AS snow-capped Mount Phonkanrazi is fascinating with natural beauties and scences, travellers at home and abroad can note down the list of mountains to be climbed in April and May despite unfavourable weathers in monsoon. Recently, an earthen axis has been constructed between PutaO and its last hilly village Ziyadang to have smooth transport for local and foreign travellers along the hilly journey to Phonkanrazi show-capped mountain in Kachin State, according to the Kachin State Directorate of Hotels and Tourism.

As plans are under way to contribute a great deal to community-based tourism services in Kachin State upon completion of bridges crossing creeks, tour companies and locals will have great business opportunities thanks to the trip to Phonkanrazi mountain.

Myanmar possesses beautiful and unique snow-capped mountains among ASEAN countries. As such, the local and foreign travellers who are keen to join the scaling the show-capped mountains in Myanmar come to Mount Phonkanrazi in the northernmost of Myanmar from March to May yearly when the snow and ice caps melt and from December to May as a mountaineering season. In early this year, a large number of local mountaineers arrived there. Up to May, as snow-capped mountaineers come to the hilly area, locals can earn incomes from the ecotourism services.

The Kachin State government initially built a 10-mile earthen road from PutaO to upper Sangong Village for ensuring socioeconomic life improvement of local ethnic people with job opportunities as the road transport between PutaO and Ziyadang Village would be better to increase more arrivals of travellers. Afterward, a plan was set to construct a road leading to Wasandang Village, 12 miles from Upper Sangong Village. So far, an earthen axis road has been completed to Ziyadam Village, nine miles from Wasandang Village. As such, travellers and locals have easy access to Ziyadang, 31 miles from PutaO, by motorbike or three-wheeled bike.

Ziyadang village is the outermost edge on the route among hilly villages from PutaO to Phonkanrazi snow-capped mountain, and it has only 18 houses. In fact, the en route to Mount Phonkanrazi starts from that village.

The travellers who arrive in PutaO by air from Yangon and Mandalay and those from Sumprabum and Myitkyina can pay visits to Ziyazang Village in a short time but such a route for travellers on foot took two days in the past. If such a route can be used in all seasons, it will much benefit tourism industry as well as education and health of locals.

“A plan is under way to upgrade Ziyadang Village as a community-based tourism village by this month. As it is a village located in the reserved forest, any hotel and motel cannot be built. But, we have a plan to raise the public awareness for giving a helping hand to travellers to stay at the houses of the village for cooking meals. We will strive for achieving success in tourism industry. Only when the village conserves environment will it achieve success in ecotourism service. We will train moutain-eers and guides to carefully conserve natural environment and to provide travellers at their houses with blankets and beds in addition to healthy meals. Such a course was conducted in PutaO once but we will make field trips to the village togeher with experts in order to accelerate ecotourism services. This year, locals can earn incomes as arrivals of travellers for mountaineering increase,” said director U Khaing Oo of Kachin State Directorate of Hotels and Tourism.

As April and May is time of melting snow on the hills, beauty of snow-capped mointains can mostly be seen but rainy season is not suitable for climbing the mountains in Kachin State. Practically, travellers at home and abroad can note down the significant points of mountains in the state by setting plans to scale there in the open season, especially in April and May. Ethnic people from local villages have employments as guides along hilly roads and transporters in addition to searching herbs. Hence, local authorities decided to build an earthen road to be used in all seasons and conduct the tourism courses in villages for improvement of the tourism industry as well as ecotourism service sector.—Nyein Thu (MNA)/TTA

A walk-through Dai people cultural heritage

BY TWA

ISAU a group of women playing musical instruments (Shan traditional drum, gong and cymbal) softly to welcome the visitors from afar before our vehicle stopped.

They sprinkled scented water in a silver bowl using sprigs of Thabyay (Jambul) to the visitors while playing instruments and singing at the entrance of the village. This fascinating cultural tradition is familiar to me as a Myanmar citizen and I felt ecstatic about this scene.

The traditional costume of those women is not different from that of Shan people. They are none other than Dai people living in Xishuangbanna Dai Autonomous Prefecture in southwestern Yunnan Province, China.

It is about a 20-minute drive to visit the ancient village called “Man Yuan” where Dai people live. The organic farms of dragon fruit, pomelo and a variety of fruits are seen along the road.

Dai people living in Man Yuan village are preserving cultural heritage, traditions and customs from generations to generations. The different types of slit houses on the roadside are giving an awesome vibe.

The uphill road to the temple with majestic buildings from a well where a dragon dwelled according to a myth is similar to the roads en route to pagodas that sit atop the mountains across Myanmar.

Some residents perform rituals to avert misfortune by sup-million population in southern Yunnan province.

They have been preserving rich traditional heritage of their own. Dai is closely associated with Laos and Thai people in the form of historical and geographical aspects.

There are over 100-year-old mango trees and the pavilions where alms-giving ceremonies are held in the village. The visitors can enjoy the taste of a variety of fruits and vegetables such as corn, pineapple, jackfruit, mangoes and drinks. The folks playing flutes and singing folk songs can bring joy and full excitement to the visitors.

I was so amazed when the palm leaf inscription of Buddhist literature was demonstrated. The locals are engaged in traditional businesses such as papermaking, pottery business, bamboo hat and broom making.

Dai people’s traditions and customs are related to Shan people. They also celebrate the water-splashing festival from 13 to 16 April every year to mark the Buddha’s birthday. They went to mountains to pick up wild flowers to make flower pagoda and sprinkled scented water over Buddha statues to represent puporting branches of banyan trees with pillars, which can also be significantly seen in Myanmar. The locals believed that water from that dragon well can wash away bad luck.

There are 81 households with 439 residents in Man Yuan village. They still maintain traditions and culture by avoiding the big influence of technology.

rification and good fortune. The authorities hold events including paying homage to the elders, drum contest, singing contest, traditional dance competition, weaving contest, paper streamer contest and fruit decoration contest. What a surprising tradition is that the monks also participate in the water splashing Festival.

We stopped in Xishuangbanna Autonomous Prefecture which was built on the side of the Lancang River on our return trip from Man Yuan village.

I felt delighted with the hospitality at a restaurant featuring traditional and aesthetic themes. A group of people wearing traditional costumes which are similar to Shan attires were seen welcoming the guests by playing Shan drum, gongs and cymbals softly. The traditional food is to Myanmar people's taste. Even fish-paste with assorted vegetables is included in a meal. Customers can dig in popular and best dishes such as pineapple rice, mashed potato with chives, butter and pepper.

The folks performing traditional dances in Xishuangbanna are the unforgettable moments of life.

Boat tour along the Lancang River is a fun experience. And it was time to say goodbye to the Lancang River, Xishuangbanna and Man Yuan village.

The sun goes down behind the mountain. Yet, the colorful lights of high-rise buildings and hotels illuminate night in Xishuangbanna.

Pilgrims observe murals of scenes in Buddhology at Pahtothamya Temple

VISITORS can explore the murals of scenes from life of Buddha at the Pahtothamya Temple, depicting the birth scene of the Gotama Buddha by Queen Maya, Buddha taking the road to enlightenment and Buddha cutting hair; an official of the Department of Archaeology and National Museum (Bagan Branch).

The Pahtothamya Temple was built in the 11th century. Such a temple was built of single terrace oriented to the east, with interior design to be influenced from the early Bagan period. It's believed to be one of the five magnificent well-known temples built by King NyaungU Sawrahan (King Taungthugyi). Some believed it was built under the rule of King Sawlu.

The name Pahtothamya is derived from the fact that the stupa on the top is surrounded by the small stupas along the terrace and the small stupas at the corners, which are the original work.

The paintings portray the sequences of scenes from the life of Buddha. The art of floral design using the masonry, brick art sculpture and statue of two Buddha's disciples can be observed.

A Journey to Financial Independence

By Min Zan

IN FACT, it has been a long and winding road. It's a journey that has taken me through ups and downs, successes and failures, and plenty of learning experiences along the way. But through it all, I've remained committed to my goal of achieving financial independence, and I'm proud to say that I've made significant progress toward that goal.

Financial independence means different things to different people, but to me, it means having the ability to support myself and my family without relying on a traditional job or paycheck. It means having enough passive income streams to cover my expenses and provide a comfortable lifestyle, without being tied down to a 9-5 job or the whims of a boss.

I grew up in a middle-class family, where money was always tight. My parents worked hard to provide for our family, but there were times when we struggled to make ends meet. I learned the value of money at a young age and quickly realized that financial security was important to me.

As I got older, I started working part-time jobs to earn some extra cash. I saved as much as I could and spent my money wisely. I didn't want to end up like so many people I knew, living paycheck to paycheck and struggling to pay bills.

After graduating high school, I attended college and majored in business. I knew that I wanted to work in finance, so I took every finance and accounting class that I could. I also worked part-time while in school to help pay for my expenses.

Once I graduated, I landed a job at a financial firm. I was excited to start my career and earn a steady income, but I quickly realized that the corporate world wasn't for me. I wanted more freedom and flexibility in my work and didn't want to spend my life chained to a desk.

After a few years of working in finance, I decided to take the leap and start my own business. It was a scary decision, but I knew that it was the only way I could achieve the financial independence and flexibility that I craved.

Actually, my journey to financial independence started when I was in my early 20s. At that time, I was fresh out of college and working a job that paid me just enough to cover my bills and student loan payments. I knew I wanted more out of life, but I didn't know how to get there.

I started reading personal finance blogs and books, and I quickly realized that the key to financial independence was to live below my means and invest as much as possible. So, I began to cut back on my expenses and started investing in stocks, mutual funds, and real estate.

Over the years, I faced several challenges on my journey to financial independence. One of the biggest challenges was staying motivated and disciplined. It's easy to get sidetracked by short-term pleasures and forget about long-term goals. To overcome this challenge, I created a vision board with pictures of my goals and dreams. I also joined online communities of like-minded individuals who shared similar goals and provided support and encouragement.

I also faced the challenge of unexpected expenses and emergencies. Life is unpredictable, and things happen that we can't control. To prepare for such situations, I created an emergency fund and insurance coverage to protect myself and my loved ones.

The first few years were tough. I had to make sacrifices and give up some of the things I enjoyed, like eating out and travelling. But I kept my eyes on the prize and continued to save and invest as much as possible.

Over time, my business grew and became more profitable. I was able to hire employees and expand my services, which further increased my revenue.

But even as my business grew, I remained focused on my ultimate goal of achieving financial independence.

One of the key strategies that helped me achieve financial independence was investing in my future. I knew that I couldn't rely solely on my business income to achieve my financial goals, so I started investing in stocks, bonds, and real estate. I educated myself on investing and made sure that I was making informed decisions. I diversified my portfolio to minimize risk and took a long-term approach to investing.

Another important strategy that helped me achieve financial independence was living below my means. Even as my income grew, I didn't let my expenses grow at the same rate. Instead, I kept my expenses low and saved as much as I could. I lived in a modest apartment and drove an older car. I cooked most of my meals at home and didn't spend money on unnecessary luxuries. I also avoided debt as much as possible and paid off any debts as quickly as I could.

As time went on, I started to see the fruits of my labour. My investments started to grow, and I was able to earn passive income from rental properties and dividend-paying stocks. I started to feel more and more confident in my ability to achieve financial independence.

Of course, there were setbacks along the way. The 2008 financial crisis hit me hard, and I lost a significant chunk of my investment portfolio. But I didn't let that discourage me. I continued to invest and held on to my properties, and eventually, the market rebounded, and my investments started to grow again.

One of the keys to my success has been my ability to stay disciplined and focused. I've always been a saver, and I've never been one to splurge on fancy cars or expensive vacations. I've always tried to live below my means, and I've always been mindful of my spending.

Another key to my success has been my willingness to take calculated risks. Investing in stocks and real estate can be risky, but I've always done my research and made informed decisions. I've also been willing to pivot when things haven't gone as planned. For example, when I realized that the rental market in my area wasn't as strong as I had hoped, I pivoted to short-term rentals, which have been much more profitable for me.

Over time, I've also learned to be more patient. Achieving financial independence is a marathon, not a sprint, and there have been times when it's been tempting to try to take shortcuts or make hasty decisions. But I've learned to be patient, to trust the process, and to know that slow and steady wins the race.

Looking back on my journey, I realize that achieving financial independence is not just about money. It's also about mindset and lifestyle. It's about being intentional with your money and your time and being willing to make sacrifices in the short term for long-term gain.

Today, I can proudly say that I have achieved financial independence. I have enough savings and investments to support myself and my family without relying on employment income. I have the freedom to choose how I spend my time and resources. I can pursue my passions and interests without worrying about financial constraints. My journey to financial independence has taught me several valuable lessons that I will never forget easily.

Prevalence of metabolically related fatty liver disease is rising: Study

ACCORDING to a study presented at the Endocrine Society's annual meeting in Chicago, the percentage of adults suffering from metabolic-associated fatty liver disease (MAFLD), the leading cause of liver disease worldwide, is increasing.

The study discovered that Mexican Americans consistently had the highest percentage of MAFLD, particularly in 2018, despite the fact that the prevalence of increase was higher among Whites.

"MAFLD affects Hispanics at a higher prevalence relative to Blacks and Whites. This racial/ethnic disparity is a public health concern," said researcher Theodore C. Friedman, M.D., PhD, Chair of the Department of Internal Medicine at Charles R. Drew University of Medicine & Science in Los Angeles, Calif, adding, "Overall, the increase in MAFLD is concerning, as this condition can lead to liver failure and cardiovascular diseases and has an important health disparity."

The researchers analyzed data for 32,726 participants from the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) from 1988 to 2018.

"We found that overall, both MAFLD and obesity increased with time, with the increase in MAFLD greater than the increase in obesity," Friedman said.

The study's first author Magda Shaheen, M.D., PhD, M.P.H., M.S., of Charles R. Drew University of Medicine & Science, said, "The prevalence of MAFLD increased faster than the prevalence of obesity, suggesting that the increase in the other risk factors such as diabetes and hypertension may also contribute to the increase in the prevalence of MAFLD."

Among Mexican Americans, the per cent of MAFLD was higher at all times than the overall population. "In summary, MAFLD is increasing with time and more efforts are needed to control this epidemic," Shaheen said.

Green gram market calms down on sluggish global demand

THE price of green gram plummeted following the weak foreign demand, according to the Yangon Region Chambers of Commerce and Industry (Bayintnaung).

The price of green gram from the central Myanmar region touched a high of K2.092 million per tonne in mid-May. The current price fell to K1.765 million per tonne, showing a sharp drop of K300,000 per tonne within one and half months.

In May, China's tariff policies wreaked havoc on green gram trading, causing the price to decline.

Myanmar sent green gram to China, India, the Netherlands, Ireland, England and Germany by sea and border routes. It conveyed more than 148,000 tonnes of green grams worth US$97.426 million to foreign trade partners between 1 April and 23 June in the current financial year 2023-2024, according to the Ministry of Commerce's trade data.

The country aims to achieve a green gram export target to 600,000 tonnes, with 150,000 tonnes in each batch, as per the Ministry of Commerce.

Myanmar's green gram is primarily sent to India, China and European countries. Myanmar has grasped strong market share in the vast global markets. Additionally, Myanmar has been preparing to export green gram to European Union countries this year, according to the Ministry of Commerce.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Irrigation and the Ministry of Commerce agreed to export the green grams for sprouts in 2015.

The steering committee has been holding a series of meetings to call for bids, conduct awareness courses for the farmers and inspect farm level processing regarding exports of the green grams for bean sprouts.

The Agriculture Department takes charge of farmer and collector inspection and testing, while the Consumers Affairs Department carries out processor inspection and training. Myanmar Inspection and Testing Service (MITS), the authorized organization of the State, was asked to monitor processor level to meet the criteria, food safety and quality standard set by the EU. Those inspectors from MITS are trained by the experts of the Plant Protection Division, Agriculture Department and the German Development Agency

GIZ.

MITS conducted inspections annually, with nine in 2018, 10 in 2019, six each in 2020 and 2021 and five in 2022 respectively.

The MITS undertakes inspection once at a factory that meets the criteria and standard. If the MITS finds the requirements during inspection, they set a timeframe for the factory manager to fix them. Then, they went on a second inspection tour. They present certificates for those factories that pass the test. — NN/EM

Sri Lanka shares rise as debt restructure spares banks

BANKRUPT Sri Lanka's bearish bourse made a dramatic turnaround Tuesday on the first day of trading since the government unveiled a plan to restructure its huge debt burden.

The All Share Price Index on the Colombo Stock Exchange was 6.71 per cent higher to close at 10,076.64, the highest figure in 10 months.

Gains were fuelled largely by financial sector shares which rose by over 15 per cent after rupee-denominated bonds, largely owned by local banks, were spared a haircut in the debt proposal.

"Banking shares went up 15 to 18 per cent and there was a scramble to buy them," a broker at the exchange told AFP.

Sri Lanka unveiled its domestic debt restructuring plan last Thursday in line with requirements for an International Monetary Fund bailout agreed in March. The restructure charts a course for Sri Lanka to emerge from bankruptcy after defaulting on its $46 billion foreign debt last year.

Money loaned to the government by banks and other financial institutions will not be affected under the proposal.

But treasury bonds purchased by pension funds will see their interest payments cut substantially and maturity extended by several years.

The government is offering a 30 per-cent haircut to its international sovereign bond holders, while China and other bilateral creditors have been offered longer maturities and a nine-year moratorium on repayments.

Markets were closed for five days after the restructure plan was announced to prevent panic reactions. — AFP

Falling exports in May add to German woes

GERMAN exports dipped in May after a small rebound in April, official data showed Tuesday, adding to a gloomier outlook for Europe's biggest economy.

Germany shipped goods worth 130.5 billion euros ($142 billion) in May, according to data published by federal statistics agency Destatis, down 0.1 per cent compared with April.

Imports rose by 1.7 per cent to 116.1 billion euros in May, narrowing the trade surplus to 14.4 billion euros.

"Trade is no longer the strong resilient growth driver of the German economy it used to be," said ING bank economist Carsten Brzeski.

"Sluggish exports are no longer an exception but rather the new normal."

The weaker demand for "made in Germany" goods was led by a 3.6-per-cent fall in exports to the United States, Germany's biggest export destination.

Shipments to European Union countries dropped by 1.5 per cent, but those to China ticked up by 1.6 per cent.

Most imports to Germany once again came from China, and were up 2.7 per cent on the month before. The German economy has been hit by a series of weak data in recent weeks, dampening hopes of a swift recovery after the energy crisis and high inflation tipped the country into a recession at the turn of the year. — AFP

Australia pauses rate hikes amid 'uncertain' economic outlook

THE Reserve Bank of Australia left its key interest rate unchanged Tuesday, with governor Philip Lowe saying that while inflation had "passed its peak" the economic outlook remained uncertain.

The decision comes after monetary policymakers last month hiked the benchmark rate 25 basis points to 4.1 per cent — its highest level since May 2012. Lowe on Tuesday cited "uncertainty surrounding the economic outlook" as one reason the board decided to stand pat this month. "This will provide some time to assess the impact of the increase in interest rates to date and the economic outlook," he said.

small boost, with the benchmark ASX 200 up nearly 0.5 per cent in the minutes after the announcement, though the local dollar fell against the US

Viet Nam's foreign trade down 15.2% on year in 6 months

VIET Nam posted an estimated foreign trade value of 316.65 billion US dollars in the first six months of this year, down 15.2 per cent year on year, with a trade surplus of 12.25 billion dollars, local media reported on Tuesday, citing the General Statistics Office.

Specifically, the export revenue stood at 164.45 billion dollars, down 12.1 per cent, while the import revenue decreased 18.2 per cent year on year to 152.2 billion dollars, the local newspaper Baodautu reported.

Reduced export orders and world demand led to decreasing demand for importing raw materials, the newspaper reported, citing the ministry of industry and trade.

The difficulties in trade activities still linger in the second half of this year due to the complex developments of the global economy, politics and security, the ministry said.

The ministry added that it would closely monitor the production situation of industries and fields to promptly remove difficulties for them.

The United States remained Viet Nam's biggest importer with turnovers of 44.2 billion dollars, and China was its largest exporter with turnovers of 50.1 billion dollars over the period, according to the office. — Xinhua

Stocks struggle in subdued deals amid US holiday

ASIAN and European equities faltered Tuesday in muted trade, with Wall Street shut for the US Independence Day holiday.

Oil rebounded from losses the previous day, when key producers Saudi Arabia and Russia unexpectedly unveiled more output cuts in a bid to stabilize the market.

The dollar rose against the euro but fell against the yen, as investors awaited Wednesday’s publication of minutes from the Federal Reserve’s most recent monetary policy meeting.

Friday’s key US non-farm payrolls (NFP) report will provide clues on the health of the world’s biggest economy.

‘Struggling for direction’

“European stocks are struggling for direction amid a light economic calendar and on thin volumes with the US markets closed for Independence Day,” City Index analyst Fiona Cincotta told AFP.

“We expect volumes to pick up again... ahead of Friday’s NFP.”

This week sees also minutes from the Federal Reserve’s last rate-setting meeting.

Investors weighed signs of a slowing US economy against hopes that the Fed’s interest-rate hiking cycle could be nearing its end.

Data showing a sharp drop in the central bank’s preferred gauge of inflation for May fuelled a rally across equities in New York late last week and in Asia on Monday.

The readings followed a series of indicators suggesting the economy remained in good health, putting pressure on the Fed to keep tightening monetary policy.

Fed chairman Jerome Powell has warned more hikes are in the pipeline owing to still-elevated inflation and the strong labour market, though analysts question whether it will follow through with that.

Wall Street limped to a positive close in a half-session on Monday, with traders winding down for the holiday. In Asia on Tuesday, Hong Kong, Shanghai, Wellington, Taipei, Manila, Mumbai and Bangkok edged up, but Tokyo, Singapore and Seoul dipped.

OCBC sees ASEAN-China connections to continue deepen over medium term

OCBC Bank on Tuesday foresaw ASEAN-China connections to continue to deepen over the medium term. In an OCBC treasury research provided to Xinhua, OCBC Bank’s economists Tommy Xie Dongming and Lavanya Venkateswaran said that increased linkages between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and China will foster deeper connections. Despite a marked deceleration in global trade growth brought about by looming recession fears, they said the robust trade growth trajectory between the two sides would persist in 2023. Specifically, total trade between China and ASEAN continued the growth in the first five months of the year.

As of the first quarter of 2023, ASEAN remained China’s biggest trading partner, followed by the European Union and the United States. — Xinhua

Apple, other firms say they meet EU ‘gatekeeper’ definition

SEVEN tech giants, including Amazon and Apple, have informed the European Union they meet the threshold to come under landmark new rules to curb their market dominance, Brussels said Tuesday.

The firms — Google parent Alphabet, Amazon, Apple, TikTok owner ByteDance, Facebook umbrella Meta, Microsoft and Samsung — said they had revenue and user figures big enough to be classed as “gatekeepers”, EU internal market commissioner Thierry Breton said.

Thai House picks compromise speaker as progressives seek to form govt

THE Thai parliament appointed a compromise candidate to the powerful role of House speaker on Tuesday, potentially complicating progressive party leader Pita Limjaroenrat's efforts to form a government.

King Maha Vajiralongkorn officially opened the Thai parliament on Monday, more than a month after Pita's pro-democracy Move Forward Party (MFP) unexpectedly won the most seats at the 14 May election.

MFP has cobbled together an eight-party coalition that also includes election runners-up Pheu Thai, but it still remains well short of the 376 seats needed across both houses of parliament for Pita to be appointed prime minister in a vote due in mid-July.

speakership, ultimately settling on compromise candidate Wan Muhamad Noor Matha, head of the smaller Prachachat Party, on Monday night. Lawmakers on Tuesday elected the 79-year-old veteran unopposed as speaker of the lower house.

"I will work neutrally," Wan Noor told the parliament.

One of his first jobs will be deciding the timing of the vote for prime minister. The powerful speaker role also sets the parliamentary agenda. Analysts say the fact that MFP was unable to get the coalition to back its own speaker candidate was not ideal for Pita's prospects of taking the top job. "It doesn't really guarantee that Move Forward Party's (leader) will get to be prime minister, it just stops the conflict at this time," Mahidol University political analyst Punchada Sirivunnabood told AFP.

Ubong Ratchathani political scientist Titipol Phakdeewanich noted that the vote for prime minister could go through multiple rounds, and the speaker had an important role in putting names forward. — AFP

Fukushima water release consistent with int'l safety standards: IAEA

THE International Atomic Energy Agency said Tuesday that Japan's plan to release treated radioactive water stored at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant into the sea aligns with global safety standards, despite concerns among neighbouring countries.

In a report submitted by IAEA chief Rafael Grossi to Prime Minister Fumio Kishida, the UN nuclear watchdog also said that discharging the treated water would have "a negligible radiological impact on people and the environment," setting the stage for Japan to make a final decision on the project.

During their meeting in Tokyo, the IAEA director general called the review "dedicated, scientific" and "impartial," telling Kishida that its results "have all the elements" necessary for Japan to "move on to the next phase."

Upon receiving the report, Kishida said that Japan will respond "sincerely" to the organization's review and continue to "politely" explain its plan to affected local residents and the international community "with a high level of transparency."

Kishida's government will review the IAEA assessment before deciding on the timing of releasing the water, which has gone through an advanced liquid processing system that removes most radionuclides except tritium.

The water will be diluted with seawater to one-40th of the concentration permitted under Japanese safety standards before it is released via an underwater tunnel.

Earlier Tuesday, Grossi held talks with Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshimasa Hayashi over the issue in the first of a series of meetings scheduled during the day with Japanese officials. "As for safely discharging the treated water, Japan will continue to provide detailed explanations to the international community with transparency, based on scientific evidence," Hayashi said at a press conference. — Kyodo INDONESIA'S president on Tuesday urged Australia to help it ramp up electric vehicle production, as the two coal powerhouses wrapped up bilateral discussions focused heavily on clean energy.

President Joko Widodo met Australian Prime Minister Anthony Albanese in Sydney, where the pair also discussed growing tensions in the Asia-Pacific region. Indonesia and Australia are the world's two biggest thermal coal exporters, but are anxious to shed their economic reliance on polluting fossil fuels.

Both leaders agreed clean energy technologies should become a joint priority. "Indonesia and Australia must build a more substantive and strategic economic cooperation through the joint production of EV batteries," Widodo said following the meeting.

Widodo's government has grand ambitions for Indonesia to increase electric vehicle production, making better use of its vast natural deposits of cobalt and nickel. — AFP

Xi urges Shanghai alliance solidarity, Putin praises support

CHINA'S Xi Jinping urged the leaders of Russia, Iran and other Shanghai alliance states on Tuesday to boost ties and resist sanctions, as Vladimir Putin thanked the bloc for support during a failed rebellion.

Xi "called for efforts to safeguard regional peace and ensure common security", state news agency Xinhua said, adding that he urged member states of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to "enhance their solidarity".

Putin thanked the Beijing-headquartered SCO, joining his first summit since a short-lived mutiny last month after the head of the Wagner mercenary group, Yevgeny Prigozhin, led a failed rebellion against the Kremlin.

"Russia is confidently resisting and will continue to resist external pressure, sanctions and provocations," Putin told the bloc. "I would like to thank my colleagues from the SCO countries who expressed support for the actions of the Russian leadership to protect the constitutional order and the life and security of citizens," Putin added. China and Russia have in recent years ramped up economic cooperation and diplomatic contacts, with their strategic partnership having only grown closer since Moscow's invasion of Ukraine.

While China says it is a neutral party to the Ukraine conflict, it has been criticized by Western nations for refusing to condemn Moscow's offensive. — AFP

Macron suggests fines for parents of children caught rioting

FRENCH President Emmanuel Macron raised the idea of handing out quick-fire fines to the parents of children caught committing vandalism or robberies as part of the government's response to days of rioting.

Of the nearly 4,000 people arrested since Friday during riots, more than 1,200 are minors, the justice ministry said.

Meeting police officers in Paris on Monday evening, Macron thanked them for their work and floated the idea of speedy punishments for parents who fail to control their children.

"With the first crime, we need to find a way of sanctioning the families financially and easily," he said, according to comments reported by the Parisien newspaper.

The 45-year-old head of state said it would be "a sort of minimum price for the first screw up".

At the height of the rioting last Friday, Macron had appealed to parents to control their offspring. That followed the arrests of rioters as young as 12 during the breakdown in law and order sparked by police shooting a teenager dead in Paris.

"It's the responsibility of parents to keep them at home," Macron had said. "It's not the state's job to act in their place."

French Justice Minister Eric Dupond-Moretti stressed the same message on Friday and outlined how parents were already legally liable for their children. — AFP

Four killed in US mass shooting in Philadelphia

At least four people were killed and two children wounded in a mass shooting Monday night in the US city of Philadelphia, police said, the latest chapter in the country's gun violence crisis.

Those killed were all males aged between 20 and 59, Philadelphia police commissioner Danielle Outlaw told journalists, while the two children wounded were aged two and 13.

Police apprehended the suspected shooter — a 40-year-old who was wearing a bulletproof vest and was armed with a rifle and a handgun — near the scene of the shooting in the city's Kingessing neighbourhood, Outlaw said. "I don't know if he was firing the rifle at the time we were pursuing or the handgun, but yes he was actively shooting a firearm at the time our officers were pursuing," she said.

Earlier local media reports said four people had been hurt in the shooting, but Outlaw put the number of wounded at two, both children. Local media footage showed police had cordoned off an extensive crime scene, which Outlaw said spanned at least eight city blocks. — AFP

Legal battle looms over London's expanding vehicle pollution fee

A UK court will on Tuesday consider contentious plans to extend a scheme obliging the most polluting vehicles to pay for using London's roads, as opponents engage in protests — and even sabotage.

The High Court case comes just weeks before London Mayor Sadiq Khan's expansion of the Ultra-Low Emission Zone (ULEZ) is set to take effect.

The scheme — first introduced in 2019 and separate from the city's two-decades-old congestion charge — requires more polluting vehicles to pay a £12.50 ($16) toll on days they are driven within inner London.

Among the exhibits were scripted Woods supposedly from the PGA Tour meant for the 15-time major winner to repeat at a players meeting at the 2022 Travelers Championship, only weeks

Alcaraz launches Wimbledon bid in style, Rybakina survives scare

TOP seed Carlos Alcaraz made a flying start to his Wimbledon campaign on Tuesday as defending women's champion Elena Rybakina recovered from a set down to reach the second round.

On a soggy day at the All England Club, most of the action took place on the covered Court One and Centre Court, where the retired Roger Federer was the main attraction.

Tennis's new golden boy Alcaraz raced through the first set against French veteran Jeremy Chardy in just 22 minutes before breaking twice in the second set.

Chardy, who had previously announced that Wimbledon would be the final tournament of his career, drew first blood in the third set to lead 4-2 but Alcaraz hit back strongly, sealing a 6-0, 6-2, 7-5 win with an ace.

"I like to play battles and I am really happy to have played a great level, both of us, in the third set," said the superstar Spaniard.

"I am really happy to get through this first round."

The US Open champion is seen as one of the few credible threats to Novak Djokovic, who is targeting an eighth Wimbledon crown to equal Federer's men's record. Neymar fined $3.3 million for building lake at mansion

A prosecutor in Brazil fined soccer star Neymar 16 million reais ($3.3 million) for building a lake at his mansion on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro without an environmental license, authorities said Monday.

The town council in Mangaratiba issued four fines for "environmental violations in the construction of an artificial lake at the player's mansion," the council secretariat said in a statement.

"The sanctions add up to more than 16 million reais," the statement said, a sum set out by the prosecutor's office in Mangaratiba, a tourist area around 130 kilometers (80 miles) from Rio where the Paris Saint-Germain star has his mansion.

Among "dozens of infractions" detected, the authorities listed "carrying out work subject to environmental control without authorization," capture and diversion of river water without authorization, and "removal of land and suppression of vegetation without authorization."

Neymar has 20 days to appeal the penalty, the amount of which had initially been set at five million reais, close to one million dollars.

On 22 June, after complaints based on social media posts, authorities found several environmental violations at the luxury property, where workers were building an artificial lake and beach.

Authorities cordoned off the site and ordered all activity to cease, but Brazilian media reported that Neymar threw a party there and bathed in the lake.

Neymar's press office in Brazil did not respond to an AFP request for comment.
