th Anniversary of the Kayin State Day Ceremony. When observing Singapore's history, one of the four Asian Tigers, it has proved a stable political environment since its independence in 1965. This advantage has boosted its leaders' attention to development initiatives. In addition, a well-rounded education system of Singapore, nurturing skilled human resources has allowed the country to stand out as one of the most developed countries in ASEAN. This is vivid evidence of how political stability can grant the country and its citizens to create a strong nation and perform their best.

Undeniably, political instability has brought about declining foreign direct investment inflows, the dominance of the black market, the increasing rate of inflation, the problem of brain drains, and the spread of fake news and misinformation, among them, the worst fact is the fear of the public. When reflecting upon this, the victory of every civil war is bittersweet, especially when the victims are the citizens. If it is accepted that every civil war happens for a reason and different perceptions, it is to be accepted that its long-term consequence is disastrous. Every civil war is indeed bloody politics.

Nowadays, a global value chain which is international production sharing has taken place among countries. As a matter of fact, when a country lacks political stability, developing a robust economy is difficult to achieve. Investors require political, legal, economic, taxation and financial conditions to remain stable as a guarantee of their investment in any home country. Therefore, it is to be aware that every action and plan taken by different armed organizations convey favourable conditions for the motherland in meeting global demand. It is a duty to prevent the motherland from going backwards in an international setting.

As of the beginning, the implementation of the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement didn't initiate based upon 100 per cent trust between parties. Depending upon existing trust, the agreement was made on the basis of adhering to national interests. As the strength of the nation lies within, only when all different organizations cooperate, will the nation be on the development route.

Tattoo-like graphene implant can treat irregular heartbeats: Research

RESEARCHERS led by Northwestern University and the University of Texas at Austin (UT) have developed the first cardiac implant made from graphene, a two-dimensional supermaterial with ultra-strong, lightweight and conductive properties. Similar in appearance to a child's temporary tattoo, the new graphene "tattoo" implant is thinner than a single strand of hair yet still functions like a classical pacemaker.

But unlike current pacemakers and implanted defibrillators, which require hard, rigid materials that are mechanically incompatible with the body, the new device softly melds to the heart to simultaneously sense and treat irregular heartbeats.

The implant is thin and flexible enough to conform to the heart's delicate contours as well as stretchy and strong enough to withstand the dynamic motions of a beating heart.

After implanting the device into a rat model, the researchers demonstrated that the graphene tattoo could successfully sense irregular heart rhythms and then deliver electrical stimulation through a series of pulses without constraining or altering the heart's natural motions.

Even better: The technology also is optically transparent, allowing the researchers to use an external source of optical light to record and stimulate the heart through the device.

The study will be published on (20April) in the journal 'Advanced Materials'. It marks the thinnest known cardiac implant to date.

"One of the challenges for current pacemakers and defibrillators is that they are difficult to affix onto the surface of the heart," said Northwestern's Igor Efimov, the study's senior author.

"Defibrillator electrodes, for example, are essentially coils made of very thick wires. These wires are not flexible, and they break. Rigid interfaces with soft tissues, like the heart, can cause various complications. By contrast, our soft, flexible device is not only unobtrusive but also intimately and seamlessly conforms directly onto the heart to deliver more precise measurements."

An experimental cardiologist, Efimov is a professor of biomedical engineering at Northwestern's McCormick School of Engineering and professor of medicine at Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine. He co-led the study with Dmitry Kireev, a research associate at UT. Zexu Lin, a PhD candidate in Efimov's laboratory, is the paper's first author.

Miracle material

Known as cardiac arrhythmias, heart rhythm disorders occur when the heart beats either too quickly or too slowly.

While some cases of arrhythmia are not serious, many cases can lead to heart failure, stroke and even sudden death. In fact, complications related to arrhythmia claim about 300,000 lives annually in the United States.

Physicians commonly treat arrhythmia with implantable pacemakers and defibrillators that detect abnormal heartbeats and then correct rhythm with electrical stimulation.

While these devices are lifesaving, their rigid nature may constrain the heart's natural moin high-performance electronics, high-strength materials and energy devices.

"For bio-compatibility reasons, graphene is particularly attractive," Efimov said. "Carbon is the basis of life, so it's a safe material that is already used in different clinical applications. It also is flexible and soft, which works well as an interface between electronics and a soft, mechanically active organ."

Hitting a beating target

At UT, study co-authors Dmitry Kireev and Deji Akinwande were already developing graphene electronic tattoos (GETs) with sensing capabilities.

Flexible and weightless, their team's e-tattoos adhere to the skin to continuously monitor the body's vital signs, including blood pressure and the electrical activity of the brain, heart and muscles.

But, while the e-tattoos work well on the skin's surface, Efimov's team needed to investigate new methods to use these devices inside the body - directly onto the surface of the heart.

"It's a completely different application scheme," Efimov said. "Skin is relatively dry and easily accessible. Obviously, the heart is inside the chest, so it's difficult to access and in a wet environment."

The researchers developed an entirely new technique to encase the graphene tattoo and adhere it to the surface of a beating heart.

First, they encapsulated the graphene inside a flexible, elastic silicone membrane - with a hole punched in it to give access to the interior graphene electrode.

Then, they gently placed gold tape (with a thickness of 10 microns) onto the encapsulating layer to serve as an electrical interconnect between the graphene and the external electronics used to measure and stimulate the heart. Finally, they placed it onto the heart.

The entire thickness of all layers together measures about 100 microns in total.

The resulting device was stable for 60 days on an actively beating heart at body temperature, which is comparable to the duration of temporary pacemakers used as bridges to permanent pacemakers or rhythm management after surgery or other therapies.

Optical opportunities

Leveraging the device's transparent nature, Efimov and his team performed optocardiography -- using light to track and modulate heart rhythm -- in the animal study.

Not only does this offer a new way to diagnose and treat heart ailments, the approach also opens new possibilities for optogenetics, a method to control and monitor single cells with light.—ANI

ACCORDING to the Ministry of Energy, about 50 barrels of jet fuel and more than 22 million cubic feet of natural gas are produced from the Nyaungdon/Maubin oilfield on a daily basis.

Oil for aircraft that is produced daily from 17 production wells in the gas field is transported to the Petrochemical Factory (Mann Thanbayakan Refinery), where fuel needed by the country is produced.

In addition, natural gas from the area is distributed to the fertilizer plants (Myaungtaga and Kangyidaunt), the liquefied natural gas plant (Nyaungdon), factories and workshops in Yangon Region, CNG vehicles in the public transport sector, and the reoperation of the Newsprint Paper Mill (Thaboung).

MoH Union Minister inspects reconstruction of Sittway General Hospital damaged by Cyclone Mocha

UNION Minister for Health Dr Thet Khaing Win and Union Minister for Construction U Myo Thant arrived at the Sittway General Hospital damaged by Cyclone Mocha and inspected the progress of repairing the damaged buildings yesterday.

According to the directive of the Chairman of the State Administration Council to “prioritize the reconstruction of public buildings”, the Union Minister for Construction and officials viewed the repairing work of damaged roofs of the hospital and fulfilled the needs. Then, the Union minister and his party inspected the hospital’s water supply provided by the Ministry of Cooperatives and Rural Development.

The Sittway General Hospital, under the guidance of the National Disaster Management Committee, had made preparations before the storm and so it has been able to provide medical services round the clock at the time of the storm and after it.

In addition, the Ministry of Health carried out the work of chlorinating drinking water in wells and ponds in wards and villages in Sittway township yesterday and gave instructions to do the same in the other townships in Rakhine State to prevent the outbreak of diarrhoeal disease.

In addition, the Ministry of Health is coordinating with the Ministry of Construction to reconstruct the damaged hospital buildings in Rathedaung township. A medical team from the Myanmar Army Medical Corps (MAMC) left for Rathedaung township yesterday to reinforce health care activities there.

The Ministry of Health reportedly provided purified water, medications and chlorine to the villages in Maungdaw township, opened the clinics in Thetkaepyin village in Sittway township and coordinated with the Ministry of Construction to reconstruct the storm-hit station hospital as soon as possible. — MNA/MKKS

The GAP ensures food safety, and the GAP growers can get more market access, locally and internationally, according to the Agriculture Department.

In addition to food safety, GAP also ensures worker safety, health and welfare, and conservation of the environment.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation has encouraged farmers to use its GAP protocol in a bid to boost productivity, profitability, market access, and competitiveness in the agricultural sector. The Agriculture Department raised awareness of GAP among growers by providing courses. The GAP protocol and guidelines include the most consumed and major export items — mango, pomelo, honeydew, watermelon, avocado, chilli, tomato, onion, cabbage, corn, sesame, various beans, rice, and coffee.

Low output of betel farms drives leaf price up

THE decrease in the yield of betel leaf caused by the consequences of Cyclone Mocha and other negative reasons pushed up the price, the brokers pointed out.

The price of betel leaf at the farm is estimated at K16,000 per viss. Yet, it surged to K35,000-40,000 per viss in the retail market following the low production.

The price of betel leaf at the farm is estimated at K16,000 per viss. Yet, it surged to K35,000-40,000 per viss in the retail market following the low production. The picture shows a betel farm.

“The betel leaf price usually declines this time every year. The price is rocketing this year”, said a farm owner.

The erratic weather wreaked havoc on the betel farms. Also, pests destroyed farms, resulting in yellowing, curling and crinkling in leaves. The yield dropped due to the pest invasion, strong wind, flooding and decreasing number of farmers, the agriculturalists emphasized.

The price went up when the demand surpassed the supply.

The betel leaf fetched a high of K9,500-10,000 per viss in mid-June 2022. The low supply is a fundamental cause of the price increase. The betel farmers were bitterly battered by the torrential rain, said U Win Naing, a farmer.

Peanut prices head for three-week high on strong demand

THE upward trend of peanut prices persists following a strong foreign and domestic demand, according to the Mandalay Commodity Wholesale Centre.

On 1 May 2023, the prices stood at K6,000-7,700 per viss then. The prices moved up to K6,450 -8,400 per viss on 17

May, showing a sharp increase of K100-900 per viss over two weeks.

Both Chinese traders and local oil millers have been increasingly purchasing them in the market.

The lack of foreign demand and weak demand by local millers pushed down the prices to K4,700-5,750 per viss in the last week of November 2022.

Myanmar has been shipping oil seeds (sesame seeds and peanuts) to foreign countries. Last April 2022, the world’s top palm oil exporter Indonesia, which is one of the main oil suppliers to Myanmar, declared an export ban on cooking oil export to reduce the domestic shortage. Consequently, Myanmar’s Trade Department under the Ministry of Commerce temporarily suspended exports of oil crops (peanut and sesame) from 9 May to have oil self-sufficiency.

Exports of Myanmar’s edible oil crops resumed as the world’s top palm oil exporters returned to normalcy, according to a notification dated 5 July 2022 released by the Trade Department.

The country shipped more than 32,000 kilogrammes worth US$40.16 million to foreign markets through the border trade channels so far in the last financial year 2022-2023. — NN/EM

Coronation tiara crowns Geneva jewels auction

A dazzling tiara worn at two British coronations and the Star of Egypt diamond purportedly once belonging to King Farouk are among the historic jewellery items being auctioned Wednesday by Christie's in Geneva. The glittering pieces are going under the hammer in the auction house's Magnificent Jewels sale in the Swiss city. The sale also features the largest private collection of JAR jewellery ever to come to auction, spanning 40 years of the work of Paris-based creator Joel Arthur Rosenthal. Less than a fortnight after the coronation of Britain's King Charles III comes the sale of the Bessborough Diamond Tiara, which was worn at the coronations of his grandfather King George VI in 1937 and mother Queen Elizabeth II in 1953. Vere Ponsonby, the ninth earl of Bessborough, commissioned the Parisian jeweller Chaumet to craft a tiara for his wife to mark his appointment as Canada's governor-general in 1931. The Art Deco tiara, made with platinum and weighing 136.5 grammes, has an intricate floral design. "This is as iconic as it gets in terms of the style. The workmanship is unbelievable," said Max Fawcett, head of the jewellery department at Christie's in Geneva. — AFP

China to cut gasoline, diesel retail prices

CHINA will cut the retail prices of gasoline and diesel from Wednesday, based on the recent changes in international oil prices, the country's top economic planner said on Tuesday. Gasoline and diesel prices will be reduced by 380 yuan (about 54.67 US dollars) per tonne and 365 yuan per tonne, respectively, according to the National Development and Reform Commission. Under the current pricing mechanism, the prices of refined oil products are adjusted following changes in international crude oil prices. China's three biggest oil companies — the China National Petroleum Corporation, the China Petrochemical Corporation and the China National Offshore Oil Corporation — and oil refineries have been directed to maintain oil production and facilitate transportation to ensure stable supplies, the commission said.— Xinhua

Siemens profit triples on orders boost

GERMAN industrial conglomerate Siemens raised its outlook for 2023 on Wednesday after second-quarter profits nearly tripled on higher orders. Demand was especially strong at the group's smart infrastructure and mobility units, helped by easing global supply chain bottlenecks. Siemens, which runs its financial year from October to September, said it had won a record 2.9-billion-euro contract in the second quarter to deliver 1,200 electric locomotives for Indian Railways. CEO Roland Busch praised the group's "outstanding performance" over the quarter, which saw "all-time highs in profit for digital industries and smart infrastructure, as well as another record in order backlog". The company lifted its full-year outlook for 2023, saying it now expected revenues to grow by nine to 11 per cent, up from a previous target of seven to 10 per cent.— AFP

Ubisoft reports loss after games delayed

UBISOFT said Tuesday it plunged into a net loss in the 2022-2023 fiscal year as a number of highly anticipated video game titles were delayed. But the French firm said it expected to turn its net loss of 494 million euros ($537 million) into an operating profit on the order of 400 million euros in the current financial year, which ends next March. The loss was due in large part to delays in the release of titles like Mirage, the latest in the blockbuster Assassin's Creed franchise, as well as Avatar: Frontiers of Pandora. The company confirmed the cost-cutting plan it announced in January, which consists of reducing staff levels and shedding some assets.—AFP

Japan ramps up G7 security after PM attacks

SECURITY is tight at every G7 summit, but this year's host Japan has more to prove than most, after an attack last month on the prime minister and the 2022 assassination of ex-premier Shinzo Abe.

Some 24,000 security personnel are reportedly being deployed to Hiroshima during the summit, most dispatched from other parts of the country.

Well ahead of the 19-21 May talks, patrolling police have been weaving between tour groups in the western city's famed Peace Park.

Security personnel were also motoring up and down the river that runs alongside sites like the Atomic Bomb Dome, with helicopters regularly buzzing overhead.

The measures have extended far beyond the city, including to the capital Tokyo, where messages on the train system warn of heightened security for the summit.

Major cities in Japan do not generally have rubbish bins in public places, but security personnel have been sealing off other places considered to pose a potential threat.

Coin lockers, which are common in many stations, have been put out of operation at major stations as far afield as Tokyo.

Vending machines on subway platforms have also been unplugged and sealed with tape, along with apologetic signs warning they will be unavailable during the summit for security reasons.

In Hiroshima, signs across the city and in hotels remind locals and tourists alike that the summit will cause disruption, including the closure of streets and access to the island of Miyajima, which leaders are expected to visit.—AFP

Türkiye's opposition plots fightback against Erdogan

Opposition leader Kemal Kilicdaroglu intends to run a more hard-edged campaign ahead of the second round. PHOTO: AFP

TÜRKIYE'S opposition tried on Wednesday to recover from a crushingly disappointing election performance and launch a new attack aimed at beating President Recep Tayyip Erdogan in a 28 May runoff.

Secular leader Kemal Kilicdaroglu huddled with the other five heads of his alliance on Wednesday to plot a hard-edged strategy for ending Erdogan's two-decade domination of Türkiye.

Media reports said he had fired his PR team and planned to tap Istanbul mayor Ekrem Imamoglu — a feisty figure with a history of bad blood with Erdogan — to spearhead his campaign.

The reported promotion of Imamoglu and the mayor's lauded strategist Canan Kaftancioglu marks a reversal for Türkiye's grandfatherly opposition leader.

The 74-year-old former civil servant tried to run an inclusive campaign that addressed voters in chatty clips recorded from his kitchen and ignored Erdogan's personal barbs.

That approach worked — up to a point.

The opposition deprived Erdogan of a first-round victory for the first time and collected more votes than in any point of his rule.—AFP

European leaders sign war register for Ukraine

EUROPEAN leaders on Wednesday hailed a new "register of damage" for Ukraine they signed on to as "historic" and a first step to making Russia pay for its war.

The instrument, created by the 46-nation Council of Europe, sets up an evidentiary record ahead of a possible future prosecution of Russian leaders, thus laying the groundwork for compensation.

It was a "first, necessary, urgent step" ensuring "justice that is centred on the victims" of the war, said council head Marija Pejcinovic Buric on arrival at the second day of the summit in Iceland.

She said that by early Wednesday 40 countries had signed onto the creation of the register, including the United States and all other G7 nations.—AFP

New Zealand police say arson suspected in deadly hostel fire

AN arsonist may have ignited the hostel blaze that killed at least six people in New Zealand's capital, police said on Wednesday, as they opened a homicide investigation.

Smoke and flames engulfed the 92-room, four-storey Loafers Lodge in Wellington in the early hours of Tuesday, sending residents fleeing for their lives. Some survivors crawled through smoke to safety, while others were rescued from the rooftop by firefighters using ladder trucks. Those who died still lie in the charred building. "I can confirm that we are treating the fire as arson," police inspector and acting district commander Dion Bennett told reporters, declining to give the full reasons.—AFP

Canada’s Trudeau wants to be ‘best of friends’ with South Korea

CANADA must become the “best of friends” with South Korea, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau told lawmakers in Seoul on Wednesday, as the two countries seek to counter China’s growing regional influence. Trudeau is on his first official visit to South Korea, where he will meet President Yoon Suk Yeol. “I’m here to tell you that it’s no longer enough to be friends. We need to be the best of friends,” Trudeau said during a speech to Seoul’s National Assembly. He told lawmakers that unity was needed as the world was facing a moment of unprecedented uncertainty, with lingering consequences from the Covid-19 pandemic, rising living costs, and the “real and terrifying” effects of climate change and war. Trudeau and Yoon are expected to discuss ways to deepen cooperation on supply chains, especially for critical minerals used in electric vehicle batteries, which Canada has reserves of and which are needed by South Korea’s car manufacturers. Canadian media outlets also reported on possible meetings between Trudeau and top executives from South Korean battery maker LG Energy Solution. The company and its partner, auto manufacturer Stellantis, halted construction work this week on a massive EV battery plant in Canada, saying Trudeau’s government “has not delivered on what was agreed to”.—AFP

Ecuador president insists ‘total’ innocence as impeachment trial opens

ECUADOR’S President Guillermo Lasso declared his “total, evident and unquestionable innocence” as his impeachment trial over corruption allegations began in parliament on Tuesday. Australia PM says Quad leaders hope to meet in Hiroshima

AUSTRALIAN Prime Minister Anthony Albanese said on 17 May a planned Quad summit will not go ahead in Sydney next week and that he instead hopes to meet the leaders from Japan, the United States and India in Hiroshima while there for a Group of Seven summit later this week. The change came after US President Joe Biden cancelled his stop in Australia, citing the need to return to Washington to negotiate with Congress over a looming debt ceiling deadline. After speaking to Biden over the phone earlier in the day, Albanese said he will cancel the Quad summit, slated for 24 May, and that he, Biden, Japanese Prime Minister Fumio Kishida and Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi will instead seek to hold talks on the sidelines of the G-7 meeting. As the Biden administration has decided to shorten the Asia-Pacific itinerary, including canceling a stop in Papua New Guinea, the president will only visit the western Japan city for the G-7 summit from Friday, the White House said Tuesday. “All four leaders -- President Biden, Prime Minister Kishida, Prime Minister Modi and myself -- will be at the G-7 held in Hiroshima,” Albanese told reporters in Tweed Heads, New South Wales, according to the prime minister’s office. “We are attempting to get together over that period of time.”— Kyodo

French court upholds Sarkozy’s jail term in wiretap graft case

A French appeals court on Wednesday upheld a prison sentence of three years, including two suspended, against former president Nicolas Sarkozy for corruption and influence peddling. The court ruled he should serve a one-year detention sentence at home with an electronic bracelet and banned him from public office for three years over his attempts to secure favours from a judge in a case uncovered by wiretapping. Sarkozy is France’s first postwar president to have been sentenced to jail. The 68-year-old left the courtroom without making any comment, but his lawyer said they would appeal before the Court of Cassation, France’s highest appeals court. “Sarkozy is innocent... We will not give up this fight,” said lawyer Jacqueline Laffont. Sarkozy, who served one term from 2007 to 2012, has been embroiled in legal troubles ever since leaving office. In March 2021, a court found he and his former lawyer, Thierry Herzog, had formed a “corruption pact” with judge Gilbert Azibert to obtain and share information about a legal investigation. The trial came after investigators wiretapped Sarkozy’s two official phone lines, and discovered that he also had a third unofficial one taken out in 2014 under the name “Paul Bismuth”, through which he communicated with Herzog. The contents of these phone calls led to the 2021 corruption verdict. The former leader contested the accusations and immediately appealed. — AFP
