Pigeon pea price hits new record of above K2 mln per tonne amid high foreign demands

There is a strong market share of black grams and pigeons pea in India. Most of the growers also select them as main crops. The aerial picture shows container vessels loading and discharging export and import cargoes at Yangon Port.

THE price of pigeon peas hit a fresh new peak of K2.6875 million per tonne, according to the Bayintnaung Wholesale Commodity Centre.

The price of pulses stood at K2,687,500 per tonne of pigeon peas and K2.275 million per tonne of black grams on 22 May.

The demand from foreign buyers pushed up the prices.

The neighbouring India forecast Myanmar's black gram output was estimated at 650,000 tonnes. This year, the yield rate dropped by half owing to a reduction in sowing acres and threats of invasive pests. Meanwhile, India's demand for pulses also grew significantly.

As a result of this, Myanmar Pulses, Beans and Sesame Seeds Merchants Association notified on 12 May that growers should primarily cultivate black grams and pigeon peas during this year's pulses season.

There is a strong market share of black grams and pigeon peas in India. Most of the growers also select them as main crops.

India notified that the free import policy of black grams (urad) and pigeon peas (tur) extended up to 31 March 2024, bringing more benefits to the stockholders in the supply chain including growers and exporters.

Therefore, they should be selected as the main crops this year, the association mentioned.

Myanmar bagged over US$1.4 billion from over 1.9 million tonnes of various pulses exported in the past financial year 2022-2023, the Ministry of Commerce's statistics indicated.

Myanmar primarily exports black grams, green grams and pigeon peas to foreign markets. Of them, black grams and pigeon peas are mostly conveyed to India while the green gram is shipped to China and Europe.

India has growing demand and consumption requirements for black grams and pigeon peas. According to a Memorandum of Understanding between Myanmar and India signed on 18 June 2021, India will import 250,000 tonnes of black grams and 100,000 tonnes of pigeon peas (tur) from Myanmar for five consecutive years from 2021-2022 financial year to 2025-2026 FY. This G-to-G pact will not affect the pulses' annual quota set by India. Myanmar's exporters are also entitled to deliver the pulses to India under that annual quota.

Myanmar yearly produces approximately 400,000 tonnes of black grams and about 50,000 tonnes of pigeon peas.

Black grams that India primarily purchases is commonly found only in Myanmar, whereas pigeon peas, green grams and chickpeas are grown in African countries and Australia, said the Myanmar Pulses, Beans, Maize and Sesame Seeds Merchants Association stated. — NN/EM

Manage mitigation of disaster impacts for better lives of people

NATURAL disasters terribly hamper duties and obligations that human society must do, leaving casualties of human beings and losses and damage to the property of the people, their businesses and environmental situations.

Any natural disaster leaves losses and damage in society because living beings including human beings do not have the capacity to defiance against natural disasters yet. Naturally, human beings are very weak in comparison with the impacts of any natural disasters. Hence, human beings are affordable to minimize losses and damage in the outbreak of natural disasters.

That is why human beings try hard to prevent natural disasters under proper management so as to ensure disaster risk reduction with preparedness, and responses including rescue and relief measures, rehabilitation, reconstruction and resettlement for the natural disaster-hit people.

In responding to natural disasters, it is necessary to resume healthcare services, electrification, supply of drinking water, clearing of debris and sanitation of waste, transport and communications halted in impacts of natural disasters. Only when these essential services cannot be resumed in time will the impacts of natural disasters worsen the health, social and economic networks of the people from the disaster-prone areas.

Practically, these natural disasters can bear terribly long-term impacts on society even though immediate losses and damage have lessened. It is very noticeable for all responsible persons in managing the response programmes to natural disasters. The disaster management measures must be better and better in defying the disasters under complete programmes with the attraction to well-wishers and voluntary bodies.

Whenever natural disasters hit any country or any region, various countries especially neighbouring countries and wealthy countries give a helping hand to the disaster-hit countries regardless of powerful or small ones with humanitarian aid. It is a lovely spirit of global countries. At that time, they did not hold up discrimination and hate speech. Even though they are facing crises, they do not delay making donations for the victims. Although they are different from religions, they have genuine white souls for making sacrifices for all.

Natural disaster management cannot ignore the united strength of the people. Such strength of the people is very reliable in remedying the sufferings of the people triggered by the impacts of natural disasters. Utilizing public participation, all the governments need to manage better lives of disaster-affected people to be able to reunite with society. As such, everybody needs not forget a Myanmar saying which goes: Unity is strength.

Patience, Empathy and Care

By Yin Nwe Ko

dition studies have also recognized the impact empathy has on improving health outcomes and its significance in patient care.

Empathy is defined as, “The ability to understand and share the feelings of another.” It is the capacity to put one’s self in another’s shoes and feel what that person is going through and share their emotions and feelings. It is the recognition and validation of a patient’s fear, anxiety, pain, and worry. It is the ability to understand patients’ feelings and facilitate a more accurate diagnosis and more caring treatment. Expressing patient empathy indeed advances humanism in healthcare – as a matter of fact — expressing empathy in healthcare is THE KEY INGREDIENT to enhancing the patient experience and patient encounter.

Both empathy and compassion in healthcare play vital roles in the patient experience and are key components of the physician-patient relationship. When a patient arrives to see their healthcare provider, the patient’s medical condition — whether it is a severe illness or injury, a chronic condition, or simply a routine check-up – will often manifest emotions such as anxiety, fear, and apprehension. Patients want to know they are receiving the very best care, and that is conveyed when their care team is empathetic and compassionate.

Empathy extends far beyond a patient’s medical history, signs, and symptoms. It is more than a clinical diagnosis and treatment. Empathy encompasses a connection and an understanding that includes the mind, body, and soul. Expressing empathy is highly effective and powerful, which builds patient trust, calms anxiety, and improves health outcomes. Research has shown empathy and compassion to be associated with better adherence to medications, decreased malpractice cases, fewer mistakes, and increased patient satisfaction. Expressing empathy, one patient at a time advances humanism in healthcare.

When I first watched the video (The link is below the article), I was reminded, and blown-away, by the notion that the smallest expressions of empathy make huge lasting impressions. Check out the Cleveland Clinic’s, Delos “Toby” Cosgrove, MD, President and CEO, as he and his team demonstrate some special moments that exemplify the power of empathy in healthcare. The video has become a viral sensation, with 4,437,714 views on YouTube, as of this writing. It may be viewed via the link below this article: -

In addition, have you ever sat in a hospital bed and had the assembled doctors talk about you as though you didn’t exist? Or a doctor comes up to your bed, looks at your chart, and walks off without saying a word? Or the GP never looks up from their computer screen when they talk to you? If so, then you’re not alone. Research into patients’ opinions of healthcare has shown that this is all too common, with around a quarter of patients reporting these kinds of experiences. This behaviour makes patients feel belittled and unvalued and is important because it gets to the very root of how patients evaluate the quality of care that they receive.

While doctors like to focus on treatment outcomes, this is not how the general public tends to assess whether or not their doctor is any good. Research from around the world has consistently shown that it doesn’t matter which country you live in or how your healthcare is delivered, most patients evaluate their experiences on how polite and empathetic the doctor was, not on the actual quality of medicine practised.

My mum, for example, recently started losing her sight. Understandably she was very worried. She went for an urgent appointment with an eye specialist at her local NHS (National Health Service in the UK) hospital. When I telephoned her that evening to see how it went, she replied: “Oh yes, it was wonderful. They were all so lovely and kind.” Could she now see? No. Had they been able to treat it? No. In fact, the clinic was running late and she’d had to wait for an hour to see the nurse, and three hours to see the consultant.

Now, from a medical perspective, the consultation clearly hadn’t been a success. While they’d ruled out emergency causes for her sight loss, they hadn’t really gotten to the bottom of the problem at all. She was now back at home, still unable to see properly and with no idea if she was going to go permanently blind. But that didn’t matter. What mattered to her was that a nurse had met her at the door and helped her to her seat. Someone had apologized when the clinic was overrunning and made all the patients wait for a cup of tea.

One of the nurses offered to get my mum a sandwich when lunch came. The consultant touched her knee and listened to her as she explained what had happened. They’d asked about how the loss of sight had impacted her life and the clinic nurse had asked to see photographs of my new nephew. A junior doctor had understood that the thing my mum was most worried about was that, as an avid reader, she wouldn’t be able to read a book again. My mum had been touched by her kind attempts to reassure her. She felt she had received good care simply because the doctors and nurses had listened to her.

Equally, how many times, when asking how things went at the doctor’s, have you heard the reply, “Oh, it was awful, he was really rude.” Not, “Oh, it was awful, he prescribed the wrong medication, or gave me the wrong treatment.” Patients don’t evaluate the actual medicine that’s practised; it’s the communication skills of the doctor that determine how they evaluate the care. This is important because if doctors listened to their patients, then overnight people’s experience of the NHS would improve. That means we can improve the NHS without spending a single penny.

Although it is right money can create almost all things, no one can deny patience, and empathy of medical men are indispensable.

WHAT does it mean to advance humanism in healthcare? According to Arnold P Gold Foundation advancing humanism in healthcare is characterized as, “A respectful and compassionate relationship between physicians, members of the healthcare team, and their patients.” A recent article published on 26 January 2019, in Modern Healthcare talks about the importance of having all members of the healthcare team constantly educated regarding how to utilize patient-communication-best-practices to ensure the best outcomes. This title says it all, “Physician empathy a key driver of patient satisfaction”. This article points out that 65 per cent of patient satisfaction was attributed to physician empathy. Researchers find how liver cells control biological clock

Until today, it was considered that synchronization of the circadian cycle in mammals was a one-way process in which the suprachiasmatic nuclei alone synchronized the peripheral clocks.

TO control their activity according to the time of day, organisms rely on a biological clock known as the ‘circadian’ clock. A central clock, made up of a collection of brain cells known as suprachiasmatic nuclei (SCN), synchronises the circadian clocks found in all of the body’s organs, known as ‘peripheral’ clocks.

Until today, it was considered that synchronization of the circadian cycle in mammals was a one-way process in which the suprachiasmatic nuclei alone synchronized the peripheral clocks.

However, researchers from CNRS, Universite Paris Cite1, and the University of Queensland have recently demonstrated that the liver regulates peripheral clocks as part of a collaborative EU effort.

Teams tested a chimeric mouse model with a liver containing human hepatocytes and discovered that the normally nocturnal animals’ daily cycle had advanced by two hours.

The mice became active and began feeding two hours before nightfall, thus becoming partly diurnal. The researchers believe this shift comes from the mice’s central clock being taken over by the human liver cells in this chimeric animal model.

These cells can thus affect the entire rhythmic physiology of the animals, including the clocks of the peripheral organs.

Findings suggested that a change in liver clock — for example in pathological condition such as cirrhosis — could affect the synchronisation function of the central clock.

This in turn could affect the entire circadian physiology, including the sleep/wake cycle, and contribute to the development of metabolic disease.

It also suggests that restoring disrupted liver biological rhythm could benefit the entire body metabolism.

Organisms have a special clock inside their bodies that helps them know when to do certain activities. This clock is called the circadian clock and it is made up of brain cells called suprachiasmatic nuclei. These cells work together to tell the body’s organs when it’s time to do something. One enterprise listed from China put a foreign direct investment of $2 million in the manufacturing sector in April.

Myanmar attracted foreign direct investments of $1.64 billion from 87 enterprises last financial year 2022-2023 (April-March). The majority of the investments were brought into the manufacturing sector, drawing $271.8 million from 64 enterprises. The agriculture sector drew $3.5 million from two projects. sector respectively. The hotels and tourism sector attracted $2.8 million with two projects. The mining sector received $7 million from one project. Additionally, the livestock and fisheries sector attracted one enterprise with over $2 million in investments.

The manufacturing enterprises and businesses that need a large labour force are prioritized to create job opportunities for the local community. Manufacturing of fertilizer, cement, iron and steel, value-added foodstuff, electric vehicle and pharmaceutical and medical devices, agriculture and livestock farming and related industries and public transportation services will be prioritized for investment. The commission welcomes both foreign direct investment and domestic investments made by Myanmar citizens in those sectors. Myanmar Investment Commission and the related ministries will also ensure investment facilitation.

Myanmar’s manufacturing sector is largely concentrated in garment and textiles produced on the Cutting, Making, and Packaging basis, and it contributes to the country’s GDP to a certain extent.

There are active 541 factories operated under Myanmar Garment Manufacturers Association. The majority of them are from China, followed by Myanmar and the Republic of Korea.

Myanmar has drawn foreign direct investment of more than $647.127 million from 49 enterprises in the past mini-budget period (October 2021-March 2022). Of them, 40 foreign enterprises put investments in the manufacturing sector, pumping an estimated capital of $202.667 million. — KK

Declining palm oil wholesale reference price for Yangon Region persists

A vendor organizes the edible oil for sale at the grocery in Yangon.

THE wholesale reference rate of palm oil for the Yangon market for the week ending 28 May indicated a sharp drop of K255 per viss compared to that of the previous week, according to the Supervisory Committee on edible oil import and distribution.

The reference price was set at K4,420 per viss from 15 to 21 May. For the week ending 28 May, the price was set lower at K4,165 per viss.

The Supervisory Committee on Edible Oil Import and Distribution under the Ministry of Commerce has been closely observing the FOB prices in Malaysia and Indonesia including transport costs, tariffs and banking services, and issuing the wholesale market reference rate for edible oil every week.

Regardless of the reference price, the current market price is too high at over K6,000-7,000 per viss.

If those edible oil retailers and wholesalers are found overcharging, storing inventory intentionally and attempting unscrupulous action to manipulate the market, they will face legal action under the Essential Supplies and Service Act, MoC released a statement.

The Ministry of Commerce is striving for consumers not to worry over the supply of edible oil. The ministry is also trying to secure edible oil sufficiency, supervise the market to offer reasonable prices to consumers and maintain price stability.

At present, mobile market trucks operated by oil importing companies, in coordination with Myanmar Edible Oil Dealers’ Association, were back to business in some townships on 17 July 2022 to offer palm oil at a subsidized rate. They offer palm oil at a fairer price to the consumers directly depending on the reference price. However, there are limited sources of supply although they directly sell the palm oil at reference rate depending on the volume quota.

The domestic consumption of edible oil is estimated at one million tonnes per year. The local cooking oil production is just about 400,000 tonnes. To meet the oil sufficiency in the domestic market, about 700,000 tonnes of cooking oil are yearly imported through Malaysia and Indonesia. — NN/EMM

Honda to supply Aston Martin engines from 2026

HIGH-FLYING Aston Martin will be powered by Honda engines from 2026 in what the Formula One team says is “the last piece of the jigsaw”.

This represents a return to F1 for Honda, who left in 2021 but retain links with Red Bull and AlphaTauri.

The tie up, announced on Wednesday, comes in the run-up to this weekend’s Monaco Grand Prix with Aston Martin a surprise second to world champions Red Bull in the constructors’ standings.

That lofty position is in no small part down to Fernando Alonso, the two-time former champion who has made the podium in four of this season’s five races as he revels in his switch from Alpine.

Hailing the Honda link-up, Martin Whitmarsh, Group CEO of Aston Martin Performance Technologies, said: “Our future works partnership with Honda is one of the last parts of the jigsaw puzzle slotting into place for Aston Martin’s ambitious plans in Formula

One.”
Aston will continue to be powered by Mercedes power units until 2026 when there is a sizeable shift in F1’s technical landscape.

“One of the key reasons for our decision to take up the new challenge in F1 is that the world’s pinnacle form of racing is striving to become a sustainable racing series, which is in line with the direction Honda is aiming towards carbon neutrality,” said Honda CEO Toshihiro Mibe. — AFP

Lawsuits pile up over Credit Suisse bonds write-down

SWITZERLAND’S justice authorities said Tuesday that 230 complaints had been filed over a decision by financial regulators to cut the value of high-risk Credit Suisse bonds to zero, to facilitate the stricken bank’s takeover by UBS.

Switzerland’s biggest bank bought out its rival for $3.25 billion on 19 March, under strong pressure from the regulators FINMA, the government and the central bank, to prevent Credit Suisse from collapsing.

FINMA required that 16 billion Swiss francs ($17.9 billion) of so-called additional tier 1 (AT1) bonds be rendered worthless in the mega-merger.

The order infuriated bondholders, who are typically better protected than shareholders.

Investors challenged the decision. “The Federal Administrative Court has received approximately 230 appeals, involving roughly 2,500 appellants, against FINMA’s ruling of 19 March 2023, regarding the write-down of the AT1 instruments,” the court said in a statement.—AFP

S Korean experts begin 2-day inspection of Fukushima nuclear plant

SOUTH Korean experts began a two-day inspection of the disaster-hit Fukushima nuclear power complex Tuesday in connection with Japan’s plan to discharge into the sea treated water from the plant containing low concentrations of radioactive substances.

The 21 experts in fields such as radiation and nuclear reactors intend to share the outcome of their inspection with the South Korean public amid concern about the potential impact of the discharge on the ocean environment.

On the first day of the inspection, the delegation observed an advanced liquid processing system set up at the crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant and confirmed its function – how it removes radionuclides other than tritium.

The experts also inspected facilities to measure concentrations of tritium, water tanks and the control room, among others, according to delegation chief Yoo Guk Hee, chairman of the Nuclear Safety and Security Commission.— Kyodo

China’s Xi offers Russia ‘firm support’ in ‘core interests’

CHINESE President Xi Jinping offered Beijing’s support on Moscow’s “core interests” at a meeting with Russian Prime Minister Mikhail Mishustin on 24 May.

China and Russia have in recent years ramped up economic and diplomatic cooperation, growing even closer since Moscow’s invasion of Ukraine despite Beijing’s insistence that it is neutral in that conflict.

Mishustin’s trip this week is the highest-level visit by a Russian official to China since last year’s invasion of Ukraine. Xi told Mishustin China and Russia would continue to offer each other “firm support on issues concerning each other’s core interests and strengthen collaboration in multilateral arenas,” according to a readout by the official Xinhua news agency. China and Russia should “push cooperation in various fields to a higher level,” he said, and “raise the level of economic, trade and investment cooperation.” Mishustin also met with Premier Li Qiang on 24 May, saying that “relations between Russia and China are at an unprecedented high level” following a grand welcoming ceremony outside Beijing’s Great Hall of the People.— AFP

India PM says ‘separatists’ must not harm Australia ties

PRIME Minister Narendra Modi warned Wednesday that “separatist elements” should not be allowed to hurt India-Australia relations, after he was lavished with a rockstar welcome in Sydney.

Lured by the world’s most populous market and the promise of a counterweight to a rising China, Australia has batted away questions about India’s treatment of opponents and minorities, suggesting they are domestic issues.

Modi appeared to have no such qualms.

The Indian leader hit out at recent “attacks” on Hindu temples in Australia — vandalism allegedly committed by Sikh separatists — after his summit with Prime Minister Anthony Albanese at Admiralty House on Sydney Harbour.

“We will not accept any elements that harm the friendly and warm ties between India and Australia by their actions or thoughts,” Modi told reporters, saying the pair had discussed “activities of separatist elements” in the past.

“Prime Minister Albanese has once again assured me today that he will take strict actions against such elements in the future,” Modi said according to an official translator.— AFP

Denmark joins EU military cooperation as it drops historic opt-out

IN a historic milestone, Denmark has ended its 30-year-long opt-out on EU’s military collaboration and joined the Permanent Structured Cooperation programme, also known as PESCO. This is a result of a referendum held in June 2022, in which Danes voted in favour of joining the EU’s common security and defence policy and contributing to the bloc’s military missions and operations. To complete this shift, Denmark also joined the European Defence Agency. According to Denmark’s acting Defence Minister Troels Lund Poulsen, with this move, Denmark has become a full member of the EU’s joint defence policy. “Now we have cleared all obstacles from the table in relation to being able to cooperate on the EU’s defence dimension. So it’s a really good day for Denmark,” Poulsen told local media.— SPUTNIK

Sri Lanka navy finds 14 bodies in capsized Chinese boat

SRI Lanka’s navy said Wednesday it had located 14 bodies inside a Chinese fishing boat that had capsized last week with 39 crew on board.

The discovery came a day after a preliminary Chinese government probe concluded there were no survivors.

The Lu Peng Yuan Yu 028 overturned on 16 May, with 17 Chinese, 17 Indonesians and five Filipinos on board within Australia’s vast search-and-rescue region, 5,000 kilometres (2,700 nautical miles) west of Perth.

The Sri Lankan navy said its divers had recovered two bodies and spotted 12 more on Tuesday, releasing photos showing the upturned red hull of the vessel and bodies being hauled out of the water.

“Due to decomposition and the potential health hazards posed by operating in contaminated waters with limited protective gear, it was determined that retrieving those bodies would be exceedingly dangerous,” the navy said in a statement.— AFP

South Korea to launch homegrown rocket for third test

SOUTH Korea was set to launch its homegrown Nuri rocket Wednesday and try to put a working satellite into orbit — potentially a key development for the country’s burgeoning space programme.

This is the third launch of Nuri, following a failed first attempt and a successful second mission last year, but during those tests the rocket carried payloads mainly designed for verifying the performance of the launch vehicle.

This time, the rocket will be topped with eight working satellites, including an actual “commercial-grade satellite”, according to the country’s science ministry.

The three-stage rocket, more than 47 metres (155 feet) long and weighing 200 tonnes, will be launched from the Naro Space Centre in the country’s southern coastal region at 18:24 local time (0924 GMT).

Nuri was transferred and erected at the launch pad on 23 May.

“The third launch is aimed at putting a domestically developed satellite with observation missions into the target orbit,” Ko Jeong-hwan, director of the Nuri rocket project at the Korea Aerospace Research Institute (KARI), told reporters.

The 179.9-kilogramme NEXTSat 2, developed by the Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (KAIST), is the first and main payload that will be placed in orbit at an altitude of 550 kilometres, KARI said.— AFP

Greek president taps judge to lead interim government

A senior Greek judge, Ioannis Sarmas, will be formally asked Wednesday to lead an interim government tasked with organizing a second national election by late June, the presidency announced.

Outgoing Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis has called for a fresh election as early as 25 June after securing his party’s biggest electoral triumph in years, but five seats short of being able to produce a single-party government. The announcement about Sarmas, 66, comes three days after Mitsotakis’s conservative New Democracy party secured a 20-point lead over its nearest contender, Syriza, led by leftist Alexis Tsipras, at national elections on Sunday.

It was the Greek conservatives’ best result since 2007, crediting the party with bringing economic stability back to a nation once known as an EU laggard. Mitsotakis, 55, on Monday told Sakellaropoulou that he could not form a coalition and called for elections “possibly on June 25”. — AFP

Drone attacks overnight in Russian border region: governor

A Russian official in the southern Belgorod region bordering Ukraine said Wednesday that the territory was targeted by numerous drones overnight, following an armed incursion into the territory from Ukraine.

“The night was not entirely calm. There were a large number of drone attacks. Air defence systems handled most of them,” governor Vyacheslav Gladkov said in a post on social media.

“The most important thing is that there are no casualties,” he added.

The statement came a day after Moscow announced it had deployed jets and artillery to destroy the armed group that penetrated its border from Ukraine and the Kremlin ordered its military to prevent any repeat attack.

Members of two anti-Kremlin groups, the Freedom of Russia Legion and the Russian Volunteer Corps, claimed responsibility while Kyiv denied official Ukrainian involvement.

The border region of Belgorod has been targeted by attacks since the beginning of Russia’s invasion of Ukraine but the days-long skirmish was the most significant since Russian began large-scale hostilities in Ukraine last year.

Gladkov said the drone barrage overnight had damaged several private homes, offices and vehicles but that the full extent of the damage was still being assessed.—AFP

Court rejects case opposing restart of Miyagi Pref nuclear plant

A Japanese court on 24 May rejected local residents’ calls to halt the restart of a nuclear reactor in northeastern Japan, ruling their concerns about flaws in emergency evacuation plans are not relevant as it cannot be assumed a serious accident is likely.

The Sendai District Court ruling came as Tohoku Electric Power Co aims to resume operations at the No 2 unit of the Onagawa plant in Miyagi Prefecture in February 2024, becoming the first in the area hit by the 2011 earthquake and tsunami to restart.

“It cannot be assumed that a specific danger of an accident exists that leads to the abnormal release of radioactive materials,” said Presiding Judge Mitsuhiro Saito.

Given the uncertainty over the potential danger, the judge also said there is no need to take into account whether the evacuation plans are effective when handing down his decision.

The lawsuit was filed by 17 residents of the city of Ishinomaki. The plaintiffs argued the evacuation plans prepared by the city and prefectural governments are insufficient.

If an evacuation order is issued following a nuclear accident, residents will be unable to escape a 30-kilometre radius of the plant for an extended period due to traffic congestion, posing a high risk of radiation exposure, they argued.—Kyodo

Eze the new face in England squad as Sterling misses out

CRYSTAL Palace's Eberechi Eze received his first call-up to the England squad on Wednesday as Raheem Sterling was omitted for Euro 2024 qualifiers against Malta and North Macedonia.

Brighton captain Lewis Dunk is rewarded for his fine season with a first call-up for four-and-a-half years.

Sterling, who has won 82 caps, has endured a difficult first season since joining Chelsea from Manchester City.

A representative for the forward said his absence was part of a mutual decision to allow him to focus on "recuperating his body in preparation for the upcoming season".

England are well on course to qualify for Euro 2024 in Germany after beating Italy and Ukraine in their opening Group C fixtures.

Gareth Southgate's men travel to Malta on June 16 before hosting North Macedonia at Old Trafford three days later.

Eze's performances have caught the eye, with six goals in eight games under Roy Hodgson, who returned to Selhurst Park as coach in March.

'Good' first season at Man Utd not enough for Ten Hag

ERIK ten Hag said Manchester United must strive for more even though his team look set to clinch a place in next season's Champions League. United need just one point from their final two Premier League games against Chelsea and Fulham to secure a top-four finish after a season out of Europe's elite club competition. Ten Hag also ended the club's six-year wait for a trophy in his first season in charge by lifting the League Cup in February.

The Dutchman could even end his debut campaign in England with two trophies as United face local rivals Manchester City in the FA Cup final.

But Ten Hag insisted the Red Devils' targets must be even higher next season as they seek to rekindle former glories.

"We are in a project, we want to go back and win trophies," Ten Hag said at his pre-match press conference ahead of Chelsea's visit to Old Trafford on Thursday. "We win one trophy but we want more trophies, (to) compete with the best. We are still in a journey, we think we are in the right direction but it can always be better because good is not good enough."
