It is necessary to systematically utilize sound foundations of the region to carry out regional development tasks: Senior General

State Administration Council Chair Premier Senior General Min Aung Hlaing meets MSME business people in the Danu Self-Administered Zone yesterday.

LOCAL farmers have to strive for increasing per-acre yield rather than extending sown acreage, said Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing at the meeting with businesspersons from micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises in Danu Self-Administered Zone in the hall of Pindaya yesterday afternoon.

Individual reports on operations of MSME and requirements

The chairman of the Danu Self-Administered Zone Administration Body and the chief minister of Shan State reported on the disbursement of loans from the State economic promotion fund to agriculture and livestock farms, construction of cold storage for potatoes, melting of minerals, conducting of technical courses for manufacturing, construction of the production roads in the zone, running of solar-powered river pumping stations, and future plans for the development of MSMEs.

Local businesspersons also presented reports on the distribution of quality strains of potatoes for increasing per-acre yield, needs for technology and machinery as well as capital for the production of value-added tea products of Pindaya Township, assistance for the increase of coffee sown acreage and market for coffee, needs for building a detour in Pindaya Township, necessary assistance for the supply of drinking water for locals from Pindaya and Ywangan townships, conservation of Boktalok Lake as a symbol of Pindaya, and needs for regional development.

Responses of Union ministers to relevant sectors

After hearing the reports, Union ministers discussed the disbursement of loans from the State economic promotion fund to MSME businesspersons, the classification of loans for development and business, the formation of cooperative societies with the provision of machinery and capital for the development of the local economy and socioeconomic lives, registration for MSME industries to have benefit, and stretching of export wings of coffee and tea to foreign markets.

Local farmers have to strive for increasing per-acre yield rather than extending sown acreage. It is necessary to systematically utilize the sound foundations of the region to carry out regional development tasks.

Encouraging manufacturing industries based on agriculture and livestock products

The Senior General highlighted that if the Pindaya region operates farming of chicken, pig, cow and other animals successfully, it will be a region that can produce meat for the State. The for encouraging agriculture and livestock farms is to get sufficient supply of raw materials for manufacturing industries. Agriculture and livestock farms need to use nutritious inputs for increasing production rates.

Recruitment of educated human resources in the region

The Senior General underlined that a large number of skilful agriculturists are required in the Pindaya region for promoting the manufacturing of agricultural produce by applying modern agricultural techniques, better soil preparations and proper water utilization.

Development of the tourism industry and development of the region

The Senior General stressed the need to improve the tourism industry by attracting local and foreign travellers. Proper packaging of delicious foodstuffs made of tea, coffee and soya bean can draw the attention of travellers and raise the sales of goods. Restrict the use of tobacco for improving the world health

“WE need food, not tobacco” as this year’s main theme was set by the World Health Organization to mark the World No Tobacco Day which falls on 31 May to increase awareness regarding the harmful effects of smoking and tobacco use on an individual.

Tobacco becomes a global problem as sown acreage has been increased year by year to trigger health problems for young age people throughout the world. Hence, the World Health Organization arranged awareness for global people to have knowledge about the tobacco epidemic and the preventable death and disease triggered by Tobacco. In 1988, the World Health Organization passed to protect future generations.

Some 64,000 people in Myanmar lose their lives in suffering from diseases related to the use of tobacco-related materials. Hence, the country yearly loses some K2.6 trillion in consumption of tobacco and smoking, which amount of finance is equal to 3.3 per cent of the Gross Domestic Products of the country, according to the report on investment in cigarette and tobacco control issued in December 2018.

WHEN we get there, the area is crowded with teens and youths. As soon as I set my foot on the ground and glance around, I know we are among the strangers who will never take notice of our presence. We set forth toward the entrance. All are looking forward to viewing the stage.

The sun is setting, the lights are getting brighter, smoke fills the stage, and thousands of teenage girls are screaming as they have waited months for this moment. It feels like I’ve been standing here, waiting forever. My anticipation reaches its peak, only to be interrupted by the speakers blasting as my favourite band walks on stage. The screaming is only getting louder; I can barely hear what song is playing. My sister and I turn to look at each other, smiling and crying, knowing it was worth waiting years to experience this exact moment together. We can’t believe four of our favourite people are real and standing right before us. I start to open my eyes, holding my concert ticket, as I snap back into reality. Every time I look back at my concert ticket, it brings me back to the happiest day of my life.

It is a Thursday afternoon in the middle of July. The sun is painting the sky pink and orange. There is a breeze heavy enough to blow my hair over my shoulder. The bass from the speakers is so loud that it feels like it is pumping through my body. My sister stands in the middle between me and her boyfriend. We are surrounded by thousands of complete strangers. Everyone in the arena is separated from each other by many rows with specified seats for each person. Behind me, there is a wide concrete path dividing my seated section from the lawn section. Even though I am surrounded by strangers, I feel the most comfortable I have ever felt, due to the vibes shared amongst all of us. Each person is standing up as tall as they can, trying to get the best view possible. This makes it hard to see, causing constant movement left and right in the crowd.

As the last note of the final song is played, everyone starts screaming as loud as they can. Each member of the band makes their way to the centre of the stage, placing their arms behind each other’s backs. Their unsynchronized bow only encourages the screams to get louder. Disbelief runs through my body as I try to comprehend the past two hours of my life. Each band member takes their own path to head off the stage, waving goodbye to all of the fans. Tears start to run down my face once again. A handful of people quickly make their way to the aisles, trying to beat the traffic. I am not a part of that group. My feet feel like they are cemented into the ground. I don’t want to leave just yet — I am staying in this moment for as long as I can.

What Built from Love

By Yin Nwe Ko

Memories are flooding my brain on the two-hour drive home. My eyes are getting heavier every second, due to the built-up exhaustion from a long day. Light raindrops hit the front windshield, making peaceful noises. I fight to stay awake, but I am too weak to hold my eyelids open. For what has felt like five minutes is actually two hours. My sister parks her car in the driveway for me to get out. I sluggishly grab my bags from the back seat and make my way inside the front door, still half-asleep. My energy decreases with every step I take up the stairs. I turn the light on as I walk into my room, but it is too bright for my eyes. My immediate reaction is to blink quickly to try to readjust. All I want to do is toss myself into bed and fall back asleep. I slowly crawl into bed and lay my head on my pillow. Even though I feel like I could sleep for 12 hours, I can’t help but grab my phone from my pocket to look back at videos from the night. I find myself smiling and softly singing along to every word of every song. As I swipe to the last picture, I look at the clock and it reads 4:15 am. I set my phone down because I can’t believe I let myself stay up this late. Before I even had time to wrap myself in a blanket, I was out for a good night’s sleep.

If I was told at 10 years old that my sister and I went to a concert and had arguably the best night of our lives together, I wouldn’t have believed it. My sister is someone I wasn’t very fond of when I was younger. As we grew up, we matured, and we developed a stronger connection with each other that I don’t have with anyone else. Everyone calls us twins, though we were born four years apart. Not only do we look alike, we act as similar as twins do. She may make jokes in almost every situation, but deep down she really does care for what I have to say. Throughout my middle school years, she was the person I could always depend on, my rock. No matter what I ask her to do, she will try to find a way to satisfy my wants. I don’t see her just as my sister but as my best friend, too.

I owe the best night of my life to my sister — she was and still is my role model. If I didn’t want to be like her when I was in middle school, I never would have been a fan of the band we saw in concert together. I would secretly listen to a select few songs from the band just so I could sing along with her if she played them when I was around. The night of the concert isn’t only a good memory because it was my first concert, but because it reminds me of the connection and love I share with my sister. I am forever grateful that we overcame our hatred for each other as kids. We matured into young adults and realized that we have each other as built-in, lifelong best friends.

For 25th anniv, Asia short film fest highlights post-pandemic life

ONE of Asia’s largest short film festivals will celebrate its 25th anniversary next month in Tokyo, with this year’s theme exploring diverse stories within the context of a world emerging from the coronavirus pandemic.

Short Shorts Film Festival and Asia will showcase 270 works by seasoned international filmmakers and newcomers across 20 programmes, with some productions already available for online viewing and others to be screened in theaters around the capital from next month.

The international program will feature films such as veteran British director Sally Potter’s drama “Look at Me”, starring Spanish actor Javier Bardem and American comedian Chris Rock.

Meanwhile, this year’s festival theme, “Unlock”, will showcase a series of films depicting life after COVID-19 in its “Unlock — Jumping into a New World Programme”, as seen in a documentary created by four young female filmmakers from Japan and South Korea addressing gender inequality and social pressures in their respective countries.

Also featured is a work by Ukrainian director Natalka Vorozhbit called “Are You Ok?” that tells the story of a young mother and her daughter who flee Ukraine following Russia’s invasion. The films were selected from 5,122 submissions in 120 different countries and regions. Accredited by the Academy Awards, the festival has often acted as a springboard for directors to achieve international recognition.

Technology is another theme of the festival, which takes place in hybrid form with both online and in-person screenings, while audiences can vote for films to win awards using NFTs, or non-fungible tokens.

Tech is also seen in the featured film “Hysteresis”, an animated short by German director Robert Seidel included in the “Unlock” programme, that explores the impact of artificial intelligence on art.

This year will additionally mark the first time in three years that overseas filmmakers will visit Japan for the event following the pandemic outbreak.

“I hope this festival can be a reunion for everyone who has supported us from our opening year,” said Japanese actor Tetsuya Bessho, who founded the festival in 1999.

Among the filmmaking heavyweights and star-studded casts, “Teleporting” is a documentary featured in the programme by four young directors. Nana Noka and Chifumi Tanzawa are both 24 and from Japan, while Nam Arum and Kwon Ohyeon, both 27, hail from South Korea.

Having met online during the pandemic, the four could not meet in person due to travel restrictions, but they discovered they had similar experiences as women growing up and now identify as feminists.

For the film, they used augmented reality-generated avatars to “teleport” themselves into each other’s cell phone cameras and appear as though they were in each other’s countries.

In an interview with Kyodo News, the four explained that they decided to use the avatars to cover their faces and assumed pseudonyms to protect their identities.

One point the filmmakers wanted to drive home was the phenomenon of non-consensual photography of women in both their countries. Noka, who goes by Mia in the film, relates how she became fearful of uploading photos of her face to social media after she discovered in high school that one of her male classmates was saving all her pictures to his iPad to share with other boys.

Nam, who has assumed the name, Kitty, similarly tells of how a man used a spy camera to take photos of women at her university and that many women in South Korea have learned to plug holes in public bathrooms with toilet paper for fear of hidden cameras.

37th ASEAN Heads of Specialist Anti-Trafficking Units – HSU Meeting held

The 37th ASEAN Heads of Specialist Anti-Trafficking Units-HSU Meeting in progress online.

THE 37th ASEAN Heads of Specialist Anti-Trafficking Units – HSU Meeting was held virtually at the meeting hall of Anti-Human Trafficking Police Force Office No.38 yesterday.

Representatives from ASEAN member countries and representatives from the ASEAN Secretariat, including four representatives led by Police Brig-Gen Myint Htoo, commander of the anti-human trafficking police force, attended the event.

The meeting was held with ten agendas, and the leader of the Indonesian delegation, who acted as the chairman, gave an opening speech.

Police Brig-Gen Myint Htoo explained Myanmar's anti-trafficking efforts, considering the changing forms of human trafficking and the ways to respond in case of emergency situations and technological innovations.

Myanmar carries the fight against human trafficking as a national policy, and the Constitution of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar clearly states that "the State prohibits slavery and human trafficking (Article 358)".

Myanmar's anti-trafficking law was enacted in 2005 and was amended in 2022.

The new law highlighted clear definitions of forced prostitution and other forms of sexual abuse, forced labour or forced service, slavery or servitude, forced marriage, forced begging, fraudulent adoption and surrogacy of children, etc.

In addition, in order to improve international cooperation, the law was able to establish a new working committee on international relations and co-operation.

They discussed that the Law on Children's Rights was passed on 23 July 2019 and that the National Mechanism for the Referral of Human Trafficking Victims was approved and implemented on 14 December 2021.

Anti-Trafficking efforts, and HSU Business Plan 2022 - 2023 implementation conditions were focused during the meeting.

They also discussed the finalization of the HSU Action Plan 2023-2024 (Draft) and Laos' hosting of the 38th Anti-Trafficking Task Force Leaders' Meeting before the chairman's closing speech. — MNA/KZL

Japan's Hino Motors, M'bishi Fuso to merge to boost tech development

MAJOR Japanese truck makers Hino Motors Ltd and Mitsubishi Fuso Truck and Bus Corp said Tuesday they will merge under a holding company by the end of 2024 to speed up and cut costs of developing advanced safety and environmental technology.

The parents of Hino Motors and Mitsubishi Fuso — Toyota Motor Corp and Germany's Daimler Truck, respectively — signed a basic agreement on integrating their subsidiaries, the two truck makers said. Global automakers are ramping up investment in connected, autonomous, shared and electric vehicles, known as CASE, to meet stricter emission rules and offer new vehicle services.

It is becoming increasingly difficult for a commercial vehicle maker, which sells fewer vehicles than traditional automakers, to keep up with such a trend on their own, Hino said.

The trucking-making unit of Toyota suffered a record net loss in the fiscal year ended March 2023, stricken by an engine data falsification scandal. Hino booked a massive one-time loss to cover compensation to its customers and suppliers and recall costs. Toyota and Daimler Truck will establish a holding company and aim to list the new entity. — Kyodo

Sweden's economy grows more than expected

THE Swedish economy grew more than expected in the first quarter despite high inflation and rising interest rates, official statistics showed Tuesday.

The top Nordic economy expanded by 0.6 per cent in the first three months of the year, avoiding a technical recession following a 0.2 per cent contraction in the fourth quarter of 2022.

"The upturn is mainly explained by an increase in inventories and by a strong growth in the export of goods," Statistics Sweden said in a statement.

Analysts were on average expecting 0.1 per cent growth, according to Bloomberg.

A preliminary estimate published by Statistics Sweden at the end of April had put growth at 0.2 per cent. — AFP

Lula hosts South American leaders' summit in Brazil

BRAZILIAN President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva is hosting his fellow South American leaders Tuesday for a "retreat" aimed at strengthening ties in a region where left-wing governments are newly back in style.

Eleven of the continent's 12 heads of state are due to attend the summit in Brasilia — the first of its kind in nearly a decade — with only Peruvian President Dina Boluarte expected to miss it.

Veteran leftist Lula kicked things off Monday by meeting with Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro, hailing the "historic" restoration of a relationship that was severed under his predecessor, far-right ex-president Jair Bolsonaro.

Brazil had cut diplomatic ties with Maduro's government under Bolsonaro (2019-2022), who labelled the socialist leader

a "dictator". "This is the start of Maduro's return, and (Tuesday's) meeting will be the return of South American integration," Lula told a news conference, after greeting his Venezuelan counterpart at the presidential palace with a hug and a back-slap.

'New pink tide'

Lula, who previously led Brazil from 2003 to 2010, is a self-declared fan of international cooperation and "regional integration," which featured prominently in his first presidency, and is keen to reboot stalled South American ties.

This is the first summit of regional leaders since 2014 in Quito, Ecuador, at a gathering of UNASUR, a continental bloc launched in 2008 by Lula and late Venezuelan president Hugo Chavez.

That was the moment of Latin America's so-called "pink tide", when a wave of left-wing governments led the region.

Now, some political analysts are talking of a "new pink tide" in South America, with the recent election of Lula in Brazil, Gabriel Boric in Chili and Gustavo Petro in Colombia. Lula wants to get the region cooperating again.

His government has touted projects such as a "Bi-Oceanic Corridor," a transportation artery to enable countries to ship goods from one side of the continent to the other overland instead of by sea. — AFP

Attack drones hit Moscow as Kyiv struck for third day

A specialist inspects the damaged facade of a multi-storey apartment building after a reported drone attack in Moscow on 30 May 2023. PHOTO: AFP

A swarm of drones hit Moscow on Tuesday in an unprecedented attack and Russian drones struck Kyiv for a third straight day as Ukraine gears up for a major offensive against Russian forces.

The Russian defence ministry blamed Kyiv for the attacks on Moscow and the surrounding region, which left two people lightly injured and what it said was "minor" damage to buildings.

Two residential buildings that were hit are located in the affluent south-western part of the Russian capital and near the city centre. One of them is close to a popular park.

Two drones were intercepted over the Kremlin earlier this month but this was the first time that unmanned aerial vehicles hit residential areas of Moscow, which is located hundreds of kilometres from the front lines in Ukraine.

The raids will be seen as a psychological blow and a major embarrassment for the Kremlin which has gone to great lengths to say the protracted conflict does not pose a threat to Russians. —AFP

China urges US to destroy chemical weapons stockpile as promised

A Chinese defence spokesperson on Monday urged the United States to fulfill its commitments and adhere to the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) by taking concrete actions.

Tan Kefei, spokesperson for China's Ministry of National Defence, made the remarks during a press conference while addressing the US claim of destroying its chemical weapons stockpile by autumn this year.

Tan said that since the CWC came into effect 26 years ago, over 99 per cent of the world's chemical weapons stockpiles have been eliminated. Seven out of the eight countries that declared chemical weapons stockpiles have completed the destruction of their chemical weapons.

As stipulated by the Convention, the destruction of stockpiled chemical weapons should be completed within 10 years of its enactment in 1997.

Tan also said the destruction process of Japan's abandoned chemical weapons in China is severely lagging behind, and the destruction plan has been overdue many times.

China urges Japan to enhance its sense of urgency and step up actions to ensure these abandoned chemical weapons' early destruction in a clean and thorough manner, Tan said. — Xinhua

NATO soldiers clash with local Serbs in northern Kosovo, over 50 civilians injured

OVER 50 civilians and more than 40 NATO soldiers were injured in a clash between NATO's Kosovo Force (KFOR) and Serb protesters in front of the Zvecan municipality building in northern Kosovo on Monday, said Serbian President Aleksandar Vucic.

KFOR units were trying to disperse a group of Serbs who protested after Kosovo police took control of the administrative buildings in Zvecan and two other municipalities in majority-Serb north of Kosovo. "A member of ROSU (Regional Operations Support Unit of Kosovo Police), not a member of KFOR, fired several bullets in the direction of the retreating Serbs and hit (local Serb) Dragisa Galjak with two bullets. Serbs responded with stones and in other ways," Vucic said at an extraordinary press conference on Monday evening. —Xinhua

Chinese mission with first civilian reaches space station

CHINA sent three astronauts to its 30 May space station on Tuesday, putting a civilian into orbit for the first time as it pursues plans to send a crewed mission to the Moon by 2030.

The world's second-largest economy has invested billions of dollars in its military-run space programme in a push to catch up with the United States and Russia.

The Shenzhou-16 crew took off atop a Long March 2F rocket from the Jiuquan Satellite Launch Centre in northwest China at 9:31 am (0131 GMT), AFP journalists saw.

They docked at the space station's Tianhe core module on Tuesday afternoon, more than six hours after taking off, state broadcaster CCTV said.

The launch was a "complete success" and the "astronauts are in good condition", said Zou Lipeng, director of the Jiuquan Satellite Launch Centre.

Dozens of employees from the space programme, many of whom live year-round on the huge site, attended the launch, snapping selfies with the rocket in the background.

Children played as they waited for the launch, some waving Chinese flags as they sat on their parents' shoulders.

Spectators let out a loud "wow", shouting "good luck" and waving as the rocket took off in a cloud of ochre smoke.

Leading its crew is commander Jing Haipeng on his fourth mission, as well as engineer Zhu Yangzhu and Beihang University professor Gui Haichao, the first Chinese civilian in space.

China was the third country to put humans in orbit and Tiangong is the crown jewel of its space programme, which has also landed robotic rovers on Mars and the Moon.

Shenzhou-16 is the first mission to Tiangong since it entered its "application and development" stage, authorities said. — AFP

North Korea confirms June launch of military spy satellite

NORTH Korea said Tuesday that it would launch a spy satellite in June, claiming it was necessary to monitor the "dangerous" military movements of the United States and its allies.

Criticising US-South Korea joint military exercises, including the ongoing large-scale live-fire drills, a top North Korean military official confirmed that "military reconnaissance satellite No 1" would be launched next month. The announcement came a day after Japan said it was informed by North Korea that a satellite launch could happen imminently, with Tokyo warning it would likely violate United Nations sanctions.

Satellite launch technology overlaps significantly with that used in ballistic missiles, which Pyongyang is explicitly prohibited from using under UN sanctions. The official Korean Central News Agency cited Ri Pyong Chol, vice-chairman of the ruling party's central military commission, saying the satellite was "indispensable to tracking, monitoring... and coping with in advance in real time the dangerous military acts of the US and its vassal forces".

Citing "reckless" acts by Washington and Seoul, Ri said North Korea felt "the need to expand reconnaissance and information means and improve various defensive and offensive weapons". — AFP

Japan ruling parties vow to maintain solid coalition despite discord

THE leader of the Komeito party pledged Tuesday to remain in coalition with the Liberal Democratic Party despite recent disagreements during negotiations to coordinate their candidates for the next lower house election.

Natsuo Yamaguchi's remarks came amid speculation that Komeito, backed by Japan's biggest lay Buddhist group Soka Gakkai, may dissolve its decades-long alliance with Prime Minister Fumio Kishida's LDP if the discussions on fielding candidates break down.

After meeting with Kishida at the prime minister's office, Yamaguchi said, "We have confirmed we will sustain our collaboration by cherishing the significance and broad perspective of the coalition," adding that WORLD number one Carlos Alcaraz admitted he felt "invincible" at times during his straight-sets win over Italian qualifier Flavio Cobolli in the French Open first round on Monday.

The 20-year-old, the youngest top seed at Roland Garros since Bjorn Borg in 1976, swept to a 6-0, 6-2, 7-5 win over his 159th-ranked opponent.

US Open champion Alcaraz won the first eight games of Monday's match and was comfortably two sets up in just 52 minutes.

In the first set alone, he allowed his overwhelmed opponent a meagre 10 points.

"I felt I couldn't lose a game. I thought that I was able to win easier than I did, but a match can turn around in each game. But at the start of the match, I felt invincible," he said. Cobolli, making his Grand Slam debut, rallied briefly in the third set but was unable to take advantage of two break points in the sixth game.

Alcaraz then saw four match points slip away as the Italian hung on to level at 5-5.

However, the Spaniard wrapped up the tie on a fifth match point in the 12th game.

Next up for Alcaraz is a clash with Japan's Taro Daniel for a place in the last 32.

New York-born Daniel, ranked 112, enjoyed his best Slam at the Australian Open in 2022 where he went to the third round from qualifying and defeated former world number one Andy Murray in the round of 64.

His best run in Paris was a second round appearance in 2017. Daniel has flourished on hard courts this year — reaching the quarter-finals in Acapulco and second round from qualifying at Indian Wells and Miami. — AFP

Van der Sar to quit as Ajax chief after 'tough period'

FORMER Netherlands goalkeeper Edwin van der Sar announced Tuesday he was quitting as Ajax chief executive, after "an incredibly tough period" of more than a decade at the helm of the Amsterdam powerhouse.

Van der Sar's resignation comes on the back of the worst season in 14 years for the top Dutch club which finished third in the Eredivisie after a 3-1 drubbing by FC Twente on Sunday.

"After almost 11 years on the board, I am done," Van der Sar, 52, said in a statement.

"We have experienced wonderful things together, but it has also been an incredibly tough period," the former Manchester United 'keeper said, who retired from professional football in 2011.

Ajax have failed to qualify for the Champions League after finishing third in the Eredivisie behind Feyenoord and PSV Eindhoven.

Media reports including the NOS public broadcaster and daily tabloid De Telegraaf said supporters held Van der Sar responsible for the club's drop in success, following the departure of sporting director Marc Overmars and trainer Erik ten Hag.
