MADB to provide additional monsoon agricultural loans to farmers

THE Myanmar Agriculture Development Bank (MADB) has announced that additional monsoon agricultural loans will be provided to farmers who have already paid off the principal plus interest on the previous agricultural loans.

Only farmers who have already settled the previous loans will be eligible to apply for new agricultural loans and will be allowed to take out other short- and medium-term loans provided by the MADB as per the specified terms and conditions.

Last year, the bank granted K150,000 in agricultural loans per acre for monsoon paddy and K100,000 for other crops, with a five per cent annual interest rate.

The loans can be withdrawn at relevant district or township bank branches with the same interest rate as last year. The MADB has notified the farmers who have repaid previous loans to contact the respective district or township bank branches as soon as possible. — TWA/CT of the Yangon Commodity Depot mentioned the prices of Moehtaung chilli pepper and Shan potatoes.

Only the prices of the long chilli pepper and bell peppers from delta regions are shown on the list, and the Moehtaung chilli pepper price has not been mentioned up to 10 to 15 July, she continued.

Similarly, the price of Shan potatoes was known only up to 10 July and, in the remaining days of this week, only the price of Chinese potatoes was mentioned

The market situation is not fully known to those who monitor the daily price list of the commodity depot, except for those who are trading in the market, as the prices of those two types of goods are not mentioned.

Although the price of chilli peppers soared in 2023, the price in the Yangon market was unfavourable for traders. Thus, they only transported them to the Mandalay market, where a viss of chilli pepper was traded at K14,500 till mid-July, said Ko Hla Han, an owner of a chilli pepper depot from Bayintnaung Seinpan Street. A viss of Moehtaung chilli pepper in cold storage is valued at K15,000 in the Yangon market, he continued.

Therefore, people related to the commodity market, including market observers, are asking for help from those who are trading in the market to fully understand the market situation, instead of the price lists of the commodity depot, Ma Lwin, a dry goods dealer in a township, told the GNLM. — TWA/CT

LOCAL BUSINESS

Strong demand spurs kidney bean prices

THE price of kidney beans escalated in the Mandalay market on the back of domestic and foreign demand.

China and India are mostly purchasing Myanmar's kidney beans beyond high local consumption. The price hit the highest in a decade.

The price jumped to K3.85 million per tonne on 18 July, indicating a sharp increase of K170,000 per tonne within a few days.

Myanmar exports kidney beans to China, India, Japan, Singapore and other foreign countries via border and maritime trade channels. Myanmar shipped 59,425.711 tonnes of kidney beans worth US$50.31 million to foreign markets in the current financial year 2022-2023 (April-March), the Ministry of Commerce's statistics indicated.

Myanmar conveyed 1,189.65 tonnes of kidney beans worth $1.665 million to foreign trade partners between 1 April and 7 July of the current FY 2023-2024.

Kidney bean cultivation begins in October-November and they are harvested in early February. They are grown in the upper Sagaing Region, Bhamo city in Kachin Street, Kayin Street and along Ayeyawady River. The beans produced from Katha and Bhamo townships are highly demanded in the domestic market on account of their large size. — NN/EM

Chinshwehaw border trade value surpasses US$291 mln as of 7 July

MYANMAR conducted trade worth US$291.393 million with the neighbouring country China through the Chinshwehaw border between 1 April and 7 July of the current financial year 2023-2024, comprising exports worth $68.2 million and imports worth $223.182 million, the statistics released by the Ministry of Commerce indicated.

The figure was up by $266 million this FY compared to the corresponding period last FY. Both exports and imports grew over the past three months.

The main export items were green gram, rice bean, kidney bean, rubber, broken rice, natural rubber, butter bean, lentil, lablab bean and black sesame.

Iron and steel products, fertilizers, cotton, lace and lace tiles, aircon, machines and spare parts, electrical appliances and kitchen utensils were mostly imported.

YGEA raises gold reference price as spot gold price gains

THE spot gold price gained at US$1,961 per ounce, prompting the Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association (YGEA) to hike the reference price to K2,310,000 per tical (0.578 ounce or 0.016 kilogramme) on 18 July 2023.

When the spot gold price climbed to $2,040 per ounce, the YGEA raised the reference rate to above K2.4 million per tical in early May 2023.

Meanwhile, pure gold hovered at approximately K3.24 million per tical in the unofficial market.

Consequently, there is a large price difference of over K930,000 per tical between the YGEA's reference price and the price in the grey market.

YGEA calculated the price depending on the Central Bank of Myanmar's reference exchange rate of K2,100, with some addition, while the US dollar is exchanged at over K3,100 in shady dealings.

The US dollar exchange rate weighs on domestic gold prices. Mandalay Gold Entrepreneurs Association (MGEA) sold over seven visses of pure gold at the special price within two weeks beginning 19 June to stabilize the gold price.

The MGEA commenced gold sell-off at K3,050,000 per tical at noon of 19 June and sold at K3,040,000 per tical on 20 June, K3,035,000 per tical on 21 and 22 June, K3,030,000 per tical on 23, 26, 27, 28 and 30 June and 3 July, K3 million per tical on 4,5,6 and 7 July respectively.

Myanmar's gold price is highly correlated with the spot gold price and the US dollar exchange rate. The soaring dollar exchanging at over K4,500 pushed the gold price up to a record-high of K3.7 million per tical in late August 2022.

To lower the gold price, the Ministry of Natural Resources and Environmental Conservation has been selling gold ingots under the competitive bidding system in Yangon, Mandalay and Nay Pyi Taw.

With an aim at reducing gold prices, the YGEA and Mandalay Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association sold gold bullion supplied by the executive members and the members as well. — NN/EM

Embrace a vision of a modernized nation

THE aftermath of the Second World War brought about significant changes to the world map, reshaping the boundaries of nations and sparking a global drive for revitalization. The crumbling of colonial empires set the stage for a new era, and during this transformative time, the government led by General Aung San issued a powerful ultimatum on 8 November 1946. They demanded the British government declare Myanmar’s independence, threatening to withdraw the entire cabinet on 1 January 1947. This resolute statement reverberated through the corridors of power in Britain.

Before embarking on a journey to England at the invitation of the British government, General Aung San delivered a momentous New Year speech to the nation on the evening of 1 January 1947. In this historic address, the General implored the people to stand together in unity, navigating the challenges ahead with unwavering determination. Regardless of any provocations, the entire nation was urged to remain steadfast in pursuit of their goals.

By embracing the enduring vision outlined in General Aung San’s speech, Myanmar will lay the foundations of a modernized Union. It is through this collective endeavour that the nation can keep pace with the advancements of the world, while concurrently enjoying the blessings of peace, progress, and prosperity.

Remarkably, the General’s speech remains profoundly relevant in today’s context. The principles of unity, democracy, and federalism are crucial for building a peaceful and stable Union. As Myanmar strives to establish a multiparty democratic system, the nation must chart its course through challenges and triumphs, serving as the lifeblood that nourishes its diverse populace. It is the responsibility of every citizen to defend the State and protect its sovereignty against any threat, just as General Aung San envisioned.

To combat acts of sabotage and conspiracies aimed at the nation’s utter devastation, all inhabitants must unite their strengths and work collaboratively to safeguard the State. The younger generations are entrusted with the inherent duty to elevate the nation’s standing in the international community, upholding its prestige and integrity. By doing so, Myanmar will pave the way for peace, progress, and prosperity within a few short years, positioning itself at the forefront of nations embracing democratic and federal systems.

By embracing the enduring vision outlined in General Aung San’s speech, Myanmar will lay the foundations of a modernized Union. It is through this collective endeavour that the nation can keep pace with the advancements of the world, while concurrently enjoying the blessings of peace, progress, and prosperity.

Introduction

There were a few badges of BCS officers in our union. I was the last badge of BCS recruited in the year 1962. In those days, BCS officers were invested and entrusted with some powers, such as necessary administrative officers, revenue officers and as magistrates or criminal judicial officers. In my younger days, I was very much interested to become a lawyer. So, I sat for the BL examination. I passed it in the year 1964. To the credit and fortune or good luck of my BL degree, I was called to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in 1981. And I was assigned to serve in the International Law and Treaties Division as the Deputy Director in 1981

A civil officer till I retired

First and foremost, may I submit the role of civil service in any form of government? There will always be a fine balance between the civil service being neutral and non-political, and responsive. The difference between Ministers and civil servants is that Ministers look after politics getting a sense of the ground, deciding the national direction, selling policies to the public and making them work. But a minister must also be hands-on in his ministry, articulating clear strategy and making sure civil servants implement policies well.

The essential role of civil servants

The essential role of civil servants is to make sure by the Home Minister that the civil servants implement policies quite well. The Home Minister will have to provide political guidance to the civil servants to deliver results. At the same time, the Home Minister will have to provide political guidance to the civil servants to deliver results. At the same time, the Home Minister must also protect the civil servants from political interference and not involve them in political activities. The civil service is not independent of the elected government, like the judiciary. As for the civil servants, their responsibility is policy translating political goals into workable plans. The civil servants must therefore understand the political context and the thinking of the political leadership. Yet civil servants must be politically impartial. They must not campaign for or against any party, and not misuse state resources or powers for partisan purposes.

As an example of the civil service system, I would like to present to you the respective systems of the United States, Britain and China as follows: -

United States

At the federal level are not one but at least four layers of political appointees. The president is elected and appoints not just the secretaries, but deputy secretaries, assistant secretaries and deputy assistant secretaries.

Britain

The British have the classic traditional model of an impartial civil service serving whoever is the elected government of the day. For much of the 20th century, this was workable because whichever party was in power, they shared the same basic assumptions. But in recent decades, this has not been the case and the system has not worked so well.

Successive British governments introduced political advisers in the cabinet office, the Prime Minister’s office and key ministries which the Prime Minister and his senior colleagues could rely upon to develop and implement their political goals and help them reelected. The need for a great meeting between the ministers and the civil service has increased. Britain now has almost 100 special advisers.

China

Politics is in command. The Communist Party permeates the whole government. It goes all the way down to the village, the factory floor, the military unit. At every level, the party secretary calls the shots. The government leader is only second in command. At Pin-nacle, there is the secretary of the party. The key decisions are made in party committees, rather than in the apparatus of the State Council.

Conclusion

There are some comments on the status of BCS or general administrative officers. The general administrative officers are commented as a jack of all trades, but master of none. I believe I am not included in that type. To the credit of my BL degree and my efforts, I was appointed as a special power magistrate and empowered to try and take all criminal cases, except for those punishable with death. And during the tenure of the “Revolutionary Council” era, I was appointed as a legal consultant and advisor to the then special tribunals. And as mentioned in the introduction of this essay, I was called to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, due to my BL degree. I was informally addressed by the Minister for Foreign Affairs as “a legal expert”.

Hairdressers, beauticians, accountants may be at higher risk of ovarian cancer

ACCORDING to a case-control research published online in the journal Occupational & Environmental Medicine, certain occupations, such as hairdressers, beauticians, and accountants, may be associated with an elevated risk of ovarian cancer. Those working in sales, retail, clothing and construction industries may also be vulnerable, while high cumulative exposure to particular agents, including talcum powder, ammonia, propellant gases, petrol and bleaches may have an important role, the findings suggest.

Few modifiable risk factors for ovarian cancer have been identified. Environmental factors, including those associated with the workplace, may increase the risk, but relatively few studies have evaluated the occupational hazards faced by women, say the researchers. And those that have, have often failed to account for potentially influential factors, previous employment history, or have included relatively few participants, so limiting the findings.

Lifetime employment history

To try and avoid these issues, the researchers drew on lifetime employment history from a population-based case-control study, to carry out an exploratory analysis looking at two dimensions of the workplace environment: employment in a particular role or industry; and specific occupational exposures. They included participants in the PRevention of OVarian Cancer in Quebec (PROVAQ) study, all of whom were aged 18–79, and who had been recruited from seven Montreal hospitals between 2010 and 2016 after being diagnosed with epithelial ovarian cancer.

In all, 491 of these women meeting the inclusion criteria for the current study were matched for age and electoral roll district with 897 women who didn’t have ovarian cancer. Information was collected from all the participants on sociodemographic background, medical history, prescribed meds, reproductive history, weight and height, lifestyle factors and lifetime employment history.

Women with ovarian cancer

More of the women with ovarian cancer had lower educational attainment, shorter oral contraceptive use, and either no or fewer children than women in the comparison group. These are all potential risk factors for the disease. For each job held for at least six months, participants reported the job title: start and end dates; working hours, including shift work; and main tasks performed.

Cumulative length of employment in a job or industry was then categorized as never, less than 10 years, and 10 or more years. The Canadian job-exposure matrix (CANJEM) was used to calculate participants’ exposure to specific agents in the workplace, and the relationship between exposure to each of the 29 most common agents and ovarian cancer risk was then assessed.

After accounting for potentially influential factors, the calculations indicated that several job roles may be linked to a heightened risk of the disease. Specifically, working for 10 or more years as a hairdresser, barber, beautician and in related roles was associated with a three-fold higher risk, while employment for 10 or more years in accountancy was associated with a doubling in risk, and working in construction with a near tripling in risk.

Similarly, long term work in

The research indicates a potential association between these occupations and an increased risk of ovarian cancer, highlighting the importance of further investigation and awareness within these professional fields. PHOTO: PIX FOR VISUAL PURPOSE/APP

the clothing industry, including embroidery, was associated with an 85 per cent heightened risk of developing the disease while working in sales or retail was associated with heightened risks, respectively, of 45 per cent and 59 per cent. Heightened risks of more than 40 per cent were observed for high cumulative exposure (eight or more years)—compared with none—to 18 different agents. These included talcum powder; ammonia; hydrogen peroxide; hair dust; synthetic fibres; polyester fibres; organic dyes and pigments; cellulose; formaldehyde; propellant gases; naturally occurring chemicals in petrol and bleaches.

Workplace factors

Hairdressers, beauticians and related workers were the jobs most frequently exposed to 13 agents, including ammonia, hydrogen peroxide, organic dyes and pigments, and bleaches, and the second most frequent occupation exposed to talcum powder. It’s not clear, however, if these associations were driven by a single agent, a combination, or other workplace factors, say the researchers.

World must prepare for more intense heatwaves: UN

THE world should prepare to face increasingly intense heatwaves, the United Nations warned on Tuesday, as countries across the Northern Hemisphere reeled from soaring temperatures.

“These events will continue to grow in intensity, and the world needs to prepare for more intense heatwaves,” John Nairn, a senior extreme heat advisor at the UN’s World Meteorological Organization (WMO), told reporters in Geneva.

His comments came as Europe was bracing for new high temperatures on Tuesday under relentless heatwaves and wildfires that have scorched swathes of the Northern Hemisphere, forcing the evacuation of 1,200 children close to a Greek seaside resort.

Health authorities have sounded alarms from North America to Europe and Asia, urging people to stay hydrated and shelter from the burning sun, in a stark reminder of the effects of global warming.

Heatwaves are amongst the deadliest natural hazards, with hundreds of thousands of people dying from preventable heat-related causes each year, Nairn said.

Heat is a rapidly-growing health risk, due to burgeoning urbanization, an increase in high temperature extremes, and demographic changes in countries with ageing populations.

Nairn said that the number of drawn-out and simultaneous heatwaves in the Northern Hemisphere had swelled sixfold since the 1980s. — AFP

Marine animal poisonings overwhelm California volunteers

DENISE Christ regularly comes across injured wildlife in her work rescuing beached or stranded marine mammals along the California coast.

But she’s been shocked by the hundreds of sea lions and dolphins found on the shore in recent weeks, dead or dying from neurotoxin poisoning.

“Heartbreaking, to say the least,” said Christ, the Ventura County stranding coordinator for the Channel Islands Marine and Wildlife Institute (CIMWI).

The animals were sickened by domoic acid, a neurotoxin produced by algae that are a food source for fish, which are then eaten by sea lions and dolphins.

Algal blooms are not unusual this time of year, but this summer’s crisis follows another one less than a year ago, alarming and overwhelming the CIMWI team based about 120 miles (190 kilometres) north of Los Angeles.

“We had a pretty intense bloom last summer but this year is way worse than we’ve ever seen in the 35 years I’ve been practicing marine mammal medicine,” said Sam Dover, the executive director and cofounder of CIMWI. — AFP

2.7 mln people displaced by drought in Horn of Africa: WFP

DROUGHT conditions in the Horn of Africa region have displaced around 2.7 million people, the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP) said Sunday.

In a regional situation update report, the WFP said that 1.7 million people in Somalia, 516,000 people in Ethiopia and 466,000 people in Kenya have been displaced by drought.

The WFP report further disclosed that the arrival of hundreds of thousands of refugees in drought affected areas of the three countries is exacerbating food insecurity in the region.

“The Horn of Africa region has experienced severe meteorological drought following consecutive seasons below-normal rainfall since late 2020, impacting agriculture, livestock, vegetation, water resources, livelihoods and grazing resources,” the WFP report said.

The UN agency estimated that prolonged drought in the Horn of Africa region has left 23.4 million people acutely food insecure and 5.1 million children acutely malnourished. — Xinhua

Leaks, repairs, stress: how skeleton crew stopped Red Sea oil disaster

WHEN an alarm sounded on the decaying oil tanker off Yemen’s coast, signalling a leak in its engine room, Hussein Nasser quickly sprang into action. Working around the clock for days, he and the half-dozen other people on board the FSO Safer fashioned makeshift iron strips to patch a burst pipe, before divers arrived to install a permanent steel plate to keep seawater from sinking the ship.

The incident in 2020 was just one example of how a motley crew of sailors and engineers — numbering no more than seven or eight at any given time — have laboured for

Childhood routine jabs pick up after Covid backslide: UN

ROUTINE vaccination of children is picking up again after a dramatic drop during the Covid-19 crisis, the United Nations said Tuesday, warning that dangerous gaps remain.

Four million more children received routine childhood vaccines last year than in 2021, according to data published by the UN health and children's agencies.

"That's a good news story," World Health Organization vaccine chief Kate O'Brien told AFP.

"On average, countries around the world are recovering and are immunizing towards the level of immunization that was achieved before the pandemic hit."

WHO chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus agreed, describing the fresh data as "encouraging".

He warned though that "global and regional averages don't tell the whole story and mask severe and persistent inequities."

"When countries and regions lag, children pay the price."

Despite the progress, 20.5 million children missed out on one or more routine jabs in 2022.

That was down from 24.4 million a year earlier, but still well above the 18.4 million who missed out in 2019, before the pandemic hit.

O'Brien voiced concern the recovery was "very uneven".

Dramatic improvements in vaccine coverage in populous countries like India and Indonesia had masked slower recovery and even continued declines in most low-income countries, the data showed. — AFP

US approves new drug to prevent RSV in babies, toddlers

THE US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) on Monday approved a new drug to protect babies and toddlers from Respiratory Syncytial Virus (RSV).

The drug, named Beyfortus, is a monoclonal antibody with activity against RSV. It is approved to use in neonates and infants born during or entering their first RSV season, and in children up to 24 months of age who remain vulnerable to severe RSV disease through their second RSV season, the FDA said in a release.

"RSV can cause serious disease in infants and some children and results in a large number of emergency department and physician office visits each year," said John Farley, director of the Office of Infectious Diseases in the FDA's Centre for Drug Evaluation and Research.

"Today's approval addresses the great need for products to help reduce the impact of RSV disease on children, families and the healthcare system," Farley said. — Xinhua

WHO concerned at rise in Poland bird flu cases in cats

POLAND is the first country to report "high numbers" of cats infected with bird flu across a large area, the WHO said Monday, adding that the risk of human infection remained low.

The World Health Organization said that since Polish health authorities informed it last month of unusual cat deaths across the country, 29 cats had tested positive for H5N1 bird flu.

They were among 46 cats and one captive caracal tested for the virus, it said, adding that 14 of the infected animals were reported to have been euthanized, while another 11 had died. The last death was reported on 30 June.

"The source of the exposure of cats to the virus is currently unknown and epizootic investigations are ongoing," WHO said in a statement. — AFP

Animals become healing companions in Mexico hospital

NINE-YEAR-OLD Alessia Ramos gently pets a hamster at a Mexican hospital where animals ranging from Australian parakeets to a Siberian Husky are being used to provide mental health therapy.

"It helps me to relieve my anxiety, to control my emotions, to relax and be more focused," said Ramos, who has been diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, or ADHD.

Eight dogs are also among the furry therapists at the National Centre for Mental Health and Palliative Care in Mexico City.

Harley, a five-year-old Pug, lost his eye in an accident but made a quick recovery, said doctor Lucia Ledesma, head of mental health services at the Institute for Social Security and Services for State Workers, the agency of which the hospital is a part.

"We follow that example of resilience in the face of adversity. He's a dog that does everything, without impediments," she said.

The facility is the only public hospital in Mexico using animals to treat mental illnesses, though such therapy is also practiced in other countries.

"Contact with animals generates powerful neuropsychological changes that contribute to lowering states of stress and anxiety, as well as benefiting other cognitive processes," Ledesma said.

Harley became famous in Mexico when he entered Covid-19 wards wearing a protective suit, booties and glasses to boost the morale of medical personnel working long hours away from their families.

"It was the only animal-assisted intervention in the world within a Covid area," Ledesma said.

"There were dogs in hospitals in other countries, but they never entered the Covid zone. We've received international recognition."

Silvia Hernandez first met Harley when she was working as a nurse during the pandemic, which left her with mental health issues for which she is still undergoing therapy.

"He came straight to me, as if he knew me, as if we were great friends," she said. — AFP

Japan PM steps up efforts for stable energy supply from Middle East

Japanese Prime Minister Fumio Kishida (2nd from L) and Qatar's emir, Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani (2nd from R) hold talks in Doha on 18 July 2023. PHOTO: KYODO

JAPANESE Prime Minister Fumio Kishida on Tuesday accelerated efforts to bolster relations with Middle Eastern countries, including Qatar, to secure a stable supply of fossil fuel to the resource-poor Asian nation from the energy domain. In Doha, Kishida met Qatar's emir, Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad al-Thani, after visiting Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates for two days from Sunday to strengthen "resource diplomacy" with the Middle Eastern region, where China has recently increased its influence. As the Middle East is strategically important for Japan, which relies on imports for over 90 per cent of its energy needs, the Asian country has long attempted to maintain friendly ties with nations in the resource-rich area. With global energy price moves becoming precarious since Russia invaded Ukraine in February 2022, Japan has grown more eager to take necessary measures to procure crude oil and liquefied natural gas from the Middle East steadily, analysts said. Many countries in the Middle East, meanwhile, have been trying to reduce their oil dependency, given that the value of the fossil fuel might decrease in the future amid the global decarbonization trend. It was the first time a Japanese prime minister visited the Middle East in over three years. During that time, China boosted its influence there by taking actions such as brokering a deal to re-establish diplomatic relations between Iran and Saudi Arabia. — Kyodo

Australia and China finance chiefs make 'good progress' at G20

AUSTRALIA and China's finance ministers met Tuesday on the sidelines of G20 talks in India, officials said, the first such meeting for four years as their relationship slowly thaws. "A more stable relationship between Australia and China is in the best interests of both nations," Australia's Treasurer Jim Chalmers said, after meeting China's Liu Kun in Gandhinagar. "This is about re-establishing a dialogue that hasn't existed for more than four years." China is Australia's largest trading partner. Chalmers said he had a "productive and promising" discussion, adding the pair had "made some good progress". The talks came days after Australia's Foreign Minister Penny Wong met China's top foreign policy official Wang Yi. Relations between Beijing and Canberra have been improving since the election of Australia's centre-left Labour government in May last year. While China has since scrapped costly import bans on products such as coal and timber, it is yet to remove tariffs on Australian products including barley, wine and lobsters. Prime Minister Anthony Albanese has been invited to visit China at some point this year, the first Australian leader to do so since 2016. — AFP

Philippines launches its first sovereign investment fund

PHILIPPINE President Ferdinand Romualdez Marcos on Tuesday signed into law the Maharlika Investment Fund (MIF) Act, establishing the country's first-ever sovereign investment fund. "For the first time in the history of the Philippines, we now have a sovereign wealth fund designed to drive economic development," Marcos said at the signing ceremony at the presidential palace, stressing the MIF is "a bold step" towards the country's economic transformation. Budget Secretary Amenah Pangandaman said the newly-created fund is envisioned to be invested in various assets, including foreign currencies, fixed-income instruments, domestic and foreign corporate bonds, joint ventures, mergers and acquisitions, real estate and high-impact infrastructure projects, and projects contributing to sustainable development. Finance Secretary Benjamin Diokno said the MIF will accelerate the country's infrastructure development, create high-quality jobs, attract more foreign investors, and propel the country towards higher growth. — Xinhua

UN official sees Cambodia's plunged poverty rate as positive step towards LDC graduation

CAMBODIA'S remarkable decline in poverty rate is a positive step towards the Southeast Asian country's graduation from the Least Developed Country (LDC) status, a United Nations official said on Tuesday. The poverty rate in Cambodia has declined to 16.6 per cent in 2022 from 36.7 per cent in 2014, as per the 2023 Global Multidimensional Poverty Index (MPI) released last week by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the University of Oxford. The number of poor people was halved from 5.6 million to 2.8 million, the report said, adding that one in five Cambodians moved out of poverty in just 7.5 years. "Cambodia's progress in reducing poverty is a positive indication towards the country's LDC graduation," the UNDP Resident Representative to Cambodia, Alissar Chaker, told Xinhua. Nevertheless, two trends noteworthy of attention were captured in the index. The reduction of MPI in urban areas showed no significant progress as compared to the rural ones, while the number of out-of-school children rose sharply during the measured period. Chaker said Cambodia, among other 193 countries who have adopted the Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development in 2015, pledged to leave no one behind. "Therefore, it is important to maintain the positive momentum and ensure progress on all indicators," she said. "UNDP is committed to continuing the acceleration of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and supporting the government and civil society's efforts to reduce the bottlenecks and build resilience." Cambodian Prime Minister Samdech Techo Hun Sen said last month that the kingdom is projected to graduate from a least developed country status by 2027. — Xinhua

Markets drop as China growth worries offset Fed rate hopes

MOST Asian markets sank Tuesday as further weakness in China's economy fuelled worries about the effects on global growth, overshadowing optimism that the United States is winning its battle against inflation and could avoid a recession.

Regional traders extended Monday's retreat sparked by disappointing second-quarter data out of Beijing that missed forecasts badly and highlighted the tough job officials face in getting the country's post-Covid recovery back on track.

And while there is an expectation that fresh stimulus measures are in the pipeline, analysts warned that leaders were limited in how far they could go.

The figures came after last week's reports showing inflation had flatlined, suggesting China was on the brink of a period of painful deflation, while exports plunged for a second straight month.

"You're gonna see some stimulus coming in, which means that the second quarter may have been more of the low, the third quarter a bit better," Joyce Chang, global head of research at JPMorgan, said on Bloomberg Television. "But we've taken half a per cent off of China's growth and I think that the deflation risks are there."

Hong Kong led losses Tuesday, shedding more than two per cent following a five-day rally, as it reopened a day after being shut because of a severe storm.

Shanghai, Sydney, Seoul, Singapore, Manila, Jakarta, Wellington and Taipei also dropped, though Tokyo, Mumbai and Bangkok edged higher.

Paris dipped in the morning, while Frankfurt was flat and London edged up. The losses came despite a positive lead from Wall Street.

In a report on China, Alicia Garcia Herrero and Jianwei Xu at Natixis CIB said in a report: "We are conservative about the extent of the policy support down the road. Fiscal policies may not be easily implemented in the current situation, given the already high public debt and the reduced efficiency of these policies." — AFP

Seoul files suit against order to pay Elliott in Samsung fight

SOUTH Korea has filed a suit against an order to pay hedge fund Elliott more than $50 million in damages over the controversial 2015 merger of two Samsung affiliates, Seoul's justice ministry said Tuesday. Elliott sued the government in 2018 after losing a proxy fight opposing the merger between Cheil Industries and Samsung C&T.

The US activist investor -- C&T's second-largest single shareholder in 2015 — had argued that the takeover willfully undervalued the construction firm's share price, at an unacceptable cost to its shareholders.

The deal went through after the state-run National Pension Service (NPS) — which had a greater stake in Samsung C&T than Elliott and was deemed a deciding vote — approved it. — AFP

McDonald's UK apologizes after racism, sexual misconduct report

THE head of McDonald's in the UK apologized after the BBC on Tuesday reported allegations of sexual misconduct, racism and bullying by staff at the fast-food giant.

More than 100 former and current workers of the US company had made the allegations, the state broadcaster said after it began investigating in February.

This was after McDonald's signed a legally-binding agreement with Britain's Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC), pledging to protect staff from sexual harassment.

"Every one of the 177,000 employees in McDonald's UK deserves to work in a safe, respectful and inclusive workplace," its UK chief executive Alistair Macrow told the BBC in response to the allegations.

"There are clearly instances where we have fallen short and for that we deeply apologize." — AFP

Dutch e-bike firm VanMoof declared bankrupt

DUTCH electric bike maker VanMoof, whose popularity earned it the name "Tesla of e-bikes" but has faced financial problems, has been declared bankrupt by a court, the company said Tuesday. The company had raised $128 million in September 2021 in an effort to expand as it rode a boom in the e-bike sector after the Covid pandemic prompted people to seek alternatives means of transportation. But it has struggled since then, with Dutch media saying it was plagued by bad publicity as bikes broke down frequently and repairs took too long.

The Amsterdam firm

lost almost 80 million euros ($90 million) in 2021 and the same figure last year, according to financial daily Het Financieele Dagblad (FD).

India’s opposition parties meet for general election next year

KEY leaders of 26 Indian opposition parties on Tuesday met in the southern Indian city of Bengaluru to formulate a strategy for the country’s general election due next year.

The leaders have converged in the Karnataka capital to come up with a common agenda that will form the basis of the election manifesto of all parties.

This is the second big meeting of the opposition parties in the run-up to the general elections. The first meeting was held last month in Patna, the capital city of Bihar in which 16 parties participated.

In the 2019 general elections, the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) led by Prime Minister Narendra Modi won 303 seats in the 543-member strong Lok Sabha (locally the lower house of India’s parliament). Apart from this, BJP is in power in more than half of the Indian states, either directly or as part of a ruling alliance.

Meanwhile, the BJP is trying to garner support from its allies to put up a strong image of itself.

The BJP president J P Nadda has announced that 38 National Democratic Alliance (NDA) partners have confirmed their attendance to a meeting to be held in the national capital on Tuesday.

14,000 evacuated during Pakistan’s monsoon rains

MORE than 14,000 people and their cattle were evacuated from villages in eastern Pakistan, authorities said Tuesday, following the arrival of monsoon rains across South Asia.

The summer monsoon brings South Asia 70-80 per cent of its annual rainfall between June and September and is vital for the livelihoods of millions of farmers in a region of around two billion people.

But it also brings landslides and floods, and scientists have said climate change is making seasonal rains heavier and more unpredictable.

Rising water levels inundated at least 15 riverside villages and submerged large swathes of agricultural land, destroying crops such as corn, in Kasur district, close to the city of Lahore in Pakistan’s most populous province of Punjab.

“We had been warned that there could be a flood. But it all happened very suddenly,” villager Ashfaq Bhatti told AFP.

“My family all made it out in time, but we have lost our livelihood. All our crops are now sitting underwater.”

The provincial disaster management agency said people were being evacuated to 11 relief sites.

It said the floods were worsened by India’s decision to release more water into downstream areas in Pakistan after torrential monsoon rains that killed more than 90 people. “We want to go home and start fixing the damage. But they keep telling us that more rains are coming,” Muhammad Farooq, another villager who had been evacuated, told AFP. — AFP

Weakened Typhoon Talim hits Viet Nam after passing through China

TYPHOON Talim reached Viet Nam Tuesday after passing through China less forcefully than feared, with no deaths reported in either country despite nearly 260,000 people relocating before the storm hit.

Talim first made landfall in southern China late Monday evening, battering the coast of Guangdong province with maximum winds of 136.8 kilometres (85 miles) per hour.

By Tuesday it had weakened to a tropical storm as it slowly made its way across the Vietnamese island of Bach Long Vi before moving towards the neighbouring Chinese region of Guangxi.

The storm passed by Bach Long Vi, an outlying island east of the capital Hanoi, “with maximum winds of about 60 kilometres per hour”, the national weather bureau said Tuesday.

ADB leads 115-mln-USD global programme to reduce coastal pollution

SEVERAL multilateral lenders have partnered to lead a global programme to reduce pollution in coastal areas and river basins, the Manila-based Asian Development Bank (ADB) said on Tuesday.

The Clean and Healthy Oceans Integrated Programme, with a budget of 115 million US dollars, was launched jointly by ADB, the Development Bank of Latin America (CAF), the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), and the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

The programme will focus on curbing coastal pollution at the source, improving sustainable practices on land and in marine habitats, and mitigating greenhouse gas emissions.

It is expected to benefit 200,000 hectares of landscape and 14.3 million hectares of marine habitats, while mitigating 5.6 million metric tons of greenhouse gas emissions, the ADB said in a statement. — Xinhua

Rich-poor split could tighten ‘grip of poverty’: World Bank chief

THE new head of the World Bank said Tuesday that growing divides between rich and poor nations risked deepening poverty in the developing world, at a meeting of G20 finance ministers in India.

Many countries are still recovering from the double blow of the coronavirus pandemic and fallout from Russia’s war in Ukraine — which hit global fuel and commodity prices.

Climate change, meanwhile, is most painfully affecting some of the poorest countries least able to cope.

The G20 talks come after Russia on Monday refused to extend a deal allowing critical Ukrainian grain exports through the Black Sea, sparking outrage from the United Nations, which has warned millions of the world’s poorest would “pay the price”.

“We are living in complicated times; I have to allude to the fact that Russia yesterday withdrew from the Black Sea-Ukraine initiative — and we are here discussing how to help the vulnerable countries”, German central bank chief Joachim Nagel told AFP.

“That is really strange, and many countries blamed Russia for doing this.”

warned it was “likely to have an impact on food prices, which will more heavily impact poorer nations”.

Chinese premier meets US climate envoy

CHINESE Premier Li Qiang met US Special Presidential Envoy for Climate John Kerry in Beijing on Tuesday.

China and the United States are both important countries in the world, and enhanced cooperation between them will benefit not only each other but also the whole world, Li said. The two sides should take concrete actions to implement the consensus reached by the two heads of state at their meeting in Bali, Indonesia last year; properly manage differences and bring China-US relations back to the track of sound and stable development at an early date, he said. Noting that the global response to climate change is an arduous task, Li called for practising multilateralism and adherence to the goals and principles set out in the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Paris Agreement.

Li said all parties should shoulder their respective responsibilities and abide by the principle of common but differentiated responsibilities in addressing climate change.

Developed countries should take the lead in reducing emissions and fulfil their financial commitments as soon as possible while developing countries should make contributions within their capacity, the premier said. — Xinhua

Iran says US accountable for nuclear deal stalemate and tensions in Gulf region

THE United States should be held responsible for the stalemate in negotiations to revive the Iran nuclear deal and the escalating tensions in the Gulf region, Iran’s Foreign Ministry said Monday.

Nasser Kanaani, a spokesperson for Iran’s Foreign Ministry, made the remarks at a weekly press conference while commenting on the latest developments regarding the indirect talks between Tehran and Washington on the revival of the nuclear deal, formally known as the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA).

The negotiation path is still “open” and the nuclear deal’s revival can be pursued through diplomatic channels, Kanaani said, urging the US side to show its determination and to make its “definite” political decision to this end.

Iran signed the JCPOA in July 2015 with China, France, Germany, Russia, the European Union, Britain, and the United States. It agreed to put some curbs on its nuclear programme in return for the removal of sanctions on the country. Washington, however, pulled out of the deal in May 2018 and reimposed its unilateral sanctions on Tehran.

Tensions between the two countries have remained high ever since. Recently, Washington expressed its intention to send fighter jets and warships to the Hormuz Strait in response to Iran’s alleged “attempt to seize oil tankers”. — Xinhua

US deploying warship, planes to deter Iran ship seizures

THE United States is deploying a destroyer as well as F-35 and F-16 warplanes to the Middle East to deter Iran from seizing ships in the Gulf, the Pentagon said Monday.

The move came after the Iranian Navy tried to seize two merchant vessels in the Strait of Hormuz and the Gulf of Oman earlier this month, in one incident opening fire at one of the merchant vessels.

“In light of this continued threat and in coordination with our partners and allies, the (Defence) Department is increasing our presence and ability to monitor the Strait and surrounding waters,” Deputy Pentagon Press Secretary Sabrina Singh said, calling on Tehran to “immediately cease these destabilizing actions that threaten the free flow of commerce through this strategic waterway”.

On Friday, a senior defence official said the United States was flying A-10 Warthog warplanes over the Gulf, armed “with the kinds of munitions that would be useful to go against fast boats and moving targets.” As Iranian “fast attack boats, fast attack craft have increased as a maritime threat, we’ve tried a number of different ways to tackle them. And the A-10 has proven capable of that,” the official added. Washington said its forces blocked two attempts by the Iran to seize commercial tankers in international waters off Oman on 5 July, while Tehran took control of a commercial ship the following day. — AFP

MATCH officials explaining VAR decisions live to stadiums and television audiences for Women's World Cup games will make the process "more transparent", FIFA's referee chief Pierluigi Collina said on Tuesday.

The concept will be used at a major tournament for the first time when the World Cup starts on Thursday, having been trialled at the men's Club World Cup in Morocco this year and the men's U20 World Cup in Argentina last month.

Collina, chairman of the FIFA Referees Committee, told reporters that there had been positive feedback from the trials.

"We want to give more transparency, more understanding of the decision made by the referee," the Italian said.

Messi gets down to business in Florida heat

LIONEL Messi got down to business with his new Inter Miami team-mates on Tuesday, taking part in his first full training session with the Major League Soccer club.

The Argentine World Cup winner took to the club's training field at 9 am local time with temperatures already above 30 degrees Celsius (86 degrees Fahrenheit).

Chatting with Venezuelan international Josef Martinez, likely to be his strike partner for Miami, Messi was watched by over 200 media representatives who had attended the session.

Miami's training sessions had barely attracted double figure attendance from the media prior to Messi's arrival.

Messi had been unveiled to the club's supporters at the stadium on Sunday at a celebratory event alongside Miami co-owner David Beckham and his first game is scheduled for Friday. Miami, who are ranked last in the 29-team MLS, face Mexican club Cruz Azul in the opening game of the new Leagues Cup, a tournament style competition featuring all top flight teams from MLS and Mexico's Liga MX.

It is not clear yet if Messi will start that game or make a cameo appearance from the substitute's bench and his coach, fellow Argentine Gerardo 'Tata' Martino has asked for patience while the 36-year-old builds up his fitness. — AFP
