Residents Urged to Prioritize Public Safety Amid Armed Terrorist Threats

ARMED terrorists have been launching attacks by using residential homes and administrative buildings in towns and villages as cover, where they have forcibly settled. They aim to shield themselves from Tatmadaw counterattacks while also persuading temporarily displaced persons to return to their native areas and recruiting new members. That enables terrorists to use civilians as human shields. Tatmadaw is committed to safeguarding the sovereignty of the State and will respond to these threats based on intelligence and prevailing conditions. Therefore, residents in areas where terrorists have taken control must prioritize their safety and protect themselves from being exploited by these groups.

Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing, currently in Thailand to attend the Sixth BIMSTEC Summit, held a talk with Prime Minister of Nepal Rt Hon Mr K P Sharma Oli at Shangri-La Hotel in Bangkok yesterday evening.

The Prime Minister of Nepal expressed deep condolences, along with the people of Nepal, to the people of Myanmar for the devastating earthquake that struck the country recently. He stated that Nepal has already dispatched rescue and medical teams to Myanmar to assist in relief efforts. He recounted Nepal's own experience with a major earthquake in 2015, which resulted in over 9,000 deaths and more than 23,000 injuries. He mentioned that they made the reconstruction efforts to rebuild damaged infrastructure. He reaffirmed Nepal's strong and friendly ties with Myanmar and emphasized the commitment to further strengthening bilateral relations and cooperation between the two nations.

The Chairman of the State Administration Council Prime

State Administration Council Chairman Prime Minister Senior General Min Aung Hlaing meets Nepali Prime Minister K P Sharma Oli in Bangkok yesterday.

Minister expressed his deep gratitude to Nepal for its assistance in response to the severe earthquake that has caused great damage in Myanmar. The two nations have enjoyed a long-standing bond of friendship, and many Gurkhas of Nepalese descent serve in Myanmar Tatmadaw.

Moreover, a significant Nepali community resides in Myanmar, having coexisted harmoniously with the Myanmar people for generations. Despite the geographical distance, the two nations maintain close and friendly relations, and both countries wish to further enhance cooperation between them. Just as Myanmar Tatmadaw provided timely humanitarian aid during Nepal's 2015 earthquake, he is sincerely grateful for Nepal's swift assistance during this earthquake disaster in Myanmar. Furthermore, as Nepal has experience in post-earthquake reconstruction efforts, he would appreciate the opportunity to learn from and share that experience with Myanmar's own rebuilding efforts.

Next, they exchanged views on the enhancement of friendship and cooperation between the two countries, the promotion of cooperation in trade, investment, tourism and other sectors, and preparations to hold a free and fair multiparty democratic general election to be held in the coming December, favourable conditions of cooperation between Myanmar and Nepal in the international landscape, and potential for further promotion of cooperation among BIMSTEC member States through the Sixth BIMSTEC Summit.

Also, present at the talk were Council Joint Secretary General Ye Win Oo, Union Ministers U Than Swe and Admiral Moe Aung, and senior officers. The Nepali Prime Minister was accompanied by the Deputy Prime Minister and officials from the Nepali government.

After the talk, the Senior General and the Nepali Prime Minister exchanged gifts and cordially greeted their entourages. — MNA/TTA

FOLLOWING the earthquake on 28 March, which impacted Nay Pyi Taw, Mandalay Region, Sagaing Region and 11 other states and regions, over 26,000 mobile communication stations were affected with more than 6,730 experiencing service interruptions.

Telecom operators did necessary repairs and as of 3 April, over 4,500 mobile communication stations were functioning properly. Efforts are ongoing to restore the remaining 2,300 affected stations. These repairs are led by Chief Technical Officers (CTOs) from each operator.

Temporary mobile communication towers, known as Cell on Wheels (COW) are also deployed in key areas of Nay Pyi Taw and Mandalay Region to ensure quicker restoration of communication services.

As part of their Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR), telecom operators have also provided free calling and messaging services between mobile phone users in earthquake-affected areas. This service began on 29 March and will continue until 10 April, allowing residents to communicate more easily during this difficult time. — MNA/KZL

SAC Vice-Chair DPM Vice-Senior General Soe Win inspects damaged buildings and irrigation facilities in
Nay Pyi Taw Council Area

Chairman of the National Disaster Management Committee Vice-Chairman of the State Administration Council Deputy Prime Minister Vice-Senior General Soe Win made an inspection tour of damaged buildings and diversion weirs and dams being maintained by Nay Pyi Taw Development Committee in Nay Pyi Taw Council Area yesterday afternoon.

The Vice-Senior General inspected damaged buildings at the Myanmar Development Institute (MDI) office at the corner of Thazin and Myitmakha streets in the diplomatic zone of Dekkhinathiri Township and gave instructions to officials.

He also looked into damaged parts of Yanaungmyin Dam which supplies drinking water to Nay Pyi Taw Council Area. It is an earthen facility which partially contributes to the supply of water to the capital. It is an embankment with 36 feet in height and 4,060 feet in length. Its watershed is 11 square miles. The three-foot-long earthen failure occurred at the embankment due to the impacts of the earthquake. A plan is underway to build a temporary embankment. So, it is not dangerous to break down the embankment.

The Vice-Senior General also inspected loss and damage at Yayngan Dam which is one of the supporting dams to supply water to Zabuthiri Township. It is an earthen embankment with 30 feet in height and 1,000 feet in length. Its watershed is 1,200 square acres of land. Some cracks appear on the exterior of the dam and some damage emerged at the conduit due to the impacts of the earthquake. So, officials drained out some four feet high of water from the dam to reduce pressure in the dam and are carrying out repair work as quickly as possible. The dam is not dangerous at all.

At Chaungmagyi Dam in Zabuthiri Township, the Vice-Senior General heard reports on facts about dams and reservoirs in Nay Pyi Taw Council Area, strengthening of dams and damage at the embankments by officials. The Vice-Senior General instructed officials to systematically inspect the maintenance of dams, check the floor of dams with the strength of divers from Tatmadaw (Navy) using underwater cameras, and systematically manage the supply of drinking water to dwellers in Nay Pyi Taw Council Area without breakage of dams.

The Vice-Senior General went to see injured civilians receiving medical treatment healthcare services and recovery of injuries at the temporary hospital (Paunglaung) in Paunglaung Sports Ground in Pyinmana and individually comforted the patients.

The temporary hospital (Paunglaung) is providing medical treatment for victims of the earthquake and other patients, with assistance from the Tatmadaw and the Ministry of Health. The hospital is staffed by specialists in surgery, obstetrics and gynaecology, paediatrics, orthopaedics, ophthalmology, ENT, neurology, psychiatry, pathology, pharmacy, and public health, as well as doctors, nurses, and medical officers. It is equipped with mobile surgical and X-ray vehicles and necessary medical instruments, providing round-the-clock care to those injured and others in need of healthcare services. Up to now, 36 critical patients and 60 outpatients have received the necessary healthcare services. Moreover, a team of 40 medical personnel from Bhutan, sent by the King of Bhutan, is also collaborating to providing essential medical treatment and supplies at the temporary hospital (Paunglaung). This Bhutanese medical team is establishing a separate temporary hospital and will continue to provide necessary healthcare services to the victims of the earthquake with compassion and support. — MNA/TTA

Union Info Minister inspects damage, comforts staff, families at MRTV in Tatkon

UNION Minister for Information U Maung Maung Ohn inspected the damages caused by the earthquake at MRTV in Tatkon of Nay Pyi Taw yesterday and also met the staff and their families.

The Union minister first inspected the damage at Block C of the main building of MRTV, including shattered glass panels, collapsed ceiling, cracks in the walls, and damage to the walls in the Waiting Room.

During the meeting with the staff at the Auditorium Hall, the video clip featuring the record of search and rescue works and rehabilitation processes after the powerful earthquake was played.

The Union minister and staff then bowed their heads for one minute in silence with deep sympathy and understanding for the loss of lives and destruction caused by the devastating earthquake and a siren was sounded as a tribute to mourning as part of the national day of mourning.

Speaking at the meeting, the Union minister talked about his visit to inspect the damages and comfort the staff. It was a relief that only one female staff member sustained minor injuries (not in serious condition) and that no other injuries were reported. The Union minister also acknowledged and appreciated the uninterrupted broadcasting, as there was no disruption tion to transmission, thanks to the efforts of the staff in maintaining operations. He emphasized the need for timely news reporting, documentation, and updates regarding the affected areas, the incidents, search and rescue efforts, as well as cleanup and reconstruction activities.

Due to the powerful earthquake, as of today, there have been 3,145 deaths, 4,589 injuries, and 221 missing. The ancient pagodas, buildings, railway tracks and roads were seriously destroyed. The country has successfully overcome challenges such as the COVID-19 pandemic, Cyclone Mocha, and Typhoon Yagi through the collaborative efforts of the government and the people. Moreover, the country was able to recover swiftly and even surpass previous conditions.

In response to this recent earthquake, lessons will be learned, and with unity and determination, all will overcome this challenge as well. As climate change continues to affect the world, it is crucial for all sectors to work together to protect the planet.

Both the domestic and international organizations are working together, sacrificing their lives to rescue the people. Being affected by the earthquake, MRTV has been able to continue broadcasting news and programmes without interruption. Efforts must be made to maintain uninterrupted transmissions, ensuring that both the domestic audience and the international community stay informed about the country's critical events.

He then urged the staff to continue their duties with a strong sense of responsibility and commitment.

Afterwards, the Union minister presented foodstuffs worth over K10 million for MRTV staff, members of Tatmadaw and the Police Force, who are carrying out security measures, to Director-General U Ye Naing.

He also offered comfort to local staff at the Block C Lobby and gave them foodstuffs. He then inspected the damages in the MRTV compound.

He cordially met with 30 staff families who took shelter at MRTV Recreation Centre from staff housing, and he presented foodstuffs and cash assistance to them.

Moreover, he proceeded to staff officer housing No 18 and staff housing No 23 and met the staff and their families. He presented foodstuffs and cash to them.

He also went to water tanks for the staff and instructed officials not to cause water shortages. He presented foodstuffs to Tatmadaw members, the Myanmar Police Force and security staff who serve security measures at MRTV.

The powerful earthquake that struck on 28 March caused no damage to the transmission tower, satellite communication systems, air-conditioning systems, or studios at MRTV in Nay Pyi Taw-Tatkon. However, the main building, the Diamond Jubilee Museum, and staff housing sustained damages such as shattered glass panels, collapsed ceilings, and cracked walls. Moreover, TVs, computers, and equipment in the broadcasting control room and other related materials were damaged. Despite this, broadcasting operations have continued uninterrupted, thanks to repairs and replacements. — MNA/KTZH

Free river transport offered amid bridge damage in Mandalay and Sagaing

DUE to the severe earthquake on 28 March, six arches of the Sagaing (Inwa) bridge, which crosses the Ayeyawady River and connects Mandalay and Sagaing, were damaged and collapsed into the river. Similarly, the new Sagaing bridge also sustained some damage to its deck and approach roads, leading to traffic restrictions, and resulting in considerable difficulties for the movement of people and vehicles.

To address these difficulties as swiftly as possible, the Ministry of Transport and Communications, from the morning of 31 March, commenced providing free passenger ferry services between Mandalay (Shwe Kyet Yet) jetty and Sagaing jetty using the Inland Water Transport's vessels — "Padashin" and "Pyithu". Under the management of the Directorate of Marine Administration, private freight tugs — "Hey Day", "Shwe Wah Hlaing" and "Thurein Kyaw Soe Win" — are also providing a free daily river crossing service for heavy trucks and rescue equipment and machinery.

From 31 March to 2 April over three days, a total of 794 passengers, 353 heavy trucks and machinery units, 138 light vehicles, and 12 motorcycles were transported. This free river crossing service will continue to be provided as long as the need persists.

Moreover, all parties in any engagement of fighting involved must cultivate broad-mindedness, recognizing the plight of earthquake victims and those suffering from its indirect effects nationwide.

Peace is an inspiration for the people. Any form of peace can benefit society and bring happiness and prosperity to the people. Therefore, everyone, including the earthquake victims in all affected areas, will wholeheartedly welcome the restoration of peace. Thus, as now is an opportune time, everyone should take part in the restoration of both short-term and lasting peace across the nation.

WE GOT five consecutive holidays in the middle of March. So, we, at the invitation of our eldest sister Dr Kyawt Khin, Rector of the Polytechnic University (Maubin), paid for a day trip to Maubin, a thriving town 46 miles from Yangon. That day, we set out there in a mini-bus around 8 am. Our team consisted of my family members, relatives, and friends, totalling 20.

At 8:20 am, our bus reached the Bay-intnaung Bridge that spanned the Hlaing River. We saw the glittering surface of the river in the glow of the rising morning sun. A few motor boats, cargo vessels and sampans were inching along the course of the river. When we were crossing Hlinethaya, we found the FMI City, the Nawade Garden City, tea shops, restaurants, industrial zones, four-storeyed apartments and offices on the sides of the road. We also noticed many people swarming around bus stops, waiting for the buses. Some factory employees in their uniforms were getting off the shuttle buses in front of the industrial zones. Some hawkers were selling their food loudly. The scene was in a commotion. At 8:30 am, we arrived at the toll gate on the outskirts of Hlinethaya.

Then, our bus followed the Yangon-Pathein Highway. We espied some resorts, rice mills, lakes, fields and hamlets on the roadsides. We often saw clumps of green trees and rickety huts in the stubble fields. However, in some fields, paddy plants turned yellow. And, a few farmhands were labouring in the fields. As our bus went further and further, the scene became more and more countrified. As we escaped from the distractions of daily city life, we were refreshed and relaxed. As it was a holiday, there was heavy traffic on the road. But some cars were running in a tearing rush, overtaking ours quickly.

At 9:40 am, we got out of the limits of Yangon Region. Soon, we got to Sarmalauk, a prosperous village in Nyaungdon Township, Ayeyawady Region. We got off the bus for the communal pee for about 15 minutes and continued along the highway. With its economic development, Sarmalauk took on the look of a small town with factories, rice mills, mini stores, company offices, brokerage houses, restaurants and tea shops.

When we got beyond Sarmalauk, we diverted from the Yangon-Pathein highway and took the Yangon-Maubin highway. The landscape on the roadsides changed. The road was lined with tall teak trees and shady rain trees. We, on the left side, caught sight of vast alluvial plains stretching many miles eastwards. On the plains were found many paddy fields, fish-breeding pond-cum-fowl-farms, groves of banana plants and betel-nut palms, and corn, eugenia and green-pea plantations.

On the right side, villages stood adjoining. Rice mills, animal feed factories and rice brokerage houses were witnessed at the edge of some villages. Not long before, we passed the Nyaungdon oil field junction. It was a place busy with mini stores, restaurants, petrol stations and other modern amenities and facilities. We proceeded along and soon saw the Mahadhammapala monastery on the right side. At about 11 am, we arrived at the Maubin Bridge which crossed the Toe River, a tributary of the Ayeyawady River. It was over 2,500 feet in length and was built in 1998 during the time of the State Peace and Development Council. A few green vegetable plantations were seen on a big sandbank which emerged near the northern shore.

A few minutes later, we saw the signboard reading ‘Welcome to Maubin’. It is learnt that Maubin obtained its name because it was built on a site where Mau trees (Sarcocephalus Cordatus) grew densely. It was built by the British Government in 1872. But it developed into a big town in a few years due to its thriving economy bolstered by agriculture and fishery. So it was designated as a district-level city in 1902 and put under the charge of a Deputy Commissioner.

When our bus came into Maubin, we, on the left, observed the Maubin Polytechnic University (Faculty of Computing) standing in a wide precinct with a petrol station beside it. When we reached downtown, we found a statue of Bogyoke Aung San erected at a junction of four roads. The traffic of Maubin was much lighter than that of Yangon. We turned right and pursued west. Within ten minutes, we got right in front of the Polytechnic University (Maubin), which was located on the outskirts of the town. There was a grove of shady trees near the university gate. Our team was ushered in by our eldest sister and then led inside the university estate. The main building was a very large, square-shaped, two-storeyed building, at the centre of which was a lotus pond with sprinkling water fountains. The campus was clustered with many buildings such as workshops, laboratories, canteens, student hostels and staff quarters. A big three-storeyed building and a sports stadium were under construction. I noticed that as the university was fully provided with academic facilities and operated well under the close supervision of the thoughtful, experienced rector, it had today become a centre for all the young people who took a great interest in engineering subjects from the neighbouring areas of Maubin. So it was upgraded to the Polytechnic University (Maubin) in November 2024, having combined it with the Maubin Computer University.

At about noon, our group trooped to a food stall near a clock tower next to the bank of the Toe River. As we all were overcome by hunger, we wolfed down on the lunch. The waiters and waitresses had got their hands full, as they had to satisfy the demanding customers like us. However, we saw them very pleased with catering to our group. When we went out after lunch, we espied the shimmering gilded Shwebon Myint Pagoda in some distance. It was the most renowned pagoda in Maubin. It is said that it was 73 cubits in height and that it was built in 1890 with the deposition of bodily relics of an Arahata and small Buddha images yielded from a dilapidated ancient stupa. Although we were at first to visit that pagoda, my eldest sister suggested that we should visit the Uyin-wa Pawdawmu Pagoda, which was better known as Phar Phaya, a half-an-hour drive from Maubin. So we changed our plan and agreed to her suggestion.

On the way to the Phar Phaya, we saw Maubin University ensconced in a large compound sheltered by leafy big trees outside the town. There were wide stubble fields and villages on the sides of the road. We were charmed by the countrified scene. As it was a well-paved tarred one, we reached the arched gateway of the Phar Phaya within half an hour. It was situated in a vast precinct at the confluence of the Toe River, the Pyapon River and the Uyin Creek in Kyaiklat Township. Pagodas and many religious buildings such as monasteries, an ordination hall, shrine rooms, rest houses and pavilions surmounted by a tiered roof were scattered all over the precincts. It is said that a six-inch-high seated Buddha image was discovered about 50 years ago from the place where the Phaya is today situated, that it was a very powerful, wish-fulfilled Buddha image, that it was housed by Baungdaw Gyoke Sayadaw U Nanda in a shrine room to receive public veneration, that in subsequent years, it attracted many pilgrims from the neighbouring areas, that Sayadaw, therefore, constructed the building with a frog-shaped roof and other religious buildings in the precinct and that it was later called the Phar Phaya (Frog-like Stupa) after the building roofed with a big frog statue. When we got off the bus, we saw many pilgrims from different walks of life inside the precinct. Some were paying homage to the Buddha images in the shrine halls and the pagoda. Some were having themselves photographed and selfied. Some were sitting on benches under the shady trees by the banks of the rivers, breathing in fresh air. We espied some boats and sampans fully loaded with local products moving slowly along the rivers. We offered flowers, paid homage to the Buddha images and took documentary photographs. We had a relaxing moment due to the peace and happiness offered by the pagoda precinct and the nearby riverine scene.

At about 3 pm, we started our return so that we could arrive back home before dark. Half on the way back, all the people on the bus, oppressed by tiredness and the heat of the scorching sun, dozed off. All of a sudden, our sleepy eyes were wide open due to a magnified sound emanating from the front part of the bus. Alas! The ones sitting beside the driver whom we addressed intimately as Saya Thet, Saya Tun, Saya Kyaw, Saya Saw and Dr Win were singing Karaoke. The songs sung by them were those of Sai Htee Seng, Hlwan Moe, Khin Maung Toe, Soe Lwin Lwin and Min Aung who were in vogue during their younger days. While singing, they jeered at one another, comparing the theme of the songs with the memories of their past unsuccessful romantic affairs. Saya Thet and Saya Tun who had more memories of romantic affairs were the objects of ridicule. All in the bus became animated with the jokes cracked by them. Thus time passed unnoticed. At 5:30 pm, we stopped briefly at the Mann Myo Taw tea shop and had tea, coffee and dumplings. We arrived back home safe and sound at about 7 pm.

In conclusion, although we were tired from the trip, we were compensated by the beautiful scenery on the way. So we felt relaxed and refreshed. Moreover, the trip also gave us some knowledge of the socioeconomy, education, religion and environment of Maubin Township. So it is thought that this trip was beneficial and rewarding for us.

To Myesteemed Editor-in-Chief,

I am writing this letter with my downhearted mind...

Once, Myanmar hummed with a quiet rhythm - pagodas glinting gold under the sun, the Ayeyawady River whispering tales of old, and Mandalay's bustling streets alive with vendors' calls. That was before 28 March 2025, when at 12:50 pm, a magnitude 7.7 earthquake tore through the heart of our land, its epicentre a mere breath from Sagaing, too close to Mandalay's vibrant pulse. I remember the Myanmar of before, and now, as the dust settles on 1 April 2025, with over 3,600 souls lost, I ache for what we can never reclaim.

There was a time when the Mandalay Hill stood as a sentinel of peace, its slopes dotted with pilgrims offering prayers. Now, I see it in my mind's eye, scarred by landslides that swallowed monks mid-chant, their saffron robes buried beneath the earth that once cradled their steps. The palace, with its teak walls echoing royal whispers, lies splintered - a memory of grandeur drowned by the river's swollen rage. I recall Ko Zaw's laughter as he hawked mangoes by the roadside; today, he huddles under a tarp, his children's eyes wide with a fear I cannot unsee. Those streets, once a tapestry of life, are silent now, a graveyard of shacks and dreams.

Sagaing, too, haunts me - its monasteries perched like fragile birds along the fault line, now crumbled nests of wood and sorrow. I think of Ma Aye, her voice once bright as she sang to her sons, now muted by the collapse of a pagoda that took them from her. The Ava Bridge, that weathered span of iron and time, once carried us to Mandalay's embrace; it rests in the river's depths, a broken thread of connection. Even Nay Pyi Taw, the Government's polished dream, falters in my memory - its sterile order cracked, Daw Hnin fleeing as water claimed her home. These were places of permanence, or so we thought.

Yet amid this longing, there flickers a bittersweet glow. I see Htet Min Oo clawing through the rubble, hands bleeding for love of kin, and a man in Nay Pyi Taw cradling his mother's hand, his prayers a fragile bridge to her spirit. In Sagaing's villages, hands shared rice, voices offered comfort - a unity I yearn to hold forever. Bangkok's tremors, too, ripple in my mind, its people stepping into the light with a grace we mirrored in our darkest hour. These are the echoes I cling to, proof that even as the earth betrayed us, our hearts did not.

Oh, Myanmar, how I miss your unbroken face - the mornings of mist, the evenings of song and I cannot stand to continue writing this miserable letter. The earthquake stole so much, yet left us with this: a nostalgia for resilience, a yearning to rebuild not just walls, but the soul of a nation. In the rubble, I see shadows of what was and whispers of what might still be.

With a sense of melancholy,
Min Zan

THE stone inscriptions of the Tripitaka canons remained unharmed, even as the recent earthquake in Mandalay damaged the Candamuni and Kuthodaw pagodas.

The Candamuni Pagoda houses 1,774 stone plaques of the Sutta, Vinaya, Abhidhamma, and Atthakatha (commentaries), erected by hermit U Khandi and listed as a UNESCO World Heritage site.

Earthquake-damaged expressway repairs underway; Small vehicles permitted from Yangon to Nay Pyi Taw starting 5 Apr

REPAIRS are being carried out on roads and bridges along the expressway that were damaged by the earthquake. From 5 April, small vehicles will be allowed to travel from Yangon to Nay Pyi Taw, according to the Expressway Maintenance and Supervisory Committee.

“The bridge entrances at mileposts 145 and 165, particularly the Swa Creek Bridge, were damaged, resulting in the lowering of the road level and the tilting of the bridge. We have carried out repairs and have installed a temporary Bailey bridge at the Swa Creek Bridge site.

Therefore, from 5 April, small vehicles will be allowed to travel the expressway from Yangon to Nay Pyi Taw, while larger vehicles and heavy trucks will be redirected via alternate routes,” said an official from the Expressway Maintenance and Supervisory Committee.

Currently, vehicles of all sizes can travel from Nay Pyi Taw to milepost 352 on the expressway. However, due to the road’s structural integrity, the section between mileposts 352 and 365 will be temporarily closed to traffic, as it is not safe for passage. — ASH/MKKS

Coal-fired power plant project launched in southern Laos

LAO Deputy Prime Minister Saleumxay Kommasith presided over a groundbreaking ceremony on Wednesday for a coal-fired power plant project in southern Laos' Sekong province, which will have a total capacity of 1,800 megawatts across six 300-megawatt plants. The electricity generated will be exported to Cambodia under a power purchase agreement with the state-owned electricity company in Cambodia, the Ministry of Energy and Mines said on Thursday.

The US$4-billion project was expected to start operation in January 2028. All six plants were planned to be operational by January 2030, with a 30-year concession period from 2030 to 2060.

In addition to the project, a 500-kilovolt transmission line spanning 253 kilometres will connect the facility to the Laos-Cambodia border. The project is expected to boost Laos' energy export capacity and strengthen economic ties with Cambodia. — Xinhua

THE United States is the sole bidder for the 2031 Women's World Cup, and the United Kingdom is set to host the 2035 tournament, FIFA president Gianni Infantino announced on Thursday.

"Today I can confirm that we have received one bid for 2031 and one valid bid for 2035," said Infantino on stage at the UEFA Congress in Belgrade.

"2031 is from the USA and potentially some other CONCACAF members together, and '35 is from Europe, from the home nations."

Infantino also said FIFA planned to increase the number of participating teams at the Women's World Cup from 32 teams to 48 in time for the 2031 tournament.

Thursday's announcement comes after the football associations of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland revealed last month that they would submit an expression of interest in staging the tournament.

World football's governing body last month said it would only welcome bids for 2035 from Europe or Africa, with expressions of interest to be made in the first quarter of this year.

FIFA has said that the identity of the hosts would be confirmed at its congress in the second quarter of 2026.

The United States also confirmed in early March that it would push ahead with a bid for 2031.

South Africa and Morocco had also been in the running with African nations invited to bid too, but Infantino's comments suggest they are now out of contention. — AFP

Italy's skiing champion Brignone air-lifted to hospital after crash

ITALY'S Federica Brignone, winner of the alpine skiing World Cup, was air-lifted to hospital Thursday after falling during the giant slalom of the Italian Championships in Val di Fassa.

The 34-year-old, who was leading after the first leg, hit a gate and lost her balance, tumbling onto the piste, according to a video posted on social networks.

Brignone was evacuated by helicopter from the competition in northeastern Italy, according to the AGI news agency.

In a brief statement, Italy's winter sports federation (FISI) confirmed she was undergoing checks in hospital in Trento, promising a formal update when there was a clearer picture.

Brignone dominated the 2024-25 season on the women's circuit and is one of Italy's strongest medal chances at the 2026 Olympic Games in Milan Cortina.

Sinner's former physio to blame for failed dope tests, says ex-physical trainer

TENNIS world number one Jannik Sinner's former physical trainer Umberto Ferrara said on Thursday he was blameless in the case of the three-time Grand Slam champion testing positive twice for a banned substance.

Sinner received a three-month ban agreed with the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) in February after "admitting "partial responsibility" for team mistakes.

Ferrara, in his first public remarks on the scandal, laid the blame squarely at the door of Sinner's former physiotherapist Giacomo Naldi.

Both of them have been laid off by the 23-year-old since the affair came to light.

WADA came to an agreement with Sinner after accepting he was inadvertently contaminated with the banned substance clostebol by Naldi.

Trump to slap new 24% tariff on Japan, at least 10% on all countries

US PRESIDENT Donald Trump on Wednesday unveiled his most broad-based tariffs yet in a bid to create more, better-paying American jobs, with all countries facing a baseline duty of 10 per cent and Japan being hit by a higher rate of 24 per cent.

In announcing the mix of universal and country-specific tariffs, Trump declared “Liberation Day” for the United States, which he claimed has been for decades “looted, pillaged, raped and plundered by nations near and far, both friend and foe alike.”

Trump said a baseline tariff of 10 per cent will be imposed on all imports and much higher rates for certain countries, regarded by his administration as the “worst offenders” in trade relations with the United States.

The tariffs are designed to target specific countries deemed “worst offenders” in trade relations with the US, particularly many Asian nations.

Those key trading partners, many of which are Asian countries, include Cambodia, China, India, Japan, Chinese Taipei, Thailand, South Korea and Vietnam.

Noting that the US trade deficit reached a record $1.2 trillion last year and the country’s manufacturing industry has been hollowed out by cheap imports, Trump said the situation is a “national emergency”.

Cambodia will face an additional tariff of 49 per cent, Vietnam 46 per cent, Thailand 36 per cent, China 34 per cent, Chinese Taipei 32 per cent, India 26 per cent, South Korea 25 per cent and the European Union 20 per cent.

A senior White House official blamed Cambodia and Vietnam for becoming locations for Chinese companies to produce their goods and evade US tariffs.

Trump and White House officials accused the nations of not creating a level playing field for American businesses, claiming there are numerous obstacles, including non-tariff barriers, such as regulations, safety standards and subsidies. — Kyodo

Hungary to withdraw from International Criminal Court

HUNGARY will begin the process of withdrawing from the International Criminal Court (ICC), citing concerns over the court’s politicization, the head of the Prime Minister’s Office, Gergely Gulyas, said on Thursday. Gulyas told state news agency MTI that the government would initiate the formal withdrawal process later in the day, in line with constitutional and international legal frameworks. Gulyas also noted that Hungary never formally incorporated the ICC’s Rome Statute into domestic law, making enforcement of its decisions within the country legally impossible even prior to the planned withdrawal. — Xinhua
