Sagaing Region supplies 60,000 rice bags beyond self-sufficiency

AYEYAWADY, Bago and Yangon regions have been considered the leading rice-producing areas in Myanmar before the year 2000 and then, Sagaing Region emerged as a rice bowl over a decade.

At present, Sagaing Region became one of the rice bowls, with a supply of about 60,000 rice bags per month beyond self-sufficiency. It helps strengthen the rice supply chain.

There was an inflow of approximately 15,000 bags of rice to Yangon and 29,000 bags to Mandalay market in mid-July from Sagaing Region. About 15,000 bags of rice were sent to Nay Pyi Taw, Magway Region and northern and southern Shan State from Sagaing Region as well.

Earlier, the lower regions had to supply rice to Sagaing Region. Thanks to the irrigation system, the region itself can supply rice to other regions now.

Agriculture is the backbone of the economy. There are 17 million acres of monsoon and summer paddy fields in the country.

Furthermore, Magway and Taninthayi regions are the main suppliers of edible oil crops. Thaphanseik Dam's irrigation network covers 400,000 acres of monsoon paddy and 300,000 acres of summer paddy. The dam provided irrigation water supply since 2001.

Before 2015, rice from Rakhine State flowed into Yangon's market through the Pyay area. The supply from Rakhine State has become extremely low in a couple of years, said a rice trader engaged in Bayintnaung Commodity Wholesale Centre.

The Ayeyawady Delta regions and western Bago area primarily supply rice to the Yangon market for local consumption and foreign markets. There is an influx of about 100,000 rice bags per day to Wahdan and Bayintnaung Wholesale centres utilizing road and sea transport, the Global New Light of

Myanmar quoted a rice trader as saying.

Myanmar shipped 3.58 million tonnes of rice to foreign markets in the 2017-2018 financial year and over two million tonnes in the 2022-2023 FY. The country aims to achieve a rice export target of 2 million tonnes for the current FY as well.

Rice export is estimated at 100,000 tonnes per month in the post-harvest season of monsoon paddy this year. The high-grade Pawsan from Shwebo, Sagaing Region, is worth over K100,000 per bag and Shwebo paddy is valued at around K2.9 million per 100 baskets in mid-July 2023.

Shwebo Pawsan's rice price was volatile in H2 last year.

About hundreds of rice bags were reportedly stockpiled at Wahdan depot and there were stocks of 100,000 rice bags in the regions then.

The real-time market reports with price updates from the Sagaing Region help identify fake rumours in the market for the price hike, a market observer pointed out. — TWA/EM

Beware of seasonal flu: Protecting all age groups

Seasonal flu poses a significant threat throughout the nation, particularly in areas with high rainfall in lower Myanmar. In some regions, the severity of the disease has led to an influx of flu patients seeking medical treatment at hospitals and clinics. This scenario is a common sight during the monsoon season in Myanmar.

Globally, approximately five million people fall victim to seasonal flu each year, with respiratory problems claiming the lives of around 650,000 individuals. The World Health Organization has highlighted that the infectious respiratory virus is particularly lethal for children under the age of five, especially those in developing countries. The flu not only hampers work productivity but also causes absences from school. It is crucial for everyone to be cautious without succumbing to excessive worry.

Currently, seasonal flu remains a significant concern for people of all ages. Its impact on health, work, and education should not be taken lightly. By maintaining awareness, following preventive measures, and seeking medical assistance, when necessary, everybody can collectively protect themselves and their communities from the seasonal flu. Let us prioritize well-being and contribute to a healthier, flu-free Myanmar.

Time Management of Drawing a Systematic Study Schedule

by teachers just another day can be conditionally postponed by students to a later but not-too-long date if they are dab hands with timetables.

Being able to know the subject nature inside out turns out to be the third consideration for planning a study schedule of great importance. It will, in the main, be found that there are two kinds of subjects-art subjects and science subjects. Since language is indispensable for learning art subjects, learners must be fluent language users. It can be even seen that some art learners are weak in subject-related languages sometimes. They had better spare time for language study and practice besides subject time, especially if the language is not their mother tongue. Not only that, art subjects also require extra-curricular reading, excursions, sightseeing tours, and group discussions, which usually take time, apart from classroom study. And linguistic excellence is often needed while science subjects are being studied. Not having language accuracy in science subjects may lead to any misunderstanding about scientific information. More importantly, subjects of science entail laboratory experiments that are likely to cause lengthy delays. All in all, both kinds of subjects normally keep students, especially undergraduates or postgraduates, taking long in their studies for term papers, dissertations, and further research.

When beginning to make a study schedule, the difficulty of subjects or studies should be thought of at the very first. Frankly enough, most students are observed to start studying the subject that interests them quite a lot, or that they like most. This is just a big mistake in their study routines. Of course, the subjects at which they are actually bad ought to be at the top of their study list, being arranged in order of difficulty as much as necessary. After that, students need to think about whether they have put ad-equated time into each subject or study. It will be better if they like to take their subject lessons back within 24 hours after teaching the lessons is finished at school, or otherwise, having school lessons again merely after such these 24 hours would undermine their ability to have understood those lessons bit by bit. Also, students have to sit at the study table around 15 minutes in advance with their physical readiness, physiological readiness, and emotional readiness for study. Last but not least, self-study time must be totally free from playtime, rest time, bath time, food time, relaxation time, sleep time, and so forth, even though the short length, few study periods and poor sequence of subjects are in the timetable. Any private time of study should by no means be affected by those times. Furthermore, study timetables can be fixed with any regularity, depending upon the periods when a student would be perfectly willing to carry out their own study.

As mentioned above, there must be sufficient time taken for every subject or study in a schedule. But some unexpected flaws like not getting enough time for any subject or study can happen even with a well-prepared schedule. If so, ample or extra time should have been added to that schedule, especially by moderating the time in which nothing is done or reducing the time that is given to a subject more than average. Alternatively, students must be able to adjust their timetables still being used in such a way that the subjects which they strengthen thanks to the timetables have been left below in the study list, and then, the subjects in which they are still weak are put first in the list.

As said earlier, time is constantly going by without being controlled. Hence, organizing the coming time is certainly a sort of taking quite a great risk as well. It is generally accepted that a time schedule is an essential component of successful study. On the other hand, keeping a study timetable is of its own strengths and weaknesses. As regards the strengths, a timetable arouses students' intrinsic motivation for studying as well as providing them with a systematic approach to study effectiveness and efficiency. Moreover, schedule drawers can guess pretty easily what will happen next on the route to study, or they will never get lost on the road to education. As for the weaknesses, the students who cannot run their own study schedules very well would possibly be under their control, for instance, studying in sheer self-limited time. Re-drawing a study timetable several times is not likewise a good habit. Following the timetable to the letter for the duration of the first few weeks, students do not have to postpone or waste the time approximately calculated in that timetable for any reason. The weaknesses of a study schedule notwithstanding, the so-called 'time management' should have been done beforehand by each and every individual student. Time is priceless, mainly the present. ■

Google testing AI news writing tool

Google is working with news publishers to develop a new AI-backed tool aimed at assisting journalists in reporting and writing their stories.

Google is working with news publishers to design a new AI-backed tool to help journalists report and write their stories, the company said on Thursday.

The project was first reported by The New York Times, which is working with The Washington Post and The Wall Street Journal in testing the new product.

Citing anonymous sources, the report said the tool — known internally as Genesis — was in an early testing stage, but impressive enough to be found “unsettling” by some of the news executives that saw its capabilities.

A Google spokeswoman said in a statement that “in partnership with news publishers, especially smaller publishers, we’re in the earliest stages of exploring ideas to potentially provide AI-enabled tools to help their journalists with their work.”

She added that “quite simply, these tools are not intended to, and cannot, replace the essential role journalists have in reporting, creating and fact-checking their articles.”

The tool would function as a sort of co-pilot for reporters and editors by providing options for headlines or different writing styles, the company said.

The Google project follows news of a tie-up between Ope-nAI and The Associated Press, in which the ChatGPT creator was given a license to use the archives of AP going back to 1985 to train AI.

“The arrangement sees OpenAI licensing part of AP’s text archive, while AP will leverage OpenAI’s technology and product expertise,” the two organizations said in a joint statement last week.

The AP has used other forms of AI for nearly a decade, including to automate corporate earnings reports and recap some sporting events.

The emergence of ChatGPT last year caused great alarm in the news industry, with the app’s ability to write convincingly and in seconds on complex topics from a simple prompt.

Naples fetes Italy’s great tenor Caruso with new museum

A century and a half after his birth, Italian tenor and opera legend Enrico Caruso is finally being celebrated by his hometown of Naples with a new museum.

Long before Luciano Pavarotti, it was Caruso who represented Italian opera to the rest of the world, ushering in an era of music for the masses with his prolific recordings at the advent of the gramophone industry.

Born in 1873, the tenor and his international career are the focus of a small museum housed within the city’s Royal Palace (Palazzo Reale) that opened to the public on Wednesday.

“He was the greatest tenor ever known to the world,” curator Laura Valente told AFP. “Because beyond his great talent and extraordinary voice, he forged a new way of singing and expressing himself on stage, in this sense like Maria Callas,” she said.

During his lifetime, Caruso gave nearly 2,000 performances and made close to 250 recordings, making him a recognised media star across the world. He toured from Saint Petersburg to Mexico City, Buenos Aires and New York.

“He was a tenor of the new century. More than anything he understood that this technology wouldn’t lessen his voice, but rather bring his voice to the world. And that was his innovation,” Valente said. — AFP

‘Barbie’ delayed in Pakistan province over ‘objectionable content’

THE “Barbie” film’s release was delayed in Pakistan’s Punjab province Friday over “objectionable content”, officials said.

Films in Pakistan need to be cleared by provincial boards that censor anything deemed a violation of the country’s social and cultural values.

“There will be a full review of the film, and it will be censored where deemed necessary,” Farrukh Mahmood, secretary of the Punjab Film Censor Board, told AFP.

He said that the fantasy-comedy film, which stars

Margot Robbie as the famous doll and Ryan Gosling as her boyfriend Ken, will be cleared for screening once the review and censoring process is complete.

The board did not clarify which content was “objectionable”, nor why.

While fans in Pakistan’s most populous province will have to wait to watch “Barbie”, the film was due to be screened from Friday in the capital Islamabad and the southern province of Sindh, where it was cleared by the respective censor boards. — AFP

More than 60% of world now on social media: Study

NEARLY five billion people, or slightly more than 60 per cent of the world’s population, are active on social media, according to a recent study.

That represents an increase of 3.7 per cent over the past year, according to calculations by digital advisory firm Kepios in its latest quarterly report.

The number of social network users is approaching the number that use the 5.19 billion which use the internet, or 64.5 per cent of the world population.

There are major differences between regions. Only one person out of 11 in east and central Africa use social media. In India, now the world’s most populous nation, the figure is one out of three.

The amount of time spent on social media has also increased, by two minutes to 2 hours and 26 minutes per day. Here again there are large disparities, with Brazilians spending an average of 3 hours and 49 minutes per day on social media while the Japanese less than an hour.

The average social media user is on seven platforms.

Meta has three of the favourite apps with WhatsApp, Instagram and Facebook.

China has three apps, WeChat, TikTok and its local version Douyin.

UK band The 1975 nix Indonesia gig after Malaysia LGBTQ uproar

BRITISH indie-rock band The 1975 cancelled a concert in Indonesia Sunday, after Malaysia axed a festival over a same-sex kiss and tirade against the country’s anti-LGBTQ laws by their frontman.

Indonesia’s LGBTQ laws are less strict than those in neighbouring countries such as Malaysia, where homosexuality is a crime. But several events have been cancelled in recent years because of opposition in the Muslim-majority country.

Malaysian authorities cancelled the Good Vibes music festival in the capital Kuala Lumpur after cutting short the band’s set on Friday, because of Matt Healy’s profanity-laden speech and kiss with the band’s bassist Ross MacDonald.

The band subsequently announced it would cancel its performance at the We The Fest event in Indonesian capital Jakarta, as well as a show in Taiwan — home to a thriving LGBTQ community — on Tuesday.

“The 1975 regret to announce that their forthcoming shows in Jakarta and Taipei will no longer be going ahead as planned,” the band said in a statement Sunday on the We The Fest Instagram page. — AFP

China to carry out high-quality 5th national economic census

CHINA will conduct its fifth national economic census in August 2023, Kang Yi, head of the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) told Xinhua in a recent interview.

The State Council held a teleconference on 7 July concerning the fifth national economic census for full mobilization and deployment regarding the relevant work, according to Kang, who is also deputy head of the leading group for China's 5th national economic census.

The census takes place every five years. It will help obtain scientific and accurate statistical information for improving macroeconomic governance and scientifically formulating medium and long-term development plans.

PROGRESS UNDERWAY

The fifth national economic census plan will be issued and implemented soon, Kang said.

According to the work schedule, a comprehensive and thorough indoor survey will be carried out from August to October.

This survey aims to figure out the basic situation and distribution of all legal entities, industrial activity units and self-employed households engaged in secondary and tertiary industry activities in China. — Xinhua

Japan to see price hikes on 35,000 food, drink items by end of 2023

JAPANESE consumers will have seen price hikes on 30,009 food and beverage products by October as retailers pass on higher costs to protect their profits, according to a credit research company.

The total, including the hikes in coming months, already eclipses the 2022 total of 25,768 items, Teikoku Databank Ltd. said in its report in mid-July.

The company also maintained its forecast for the full year at around 35,000 items, saying October is expected to see the most price hikes.

The added burden on households has reduced purchasing power, making it increasingly unlikely companies will continue increasing prices at such a rapid pace as it will further dampen demand, it said. The company cited rises in electricity and labor costs, along with a weaker yen pushing up import prices, as factors that will lead to further price increases. October will see price hikes for 3,716 items, including sausages and alcoholic beverages, up about 300 from the number announced at the end of June. — Kyodo

Pakistan: Huge increase in power tariff to meet IMF demand

AS Pakistan moves forward to meet the IMF terms, the federal cabinet authorised a significant increase in the electricity base rate through circulation summary in a late-night decision, according to sources cited by ARY News on Saturday.

Sources privy to the development told ARY News that the federal government has increased the basic power tariff by Rs3 for some customers and by Rs7.5 per unit for some other consumers.

The cabinet approved a hike in power tariff on the recommendation of the National Electric Power Regulatory Authority (Nepra). According to the proposal, the government recommended an increase of PKR 3 per unit for the non-protected residential consumers using 1 to 100 units which will take the current per unit cost from PKR 13.48/unit to 16.48/unit.

Similarly, for the residential consumers using above 700 units, the government proposed a hike of Rs 7.5/unit from the existing PKR 35.22/unit to 42.72/unit. — ANI

135 mln people moved out of poverty in India in 5 years: report

NEARLY 135 million people moved out of multidimensional poverty on the yardstick of health, education, and the overall standard of living, over the past five years in India, a report released by the federal government's think-tank NITI Aayog has said.

Improvements in nutrition, years of schooling, sanitation, and cooking fuel played a significant role in bringing down poverty across the country, said the report on Monday.

This was the second edition of the National Multidimensional Poverty Index (MPI) which represents the country's progress in reducing multidimensional poverty between two surveys, namely the National Family Health Survey (NFHS)-4 carried out in the year 2015-16 and the NFHS-5 carried out in the year 2019-21. The broad methodology followed during the survey aligned with the global methodology, the NITI Aayog said in a statement.

The National MPI measures simultaneous deprivations across the three equally weighted dimensions of health, education, and standard of living, said the survey findings.

According to the report, India registered a significant decline of 9.89 percentage points in the number of multidimensionally poor from 24.85 per cent in 2015-16 to 14.96 per cent in 2019-2021. The rural areas witnessed the fastest decline in poverty from 32.59 per cent to 19.28 per cent. — Xinhua

As Paris Olympics loom, hotel industry has reservations

WHILE accommodating potential Olympic visitors is one topic to fret about 12 months ahead of the Paris Games, there are also concerns that the sports showpiece could exacerbate existing issues for one of the world's most popular tourist destinations.

The Ile de France region, which includes historic suburbs such as Seine-Saint-Denis, home of the main Olympic sites, and Versailles, is neck-and-neck with London as the most visited city in Europe.

The question is whether the Games will be a boon for the hotel sector, for visitors and for the locals.

Hotel professionals point to the risk of a "bad buzz" if the Games fail, yet they also warn that, following the example of previous hosts, the Olympics are certain to drive up prices for years to come.

"With the expected peak in visitor numbers, it's clear that the Paris hotel network, which is much larger than that of Rio or Athens, will be saturated," Vangelis Panayotis, president of specialist consultancy MKG Consulting, told AFP.

"At the Rio Olympics in 2016, Airbnb helped to increase accommodation capacity. And at the Athens Olympics in 2004, large cruise liners were put in the port to cover accommodation needs," he said. — AFP

The upcoming Paris Olympic Games are causing both excitement and concern. While preparations to welcome potential Olympic visitors are being made, there are worries that the event could worsen existing problems for one of the world's most popular tourist destinations. PHOTO: OLYMPICS.COM/AFP

After a pause, US Fed likely to hike interest rates to 22-year high

AFTER pausing in June, the US Federal Reserve is widely expected to hike interest rates again on Wednesday, adopting its most restrictive monetary stance for 22 years despite recent signs of slowing inflation.

After 10 consecutive hikes in just over a year, the Fed halted its aggressive campaign of monetary tightening last month to give policymakers more time to assess the health of the US economy, and the impact of recent banking stresses on lending conditions.

In the weeks since, positive upgrades to economic growth and cooler inflation data have reinforced the likelihood that the Fed's rate-setting committee will vote for a quarter percentage-point hike on 25-26 July. — AFP

Huawei vows to boost support for "intelligent Bangladesh"

CHINA'S telecommunication giant Huawei has said it will bring in more top-notch technologies and solutions to build a fully connected and "intelligent Bangladesh".

With a renewed commitment to boosting Bangladesh's development, Huawei celebrated its 25 years of operation in the country on Thursday.

Hundreds of guests, including Yao Wen, the Chinese ambassador to Bangladesh, Bangladeshi Planning Minister MA Mannan, and Post and Telecommunications Minister Mustafa Jabbar, attended the celebration event.

Speaking at the event, President of Huawei South Asia and CEO of Huawei Bangladesh Pan Junfeng said Huawei has consistently prioritized the development of Bangladesh in the last 25 years and will continue to do so in the coming years.

"We will keep working to materialize the 'Smart Bangladesh' vision and contribute to the digital transformation journey," Pan said. Bangladesh is marching forward to transform itself into a developed nation, riding on the efforts and talent of the people, MA Mannan said, adding, "In this journey, we are receiving support from our friends like China. We want to move forward for the world's humanity."

Connectivity is very important in "Smart Bangladesh," Mustafa Jabbar said, "We've already managed to bring 98 per cent of the area of Bangladesh under the coverage of 4G network. Huawei's contribution to this transformation of our digital connectivity scenario is undoubtedly commendable. We have even launched 5G with the help of Huawei." — Xinhua

Japan's export curbs on chip-making equipment to China take effect

JAPANESE restrictions on exports of advanced chip-manufacturing equipment took effect Sunday, in line with US-led efforts to stymie China's ability to develop high-end semiconductors capable of being used for military purposes.

With the revision of a trade ministry ordinance under the foreign exchange law, Japan added 23 chip-manufacturing items that require approval for export. The move has triggered a backlash from China, though Japan did not specify that the world's second-largest economy is the main target of the export restrictions.

Beijing has said it will curb exports of gallium and germanium, two rare earth metals crucial for chip production, next month in apparent retaliation for US semiconductor export restrictions targeting China.

In October last year, the United States rolled out a sweeping set of export controls on certain high-end chips that China could use to train artificial intelligence systems and modernize its military, while asking Japan and the Netherlands, which possess advanced chip-manufacturing technologies, to follow suit. — Kyodo

Cambodia’s 7th general election kicks off

THE seventh general election kicked off in Cambodia on Sunday with a total of 18 political parties taking part in the race, a National Election Committee (NEC) spokesman said.

More than 9.7 million eligible voters are expected to cast their ballots in the election, which is held once every five years to elect the members of parliament for the 125-seat National Assembly.

“Polling began at 7:00 a.m. local time at all 23,789 polling stations across the country and is due to close at 3:00 p.m.,” NEC member and spokesman Dim Sovannarom told Xinhua.

The preliminary results are expected to be announced on Sunday evening and Monday morning, as the official ones will be released on 9 August. Active parties in the race are the ruling Cambodian People’s Party (CPP) led by Prime Minister Samdech Techo Hun Sen and the Funcinpec Party, headed by Prince Norodom Chakravuth.

Hun Sen voted at a polling station near his mansion in Kandal province, roughly 15 km south of capital Phnom Penh, whilst Prince Chakravuth cast his ballot in Phnom Penh. In the last general election held in 2018, the CPP won all 125 seats in the National Assembly. — Xinhua

India landslide toll jumps to 27, at least 50 missing

THE death toll from a massive landslide in India’s Maharashtra state jumped to 27 on Sunday, with at least 50 people still missing as rescue teams struggle in lashing rain, officials said.

The landslide was triggered by monsoon rains on Thursday, smashing into a village in Raigad district, a hilly and forested site about 100 kilometres (62 miles) from Mumbai.

Emergency teams have been digging for bodies under the mounds of earth and rubble.

“We’ve so far counted 27 bodies, and about 50 to 60 people are still missing, but there are multiple challenges for rescue work at the site,” Raigad official Yogesh Mhase told AFP on Sunday. — AFP

Russia strikes Odesa hours before Putin-Lukashenko summit

THE Ukrainian port city of Odesa came under renewed Russian missile attack early Sunday, just hours before President Vladimir Putin was due to hold a summit with his staunch Belarus ally Alexander Lukashenko.

At the meeting in Saint Petersburg, the pair plan to discuss the “strategic partnership and alliance” between their countries, according to the Kremlin.

It will be the first time they have met since Lukashenko helped end a dramatic mutiny by Russian mercenaries from the Wagner group.

Hours before their meeting, Russian strikes targeted Odesa, which has been bombed several times since the start of the invasion. “Unfortunately, we have one civilian killed as a result of the nighttime terrorist attack by Russians on Odesa,” regional governor Oleg Kiper said on Telegram.

Earlier he had reported “18 victims, including four children”, in a Russian attack at 3:00 am (0000 GMT).

“Fourteen people were hospitalised in the city’s hospitals, three of them were children,” he said.

Ukraine’s Southern Operational Command said Odesa was targeted with at least five types of missile, including Kalibr cruise missiles.

“Air defence forces destroyed a significant amount of the missiles,” it said.

“The rest caused damage to port infrastructure,” and several buildings, it said, adding that a missile had hit the Orthodox cathedral in the city centre. — AFP

Over 40,000 passengers cross border via China-Laos Railway

THE China-Laos Railway that started cross-border passenger services in April had transported 41,735 passengers as of Saturday, when it marked the 100th day of operation.

On this railway, a train departing from Kunming, capital of southwest China’s Yunnan Province, travels at a speed of up to 160 km per hour through mountains and valleys. The trip from Kunming to the Lao capital of Vientiane takes 10 and a half hours to complete, including the time spent on going through customs.

The Mohan checkpoint

on China’s border with Laos tallied that as of Saturday, 200 train trips had been provided by the railway, serving 41,735 passengers from 49 countries and regions.

Among the total, the number of inbound passengers was 12.2 per cent more than that of outbound passengers, reaching 22,066, with 54 per cent of them being tourists. — Xinhua

Voting opens as Spain picks between Sanchez or right's return

SPANISH voters headed to the polls Sunday to decide whether to hand Socialist Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez a fresh four-year mandate or, as polls suggest, bring the right back to power with its far-right ally.

A shift to the right in the eurozone's fourth-largest economy, mirroring a similar move in Italy last year, would be a huge blow for left-wing parties in Europe.

Nearly all polls and pundits suggest the vote will hand victory to Alberto Nunez Feijoo's conservative Popular Party (PP) — but surprises could be in store.

By the time the last surveys were published on Monday, around one in five voters were still undecided, and it remains unclear what impact the timing of the vote — held at the height of the summer holidays in the scorching late July heat — will have on the turnout.

As many Spaniards are on holiday, more than 2.47 million — a record number — of the 37.5 million registered voters have cast an absentee ballot, Spain's postal service said on Saturday. — AFP

The 2023 Spanish general election took place on Sunday, 23 July 2023, to choose the 15th Cortes Generales of the Kingdom of Spain. Voters had the opportunity to elect all 350 seats in the Congress of Deputies and 208 out of 265 seats in the Senate. PHOTO: PIX FOR VISUAL PURPOSE/AFP/FILE

Italy calls Med migration conference on Tunisia model

ITALY has invited Mediterranean countries to Rome on Sunday for an "international conference" aimed at extending an EU-backed deal with Tunisia to curb the arrival of migrants to European shores.

Italy's far-right Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni is expecting leaders from the region, the European Union and international financial institutions to meet in the capital, according to a government press release.

The full list of participants is unknown, but Meloni has confirmed the presence of Tunisian President Kais Saied, while the prime ministers of Egypt and Malta, Mostafa Madbouli and Robert Abela, respectively, have both said they will attend.

During the 2022 election campaign that brought her to power, Meloni vowed to "stop the disembarkation" of migrants in Italy, which the government puts at nearly 80,000 coastal arrivals since January, compared to 33,000 in the same period last year.

But while the government has put obstacles in the path of humanitarian ships rescuing migrants in the Mediterranean, it has failed to stop the departures themselves, which mostly originate in Tunisia and Libya.

Italy and the European Commission have sought to step up engagement with Tunisia, promising funding if the country undertakes to stem emigration from its territory. — AFP

Three hurt in Japan train stabbing attack

THREE people were hurt in a knife attack on a train in western Japan on Sunday, with police saying they had arrested a man for allegedly carrying out the stabbings.

The victims — a train conductor in his 20s and two male passengers aged in their 20s and 70s — were taken to hospital with non-life threatening injuries, Tetsuya Sakagami from a nearby fire department told AFP.

The 37-year-old male suspect was armed with three knives when he was arrested at Rinku Town station in the Osaka region, local police told AFP.

He was arrested for attempted murder and has already admitted to carrying out the attack on Sunday morning, police said, adding they were still investigating the motive.

Violent crime is rare in Japan, which has a low murder rate and some of the world's toughest gun laws.

But there are occasional stabbings and even shootings, including the assassination of former prime minister Shinzo Abe last year.

In 2021, a 24-year-old man allegedly stabbed a passenger and started a fire on a train in Tokyo on Halloween while wearing an outfit resembling comic book villain the Joker.

A verdict in that case is due to be handed down on 31 July. — AFP

TOTTENHAM'S pre-season preparations suffered a blow on Sunday as their friendly against Leicester in Bangkok was called off because of a waterlogged pitch.

New coach Ange Postecoglou named a strong starting XI for the clash with the Foxes including unsettled striker Harry Kane, who has been aggressively courted by Bayern Munich.

But a huge tropical downpour left the pitch at the Rajamangala stadium unplayable and the match was called off around half an hour after the scheduled kick-off time. — AFP

Everton sign Danjuma on loan from Villarreal

EVERTON have signed Arnaut Danjuma on a season-long loan from Villarreal, just months after the Netherlands forward rejected an offer to move to Goodison Park.

Danjuma chose to join Tottenham on loan in January despite receiving a similar offer from Everton.

But the 26-year-old endured a difficult spell at Tottenham, scoring only once in his nine Premier League appearances.

Danjuma agreed to accept Everton's latest approach amid interest in him from Bournemouth and Nottingham Forest.

"It's been a long time coming to join such a massive club as Everton and it makes me proud," he said.

"I had interest from other clubs but there was a pull towards Everton because of the fans, the manager and the history of the club and it's second time lucky for me.

"I know I did not move to the club in January, that was because there was some uncertainty over the manager situation at that time, but I think it makes it even more beautiful for me to join now."

Danjuma is Everton boss Sean Dyche's second close-season signing after former Aston Villa defender Ashley Young joined on a free transfer. — AFP
