Effective market intervention ensures stable rice prices

MARKET regulatory practices by institutions concerned led to rice price stability in September, helping reduce consumers' concerns.

The prices of rice were more volatile in mid-2023 than mid-2022. Starting from 7 August, the rice subsidy scheme commenced to offer the rice at a fairer price for consumers. The Myanmar Rice Federation bolstered rice subsidy schemes in various regions.

The prices stood at K125,000 per sack of Pawsan rice from Shwebo, K100,000 per sack of Pawsan rice from other producing regions (Myaungmya, Pyapon, Mawgyun and Bogale), K96,000 per sack of Pawkywe, K72,000 per sack of 90-day short-mature rice variety and the K69,000 per sack of rice grown under the intercropping system on 14 September. Unless there is market intervention, rice prices would move up for sure. However, rice adulteration involving cheap and low-grade rice with high-grade rice was detected. So, the retailers are vigilant about rice adulteration fraud. The new rice will soon flow into markets so the traders boost the sales of old stocks. They prioritize an increase in sales.

The price of high-grade Pawsan rice in Yangon and Shwebo areas is the same at K125,000 per sack. Yet, the price is still high at K150,000 per sack in Monywa. Pawsan paddy is priced at K3.7 million per 100 baskets in the Shwebo and Monywa areas, as per the price data of those regions. — TWA/EM

International-standard trade zones, border checkpoints to be established

THE first meeting of the Assessment and Reporting Committee to establish trade zones and border checkpoints in line with international standards was conducted at the Ministry of Planning and Finance yesterday.

Committee Chair U Maung Maung Win, Deputy Minister for Planning and Finance, told the meeting that the committee was formed after the State Administration Council had accepted the suggestion of the Illegal Trade Eradication Steering Committee. The committee’s objective is to access the necessary measures that may contribute to the establishment of trade zones and border checkpoints close to border lines in the same manner the neighbouring countries are practising complying with international norms, he added.

The chairman also explained that such kind of establishment will facilitate officials in their attempts to check and control export and import processes, and immigration measures and eradicate illegal trade, lessening the unmatching of trading lists between the checkpoints of the two countries while enhancing trade cooperation with neighbouring countries.

He also highlighted the existence of towns and villages between the border lines and the border checkpoints that can enable illegal trade routes.

The committee chairman also pointed out that trade zones and border checkpoints of Myanmar are required to be established next to border lines as the country has to implement the ASEAN Customs Transit System (ACTS), Single Window Inspection (SWI) and Single Stop Customs Inspection (SSCI) under the agreements of the ASEAN Framework Agreement on the Facilitation of Goods in Transit (AFAFGIT) and Greater Mekong Sub-Region Cross Border Transport Agreement (GMS-CBTA).

The chairman also urged regional/state-level work committees to evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of existing border trading facilities and provide suggestions for establishing international-standard border trading zones and checkpoints and measures to eradicate illegal trade.

The participants then discussed matters relating to their area of work and the chairman coordinated and fulfilled the requirements. — MNA/TH

Share knowledge of democracy with people

MYANMAR is on an earnest journey towards democracy, a transformation that its people have long yearned for, primarily driven by the 2008 Constitution. This democratic evolution seeks to enhance the socioeconomic well-being of its citizens. Presently, the government is diligently laying the groundwork for a democratic and federal union, catering to the diverse needs of all ethnic groups within the nation.

This year’s International Day of Democracy theme, “Empowering the Next Generation”, places a spotlight on the pivotal role that young individuals play in advancing democracy. It underscores the necessity of including their voices in decisions that wield profound influence over their world.

The United Nations acknowledges that democracies globally face persistent threats such as unresolved conflicts, the escalating

Consequently, the people of Myanmar are perseveringly working towards establishing a democratic system that resonates with the very essence of democracy. By doing so, the new generations of Myanmar will enjoy the fruits of democratic practices and a nurturing environment guided by the four cardinal virtues. These virtues underscore the importance of unity, compassion, altruism, and self-reliance, fostering a spirit of mutual support to surmount any challenges that come their way.

In the realm of democracy, the majority must prioritize the aspirations of the minority, and conversely, the minority must consider the desires of the majority. Both parties must diligently seek the most effective means to implement projects that benefit the nation. In a collective pursuit of brighter futures, decisions taken by both sides should not shatter any dreams but instead nurture them.

This approach paves the way for all ethnicities in Myanmar to transcend divergent viewpoints and establish a society founded on the principles of equity. UNESCO emphasizes that the International Day of Democracy serves as an occasion to assess the state of democracy globally. Democracy is not just a destination but an ongoing process. Only through comprehensive participation and support from the international community, national governing bodies, civil society, and individuals can the ideal of democracy be transformed into a tangible reality accessible to all, irrespective of location.

Consequently, the people of Myanmar are perseveringly working towards establishing a democratic system that resonates with the very essence of democracy. By doing so, the new generations of Myanmar will enjoy the fruits of democratic practices and a nurturing environment guided by the four cardinal virtues. These virtues underscore the importance of unity, compassion, altruism, and self-reliance, fostering a spirit of mutual support to surmount any challenges that come their way.

Introduction

1. May I start with a well-known and universally accepted old proverb, “Knowledge is power”. In this connection, I would also like to quote an extract from a famous speech by Abraham Lincoln, known as the father of freedom from slavery in the United States of America’s history. It reads: “With malice towards none; with charity for all, with firmness in the right.” So, with firmness, I would like to assert that “knowledge is power”. Ignorance or lack of knowledge is a shame and sin. Well, to be free from shame and sin in our lives, we should go on learning to gain knowledge. Learning is a life-long process. “No educative process is ever the end, it is always the beginning of more education, more learning, more living.”¹ Knowledge and Human Resources are inseparable. “Reading makes the people developed and that the developed people go on reading.”²

2. Well, what does investment mean? “Investment in something means the act of investing money in something.” And “invest” something in something” means to buy property, shares in a company etc., in the hope of making a profit”³. In connection with the topic “an investment in knowledge pays the best interest; may I mention some more writings about knowledge and education”. They know enough who know how to learn “Only the educated are free”. The more we study, the more we discover our ignorance. And often in the modification, the more we know, the more we don’t know. Mr Benjamin Disraeli, a famous writer, again said, “To be conscious that you are ignorant is a great step to knowledge”¹

3. I would also like to present to you Myanmar proverbs and some words of wisdom, “on knowledge and education”, translated into English by myself, an old learner. “In this world of ours, education, knowledge, skill, art and craft are really our true friends”. The light of knowledge and skill is really so bright and brilliant that each and every one, all and sundry have got to wonder at that.⁴ “Of the lights, firelight, moonlight and sunlight; moonlight is brighter than firelight. Sunlight is brighter than moonlight. Ah, the light of knowledge is the brightest of them all. No light is there brighter than the light of knowledge. As such, Lord Buddha has preached. Therefore, all and sundry, each and every one should strive to acquire knowledge. Good knowledge is just like a Badeithabin tree, a tree of plenty and an inexhaustible store.⁵ Western scholars have also asserted that the “brain is just like a muscle”. You use it or you lose it. So, if you want to keep your brain sharp, active and alert, go brain-jogging.” “Go brain-jogging” means read, read and read. As a

How cyber scammers are trying to make AI tools pay

AI, including chatbots, is accelerating the pace of cyber attacks, potentially making them more sophisticated and harder to detect.

The emerging threat of cybercriminals using chatbots to enhance the effectiveness of phishing scams has prompted cybersecurity experts to intensify their efforts to develop advanced detection and prevention measures. PHOTO: PIXABAY

PROPOSERS of artificial intelligence say its potential is limitless. But cyber scammers could also use it to their advantage.

Analysts explained to AFP how the technology could increase the risk from online crime.

Phishers of emails

Chatbots are the best-known of all AI tools thanks to the rampant success of ChatGPT and many that have come afterwards, not least Google’s Bard.

Phishing is the most ubiquitous form of cyber scam, and involves criminals posing as a company or an individual sending batches of emails that include links to counterfeit websites or malware.

The two worlds are already starting to collide, with cybercriminals trading tips in online forums on the best ways to get chatbots to generate phishing emails.

The big players block users from generating these kinds of emails, so developers have designed programmes aimed at creating phishing messages — FraudGPT and WormGPT among them.

The effectiveness of these tools has yet to be tested, with Gerome Billois of consulting firm Wavestone telling AFP: “We’re only at the very beginning.”

Experts say the major skill of chatbots for phishing gangs is to generate fairly clean prose.

One of the telltale signs of a phishing email has long been dodgy spelling and scattergun punctuation.

“AI accelerates the pace of attacks,” said Billois.

The FBI said it received 300,497 complaints about phishing scams last year, with losses suffered worth $52 million.

Attack of the clones

Earlier this year, US mother Jennifer DeStefano explained how she received a call from her daughter begging for help, before being told by a kidnapper to pay $1 million ransom. “I never doubted for one second it was her,” she told local media.

Only the voice was an AI-generated imitation and DeStefano quickly uncovered the ruse.

But it points to the risk of a future where deepfake impersonations of loved ones or colleagues appear on phone or video calls — a development that could be a gold mine for scammers. With a recording of just few seconds of a person’s voice, online tools can produce an imitation capable of tricking employees or friends.

matter of fact, learning is a never-ending process. We live to learn and learn to live. A day without learning is a day lost”. So, let us go on learning continuously to get the best interest in our investment in knowledge.

4. In brief, I would like to advise you on the strength of the following words of wisdom to keep on learning and getting better every day.

- “Knowledge is not static. It is accumulating and expanding all the time. In the quest for knowledge, there must be a strong will and perseverance.”
- “We should create a desire and dedication to update and upgrade ourselves continuously.”
- “Knowledge is power” seems to have quite a following these days.”
- “The object of education should be to increase the usefulness of man, usefulness to himself, and usefulness to others.”

5. In conclusion, may I also advise you, in view of the coronavirus global pandemic, that we should seek knowledge about the global pandemic by constantly learning from the news media about the protective and preventive measures from that pandemic, by staying at home, by wearing masks, when going outside, by washing hands quite often and keeping a physical distance from each other. We have a saying. If informally translated into English, I think, it may read. It is knowledge and wisdom that safeguard one’s life and longevity. It is fate or destiny that plays a decisive role in making wealth, well-being or fortune.”

Chatbots can certainly identify flaws in existing code and even generate malicious code but they cannot execute it directly.

Saiz said he could see AI helping scammers who have little talent to become more skilled — a kind of coding tutor. “But someone starting from scratch is not going to get ChatGPT to code malware for them,” he said.

Saiz, who generally gets called when something major has gone wrong, said he had not seen any evidence that any of his cases over the past year had involved AI. Shawn Surber of US cybersecurity firm Tanium is equally cautious. “Much of the concern over how generative AI will affect risks for businesses is based on fear of the unknown rather than specific threats,” he said.

Myanmar to ship 10,000 tonnes of sugar to Viet Nam in 2023-24 sugarcane season

A total of 10,000 tonnes of sugar produced in the 2023-2024 sugarcane season will be exported to Viet Nam, according to U Win Htay, Vice-Chair of Myanmar Sugar and Cane Related Products Association.

Viet Nam has offered to purchase 10,000 tonnes of Myanmar sugar in the 2023-2024 sugarcane season, and the two sides are now negotiating regarding the sugar prices and proper period of sugar production and shipment.

“They (Viet Nam) send a letter saying they want to buy our sugar. The sugar season is in December so we can sell in 2023-2024 new sugarcane season. Currently, we prioritize the local consumption,” he added.

Although the country received sugarcane and sugar demand from many foreign countries, it will export only to Viet Nam considering the local production rate and consumption.

The high foreign demand makes sugar prices increase locally. The sugar mills in northern Shan State also offer K110,000 per tonne of sugarcane and they also might increase the prices.

The country produces 450,000 tonnes of sugar per year and exports between 70,000 and 90,000 tonnes of sugar to Viet Nam yearly. Moreover, it also explores new sugarcane plantation areas and invites investors in sugarcane cultivation and sugar production. Approximately, 450,000-500,000 acres are covered by sugarcane across the country, with an annual production of 500,000 tonnes of sugar. — ASH/KTZH

Thailand to offer Chinese tourists visa-free entry

Thailand's tourism sector plays a crucial role in its economy, contributing to nearly 20 per cent of its GDP. However, it has faced significant challenges due to the COVID-19 pandemic and evolving travel preferences.

CHINESE tourists will enjoy visa-free entry to Thailand from the end of September under a temporary scheme announced by the kingdom's newly formed cabinet Wednesday.

Thailand's vital tourism sector accounts for almost 20 per cent of its GDP but has struggled in the wake of the Covid-19 pandemic and changing traveller habits.

In particular, Chinese tourists — accounting for the largest percentage of Thailand's visitors, with some 11 million touring the country in 2019 — have been slow to return.

Under the current rules, they can apply for a visa on arrival but must demonstrate travel insurance, hotel bookings, and proof of funds exceeding $280 at immigration for a maximum stay of 15 days.

Prime Minister Srettha Thavisin said the new scheme would run from 25 September until 29 February next year and would “test if there is any impact (on the Thai economy)”.

There were no details about how long Chinese tourists might be able to stay under the arrangement.

“We have discussed with all relevant parties to make sure that we are fully ready,” Srettha told reporters after his first cabinet meeting.

Officials said they estimate the scheme, which also includes Kazakhstan, could bring a total of 30 million visitors this year, up from 11 million in 2022. “It's a quick win for Thailand,” government spokesperson Chai Watcharong said. — AFP

US consumer inflation ticks up in August on gasoline prices

CONSUMER inflation in the United States picked up in August for a second straight month, according to government data released Wednesday, putting the heat on policymakers as they work to lower prices.

The consumer price index (CPI), a key inflation gauge, jumped 3.7 per cent from a year ago, picking up pace from July's 3.2 per cent figure, said the Labour Department. But a measurement stripping out volatile segments cooled.

All eyes are on the report, which is expected to have a bearing on the US central bank's interest rate decision released next week.

The Federal Reserve has lifted the benchmark lending rate rapidly since March last year to tamp down demand and sustainably lower inflation — but the current figure remains stubbornly above officials' two percent goal.

In August, higher gasoline costs bumped up headline inflation but the “core” reading — removing the volatile food and energy components — cooled to 4.3 per cent on an annual basis.

“The index for gasoline was the largest contributor to the monthly all items increase, accounting for over half of the increase,” said the Labour Department.

The department added that the shelter index, which takes into account rent, continued advancing — rising for a 40th consecutive month.

Between July and August, CPI rose 0.6 per cent, accelerating from the prior month too.

While the latest report could give the Fed some pause, analysts expect it may not translate to further rate hikes.

If “core” readings continue to weaken, “that will be taken as a sign by the Fed that perhaps further tightening is not necessary”, said Gregory Daco, EY chief economist. — AFP

China's fast-growing e-commerce market benefits Thai exporters: study

CHINA'S fast-growing e-commerce market has provided potential benefits to Thai businesses with its cross-border trade boom, a Thai Commerce Ministry study showed on Tuesday.

The Chinese government has implemented regulations and set up 165 pilot cross-border e-commerce (CBEC) zones in 33 cities and areas. These zones facilitate the sale of Chinese products on foreign websites and the sale of foreign products on Chinese websites, according to the study released by the ministry's Trade Policy and Strategy Office (TPSO).

Trading through the CBEC is key to tapping into Chinese markets. It will help Thai entrepreneurs increase their opportunities due to its tax benefits as well as faster and simpler customs procedures, said Poonpong Nainapakorn, director of the TPSO, in the report.

Entrepreneurs should examine the legal, geographical and cultural factors of their target customers in China, Poonpong noted, adding that effective communication with prospective customers requires matching the platform to the product.

According to the report, citing China's Customs data, the value of imports and exports through the CBEC reached 150 billion US dollars in the first half of 2023, representing a 16-per-cent year-on-year growth. — Xinhua

Maersk unveils world's first bio-methanol container ship

EUROPEAN Commission head Ursula von der Leyen on Thursday christened the world's first bio-methanol container ship, Laura, which joined the fleet of Danish shipping giant Maersk.

Built in South Korea by Hyundai Heavy Industries (HHI) and fitted with a dual-fuel engine, Laura is a relatively small model that will be able to transport 2,136 20-foot (TEU) containers.

It will begin operating in the Baltic Sea in October, Maersk said.

"Green methanol is our fuel of choice ... because it is the only scalable solution that can meet the net-zero (carbon emissions) requirements," Maersk chief executive Vincent Clerc said during Thursday's inauguration ceremony in Copenhagen's harbour.

"Neither we nor the climate can afford complacency or waiting for other solutions to emerge in the late 2020s," he added.

In line with tradition for christening vessels, van der Leyen then swung a bottle of champagne across the ship's hull.

Green methanol, also known as "e-methanol", is composed of waste carbon dioxide (CO2) and "green hydrogen", which is created by using renewable energy to split water molecules.

Over the past two years, Maersk, the world leader in container shipping, has ordered 25 vessels that run on green methanol. — AFP

Bulgaria lifts ban on Ukraine grain imports

BULGARIA decided on Thursday not to extend a ban on Ukrainian grain imports in five eastern EU nations that is set to expire this week.

Russia's invasion of Ukraine has closed off Black Sea shipping routes used before the war, resulting in the EU becoming a major transit route and export destination for Ukrainian grain.

But in June, the EU agreed to restrict Ukrainian grain imports to five member states, seeking to protect their farmers who blamed the imports for a slump in prices on local markets. The five member states are Bulgaria, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Slovakia.

Bulgaria's parliament voted 124-69 on Thursday for a resolution to end the ban, citing "solidarity with Ukraine" and the need to "guarantee food security on a global scale". — AFP

Former Starbucks CEO Schultz steps down from board

STARBUCKS said Wednesday its former chief executive Howard Schultz will step down from the coffee chain's board of directors "as part of a planned transition".

Schultz, who ended his third stint as CEO in March, helped transform the brand from a small coffee shop into an international chain over the decades. "I look forward to supporting this next generation of leaders to steward Starbucks into the future as a customer, supporter and advocate in my role as chairman emeritus," the longtime Starbucks leader said in a statement.

In 2017, Schultz stepped aside as chief executive after his second tenure, handing the reins to Kevin Johnson. He later announced his retirement from the company and weighed a run for US president.

When Johnson left in 2022 after five years at the helm, Schultz returned as interim CEO, before Laxman Narasimhan took over the position in March this year. — AFP

US auto union chief says 'preparing to strike' as talks deadlock

China warns EU car subsidy probe will have ‘negative impact’

China has expressed concerns that the EU's investigation will have a detrimental effect on trade relations between the EU and China. The Chinese Ministry of Commerce believes that the EU's measures are aimed at protecting its own industry under the guise of “fair competition”.

CHINA warned on Thursday a probe by the European Union into Chinese state subsidies for electric cars will have a “negative impact” on trade relations between the bloc and Beijing.

“The Chinese side believes that the EU’s proposed investigative measures are to protect its own industry in the name of ‘fair competition’... and will have a negative impact on China-EU economic and trade relations,” a commerce ministry statement said.

It said the investigation was “naked protectionist behaviour that will seriously disrupt and distort the global automotive industry supply chain, including the EU”.

Argentina dismantles prolific Nazi printing press

ARGENTINE police have seized more than 200 Nazi publications and book covers and arrested the owner of a printing press run out of a home in suburban Buenos Aires, authorities said Wednesday.

After two years of investigations, police raided the home in San Isidro, where they found publications bearing swastikas and markings of the SS paramilitary group which played a key role in enforcing Nazi German leader Adolf Hitler’s ideologies.

“We are stupefied by the amount of material. It is historic. This is a true printing press for the dissemination and sale of Nazi symbols, books, and indoctrination,” police chief Juan Carlos Hernandez told a press conference.

He said the “high-quality material” had been openly sold on e-commerce websites “with a high level of purchases and inquiries”.

“We do not rule out that it is the tip of an iceberg. For now, we have cut the distribution lines, but the law also punishes those who consume” such material.

Hernandez explained that even exhibiting Nazi symbols was against Argentine laws because it “justifies, vindicates and even venerates the atrocities committed by the Nazi national socialist regime against the Jewish community”.

After World War II, Argentina became a haven for Nazis, many of whom fled there with the blessing of president Juan Peron, according to the Nazi-hunting Simon Wiesenthal Center. — AFP

Japan's Prince Hisahito tests positive for COVID-19

JAPAN'S Prince Hisahito, who is second in line to the imperial throne, has tested positive for COVID-19, the Imperial Household Agency said Thursday.

The nephew of Emperor Naruhito has a high fever and will rest at his residence until Monday, it said, adding the prince's parents, Crown Prince Fumihito and Crown Princess Kiko, have tested negative.

The prince, a second-year student at the Senior High School at Otsuka, University of Tsukuba, had a fever on Wednesday after returning from school but tested negative for COVID-19 at the time.

With the fever unabated on Thursday morning, he retook the test, and the infection was confirmed, the agency said.

Barcelona
hit by spending limit cut

BARCELONA were dealt a blow on Thursday when the Spanish champions’ spending limit for the season was cut to 270 million euros ($290 million) by La Liga.

The Spanish top flight has strict spending controls which prevent clubs from continuing to overspend on player wages and transfers.

Barcelona’s previous limit was 649 million euros ($697 million), a figure inflated by the sale of future television rights income among a series of financial “levers” the club pulled. The Catalans’ current level of salary expenditure is around 400 million euros ($429 million) per Spanish reports.

The punishment for exceeding the limit is being put under the division’s spending cap, in which Barcelona will only be allowed to use around 50 per cent of income to improve their squad, until they make cuts to fall under the new limit.

The current situation means it is unlikely Barcelona will conduct significant transfer business in January, with further cuts needed if they are to be in a position to reinforce next summer.

This is despite the departures of Sergio Busquets, Jordi Alba, Ousmane Dembele and several other players.

Goalkeeper Marc-Andre ter Stegen signed a new deal with the club in August until 2028, which allowed Barcelona to register new signings including loanees Joao Cancelo and Joao Felix. — AFP

Spain women’s league players call off strike
after pay deal

FOOTBALLERS from Spain’s women’s top flight, Liga F, have called off a strike which postponed the first week of fixtures after an agreement over wages was reached, unions and the league said Thursday.

“Liga F and the unions have reached an agreement regarding the minimum wage that allows the strike to be called off,” said Liga F in a statement.

Five unions, including AFE and Futpro, called a strike covering the first two rounds of fixtures last week.

“The deal is in regard to the minimum wage, the main cause of the strike — accepted by the players as an act of responsibility to the fans of the sport,” said the unions in a statement.

Liga F has agreed to raise the minimum wage from 16,000 euros ($17,000) a year to 21,000 euros ($22,500) in the current season, rising to 23,500 euros ($25,500) by the 2025-26 campaign.

Players were asking for a minimum wage starting at 23,000 euros from this season onwards.

However despite the strike being called off, the unions said there were various other issues on which agreements have not been reached after a year of negotiations.

“This step is the beginning and only a part of the agreement — now it is time to work to move forward on important points such as maternity, harassment protocol (and other aspects),” the unions added. Matches will now take place this weekend after the games on September 8-10 were not played. Last season a refereeing strike disrupted the first week of Liga F matches. — AFP

Maguire can handle ‘pressure’ from mocking rival fans

HARRY Maguire said he can cope with the pressure of being in the spotlight for club and country after England manager Gareth Southgate condemned the “ridiculous treatment” meted out to the defender.

The Manchester United centre-back won his 59th cap as a substitute in England’s 3-1 friendly win in Glasgow on Tuesday but his performance was marred by an own goal. Maguire was sarcastically cheered by Scotland fans every time he touched the ball.

“It’s a joke,” said Southgate. “I’ve never known a player treated the way he is — not by the Scottish fans, by our own commentators, pundits, whatever it is.”

Venezuela will send its first astronaut to moon as part of China's mission

Venezuela is set to send its first astronaut to the moon through a partnership with China, reflecting their collaboration in various fields and the beginning of a new phase in their relations, focusing on mutual development and addressing contemporary challenges.

VENEZUELA will send its first astronaut to the moon as part of a Chinese mission under scientific and technological cooperation with China, Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro said Wednesday.

"The symbol of the work of the committee on scientific, technological, industrial and aerospace cooperation (of the China-Venezuela commission) will sooner or later be the arrival of the first Venezuelan to the moon aboard a Chinese spacecraft," Maduro told the closing event of the 17th China-Venezuela High-Level Joint Commission in Beijing.

"Yesterday, we discussed with China's aerospace authorities that Venezuelan youth will soon come here to train to become astronauts in Chinese schools."

The president added that the results of the work of the commission and the Venezuelan authorities' state visit to China allow for the beginning of a new post-COVID-19 stage in the relations between the two countries,

UK Lords hand govt defeat in homebuilding pollution vote

THE UK government was defeated in parliament late Wednesday over its plans to ease EU-era restrictions on water pollution to boost homebuilding.

The opposition Labour party led the rare rebellion in the upper chamber House of Lords in a vote on removing existing "nutrient neutrality" rules.

The government says that up to 100,000 new homes could be built before 2030 if water pollution rules are eased—a claim disputed by opposition parties. "Don't pretend it's a choice between looking after our environment and building more houses, because it isn't," Labour's Nick Thomas-Symonds told BBC radio. Defeat in the unelected Lords usually means the proposal bounces back the elected lower House of Commons for another vote. — AFP

Dedollarization accelerating within BRICS, across globe - Netley Group

Over the past two decades, the dominance of the US dollar in global payments has been decreasing consistently. Goddard suggests that this trend is accelerating.

DEDOLLARIZATION is happening at a steady rate within BRICS and in the global economy, although more work needs to be done to accelerate the process, Michael Goddard, the president of the Netley Group, told Sputnik.

"It will be amazing if BRICS can come up with some gold-backed trading currency. The dedollarization is happening fast. Over the last 20 years, you see the share of global payments in the dollar has gone down at a steady rate. This is getting even faster now," Goddard said.

At the same time, to "truly dedollarize," several aspects should be taken into account, he added.

"One is the trade aspect, a currency to trade in. So that's the easier part of this whole equation. For example, if BRICS can get together and somewhat back the currency maybe with gold reserves of Russia, China, India, whoever, you could come up with a trade currency, sort of the currency that you have in your pocket to spend, but this will be an electronic currency for trade. Then you can very quickly get a significant share of global trade done in that currency," Goddard stated.

"The harder part" in efforts to replace the dollar lies in the reserve aspect of the currency, the Netley Group president noted. For instance, the United States' big advantage at the moment is the breadth of its bond market, Goddard explained.

"One of the ways, I think, BRICS could develop something to compete with that would be the technology to actually link the BRICS bond markets," the entrepreneur added. — SPUTNIK
