OPINION

Honour innovators and creators by protecting their works

INNOVATION and creation are essential for society as they decorate society with new and magnificent works. In fact, society is beautiful due to innovative and creative works. Such a couple of works have been changing and upgrading society year by year. Hence, everybody in society needs to honour those from innovative and creative arenas.

Innovation and creation contribute to the improvement of the society and convenience of the people. As such, everybody needs to understand the important role of copyright in innovation and creation. Currently, the role of copyright is crucial for foreign trade, investment, trade promotion, and science and technological cooperation to earn incomes for relevant governments as well as to improve relevant sectors.

Today's majority of global countries are exercising the protection of copyright as an economic tool to improve the socioeconomic life of the countries and to constantly promote trade and investment sectors. Only when the governments emphasize the role of copyright will the people including innovators and creators have the activeness to conduct more and more innovation and creations to improve the society and the people.

In Myanmar, Myanmar enacted copyright laws related to trademark, industrial design, creativity and innovation, and literary and artistic in 2019. Only when the country has economic, social, scientific and cultural sectors will the country develop. As such, Myanmar needs to firmly build a copyright protection system in order to constantly enhance trade and investment sectors.

The World Intellectual Property Organization-WIPO releases the Global Innovation Index-GII on a yearly basis. The index mentions Myanmar stands in 129th position in the innovation capacity in 2020, 127th position in 2021 and 116th position in 2022. Hence, the government is implementing the intellectual property rights system to effectively protect the works of innovators and creators. If so, the enhancement of innovative and creative capacity will directly benefit the development of the country.

Implementing an IP protection system will contribute much to booming the State economy, rising foreign investments and enhancing the process of manufacturing and businesses through the transfer of advanced technologies. Moreover, entrepreneurs, creators and businesspersons will have the chance to enjoy IP rights under the law.

As such, the government and the people are to firmly join hands in implementing the IP right system which can improve the economic, social, scientific and cultural sectors of the country as well as innovative and creative activities for shaping a better country in the future.

DURING my recent observation, I came across important information regarding the upcoming academic year, specifically the enrolment week scheduled from 23 to 31 May for the 2023-2024 academic year. It is a pivotal time as basic education schools are preparing to reopen in June, eagerly welcoming students for another year of learning. The government has introduced the KG+9 scheme, which focuses on middle school-level education, aiming to enhance the overall learning experience for all citizens. This initiative plays a significant role in both state-building and sustainable learning, as knowledge is not only empowering but also serves as the fundamental stepping stone for children and youth as they enter the knowledge society. As a popular saying in Myanmar goes, wisdom, bravery, and knowledge are intertwined, emphasizing the value of these qualities.

Undoubtedly, knowledge holds immense importance in life. It serves as a catalyst for personal growth and development, allowing individuals to overcome challenges and seize opportunities. Additionally, knowledge acts as a powerful tool in shaping a person's understanding of the world and equips them to make informed decisions.

Furthermore, I would like to highlight the MDG-2, which stands for achieving universal primary education. This ambitious goal was set at the turn of the century, aiming to ensure that every child, regardless of their gender, receives a comprehensive primary school education by 2015. The progress towards this crucial objective is measured by assessing various factors, including enrollment rates in primary education, completion rates of the educational process, and literacy levels among individuals aged 15 to 24. By striving towards universal primary education, we not only empower children with knowledge but also pave the way for poverty reduction and overall societal development.

In my recollection of the 2021-2022 academic year, the government had made arrangements for the enrolment of students in basic education. However, this period was marred by unfortunate incidents orchestrated by the followers of the NUG terrorist group. Primary schools became targets of their attacks, leading to the tragic loss of many teachers who dedicated their lives to education. This created a climate of fear and uncertainty among students, who were eager to learn but felt apprehensive about wearing their school uniforms.

I vividly remember an incident that occurred in my own neighbourhood. My daughter's school was just a short 10 to 15-minute walk from our house. To ensure her safety, we adopted the practice of carrying her school uniform separately and changing it at the school gate. This was a precautionary measure in response to the threats posed by the NUG terrorist group. Their despicable actions included issuing warnings to discourage school attendance and inflicting social punishments on those who dared to continue their education. It was truly disheartening to witness such a foolish and undignified reaction from the NUG's PDF.

Education is a fundamental right and an essential building block for the future of any nation. It is a source of empowerment and a pathway towards personal and societal development. The attempts made by the NUG terrorist group to disrupt the education system and instil fear among students are not only senseless but also a gross violation of basic human rights.

In the face of such adversity, it is crucial for communities, educators, and government authorities to unite in safeguarding the right to education. By standing strong against the attempts to undermine our educational institutions, we can demonstrate resilience and send a powerful message that we will not succumb to fear and intimidation.

Let us strive to create an environment where every child can pursue their education without fear, where teachers can impart knowledge without threat, and where future generations can flourish and contribute positively to society. Together, we can overcome these challenges and build a brighter and more inclusive educational landscape for all.

I completely share your frustration and concern when it comes to acts of violence targeting individuals who advocate for education, such as the heartbreaking incident involving Malala Yousafzai. Malala's story serves as a powerful reminder of the importance of education and the lengths some individuals will go to silence those who seek it. It is a stark reminder that we must continue to champion education as a fundamental human right and work tirelessly to ensure that every person, regardless of gender or background, has access to quality education in a safe and nurturing environment.

Similarly, in Myanmar, there have been reports of teachers being targeted by followers of the NUG in various regions, including North Okkalapa in Yangon, Tamu in Chin State, Ye in Mon State, Yedashe in Pegu Division, and others. These acts of violence bear similarities to the actions of extremist groups like the Islamic State (IS).

Education should be a fundamental right accessible to all individuals without fear or intimidation. It is through education that societies can progress, empower their citizens, and foster a better future. Acts of violence that hinder or discourage education are not only morally wrong but also impede the development of individuals and communities.

It is important for governments, communities, and international organizations to work together to ensure the safety and protection of educators, students, and educational institutions. By promoting a culture of peace, tolerance, and respect for education, we can create an environment where everyone has the opportunity to learn and grow.

Let us continue to stand against violence, extremism, and any attempts to undermine the importance of education. Together, we can strive for a world where education is valued, protected, and cherished as a vital tool for personal and societal advancement.

In conclusion, the enrolment week and the government's implementation of the KG+9 scheme reflect the significance of education in our society. It is through education that we equip our children and youth with the necessary tools to navigate the world, contribute to their communities, and build a better future for themselves and their nation. Education is the key that unlocks doors of opportunity and equips our children and youth with the necessary tools to navigate the complexities of the world they live in.

By enrolling children in schools and implementing educational programs like the KG+9 scheme, we are investing in their intellectual and personal growth. Education empowers individuals to become active participants in their communities, fostering a sense of responsibility and promoting positive social change. It provides them with knowledge, critical thinking skills, and the ability to make informed decisions, which are essential for personal and societal development.

Furthermore, education is the foundation upon which a nation's progress is built. By prioritizing education and ensuring that all children have access to quality schooling, we are investing in the future of our nation. Education not only enhances individual opportunities but also contributes to economic growth, social cohesion, and overall national prosperity.

By providing children and youth with quality education, we are empowering them to become active agents of positive change. They become equipped with the skills, knowledge, and values needed to address the challenges and opportunities of the future. Education cultivates responsible citizenship, empathy, and a sense of global interconnectedness, enabling individuals to contribute to a more inclusive and sustainable world.

In essence, education is the cornerstone of progress and a catalyst for personal and societal transformation. It empowers individuals to shape their own destinies, break free from the cycle of poverty, and build a brighter future for themselves and their nation. Let us continue to prioritize and invest in education, ensuring that every child has the opportunity to learn, grow, and contribute to a better world.

Travel industry looks to Chinese tourists to cap
post-Covid rebound

CHINESE tourists to destinations worldwide will top off a spectacular post-coronavirus global tourism revival this year, according to industry leaders. Jet makers, airline executives and hotel tycoons at this week's Qatar Economic Forum spoke of an apparently insatiable demand for travel. Chinese tourists, now unshackled from Covid-19 restrictions, will complete the boom, they said.

"The desire to travel has never been greater and the industry is struggling how to respond to that demand," said Boeing chairman David Calhoun as he told of the aviation giant's battle to meet demand for jets. Leisure travel has overtaken business as the main reason for taking a plane or booking a room, according to Sebastien Bazin, head of Accor, Europe's biggest hotel group. The northern hemisphere summer travel season is expected to send airline traffic back to levels last seen before the pandemic erupted in December 2019. Executives said China's free-spending tourists will play a key role in the revival, while putting new pressure on the travel industry.

Hotel group Accor has predicted that "millions" of Chinese could boost travel industry coffers in coming months.

Akbar Al-Baker, Qatar Airways' chief executive, said all of its planes leaving China are "absolutely packed". "Not only are they paying the fares that I am asking due to the lack of capacity available to them, but also the amount of money they spend in our duty free at (Doha) airport is more than any other nationality," he added.

William Ellwood Heinecke, the billionaire Thai-American owner of the Minor International hospitality group, said that in the first quarter of 2023 the number of Chinese tourists in Thailand was 85 per cent lower than in 2019. "I think we are definitely in rebound, but more importantly we haven't seen China come back yet," he said, predicting the boom would be completed in the second half.

'Strange position'
Tony Fernandes, a Malaysian tycoon whose conglomerate includes the AirAsia budget carrier, said he hoped to have all 250 planes in his fleet, which were grounded during Covid-19, running again by August.

THE second day of the Myanmar (Nay Pyi Taw)-China (Lancang) Trade Fair continued at the Myanmar International Convention

Centre-II in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday and the business people, departmental staff and people participated in the event.

A total of 65 enterprises from Myanmar participated in the trade fair with 79 booths and 70 Chinese enterprises participated in the exhibition, using about 40 booths, exhibiting domestic foodstuffs, fish paste, dried fish, beans and pulses, dry tea leaf, tea, coffee, garments, cosmetics, rattan and bamboo products, wooden sculptures, furniture and other souvenirs and jewellery items. The booths were crowded with visitors.

Regarding the signing of China-Myanmar bilateral trade cooperation, Dr Thet Lwin Oo, director of the Myanmar Trade Promotion Organization said, "We inked eight agreements with China for bilateral trade-nine Chinese companies and eight Myanmar companies. It is about the procurement of Myanmar's agricultural products by the China side. It also includes cooperation for other agricultural products like rice, maize and animal feed.

"It also signed the small-scale home use of electronic materials and spare parts. Under the trade fair, the traders of both countries signed after discussing the sections to be cooperated in. By signing it, it will carry out the trade promotion measures. We will resolve the difficulties of companies that signed agreements as much as we can. The Myanmar traders no need to introduce their products by going abroad and they should explore the chances to cooperate in the future by observing the invited enterprises locally".

U Khin Aung Thet, manager of Six Six Eight Co Ltd, which signed the China-Myanmar Trade Cooperation, said, "It is a wonderful case. We cannot sign such an agreement whenever we open stalls. It is such a special change. As a result, we will sell beans to China. The business is making profits. If our bean is sold out, and they get the products that they want, it will be a win-win situation. We don't know exactly what kind of bean they will buy. They are satisfied with our samples. The agreement makes income for the country and our company. As we are sellers, we have to find buyers. When the government launch such trade fairs, we no longer have to look for buyers. We want the government to hold such events frequently. We will also try to take part in."

The trade fair is a sign of the strength of the Pauk-Phaw friendship between Myanmar and China, bilateral trade and economic cooperation and sector-wise cooperation of regional people. The China side exhibited the products that are needed in Myanmar and the Myanmar side showcased potential products in the Chinese market.

The Myanmar (Nay Pyi Taw)-China (Lancang) Trade Fair will be organized from 25 to 28 May. Myanmar merchants can visit the event and discuss or exchange experiences with suitable companies. — Aye Aye Thant/KTZH

Putin: Nagorno-Karabakh situation developing towards conflict resolution

THE situation in Nagorno-Karabakh is developing towards conflict resolution, Russian President Vladimir Putin said on Thursday at a trilateral meeting with his Azerbaijani and Armenian counterparts.

“In general, in my opinion, despite any difficulties and problems, which are still enough, the situation is still developing towards a settlement. One of these areas is work on transport communications,” Putin said. The Russian president also stated that both Aliyev and Pashinyan agreed issues “can be resolved”. The trilateral meeting, which saw Putin hold earlier separate talks with the Azerbaijani and Armenian leaders, came to a close after about 20 minutes.

Not long after, Russian Deputy Prime Minister Alexei Overchuk detailed that the vice-premiers of Russia, Armenia and Azerbaijan will discuss the border crossing procedure during a meeting next week in Moscow.

The official added that the leaders will decide if they need to meet again after talks of deputy prime ministers.

The latest comes after the Armenian government revealed it was willing to recognize the disputed territory as Azerbaijani grounds if its neighbour guaranteed ethnic Armenians in the area have their rights and safety respected.—SPUTNIK

Norway setting up new radar chain dubbed ‘NATO’s Eyes in the north’

THE new network of eight radars across Norway is said to expand the range of its continuous surveillance, including on behalf of the NATO.

The Norwegian Defence Estates Agency (NDEA), a government body under the Defence Ministry, has presented construction plans for a radar chain designed to enhance Norway’s own radioelectronic capacity and, by extension, NATO’s.

The very first facility in the new chain commissioned by the parliament as part of a drastic upgrade of the country’s radar network will be built at Gyrihaugen in Ringerike municipality north of Oslo and by the fall of 2025, with work already underway.

The slopes of Gyrihaugen mountain, a popular tourist attraction, were closed this winter due to construction work.Overall, the armed forces are to invest NOK eight billion ($720 million) in the eight new radar systems spread across the country from Ringerike in the south to Vardo in the north and operated by the country’s air force.

Five of them will be established in new locations, while three existing radar stations will undergo a dramatic upgrade. — SPUTNIK

Teens hand themselves in after Sydney blaze

Two 13-year-olds have turned themselves over to police after a blaze gutted a seven-storey heritage building in central Sydney, officers said Friday.

Australian police said an arson investigation had been launched after Thursday’s fire at a vacant former hat factory, which spread to an adjacent building and forced mass evacuations before being extinguished. A group of young people were “seen running from the fire scene shortly after 4 pm”, assistant commissioner Paul Dunstan said. “Two young people handed themselves in at two separate police stations in the late hours of last night.”

“We are speaking with these young people throughout the evening and they are now assisting police with our inquiries,” he added, saying both were 13 years old.

He called on three or four other “young people who were present during the fire” to come forward with their parents to “put their side of the story forward”. Shortly after the blaze erupted, flames higher than the building and a thick column of smoke could be seen across Sydney. The entire top floor wall toppled and crashed into pieces on the street below, fire service video showed, as the building glowed orange with flames. — AFP

French police teargas protesters at oil giant’s meeting

THE annual general meeting of TotalEnergies opened on Friday in Paris after police teargassed climate activists, as the oil giant also faces pressure from the French government to speed up the switch to renewable energy.

The demonstration caps a series of tumultuous shareholder meetings at major corporations in Europe as activists step up pressure on companies to reduce their carbon footprints.

“We regret that we had to take exceptional measures both in calling in the police and in strictly controlling access to this assembly,” TotalEnergies chief executive Patrick Pouyanne told a few hundred attendees in a concert hall in the French capital.

French police earlier in the morning used tear gas to disperse protesters who had managed to sit on the ground in front of the venue, the Salle Pleyel, but ignored three warnings to move.

A couple of hundred protesters, however, remained on either side of the street blocked off by police outside the venue, as shareholders entered the hall. — AFP

China warns against Japan PM's attendance at NATO summit

CHINA expressed caution Friday at Japanese Prime Minister Fumio Kishida's attendance at a NATO summit scheduled for July, saying Tokyo should not do anything that damages mutual trust between regional countries.

Mao urged Japan to "draw lessons from history and be committed to peaceful development", referring to the neighbouring country's past military aggression. — Kyodo

Passenger opens plane door mid-air on Asiana Flight

A passenger opened an emergency exit on an Asiana Airlines flight as it was preparing to land on Friday, the carrier told AFP, adding that the plane landed safely but several people were hospitalised.

The plane was carrying nearly 200 passengers as it approached the runway at Daegu International Airport in South Korea, about 240 kilometres (149 miles) southeast of Seoul, on a domestic flight.

When the plane was around 200 metres (650 feet) above the ground, a passenger sitting near the emergency exit "opened the door manually by touching the lever", the carrier's representative told AFP.

The incident caused some passengers to have breathing difficulties, and several people were taken to a hospital after the landing, Asiana said, adding that there were no major injuries or damage. — AFP

FBI files uncover plot to kill UK's Queen Elizabeth II

A newly released cache of FBI files has revealed a potential plot to assassinate Queen Elizabeth II during her 1983 visit to California.

The possible threat followed a phone call made by "a man who claimed that his daughter had been killed in Northern Ireland by a rubber bullet", according to the document that also refers to a bar frequented by Irish Republican Army (IRA) sympathisers.

The queen and her husband Prince Philip visited the west coast of the United States in February and March 1983, and the trip passed off without incident.

Four years earlier in 1979, IRA paramilitaries opposed to British rule in Northern Ireland killed Louis Mountbatten, the last colonial governor of India and an uncle of Philip, in a bomb attack.

The file states that the man claimed he was going to attempt to harm the queen "either by dropping some object off the Golden Gate Bridge onto the royal yacht Britannia when it sails underneath".

Alternatively he "would attempt to kill Queen Elizabeth when she visited Yosemite National Park", they added.—AFP

Cambodian opposition party loses bid to overturn election ban

CAMBODIA'S main opposition party on Thursday lost a bid to overturn its ban from the upcoming elections, paving the way for long-serving leader Hun Sen to run a one-horse race.

Last week, the National Election Committee (NEC) refused to register the Candlelight Party — the chief challenger to Hun Sen — for the July polls after it failed to submit certain documents. The Constitutional Council said in a statement it had rejected the appeal against NEC's ruling.

"We are so regretful... Our party was rejected (from the polls), we are so disappointed," Candlelight Party (CP) spokesman Kimsour Phirith told AFP.

He said CP had hoped to take part in the elections "to restore the base of democracy in our country". "The absence of the party that has grassroots support will shrink the space of democracy." Hun Sen is among the world's longest-serving leaders. Critics and rights groups accuse him of using the legal system to crush opposition to his rule, particularly in the run-up to elections.—AFP

Djokovic eyes history at French Open as Swiatek launches title defence

NOVAK Djokovic will bid for a record-breaking 23rd Grand Slam title at a French Open without his old rival Rafael Nadal for the first time since 2004, while Iga Swiatek attempts to become the first woman to defend the title in 16 years.

Serbian veteran Djokovic will not be the favourite for the title, though, after struggling with an elbow injury and failing to get past the quarter-finals in any of his three clay-court events so far this season. — AFP

Man Utd's Champions League return clouded by ownership uncertainty

MANCHESTER United are back in the Champions League but a bright future under Erik ten Hag remains clouded by uncertainty over the ownership of the English giants.

Ten Hag ensured a top-four finish in his first season in charge of the Red Devils on Thursday with a 4-1 demolition of Chelsea.

The Dutchman has also ended United's six-year trophy drought by lifting the League Cup in February and the best could even be yet to come should Ten Hag's men upset Manchester City's charge towards the treble at Wembley on 3 June.

Ten Hag has performed a miraculous turnaround since getting off to the worst start of any United manager since 1921.

Embarrassing defeats to Brighton and Brentford in his first two matches are now long forgotten. The former Ajax boss earned a reputation as a disciplinarian after making his players run 14 kilometres after the 4-0 humiliation at Brentford in August - the combined distance the Bees ran more than his players during the game. But Ten Hag's strict approach has paid dividends as he also won the club's backing in a standoff that saw Cristiano Ronaldo depart mid-season for Saudi Arabia.

"He's proved that he's got the seriousness, the confidence and the authority to be able to make big decisions," said former United captain Gary Neville on Ten Hag's man-management. — AFP
