Spotlight on Flights, Farm Fuel, and Roads at Pyithu Hluttaw

THE fifth-day meeting of the Third Pyithu Hluttaw's third regular session was held at the Hluttaw Building in Nay Pyi Taw yesterday, attended by Pyithu Hluttaw Speaker U Khin Yi, Deputy Speaker U Maung Maung Ohn, and parliamentarians. During the session, deputy ministers addressed 14 starred questions covering aviation, fuel supplies, staff housing, land management, and road and bridge infrastructure.

The fifth-day meeting of the third regular session of the Third Pyithu Hluttaw is underway in Nay Pyi Taw, presided over by Speaker U Khin Yi and Deputy Speaker U Maung Maung Ohn.

Regarding flight extensions and black-market ticket speculation on the Mandalay-Myitkyina route, Deputy Minister for Transport U Aung Myaing stated that five airlines currently operate twice daily to Myitkyina, with additional weekly flights added on Wednesdays and Fridays. To curb ticket scalping, domestic carriers, including Myanmar National Airlines, Air Thanlwin, MAI, Mingala Aviation, and Mann Yadanapon, have eliminated sales through third-party agents, selling directly via airline offices and official online platforms. Ticket prices are also being adjusted in line with declining aviation fuel costs.

Addressing agricultural fuel needs in Ayeyawady Region, Deputy Minister for Electricity and Energy U Kyaw Naing Win confirmed that over 66,000 gallons of locally refined diesel and RON-68/72 petrol have been distributed for farm machinery and rivercraft across more than 500,000 cultivated acres. While there is no current plan to introduce individual fuel ration books at retail outlets, the ministry is prioritizing supplies at subsidized rates in coordination with regional authorities.

Deputy Minister for Home Affairs Maj-Gen Min Thu replied to queries concerning staff quarters and municipal matters. He noted that plans are underway to budget for staff housing for the ChaungU Township General Administration Department and the Paukkhaung Township Fire Station in the 2027-2028 financial year. Regarding Yangon's urban traffic, he explained that the city has already established multiple passenger and cargo vehicle terminals, rendering build-operate-transfer (BOT) parking terminals unnecessary, while over 2,100 street vendors across several townships have been relocated into 15 designated municipal markets.

In response to infrastructure queries, Deputy Minister for Construction U Myo Myint detailed planned road upgrades and maintenance across Rakhine State, Bago Region and Ayeyawady Region, and Kachin State slated for the 2026-2027 and 2027-2028 financial years. He added that the proposed 2,600-foot Myitmakha River Bridge project connecting Okpho and Monyo townships, as well as the Nawnghkio bypass road project, are currently deferred pending budget allocations and related bridge constructions.

Defence Services C-in-C urges Yangon Command personnel to maintain combat readiness, discipline

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF of Defence Services General Ye Win Oo urged officers and other ranks of Yangon Command to maintain combat readiness, strict discipline and effective administration, stressing that military personnel must be prepared to fulfil assigned duties and deploy wherever required, while units must be properly trained and organized to perform combat duties effectively.

The General made the remarks while meeting with officers, other ranks and their families from garrison units of Yangon Command at Zeyathiri Hall of the Yangon Command Headquarters yesterday afternoon.

He said military service should not be regarded as a lifelong assignment at a single location and that personnel must always be ready to fulfil assigned duties and serve wherever they are deployed. He instructed that every unit should be trained and organized to be capable of engaging in combat like an infantry unit.

He also called for military personnel to interact with the public in accordance with codes of conduct to build trust and goodwill towards the military, noting that stable and peaceful conditions in major cities must be maintained.

General Ye Win Oo said obedience is essential to becoming a good service member and that military drills are conducted to cultivate obedience and good military discipline. He called for continuous training to strengthen discipline and ensure that personnel become proficient soldiers capable of handling assigned weapons and maintaining physical fitness, skills and courage.

He highlighted administrative capability as one of the three core capabilities of the military, warning that weak administration could undermine combat and organizational capabilities. He said administration covers food, accommodation, living conditions and military discipline and requires commanders and responsible personnel to demonstrate sound leadership, empathy and a sense of responsibility. Fair and balanced administration, he added, is essential to maintaining internal unity.

Defence Services Commander-in Chief General Ye Win Oo meets Tatmadaw officers, personnel, and their families from Yangon Command Headquarters.

The General also stressed the importance of genuine goodwill in relations with subordinates and the public. He called for female Tatmadaw personnel to be properly guided, protected and supervised while maintaining strict discipline, including measures to prevent them from being exploited through social media networks.

He instructed responsible personnel to implement welfare activities, including agriculture and livestock projects, and unit beautification measures. He said morale could be strengthened through promotions, leave, training, sports and recreational activities and the full and timely provision of soldiers' entitlements. Commanders should regularly meet and engage with their subordinates to understand their conditions and needs.

The spring water supply system and related work are being implemented during the 2026-2027 financial year with K74.727 million in Union budget by township department engineering staff and tender-winning companies. Work commenced in the fourth week of July, and construction is currently 70 per cent complete. Upon completion, the system will ensure year-round access to a sufficient supply of clean drinking water for residents of Konsa, Konkaw and Tamung villages. — Karan (Rural)

Benchmark price for palm oil remains stable

THE palm oil wholesale reference price set for the Yangon market remained unchanged at K7,179 per viss during the week ending 1 October, according to the Supervisory Committee on Edible Oil Import and Distribution.

The Supervisory Committee on Edible Oil Import and Distribution under the Ministry of Commerce has been closely observing the FOB prices in Malaysia and Indonesia, adding transport costs, tariffs and banking services to decide the wholesale market reference rate for edible oil weekly. Despite the reference price, the market price is still high. To control overcharging, the Consumer Affairs Department under the Ministry of Commerce has informed consumers of lodging complaints for overcharging through the call centre hotline. The department urges consumers not to buy palm oil at high prices.

The Committee notified that any person who is involved in price gouging and oil storage to attempt market manipulation will face legal action under the Essential Goods and Services Law.

The department is working together with the Myanmar Oil Dealers' Association and the cooking oil importing companies to offer affordable rates of imported palm oil for consumers. Complaints about overcharging can be lodged over hotline 1535 of the call centre of the Consumers Affairs Department, or sent to the Facebook page of the department and the region and state departments concerned.

The domestic consumption of palm oil is estimated at one million tonnes per year. The local palm oil production is just about 400,000 tonnes. About 700,000 tonnes of palm oil are annually imported through Malaysia and Indonesia to meet domestic demand. — NN/KK

Making online scam and gambling crackdown a national duty

As technology continues to advance and develop worldwide, it brings benefits to humanity while also enabling various forms of crime and destructive activities. Among the technology-enabled threats facing the public, online scams and online gambling have emerged as significant problems.

The Government of Myanmar is placing great emphasis on combatting online scammers and gambling offenders who illegally cross-national borders and pose a serious threat to the socioeconomic well-being of not only people in the region but also people around the world. As a national responsibility, the government is actively working to identify, prevent and combat such offenders. The government is taking effective measures to combat these criminal activities using domestic resources, while also coordinating with the governments of neighbouring countries to identify, arrest and take legal action against those involved.

In taking action against young people who engage in such criminal activities, whether knowingly or unknowingly, broad public awareness campaigns should also be conducted to educate young people about the risks and consequences of such activities. Everyone should be aware of the need to refrain from making a living through such activities and to actively participate in efforts to combat these activities.

As part of these efforts to identify and combat such activities, foreign nationals who are arrested are being handed over to the relevant countries. Continuous efforts are also being made to identify, take action against and eradicate online scam and gambling operations to prevent them from becoming established in border areas and areas beyond the reach of the administrative machinery.

In recent days, men and women involved in illegal online gambling have been arrested, and legal action has been taken against them, along with the confiscation of evidence, in townships across Yangon Region. Previously, online gambling operators had also been identified and arrested in major cities across the country. Young people continue to engage in such activities, reportedly due to a lack of awareness of the law, failure to respect and comply with legal requirements, and the financial gains they obtain from fraudulent activities.

It is not sufficient for relevant security organizations to identify and take action against criminal activities that are harmful to the public; effective efforts can only be made with the active cooperation and participation of the public. In recent days, based on information provided by responsible citizens, joint teams comprising security personnel have identified, arrested and taken legal action against perpetrators of online scams and gambling who were operating secretly in various towns and areas across Yangon Region.

In taking action against young people who engage in such criminal activities, whether knowingly or unknowingly, broad public awareness campaigns should also be conducted to educate young people about the risks and consequences of such activities. Everyone should be aware of the need to refrain from making a living through such activities and to actively participate in efforts to combat these activities.

Commemorating International Cat Day: A Few Personal and Public 'Cat Stories'

By Myint Zan

Quite belatedly, I came to learn that since 2002, the International Fund for Cat Welfare has designated and commemorated 8 August as International Cat Day.

There are a lot of articles, indeed many books, about cats. This piece only deals with a few 'cat stories', some of which are personal and some in the public domain.

The Essay question in the compulsory English paper in the 1974 Matric Exam in Burma: (about cats and dogs)

Since the 1920s in colonial Burma up till now, students who want to join the Universities and Colleges have to sit for the Matriculation exams. There are two compulsory papers: Burmese and English.

In the 1974 Matric exams, the then new format of English texts had two Parts: Part A is 'objective test' questions where students have to choose true/false and multiple-choice questions. Part B consists of a few questions from the English text. And the final part of Part B is an essay with prompts, i.e., the students had to fill in the blanks with a few phrases -not merely a word or two, but a few phrases to complete the 'prompts'. The essay question for the compulsory English paper for the year 1974 is EITHER 'Why I like Cats Better than Dogs' OR 'Why I Like Dogs Better than Cats'. The then Matric exam paper did not give the choice to candidates to state that they liked cats or they liked dogs better. They would have to follow the prompts and could not write on their own without adhering to the prompts, apparently.

My mother's poem about our cat Mee Mee

Fast forward from 1974 to 1976 through to 1988. Mee Mee was a male cat. I discovered him near our house in Mandalay sometime in 1976. He was so small I could not discern whether he was male or female. So, I gave him a female name: 'Mee Mee', which in Burmese is 'little or sweet daughter'. The name stuck. My parents and I were fond of the cat. After about 11 years in our house in Mandalay, 'Mee Mee' passed away sometime in 1987. My late mother, Professor Dr Myint Myint Khin (15 December 1923-14 June 2014), was at that time working as a World Health Organization (WHO) consultant in New Delhi, India. She came to learn about Mee Mee's passing within several days or a few weeks.

About a year later, on 9 October 1988 in New Delhi, she composed a poem about Mee Mee. I became aware of the poem only sometime in 2013 when my mother's collection of poems, Poetry for Me, was launched in March 2013 in Yangon. I reproduce my mother's poem below:

MEE MEE (The Waiting Game)
By Myint Myint Khin

When I sit at a window, I remember you, "mee mee",
You who wait for my return,
With warm expectant welcome,
For the goodies I bring with me
But more, I know, for my company

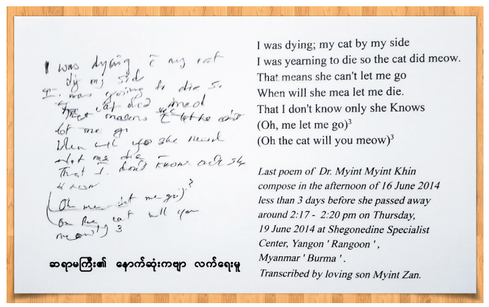

T'was then my turn to wait, "mee mee"
Just for a glimpse, a shadow, a promise,
A timeless moment eternal and free
To laugh, to plan and hope and be together
How long must I wait?
Time doesn't matter
You too have left me now "mee mee"
And I know I wait in vain;
Like matter that changes,
like a wave that disappears, like a flame that seems forever burn,
Life goes on and on but never returns

('Mee Mee' was my cat)

My Mum's Last Poem

Fast forward from 9 October 1988 in New Delhi, India, to 16 June 2014 at Shwegondine Specialist Centre (hospital) in Yangon, Myanmar. My mother handwrote her last poem. It also concerns a cat. It reads:

"I was dying with my cat by my side
I was yearning to die, so the cat did meow
That means she can't let me go
When will she meow and let me die?
That I don't know; only she knows
(Oh, me, let me go)2
(Oh, the cat, will you meow)3".

My mother passed away three days later, on 19 June 2014.

'The Cat that feared the Sun will Explode': A Hilarious Encounter

Since 1999, my mother established, with the help of colleagues and former students, the Support Group for Elderly Doctors (SGED) to look after the health and well-being of elderly doctors over the age of seventy: to support them during their hospitalizations and for funeral expenses for the families of doctors who had passed away. Initially, the SGED was in Yangon. But now it has similar groups in the cities of Mandalay, Toungoo and Mawlamyine (Moulmein). About a year after my mother passed away, sometime in 2015, I was walking with a clerical staff member of SGED near the Yangon SGED when I saw a stray cat. To amuse myself once or twice in front of friends, I used to 'ask' three 'questions' to a cat. Once I asked three questions to a cat in an outdoor eatery in Yangon to the amusement and laughter of my friend who was with me that time. The cat at the outside eatery did not react in any way.

But a few weeks later, while walking with the clerical staff of SGED, I saw a stray cat. It may be a 'he,' though I am not sure. About four feet or so away from 'it,' I stopped and asked 'him' three questions. He apparently looked at me at the first question. As soon as I finished the second question, he looked at me in fear and surprise (though not 'trembling') and ran away. The three questions I asked the cat in Burmese in sequential order (in translation) are:

Are you an adherent of a particular (Abrahamic) religion? (The cat just looked at me.)

Do you know that the Sun will explode? (The cat looked at me in fear and ran straight away. I still can visualize how it looked.)

Do you know about 'event horizon'? (On cosmology; when I finished asking the third question, the cat was already several feet away, running.)

Elaborating on the second and third questions: the cat that makes me chuckle

The first question is straightforward and does not need elaboration. As far as the sun 'exploding' is concerned, astronomers and cosmologists state that about roughly five billion years from now the Sun ('our Sun') will sort of explode. Though it may not 'swallow' the Earth. No living organisms (perhaps even bacteria) may survive.

The facial expressions of the cat are such that even a few moments ago I laughed lightly, as I have done quite a few times in the past ten years or so when I recall the cat's expressions. Perhaps the cat understood Burmese and feared that the Sun would explode then and there, so he ran away! Both interestingly and surprisingly, Naung Naung (the human male) staff of SGED who accompanied me said: 'How can the cat know, Saya (teacher)?' ☺ Forget cats. Many of my friends might probably not know the scheduled death of the Sun five billion years hence. The then 57-year-old Burmese lady physician told me that she learned about 'Sun Death' in her son's textbook. Her son went to an international school in Yangon. When I was studying at two high schools in Mandalay, I do not recall being taught about the Sun Death in our high school science classes or textbooks.

'Event horizon' is also a cosmological concept.

"It is a boundary around a black hole where gravity becomes so strong that not even light, which travels at 186, 282 miles per second, can escape (the boundary)".

The staff that accompanied me made the unsurprising comment, saying, 'How can the cat understand, Sir? I did not explain either to Naung Naung or to my physician friend what 'event horizon' is.

I occasionally think about that cat since his expressions before he ran away made me laugh. I hope he is still around and even finds a 'forever home' with 'hooman' (human).

Souta: the cat that was picky about food and disappeared

My niece Ei Phyu (daughter of my second cousin) lives with her husband and her two daughters. Their apartment is about 20 minutes' walk from my apartment in Yangon. Their neighbour had a cat. The name of the cat was 'Souta'. Souta is a Japanese name. My niece Ei Phyu's elder daughter gave the female cat the name she found online. Souta visited my niece's apartment daily. Ei Phyu fed her regularly. Souta did not eat some of the food that was fed to her. Ei Phyu had to make special preparations for her. Ei Phyu sent me a video of Souta being coaxed to get off the mattress where Ei Phyu's elder daughter sleeps. Ei Phyu said to Souta, 'This is Ma Ma (elder sister)'s mattress. You get off the mattress, Thamee (daughter) Souta'. After a little coaxing, Souta did get off the mattress. Ei Phu sent me the video and photos of Souta. When I phoned Ei Phyu, I used to ask about Souta. Once, when she was busy Ei Phyu said to me 'Uncle, you are going to ask lots of questions about Souta, I am busy right now'. Unfortunately, about five or so years ago Souta was lost. Not only Souta's owner but also Ei Phyu and the neighbours searched for Souta for a few days, to no avail. One of the searchers stated that they hoped Souta would find an owner who would look after her. Unlike the stray cat that ran away after I asked him the second question, Souta did not make me laugh. Occasionally, I do recall both of them.

Two domesticated cats with different personalities

In August 2023, I visited another of my cousin's home in Australia for a few days. They have two male cats, Fred and Zack (not their real names). Fred had a chair reserved for him in the living room where he used to sit and nap while his owners watched TV. I sat on 'his chair' while watching TV. Fred, from a few feet away, watched the 'hooman' 'transgressing' his space. He watched me for almost a full minute or more; I wished I had taken a video of him looking at me. I have a video of the lost Souta which Ei Phyu sent me. Fred was more territorial than Zack (they were not related.) My cousin informed me that when I left their house, it was Fred and not Zack who 'micturated' or urinated in several places around the house to mark his 'territory'. Different domesticated cats have different (cat) psychologies, one supposes.

'What is it like to be a bat' and 'Feline Philosophy: Cats and the Meaning of Life'

Talking about 'cat psychology', they have more than psychological makeup. They have 'feline philosophy' too. This is stated in Feline Philosophy: Cats and the Meaning of Life, written by John Gray (born 17 April 1948), which was published around 2021. I have read the book as well as the much earlier (human) philosophy article by Thomas Nagel (born 4 July 1937), 'What Is It Like to be a Bat?' first published in October 1974 in the Journal Philosophical Review. John Gray's Feline Philosophy, to me, is an easier read than Nagel's article. In the very wide sense of the word and metaphorically speaking (a human construct itself, not that of cats, far less bats), one guesses that cats are more prone to 'cat philosophy' than bats are prone to (non-existent) 'bat philosophy'. Nagel's point is that humans can imagine and guess the empirical (consciousness studies) and philosophical question of what humans think what is it like to be a bat. Nagel argues that humans cannot think/imagine/what a bat thinks to be like a bat. Perhaps with (much?) less uncertainty, humans can imagine what it is like to be a cat. Still, they (humans) cannot imagine what a cat imagine to be a cat (applying inter-species what Nagel wrote about bats). Reversing the roles, academic John Bradshaw of the University of Bristol in the United Kingdom, a specialist on cats, has stated that cats view humans as large, clumsy and (perhaps for domesticated cats only?) harmless 'big cats'. I think how bats conceptualize humans (since they cannot see) does not even come into the margins of academic, philosophical and therefore, all the more so, serious scientific query.

So, designate me and others who have similar views for espousing 'speciesism'. Online sources indicate that since August 2004, 'International Dog Day' has also been celebrated. Perhaps there are not yet 'international days' for parrots or rabbits.

'What is it like to be a Bat?' is, in part, a thought experiment and philosophical argument by philosophers from the species homo sapiens. It is very unlikely that homo sapiens will commemorate 'International Bat Day'.

Myanmar drug fugitive handed over at Hanoi airport

VIETNAMESE authorities handed over a Myanmar national wanted for a drug offence to Myanmar authorities at Noi Bai International Airport in Hanoi on 24 September, according to the Myanmar Police Force.

The fugitive, identified as Wai Htun, 48, owner of William Htun Co Ltd from Nyaungbintha Village, Hmawby Township, was wanted in connection with the seizure of 810 kilogrammes of methamphetamine worth more than K20 billion.

On 6 July, authorities seized 500 kilogrammes of methamphetamine from two suspects near Taungzinaye Village in Lewe Township. Further investigation led to the seizure of another 310 kilogrammes of methamphetamine from the vessel Maik Mettar on the Yangon River near Dala, together with 10 suspects.

The investigation revealed that the 810 kilogrammes of methamphetamine had been transported and trafficked across borders by sea.

Wai Htun was identified as the main suspect in the transnational drug trafficking. He was found to have left Myanmar for Malaysia through Yangon International Airport on 25 June. The Drug Enforcement Division of Myanmar Police Force and shared information with the Royal Malaysia Police.

While Malaysian authorities were monitoring him, they learned that he had departed from a ferry port in Malaysia on 8 July. Information was subsequently shared with drug-control authorities in Singapore and Indonesia.

Further information indicated that Wai Htun had travelled by air from Singapore to Vietnam on 9 August. Following continued information sharing with Vietnamese authorities, he was arrested in Ho Chi Minh City on 1 September.

At 10 pm Vietnam local standard time on 24 September, a Vietnamese delegation led by Police Senior Colonel Hoang Tam Hieu, Deputy Secretary-General of the Drug Enforcement Police under the Ministry of Public Security, handed over Wai Htun to officials from the Myanmar Embassy in Vietnam and a Myanmar delegation led by Police Colonel Zaw Lin, Deputy Commander of Drug Enforcement Division of MPF at Noi Bai International Airport in Hanoi.

This image shows the transfer of the fugitive, Wai Htun, 48, at Noi Bai International Airport in Hanoi, Vietnam.

The Government has designated drug prevention and control as a national responsibility and priority, with measures being stepped up to prevent and suppress drug offences, identify and arrest those behind such crimes, and cooperate with international partner organisations to locate and arrest fugitives linked to drug offences.

The timely exchange of information and cooperation among ASEAN member countries contributed to the arrest and handover of Wai Htun amid intensified regional cooperation in drug control.

In 2026, Myanmar authorities have also handed over 11 fugitives wanted for drug offences to Thailand and one fugitive wanted for a drug offence to Indonesia.

Such cooperation strengthens friendship among ASEAN member countries and contributes to more effective efforts to identify, arrest and hand over fugitives involved in transnational drug crimes, according to the Myanmar Police Force. — MNA/KZL

Airstrikes Target NUG Special Military Region Headquarters, Source Says

AUTHORITIES stated PDF terrorist groups operating under the NUG and CRPH, with support from ethnic armed organizations, had carried out attacks, forced recruitment, extortion and other acts of violence that disrupted local administration and displaced civilians.

According to the authorities, civilians and some former members of the armed groups provided information on their activities and locations to security forces. Following verification of the intelligence, security forces conducted area-clearance operations and airstrikes against the NUG's so-called Special Military Command Headquarters near the Bago Region-Mon State border.

Authorities said the strikes killed DCS deserter Nay Win Aung and critically injured or killed other NUG personnel, including DCS deserter Tin Lin Aung and regional commander Aung San Shar. They accused the two deserters of abandoning the state security forces and joining armed groups.

Authorities further said intelligence from residents had contributed to the operation and called on civilians to provide information about armed-group activities. They said security forces would continue counter-terrorism operations to prevent armed groups from establishing bases and disrupting regional stability and development. — MNA/ST

Visitor Arrivals Set to Rise in Dry Season

WITH loads of enquiries about tours specifically arranged for Thadingyut, local visitor arrivals are expected to rise again in this dry season, according to travel operators.

The dry season, or tourism peak season, is approaching, so the arrival of tourists is predicted to rise again, and even now many people are expressing their interest in going on vacation during the Thadingyut holidays.

"Tourist arrivals are usually at their peak in Thadingyut and Tazaungdine. Train journeys are being provided now, so there are different options for visitors. The visitor number is expected to climb in this dry season," said a tour operator.

Currently, local visitor arrivals have been large in local destinations such as Taunggyi, Kalaw, Inlay, Mandalay, Nay Pyi Taw, Kyaiktiyo, Bago, Chaungtha, Ngwehsaung and Hpaan. According to domestic ticketing and reservation manager Le Le Mon from Unique Asia Travels and Tours, Myanmar's tourism industry has gradually recovered, and the return of foreign tourists and many outbound trips have proved it.

She said foreign tourists are interested in destinations that are based on Myanmar's culture and natural scenery, like Bagan. In the meantime, among outbound trips, Thailand is a major destination for medical, education and business purposes. — MT/ZS

Trump voiced concern about yen weakness in talks with Japan PM: Takaichi

JAPANESE Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi said Friday that US President Donald Trump expressed concern at their recent summit that a weaker yen is hurting US trade.

"I told the president that an undervalued yen is generally problematic," Takaichi told reporters at her office. It is rare for Japanese and US leaders to publicly comment on currency movements.

Takaichi and Trump met Tuesday in New York on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly.

"Japan will pursue a strong economy while maintaining fiscal sustainability under a policy of responsible, proactive fiscal spending," Takaichi said.

Her remarks came as the yen has remained under pressure against the US dollar after strengthening earlier this month following a Bank of Japan rate check, which is often seen as a possible precursor to currency intervention.

The wide interest rate gap between the two countries remains a dominant driver of the yen's weakness against the dollar. — Kyodo

Laos pushes for modernization of national statistical system

THE National Statistics Centre under the Lao Ministry of Finance held a consultation meeting on the draft strategic plan for the sustainable development of the national statistical system for 2026-2035 and its vision to 2040.

The meeting, held in Lao capital Vientiane on Wednesday, was chaired by Phetsamone Sone, Lao deputy minister of finance, according to a report issued by the ministry on Thursday.

In her remarks, Phetsamone emphasized that the national statistical system is a key mechanism for producing reliable data and an important pillar in supporting evidence-based policymaking and national development.

She stressed that updating the strategic plan in line with sustainable, green, and modern development principles is essential to ensuring that statistical information effectively reflects current socioeconomic conditions and supports government planning and policy formulation. — Xinhua

Tunisia stresses renewable energy development

TUNISIA on Wednesday stressed the strategic importance of accelerating its energy transition and expanding renewable energy to strengthen energy security, industrial competitiveness and investment.

State Secretary for Energy Transition Wael Chouchane made the remarks while opening the second edition of the Africa Energy Forum 2026 in Tunis, held under the theme "Leadership and Cooperation for a Secure and Sustainable Future".

Chouchane said that hydrocarbons continue to play an important role in maintaining energy balance, while renewable energy offers significant opportunities to diversify supply, enhance energy independence and improve the competitiveness of electricity generation over the medium and long term.

Tunisia is pursuing a gradual transformation of its energy system in response to its energy deficit, focusing on renewable energy development, improved energy efficiency and demand management, he said. — Xinhua

Sri Lanka begins recruitment of over 120,000 public sector workers in 2026

SRI Lanka has begun a programme to recruit more than 120,000 people to the public service in 2026, Minister of Public Administration Chandana Abeyratne said Friday.

The recruitment will fill existing vacancies across several areas of the public sector, including education, health and agriculture, Abeyratne told reporters.

Around 30,000 teachers are expected to be recruited under the programme. Separately, the recruitment of more than 1,500 Grama Niladhari, or village-level officials, has reached its final stage.

Abeyratne said further recruitment would be carried out to address vacancies in the health and agriculture sectors. The latest recruitment drive follows the intake of nearly 35,000 people into the public service in 2025, including graduates and other eligible youth. — Xinhua

Date palm climbers embrace harvest, carry on family tradition in war-torn Sudan

AS dawn broke over Al-Baja village in northern Sudan's Al-Dabba locality, 50-year-old Salim Bilal gripped the trunk of a towering palm and began to climb — his agility the product of more than three decades in the trade.

Below, workers waited to gather the bunches as they fell.

Known locally as "Hash al-Balh", the date harvest season is more than the end of an agricultural cycle for people in northern Sudan. It marks the beginning of an entire economic and social cycle, setting villages, markets, families, and workers in motion.

According to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, Sudan produced about 443,000 tonnes of dates in 2024 from roughly 37,100 hectares, or about 88,000 feddans, ranking seventh globally. The date palm provides food, income and employment for thousands of farmers and families along the Nile.

From high above the ground, Bilal moved carefully among the bunches of dates. He said he can harvest more than 50 palms a day, though the work has grown harder with age. Climbers are now generally paid through a share of the harvest — about one-seventh of the crop — rather than a fixed wage. Farm owner Awad Saleh, whose land holds more than 400 palm trees, expects 500 to 600 sacks this season, each weighing about 100 kilogrammes. — Xinhua

Slovakia issues 10-year govt bond

SLOVAKIA has issued a 10-year government bond worth 2.5 billion euros (US$2.84 billion), with a coupon rate of 4.25 per cent, the country's Debt and Liquidity Management Agency (ARDAL) said on Thursday. According to ARDAL, the final yield of the new bond stood at 4.309 per cent. It was the second and final syndicated bond issuance by Slovakia this year. The bond was priced at a spread of 77 basis points above the interest rate swap rate, equivalent to 81.3 basis points above the yield on a German government bond maturing in August 2036. — Xinhua

Thailand unveils national chip strategy

THAILAND unveiled its first national semiconductor strategy on Thursday, aiming to attract about US$80 billion in cumulative investment by 2050 as it seeks to move beyond chip assembly into design and front-end manufacturing. The plan, approved by the National Semiconductor and Advanced Electronics Policy Board, targets annual industry revenue of about $150 billion and more than 230,000 new jobs over 25 years under the "Made in Thailand" chip initiative.

Through a three-phase roadmap, Thailand will strengthen and upgrade its assembly and testing base by 2030, draw major investors in chip design and wafer fabrication by 2040, and build a fully integrated supply chain with homegrown "local champions" by 2050. — Xinhua

US, Iran discussing phased end to war with Hormuz reopening and blockade lifting

Negotiations cover reopening trade straits and lifting strict economic embargoes.

THE United States and Iran are discussing a potential phased end to the ongoing war, which would include the reopening of the Strait of Hormuz and lifting of the economic blockade of the Islamic Republic, Reuters reported on Thursday, citing multiple sources.

The discussions are happening on the sidelines of the 81st General Assembly in New York City, the report said. In addition to the reopening of Hormuz and the lifting of the blockade, the United States would possibly unlock Iran's frozen assets, it added, citing a senior Iranian official.

The report, however, noted that among the challenges of a phased-out agreement is mutual trust, notably in the wake of a failed memorandum of understanding on the cessation of hostilities in July, which collapsed and led to the resumption of war.

On 28 February, the United States and Israel began striking targets in Iran, prompting retaliatory attacks. In mid-June, Tehran and Washington signed a memorandum of understanding to cease hostilities, though they soon resumed. The conflict remains unresolved. The escalation has brought shipping through the Strait of Hormuz to a near standstill, impacting the supply of oil, petroleum products, and liquefied natural gas and driving up fuel prices globally. — SPUTNIK

Brazil candidates mount digital armies for fierce online campaign

IN a knife-edge election race, Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva and main rival Flavio Bolsonaro have deployed volunteer digital armies online to spread their messages and battle for voters.

These online campaigns, unprecedented in scale in Brazil, have highlighted the growing role of social media in the country's politics, while also raising questions about compliance with election rules.

"The cavalry has arrived. Come join this army that will change our country's history," urged Gustavo Gayer, a congressman and Bolsonaro ally. He was promoting "Direta Ja" (Right Wing Now), a platform launched in July which consists of a website and WhatsApp group where supporters receive daily "visual ammunition" to share on their own social media feeds to boost Bolsonaro's campaign. — AFP

Japan law banning under-18s from election campaigning unconstitutional

A Japanese court on Friday ruled that a law banning those aged under 18 from taking part in election campaigning is unconstitutional, marking the first judicial ruling on the ban since it was introduced in 1952.

While the Tokyo District Court called the ban under the Public Offices Election Act a "serious restriction on freedom of expression", it dismissed a claim for damages from the state by four plaintiffs, including high school students.

Japan has promoted "sovereign education" to encourage young people to participate independently in society following the lowering of the voting age to 18.

"It is difficult to find any substantive basis in law for prohibiting minors from participating in election campaigns based on their own value judgments," Presiding Judge Mizuho Ebi said.

Japanese law prohibits its people under 18 from engaging in election campaigning and also bans others from using minors in such activities. Violators face imprisonment for up to one year or a fine of up to 300,000 yen ($1,900), as well as suspension of civil rights.

The plaintiffs argued that the legislative purpose of the ban and penalties was unclear and that there was no rational basis for imposing a blanket ban and criminal penalties for campaigning. They had sought 100,000 yen each for emotional distress over being deprived of the opportunity to exercise their right to freedom of political expression in elections. — Kyodo

Australians face rising financial stress as education levels climb: report

AUSTRALIANS are becoming better educated but facing greater financial and housing stress, while food insecurity and fatigue have also increased, an annual report said Thursday.

The 2026 Household, Income and Labour Dynamics in Australia (HILDA) Annual Statistical Report, based on data collected from 2001 to 2024, provides a snapshot of the social and economic trends shaping Australia.

The report found that more than half of Australian women aged 25-44 now hold a university degree, while one in two workers believe they are overeducated for their jobs, adding that this dynamic is often associated with lower job and life satisfaction, as well as an increased likelihood of quitting.

Employment reached record levels in 2024, with 84.4 per cent of men and 76 per cent of women aged 18-64 employed. But stagnant wages and rising living costs increased financial and housing stress, said the report funded by the Australian government and managed by the Melbourne Institute of Applied Economic and Social Research at the University of Melbourne. — Xinhua

WORLD No 1 Jannik Sinner delayed his return to the courts when he withdrew from next week's China Open in Beijing on Friday having been out of action since his Wimbledon title in July due to a right knee injury.

Argentina coach says Messi deserves to go out on own terms

Lionel Messi will make his final Argentina appearance in a friendly at home to Benin next month. PHOTO: AFP/FILE

ARGENTINA coach Lionel Scaloni said on Thursday that next month's friendly against Benin in Buenos Aires will give Lionel Messi the chance "to say goodbye the way he wants to".

"It will be hard not to cry that day, it's a privilege to be there," said Scaloni, whose side finished runners-up to Spain at the 2026 World Cup. Messi, an eight-time Ballon d'Or winner, announced his international retirement at the end of August at the age of 39, but has been included in the squad for the farewell match by Scaloni.

The coach, who led Argentina to a third World Cup title in 2022, said he had played his part in ensuring the former Barcelona and Paris Saint-Germain forward would have one final appearance in front of Argentina's fans.

"I did my bit because I want to be there for his farewell and, since I don't know if I'll still be here in the future, we did everything possible so he could take part in this match," Scaloni said. Scaloni also said Messi, who scored his 100th goal for Inter Miami earlier this month, deserved to win another Ballon d'Or. — AFP

Asian Games: Japan's Sugihara wins 2nd gymnastics gold in women's floor

JAPANESE gymnast Aiko Sugihara added the women's individual floor exercise title to her all-around gold at the Aichi-Nagoya Asian Games on Friday.

Sugihara became Japan's first Asian Games champion on the apparatus, three days after becoming the country's first women's all-around gold medallist.

The 27-year-old, who won the floor exercise at last October's world championships, is also the first Japanese woman to win two Asian Games gymnastics gold medals.

"I was able to stay calm and get into a state of mind where I felt like I could do it," said Sugihara, who retired from top-level competition in 2022 but returned the following year.

"Working as a reporter at the previous Asian Games made me want to return to the Japanese national team. I'm glad I decided to come back."

Sugihara scored 14.033, while Misa Nishiyama made it a 1-2 finish for Japan, earning 13.900 for silver. — Kyodo

Cambodia unveils unearthed Angkor-Era Buddha statues

A collection of 274 Angkor-era Buddha statue fragments is now on public display at the Preah Norodom Sihanouk-Angkor Museum in Northwest Cambodia's Siem Reap province, the APSARA National Authority (ANA) said in a news release on Friday.

The sandstone fragments, which date back to approximately the late 13th century, were unearthed during archaeological excavations at the Banteay Kdei Temple within the UNESCO-listed Angkor Archaeological Park.

The exhibition highlights three distinct artistic styles of the Angkor period: Baphuon, Angkor Wat, and Bayon.

Voeun Vibolsokhum, a technical staff member at the museum, said that conservation specialists meticulously cleaned and restored the fragments following their discovery. — Xinhua

Xi calls for translating new vision of China-US relationship into action

Both leaders discussed translating bilateral strategic stability visions into actions.

Chinese President Xi Jinping on Thursday called for translating the new vision of a constructive China-US relationship of strategic stability into action and finding the right way for the two major countries to get along with each other.

Xi made the remarks when meeting with US President Donald Trump at the White House.

Xi pointed out that the exchange of visits between the heads of state of China and the United States in less than half a year is unprecedented in the history of China-US ties.

He and Trump have maintained communication through various channels and worked together to steer the giant ship of China-US relationship, Xi said. Noting that in May this year, he and Trump agreed to work toward building a constructive China-US relationship of strategic stability, Xi said that the new vision reflects the realities of China-US ties, embodies the expectations for the future, and is an important step toward finding the right way for the two countries to get along with each other.
