YGEA set gold reference price lower as spot gold price dips below US$1,900

THE spot gold price dropped below US$1,900 per ounce, prompting the Yangon Region Gold Entrepreneurs Association (YGEA) to lower the reference price to K2,210,000 per tical (0.578 ounce or 0.016 kilogramme) at the end of September.

The spot gold price hit $1,940 per ounce in early September and slid to $1,877 per ounce at the end of September, indicating a decrease of over $60 over the past 20 days.

Nonetheless, pure gold in the grey market bucked the global trend and hit approximately K3.4 million per tical. There is a price difference of K1.1 million per tical between the market value and the reference price by the YGEA.

YGEA calculated the price depending on the Central Bank of Myanmar's reference exchange rate of K2,100, with some addition, while the US dollar is exchanged at over K3,300 in shady dealings.

Sugar price jumps amid low supply, no sugar importation

THE price of sugar spiked at K3,700 per viss in the domestic market amid the low stocks and no sugar importation, as per the Yangon Region Chambers of Commerce and Industry (Bayintnaung Commodity Centre).

As the sugar price remained on an upward trend, some companies have reportedly planned to contribute K200,000 per acre in advance for new sugarcane growers for the 2023-2024 season. Rocketing prices will prompt the growers to expand the acreage of sugarcane and sugar export is expected to rise, as per the Myanmar Sugar and Cane Related Association.

Ngwe Yi Pale Sugar Co Ltd notified the sugarcane growers that it will offer K110,000 per tonne of sugarcane in the upcoming 2023-2024 sugarcane season.

Therefore, the company enticed the growers to ramp up production and expand the cultivation acreage.

Myanmar's annual sugar production is estimated at 450,000 tonnes. Myanmar earlier sent sugar to China and Viet Nam beyond self-sufficiency.

Sugar is seen being displayed for sale at the market.

At present, it is delivered to Viet Nam only, said U Win Htay, Vice-Chair of the Myanmar Sugar and Cane Related Association.

Sugar export to China via the border was conducted under the provincial-level Memorandum of Understanding. However, it came to an abrupt stop due to the COVID-19 policy of China. Therefore, the sugar industry called for a government-to-government agreement to legally export sugar to China under quota.

At present, Myanmar's sugar is shipped to Viet Nam and tax exemption is granted with the presence of the Certificate of Origin. Only three registered Myanmar companies are entitled to sugar exports to Viet Nam so far.

Sugarcane is commonly found in the upper Sagaing Region, followed by northern Shan State. It is also found in the western and eastern Bago Region, Yangon Region and Mandalay Region.

The sugarcane is grown in December-January. It can be harvested from November to February of the following years. The sugarcane growing rotation cycle lasts for four years in Myanmar. — NN/EM

Attract Indian and Chinese tourists with exceptional services in Myanmar

THE weather forecast predicts the imminent withdrawal of the southwest monsoon from Myanmar, heralding the arrival of October in the Gregorian calendar. This marks the beginning of a new season, characterized by numerous sunny days, making it an ideal time to explore the enchanting landscapes of Myanmar.

In a concerted effort to bolster international tourism, the Myanmar government has taken significant strides in relaxing various restrictions for tourists, opening the doors to a plethora of captivating destinations across the nation. In this context, the government has announced its decision to issue tourist arrival visas to Indian and Chinese travellers.

Myanmar is bestowed with an abundance of awe-inspiring tourist attractions, ranging from the northernmost reaches to the southern shores and from the eastern frontier to the western expanses. Unique snow-capped mountain ranges, a rare gift of nature, beckon travellers, setting Myanmar apart as the sole Southeast Asian country boasting this natural wonder, bound to captivate both local and foreign explorers.

Furthermore, travellers will have the opportunity to explore numerous enthralling sites throughout the country, except for a few restricted areas due to security concerns. Many hidden gems, largely uncharted even by the local populace, await discovery by international travellers. This inclusive approach grants tourists, whether local or international, the chance to traverse every corner of the nation while immersing themselves in the warm hospitality of the local people, experiencing their customs, and lifestyles, and savouring traditional ethnic cuisines.

Indian and Chinese tourists can readily access border regions in Myanmar, but they also have the option of embarking on extended journeys to the scenic countryside by utilizing international airports and enhanced aviation services. Myanmar's ongoing efforts to upgrade multiple airports, ensuring suitable runways for international flights, are poised to facilitate the seamless influx of tourists heading to Myanmar's iconic destinations.

With the advent of the open season in Myanmar, international and domestic travellers will find an opportune moment to explore the nation's ancient religious edifices, landmarks, and the rich cultural tapestry of its diverse ethnic groups. The government's initiative to introduce tourist on-arrival visas for Indian and Chinese nationals is expected to invigorate Myanmar's tourism industry.

Decarbonizing shipping to cost over $100 bln per year: UNCTAD

Over the past decade, emissions from the global maritime fleet have increased by 20 per cent. This is concerning as the world is grappling with the need to reduce emissions to combat climate change.

THE UN called for rapid decarbonisation of the shipping industry on Wednesday, warning that the price tag could top $100 billion a year as the sector's emissions continue to swell.

The UN's trade and development agency, UNCTAD, highlighted the vital role shipping plays in the global economy, with over 80 per cent of all traded goods in the world moved by sea.

But it also accounts for nearly three percent of all greenhouse gas emissions globally.

At a time when industries are under pressure to reduce their carbon footprint to avert catastrophic climate change, emissions from the global maritime fleet has increased by 20 per cent in the past decade.

"We call for global action to decarbonise shipping," UNCTAD chief Rebeca Grynspan told reporters, presenting an annual report on the industry.

"Balancing environmental sustainability, regulatory compliance and economic demands is vital for a prosperous, equitable and resilient future for maritime transport," she said.

The agency is calling for a rapid shift towards cleaner fuels across a shipping industry, where nearly 99 per cent of the global fleet remains reliant on conventional fuels.

"Fuel transition in shipping is still in its infancy," Shamika Sirimanne, head of UNCTAD's technology and logistics division, told reporters.

UNCTAD cited some promising developments, including that 21 per cent of vessels currently on order are designed for alternative fuels.

But the agency stressed the need to step up the pace, while acknowledging that "the transition comes with substantial costs".

The UNCTAD report found that up to $28 billion would be required annually to decarbonize ships by 2050.

And even more investments — as much as $90 billion — would be needed each year to develop the necessary infrastructure for 100 per cent carbon neutral fuels by then, it said.

Poland says open to Ukraine grain proposals ahead of talks

Logistical problems led to a buildup of grain in central Europe, causing a decrease in local prices.

POLAND’S agriculture minister said on Wednesday that his country remained open to a Ukrainian proposal for a grain import licensing system, adding that the thorny issue would be discussed in the coming weeks.

Kyiv has suggested issuing licences to exporters of wheat, corn, rapeseed and sunflowers in line with Poland’s needs, Robert Telus said, after a video meeting with his Ukrainian counterpart.

“It’s a question that we have to examine, but from the outside the proposal seems like a good thing,” he said.

Ukraine’s grain exports are meant to be transiting through the European Union to Africa and the Middle East in particular, since the war-torn nation’s traditional Black Sea routes were blocked by Russia’s invasion.

But because of logistical issues, grain had been piling up in central Europe and driving down local prices, prompting several countries to declare an embargo on imports which was temporarily approved by Brussels.

Along with Hungary and Slovakia, Poland said on 15 September that it would extend its embargo, going against a European Commission decision to end the restrictions. — AFP

Tanzania kills millions of birds to save rice fields

TANZANIA has culled millions of quelea birds to prevent them from destroying rice fields, using drones and planes to monitor commercial farms, the country’s plants and pesticides watchdog said Wednesday.

The Tanzania Plant Health and Pesticides Authority (TPHPA) which is also responsible for controlling desert locusts, killed five million quelea birds in the northern region of Manara last week where about 1,000 acres of commercial crops were under threat.

“We killed swarms of five million destructive birds and now we are monitoring other zones,” Joseph Ndunguru, acting director-general of TPHPA, told AFP by phone.

The tiny red-beaked birds, which move in large flocks, are notorious for ravaging crops, with invasions generally occurring during the onset of the dry season in September and October. — AFP

About 5.5 million of those visitors will travel from other parts of China, up 192.4 per cent year on year, said Zhou Weimin, an official of the Beijing municipal bureau of culture and tourism, during a Tuesday press conference.

UK approves new North Sea oil production, angering green groups

BRITAIN on Wednesday authorised oil and gas production in its largest undeveloped field to bolster its energy security, one week after the government diluted its net zero targets, triggering further condemnation by environmentalists.

Norwegian oil and gas producer Equinor and Ithaca Energy, a subsidiary of Israeli group Delek, will together invest $3.8 billion in developing the Rosebank field in the North Sea off the coast of Scotland.

away from homes and other structures,” the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) said in a statement. “Fires can occur whether the vehicle is parked and turned off or while driving.”

The vehicles in question include 1.64 million from Hyundai and Genesis, concerning 2010 to 2015 models, and 1.73 million Kias, ranging from 2010 to 2017.

The problem comes from an issue with the vehicles’ anti-lock brake systems (ABS), “which could leak brake fluid internally and cause an electrical short”, the NHTSA said.

“Hyundai plans to notify owners to bring their vehicles to the nearest dealership to replace the ABS module fuse,” the agency said. “Kia is still working on a remedy.” Neither company knows of “any crashes, injuries or fatalities associated with this defect.”

Hyundai has recorded 21 vehicle fires linked to the default in the United States, as well as “22 thermal incidents,” including visible smoke, burning and melting. — AFP

US sues eBay for selling products that harm environment

THE US Justice Department sued eBay on Wednesday for allegedly selling restricted pesticide products and devices that defeat motor vehicle emission controls.

The complaint against the online marketplace was filed on behalf of the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in a federal court in New York. It accused the San Jose, California-based company of selling hundreds of thousands of products in violation of the Clean Air Act (CAA) and other environmental protection legislation.

US Assistant Attorney-General Todd Kim said “laws prohibiting the sale of products that harm human health and the environment apply to e-commerce retailers just as they do to brick-and-mortar stores.”

According to the complaint, eBay has sold more than 343,000 devices which defeat motor vehicle pollution emission controls and at least 23,000 unregistered, misbranded or restricted-use pesticide products. — AFP

TotalEnergies to raise fossil fuel production

FRENCH oil and gas major TotalEnergies said Wednesday that it would boost fossil fuel production over the next five years, a reversal after years of reducing output.

The company said it would increase output by two to three per cent per year, mainly from liquefied natural gas.

“TotalEnergies reaffirms the relevance of its balanced multi-energy strategy considering the developments in the oil, gas and electricity markets,” the firm said.

The group said it was “in a very favourable position to take advantage of changing energy prices”.

The oil and gas business “is expected to generate more than $3 billion of additional underlying cash flow in 2028 compared to 2023 at constant prices”, TotalEnergies said. — AFP

Trump’s business empire threatened by judge’s ruling

A key selling point of Donald Trump’s 2016 presidential run was that he was a businessman, not a politician.

But his corporate empire — which served as proof to many voters of his economic bonafides — is now in jeopardy after a judge ruled Tuesday that the former president, his sons and the Trump Organization had engaged in “persistent and repeated fraud”.

The ruling stemmed from a fraud case brought by New York Attorney-General Letitia James, which still must go to trial Monday.

In a partial victory for James, Judge Arthur Engoron found there had been a systemic overvaluation of assets, such as Trump Tower and other properties, to better negotiate with banks.

In addition to finding that Trump and his sons committed fraud, the judge also revoked their state business licences and asked the parties to propose receivers to manage the dissolution of the companies in question.

James is seeking $250 million in penalties and the removal of Trump and his sons from management of the family empire, the Trump Organization.

Engoron’s initial decision puts in jeopardy Trump’s control over not just the iconic Trump Tower, but other restaurants and boutiques, as well as high-end commercial property. — AFP

Israel top court weighs rules on removing prime minister

ISRAEL'S top court debated appeals Thursday against a law restricting how a prime minister can be removed from office, as current premier Benjamin Netanyahu faces protests against the judicial overhaul.

Eleven of the Supreme Court's 15 judges sat to hear three appeals against legislation passed by parliament in March, which determined a premier can only be declared unfit for office due to health reasons.

The law also stipulated that a two-thirds majority in cabinet is required to take such a step, before the move is approved by at least 80 of the parliament's 120 members.

Opponents argue the legislative change was intended solely to benefit Netanyahu, because it removes the possibility of him being removed from office over corruption charges.

Netanyahu in May 2020 became the first sitting prime minister of Israel to stand trial over a series of graft allegations he denies. Ahead of the Supreme Court session, dozens of protesters rallied outside his Jerusalem residence, where four people were arrested, according to the police.

Justice Minister Yariv Levin declared the hearing "an attempt to overturn the elections", in a statement published by his office.

Australia shakes up army in shift to long-range deterrence

AUSTRALIA announced Thursday a "major restructuring" of the army featuring a new long-range strike capacity, as it adapts to China's growing military clout in the Asia-Pacific region.

The shake-up responds to a strategic review in July that called for a sharp shift towards long-range deterrence — using missiles, submarines and cyber tools to keep adversaries at arm's length.

"This is an important step forward for our army. This builds an army which will be able to project," Defence Minister Richard Marles told reporters in the northeastern city of Townsville.

"This is the basis upon which we will be creating the army we need for Australia's future," he said.

The overhaul will create specialized combat brigades in three bases: in the northern city of Darwin, a light, easy-to-deploy force; in northeastern Townsville, a force with more heavy armour tanks to "bring to bear the greatest lethality in any conflict"; and in the eastern city of Brisbane, a mixture of both capacities.

Hundreds of personnel will be redeployed over the next five-to-six years, Marles said, describing it as a "major restructuring of the Australian army".

The revamp also creates a new brigade in the South Australian capital of Adelaide with long-range fire capacity and integrated air and missile defence.

"This will be the cutting edge of army technology," the minister said. — AFP

Thai police seize drugs worth $8 million

THAI anti-narcotics police seized over $8 million worth of drugs in one of the largest single hauls in the kingdom's history, officers said Thursday.

The so-called "Golden Triangle" where Thailand, Myanmar and Laos meet has long been a hot spot for drug smuggling, particularly of methamphetamine, despite repeated crackdowns.

Officers raided a building in central Nakhon Pathom city late Wednesday night, detaining four men at the premises and uncovering a huge stash.

"This is one of the largest amounts of drugs ever confiscated," said newly appointed National Police Chief Torsak Sukwimol, adding the haul was worth roughly 300 million baht ($8 million).

He told reporters officers had found roughly 15 million "yaba" pills — methamphetamine tablets that are produced and used across the region. — AFP

THE final day of the XIX Asian Games Women’s Football Group was held in Hangzhou, China yesterday and the Myanmar team lost to the Philippines by three goals and dropped out of the tournament.
