implementing the water resource utilization plans, per-acre yield of paddy is increasing year after year. In addition to storing reserved food, the country has surplus food. Therefore, the country becomes paddy exporter.

In order to benefit the farmers and develop the State economy, Myanmar Agriculture Service is providing necessary assistance to the farmers for enabling them to select quality paddy strains.

Now is rainy season. All the farmers are trying hard in ploughing and growing monsoon paddy in time.

Inspire people to cultivate greater sense of defending motherland

The research papers reading session on Myanmar traditional national culture took place at the Ministry of Culture in Nay Pyi Taw on 24 July. Research papers are intended to inspire the people to equip themselves more firmly with nationalistic fervour and patriotic spirit in order that they will come to love and safeguard own race and preserve national culture through Myanmar culture and customs more than ever.

The people will have a growing sense of safeguarding the independence and sovereignty only if each of them is knowledgeable about the high cultural civilization and long history of the motherland and values and cherishes national cultural heritage with pride. That is in the center of uplifting the dynamism of patriotic spirit of the entire people.

Research papers on Myanmar traditional national culture reflect 12 Myanmar traditional blessing ceremonies, songs about Myanmar traditional nat spirits, Myanmar traditional duet dances, and lessons learnt from Myanmar jataka.

The resource persons, researchers and enthusiasts took part in the preserving and promoting of Myanmar traditional cultural characters with fervour of national duty by giving advice and making suggestions.

Conducting such prudent research paper reading sessions energizes the people to imbue themselves from the bottom of their hearts with a spirit of defending the mother country for its perpetual existence.

Suicide bombers attack Afghanistan

KHOST, 26 July—The assault in Khost began when at least six Taliban fighters carrying AK-47s and rocket-propelled grenades stormed the area around the main police station and a nearby government-run bank. All were shot dead before they could detonate their suicide vests, the Interior Ministry said in a statement.

A seventh attacker detonated a car rigged with explosives near a police rapid reaction force, wounding two policemen, the ministry said.

Interior Ministry spokesman Zemer

Bashary said all the attackers were killed, but the Defence Ministry later said an eighth attacker may have escaped. The ministry said no government forces were killed but 14 people were wounded - 11 civilians and three police.—Internet

Car bomb attacks kill five in Falluja, Iraq

FALLUJA, 26 July—Two car bomb attacks killed 5 people and injured more than 20 others in Falluja on Saturday, as renewed violence flared up in the mid-western Iraqi city.

A truck parked near the Iraqi Islamic Party office exploded. Police say the terror attack targeted the influential Sunni Arab political party.

Shortly after the outset of the Iraq War, Falluja was the site of heavy fighting between US forces and Sunni militants or Islamist al-Qaeda fighters.

Since last year, the Sunni-dominant city and other places in Anbar Province had been relatively quiet after Sunni tribal leaders turned against insurgents, siding with US forces. But violence appears to have escalated in the region in recent weeks.

In the provincial capital of Ramadi, bomb attacks have repeatedly targeted police officers and administration officials.—Internet

Five killed after girder collapses in S Korea

SEOUL, 26 July—The death toll rose to five Sunday from an accident at an elevated railway construction site just north of Seoul as one of the injured died, officials said.

A giant iron girder collapsed from the 12-metre-high (40-foot-high) railway being built in Uijeongbu city, on the outskirts of Seoul, on Saturday night, immediately killing four workers and injuring nine others.

One of the nine taken to hospital was declared dead early Sunday, a Uijeongbu city government spokesman said.

The steel frame, measuring 30 metres long and six metres wide, fell down from concrete pillars on which a bridge will be built for the 11-kilometre intra-city railway system, he said.

Wis father saw sickness as ‘test of his faith’

WAUSAU, 26 July—A Wisconsin man accused of killing his daughter by praying instead of seeking lifesaving medical help considered her illness “a test of his faith,” a prosecutor told jurors on Saturday.

Dale Neumann, 47, is a “full-Gospel Christian,” who did not know his 11-year-old daughter had diabetes, his defence attorney said. There’s also not “a shred of evidence” Neumann knew his prayers would fail to help his daughter or cause her death, the lawyer said.

Neumann is charged with second-degree reckless homicide in the 2008 death of his daughter Madeline Neumann, called Kara by her parents. His wife, Leilani, was convicted of the same charge this spring and faces up to 25 years in prison when sentenced on 6 Oct.

The girl died from undiagnosed diabetes on 23 March, 2008, surrounded by people praying at the family’s rural home in Weston in central Wisconsin. Someone called 911 when she stopped breathing.

Hamas rejects Abbas to visit Gaza

GAZA, 26 July — Palestinian Islamic Hamas movement strongman in Gaza Mahmoud al-Zahar on Saturday rejected the visit of western-backed Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas to the Gaza Strip, ruled by the movement since June 2007.

“This matter (Abbas’s visit to Gaza) is completely rejected for security considerations,” al-Zahar told the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) in an interview on Saturday. Al-Zahar wondered “how could Abu Mazen return (to Gaza) under such security situation? How could he be received? And what effect this visit would have on people who have their sons, their homes destroyed or their salaries stopped?”

Hamas has been ruling the impoverished coastal enclave since it seized control of it in mid June 2007, following weeks of street-fighting with Abbas’s security forces and Fatah party militants. Abbas remained in the West Bank and his forces were routed.

Asked about Hamas conditions to let Gaza Fatah party members travel to the West Bank city of Bethlehem to attend the party’s sixth General Assembly, al-Zahar said “Fatah has to pay the invoice for its conference success.”

Ericsson buys Nortel wireless units for $1.13 bln

STOCKHOLM, 26 July—Swedish wireless equipment maker LM Ericsson on Saturday said it had penned a deal to buy a majority of Nortel Networks' North American wireless business for $1.13 billion.

The Stockholm-based group said the purchase is on a cash and debt-free basis and covers the older CDMA and newer LTE wireless businesses of Nortel's Carrier Networks unit.

Nortel on Friday placed its wireless business up for auction behind closed doors in New York City, and international tech industry titans submitted their best offers for the prized division.

Nortel, a former telecommunications equipment powerhouse, sought bankruptcy protection in January and the auction was planned after the company said it planned to liquidate its business.

The deal is subject to approval by relevant authorities.

Ericsson CEO Carl-Henric Svanberg said in a statement that the acquisition would add 2,500 employees to his company, of which about 400 are focused on LTE research and development.

"Acquiring Nortel's North American CDMA business allows us to serve this important region better as we build relationships for the future migration to LTE," he said.—INTERNET

Via Rail lays off 2,000, service stopped

VANCOUVER, 26 July—Via Rail Canada temporarily laid off some 2,000 employees, and rail service stopped across the country, the railroad said on Saturday. All the employees had jobs aboard trains and were laid off after locomotive engineers walked off the job, Malcolm Andrews, a Via Rail spokesman, told CBC News.

"We have no choice, of course," Andrews said. "The layoffs are a necessary part of an unfortunate process like this one simply because it's a process over which we don't have entire control, and there are pretty significant costs involved in paying salaries of all those people."

Contract negotiations between the railroad and the Teamsters Canada Rail Conference, which represents 340 locomotive engineers and yardmasters, broke down on Thursday.

The engineers union is seeking higher wages, better training and scheduling changes that would give them two straight days off, CBC said.

E-China: The bicycle kingdom is going electric

SHANGHAI, 26 July—It's a simple pleasure, but Xu Beilu savors it daily: gliding past snarled traffic on her motorized bicycle, relaxed and sweat-free alongside the pedal-pushing masses. China, the world's bicycle kingdom — one for every three inhabitants — is going electric.

Workers weary of cramped public transport or pedaling long distances to jobs are upgrading to battery-powered bikes and scooters. Even some who can afford cars are ditching them for electric two-wheelers to avoid traffic jams and expensive gasoline. The bicycle was a vivid symbol of China in more doctrinaire communist times, when virtually no one owned a car. Even now, nearly two decades after the country began its great leap into capitalism, it still has 430 million bicycles by government count, outnumbering electric bikes and scooters 7-1.

But production of electric two-wheelers has soared from fewer than 200,000 eight years ago to 22 million last year, mostly for the domestic market. The industrial estimates about 65 million are on Chinese roads. Car sales are also booming but there are still only 24 million for civilian use, because few of the 1.3 billion population can afford them. And unlike in many other developing countries, Chinese cities still have plenty of bicycle lanes, even if some have made way for cars and buses.—INTERNET

Manhunt underway in US, Mexico after border agent killed

LOS ANGELES, 26 July—US and Mexican authorities on Saturday continued their search for suspects along the US-Mexico border after a US Border Patrol agent was killed by assailants.

Investigators said evidence shows that the shooting confrontation at the border fence near San Diego, California, may have left at least one of the attackers seriously injured. Authorities were checking hospitals and other medical facilities on both sides of the border for anyone suspicious of seeking treatment, according to the FBI office in San Diego.

FBI spokesman Darrell Foxworth said on Friday night that investigators were following up on "a number of leads" in the United States and Mexico, but denied reports of any arrests related to the killing.

US Border Patrol agent Robert Rosas was shot and killed on Thursday night while tracking a group of people presumed to have crossed into the country illegally. Investigators said they didn't know how many people shot at Rosas, or whether the agent was able to return fire. US Homeland Secu-

Qantas flight grounded in Auckland following malfunction

WELLINGTON, 26 July—A Boeing 737 passenger plane of the Australian airlines Qantas, has been grounded in New Zealand's largest city of Auckland while engineers were investigating what sparked a malfunction on a flight to Brisbane on Saturday.

The Boeing 737, bound for Australia, was forced to return to Auckland airport with 91 passengers onboard after the plane started to depressurise, Radio New Zealand reported on Sunday. Qantas said the jet lost cabin pressure at 25,000 feet, forcing the captain to turn the plane around shortly after take-off.

The airline was playing down the incident, saying the malfunction was not an emergency.

Qantas said there was never a threat to passengers or the crew because the depressurisation was so small it was not necessary to supply oxygen masks. The plane made it safely back to Auckland and the passengers were transferred to a different flight. Japan train workers check grins with smile meter

Her uniform looks good, with striped scarf and blue cap in perfect order, but railway employee Mitsue Endo has one thing to do before she faces the masses — pass the smile test.

Endo, who works at hectic Shinagawa Station in central Tokyo for Keihin Express Railway Co, sits in front of a laptop computer with a digital camera mounted on top. At first she is a bit grim-faced, and the verdict from the company's smile-rating software is instant and candid.

"Smile: 0" pops up on the screen.

She breaks into a broad grin and the computer responds cheerfully, giving her a score of 70.

The company has installed the system to help employees check their smiles before heading out to face customers. The test is optional, but at major stations like Shinagawa, the 250,000 riders who pass through per day can be rushed and agitated, and a happy face can go a long way.

"Smiling helps our interaction with the passengers. I think the atmosphere becomes more relaxing with a smile," says Endo, whose job includes helping lost customers find their way and dealing with ticketing mishaps.

Five ancient Roman shipwrecks found off Italy coast

Archaeologists have found five well-preserved Roman shipwrecks deep under the sea off a small Mediterranean island, with their cargo of vases, pots and other objects largely intact, official said.

The ships are submerged between 100 and 150 meters (about 330 to 490 feet) off Ventotene, a tiny island that is part of an archipelago off Italy's west coast between Rome and Naples.

The ships, which date from between the 1st century BC and the 4th century, carried amphorae — vases used for holding wine, olive oil and other products — as well as kitchen tools and metal and glass objects that have yet to be identified, Italy's Culture Ministry said. The spot was highly trafficked, and hit by frequent storms and dangerous sea currents.

The discovery is part of a new drive by archaeological officials to scan deeper levels of the sea and prevent looting of submerged treasures.

This photo shows amphorae, believed to be of Spanish origin and dating back to the 1st century AD, lie on the seabed off the coast of Ventotene, a tiny island part of an archipelago between Rome and Naples, Italy. We cultivate paddy plants in the growing plots prescribed by MAS. Pesticides were sprayed. The quality paddy strains from these fields were supplied to the farmers through the sales system or the paddy strain exchange system. Due to using quality paddy strains, substituting agricultural equipment in place of draught cattle and completion of growing monsoon paddy, the farmers achieve high per-acre yield of paddy and earn the increased income."

Applying modern cultivation techniques with the use of farming implements increases the per-acre yield of paddy and improves the living standard of the farmers. Therefore, the farmers have to contribute to the economic growth of the country by planting the quality paddy strains.

Soe Mya Kyaw

Kyaw: : It has been a long time since we last talked about international affairs, Grandpa. I am here to ask you about something I want to know. These days, I have heard many times that some foreign radio stations and some so-called politicians at home are claiming that Mr Ban Ki-moon's visit to our country was not satisfactory. What is your opinion in that regard?

Soe: : As a matter of fact, if a head of state or a leader of an international organization like Mr Ban Ki-moon wants to visit our country, they have to seek invitation of the host country. After they have received invitation, representative persons on both sides have to coordinate as to schedules and topics during the visit. He can visit only after prearrangements. Regarding prearrangements for Mr Ban Ki-moon's visit, both sides had already reached a prior agreement under which who he could meet and who would not be available. Ban Ki-moon agreed on the prearrangements, so he visited our country, and he was granted approval to hold frank discussions and exchange views with State leaders. In addition, the Head of State received him two times in honour of his request. I would say it was a visit that soundly proved Myanmar's hospitality and willingness to cooperate with the UN, and it was a successful visit.

Mya: : Oh, Maung Kyaw, even civilians of us have to seize up the prevailing rapport with the hosts when we are on a visit to a house. And hospitality does not mean fulfilling all the wishes of the guests. The hosts' fulfillments and treatment are within their reach. But, in that case, they are criticizing the visit as they viewed.

Kyaw: : They are claiming that the government should have fulfilled Mr Ban Ki-moon's all wishes and demands because he was reportedly assigned duties by the General Assembly to work out the Myanmar issue. Do you think the UN has the rights to handle our country's issue so?

Soe: : I should tell you the purposes of the UN first before I answer your question. After the World War II, the UN was formed to prevent another world war, for members to refrain from the threat or use of force against any other State, and to settle their international disputes by peaceful means and without force. That is why the UN Charter states two purposes that to maintain international peace and security, and to develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples.

Kyaw: : I got it, grandpa. Then, could I ask if he has the rights to make such demands.

Soe: : No, he hasn't. The UN has the right to intervene in such cases that pose threat to international peace and security. In the UN Charter, a principle says that it is based on the sovereign equality of all its members, and another principle says, "Nothing contained in the Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State". So, it makes it clear that no organization or country has the rights to give directives or to have a go at the democratization process that is our country's domestic affairs. Sorry for my being rude in my speech, Maung Kyaw. I lost my patience because I have heard so many such awkward matters very frequently.

Mya: : Mr Ban Ki-moon said that he made three demands, and he had to watch and see if the Myanmar government would obey them. He did interfere in our country's internal affairs, then, didn't he?

Soe: : Here is so, Mya. As a friend, colleague or UN Secretary-General, he can give advice and make suggestions. Our country will take them as appropriate if they are suitable for our country, circumstances favour, and they do not harm our country's sovereignty. But, I do not think it is wise if he gives instructions as though our country is a subordinate country of his. I am sure a UN Secretary-General like Mr Ban Ki-moon has known that. In this case, I think they must be positive suggestions, and anti-government groups exaggerated his suggestions to deceive the people into misunderstanding them.

Kyaw: : It will be nice if it is so. Our country has been cooperating constantly with the UN, hasn't it? But our country will not accept them if they are designed to infringe upon sovereignty and interfere in the internal affairs of our country.

Mya: : By the way, some are demanding that the Security Council take action against our country. What is your opinion in this regard?

Soe: : I have already said that nothing in the Charter is to authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State. The countries that are interfering in the internal affairs of our country and trying to install a particular person as the head of State who will dance to their tune know well that. That is why they are trying to submit Myanmar issue to the Security Council with the accusation that Myanmar issue is posing a threat to regional and international security and peace.

Mya: : Oh, they are making one-sided accusations! Compare the present situation with that before 1988. Far-flung areas where people had to live in a state of panic have become peaceful. Although they did not say a word about this in those days, they are now accusing our country of posing a threat to the global peace even when we have already achieved peace. I'm getting tired of laughing.

Kyaw: : You are right, Kyee Kyee. Sometimes I wonder whether the UN has lost its original aims when we hear that it puts blame only on small nations like ours but does not say a single word about the unilateral invasion of Iraq, and hundreds of deaths of civilians including children due to bombings there and in Afghanistan.

Soe: : Such incidents would not have happened if the UN Charter had been respected. The Article 100 of the Charter precisely prescribes that the Secretary-General and his staff shall not seek the instructions of any nation or any government in the place where they are shouldering their duties. Member nations shall not try to influence the work of the Secretary-General and his staff. But actually, you have heard what the Secretary-General must demand and what he must say. And you have also heard what they are talking that it cannot be called a success if those demands were not met.

Kyaw: : If so, the UN officials should exactly follow the UN Charter. The UN is a reliable organization for us, isn't it? Since its formation, the UN's duty has been to prevent bullying. Is that so?

Soe: : There might be control over the UN in order not to exactly follow the Charter. For example, most of the UN funds for its activities are raised by powerful countries. Those wielding veto power are powerful countries. Even the appointment of Secretary-General can be possible only through the approval of Security Council permanent members.

Mya: : I once happened to read a piece of news in the newspaper that the US owed over one billion dollars to the UN funds. Is it really?

Soe: : Absolutely right. It is not that that country is unable to contribute. Being a powerful country, it might have had a plan to coerce the UN to fulfil its wishes through amicable way and not to oppose it by withholding its share of contribution.

Kyaw: : I remember one thing only when you have said. Whenever the UN Security Council discussed military operations and civilian arrests in the Gaza Strip and on the west bank of Jordan River the US turned it down with veto power.

Soe: : Oh, Maung Kyaw! What's more, the UNSG could not take any action when the US

It has been clear to me that those who turned a blind eye to those major issues but said that the SG's visit to our country which has been making earnest cooperation was a failure are trying to cause misunderstanding among the people.

It would be better for the UN to Mya: You must be tired talking. Drink green tea and have roasted dried mutton. Maung Kyaw, you'd better explain to your friends what your uncle has said. Only then, will the people be able to know the road ahead. Otherwise, they will lose their way by ambiguously accepting what others have said.

NEW DELHI, 26 July—Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's wife Gursharan Kaur launched on Sunday the country's first indigenously designed and built nuclear-powered attack submarine, INS Arihant, in Visakhapatnam, southern India, said a senior Indian navy official.

Angel's face uncovered at Istanbul's Hagia Sophia

Turkey's Culture Minister Ertugrul Gunay speaks to journalists beside a well-preserved, long-hidden mosaic depicting the face of an angel which was uncovered by restoration workers in the former Byzantine cathedral of Hagia Sophia in Istanbul, Turkey, on 27 July, 2009.—INTERNET

ANKARA, 26 July — Restoration workers have uncovered a well-preserved, long-hidden mosaic face of an angel at the former Byzantine cathedral of Hagia Sophia in Istanbul, an official said on Friday.

The seraphim figure — one of two located on the side of a dome — had been covered up along with the building's other Christian mosaics shortly after Constantinople — the former name for Istanbul — fell to the Ottomans in 1453 and the cathedral was turned into a mosque.

The mosaics were plastered over according to Muslim custom that prohibits the representation of humans.

Some of the mosaics were revealed when the domed complex was turned into a museum in 1935, but the seraphim had largely remained covered, Ahmet Emre Bilgili, who heads culture and tourism affairs in Istanbul, told The Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, 26 July—Teenagers who Web surf, text message and consume caffeine at night are more likely to fall asleep during the day, researchers in Pennsylvania said.

Philadelphia's Drexel College of Nursing studied adolescents who used multiple forms of technology late into the night while drinking caffeinated beverages, lead author Dr Christina Calamaro said in a release on Friday.

Of the 100 students ages 12 to 18 studied, 66 percent had a television in their bedroom, 30 percent a computer, 90 percent a cell phone and 79 percent an MP3 digital audio player, Calamaro's team wrote in the journal Pediatrics.

Eighty percent of the teens reported getting less than 8 hours of sleep on a school night, while at least 30 percent reported falling asleep at school. Those who fell asleep at school on average had a caffeine consumption 76-percent higher than those who reported staying awake, she said.

"Even though we know adolescents are on a different time schedule than adults, we still need to get them less wired at night," Calamaro said.—Internet

Microchips to trace route of garbage

CAMBRIDGE, 26 July—US researchers say they're tagging trash with microchips in hopes of finding better ways of handling what we discard daily.

The so-called "smart tags" tested this month at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology debut next month in Seattle, where thousands of volunteers will attach the tags to trash and then discard the rubbish as they usually would, The Boston Globe reported Saturday. Similar projects are planned for New York City and London, with the voyage of items to be recorded and available for viewing on a blog, said Assaf Biderman, associate director of MIT's Senseable City Laboratory.

"When you throw something in the trash, most people think it's gone. It just disappears," Biderman said. "What would happen if you knew what happened to the plastic cup you threw in the garbage three days earlier?"

Biderman's lab chose Seattle for the programme's prime time debut because of that city's reputation for recycling — Seattle recycled half of its residential and commercial waste last year.

Hubble camera trained on Jupiter scar

BOULDER, 26 July—The newly repaired Hubble Space Telescope is sending back "exquisite" pictures of debris from an object that collided with Jupiter, NASA officials said.

Scientists interrupted calibration of Hubble's new Wide Field Camera 3, installed by astronauts in May, to photograph the debris field 360 million miles away, said Heidi Hammel, Hubble's lead astronomer at the Space Science Institute in Boulder, Colo. Hubble is in orbit 347 miles above the Earth.

"Hubble's truly exquisite imaging capability has revealed an astonishing wealth of detail in the impact site," Hammel said in a NASA release Saturday.

While it is possible to photograph celestial images, the camera's full potential has yet to be tested, she said.

A comet or asteroid collided with Jupiter 19 July, the impact discovered by Australian amateur astronomer Anthony Wesley. The impact was thousands of times more powerful than the suspected comet or asteroid that exploded over the Siberian Tunguska River Valley in June 1908, NASA said.—Internet

Animals survive by changing looks

OXFORD, 26 July — Animals of the same species who look different from each other may have evolved that way to deter predators, British scientists said.

Distinctly different looking animals within the same species — known as "exuberant polymorphisms" — can reach double figures within a single animal population, biologist Geoff Oxford of the University of York said in a release Thursday.

A prime example is the Hawaiian Happy-face Spider, which varies from plain yellow to rare types with red, black or white marks, all of which are inherited, Oxford and his team wrote in the journal Evolution.

Oxford and his team suggest the spider evolved polymorphisms to deter predators by presenting them with a large number of visually novel foods. Predators are wary of consuming novel food, Oxford said.

"A mutant prey individual that looks different from its fellows has a survival advantage because it will be unfamiliar to predators that will be reluctant to change their diet to accommodate it," Oxford said.

The Polish stopper conceded twice against FC Seoul on Friday but could do little about either goal and overall put in a solid performance.

Kuszczyk, who has made 37 appearances in three years for the English Premier League champions, told MUTV he hopes boss Sir Alex Ferguson took note of the performance. "I've been trying my hardest to impress the manager for three years now and I hope this year I can impress him so much that he gives me more and more chances to show what I can do," he said.

Mourinho fires parting shot at Ibrahimovic

ROME, 26 July—Jose Mourinho has fired a parting shot at Sweden striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic, claiming he was never loved by the Inter Milan fans. Ibrahimovic is due to wrap up a switch to Barcelona when he agrees personal terms with the Spaniards, with Cameroon forward Samuel Eto'o heading in the opposite direction.

But Mourinho clearly feels let down by the big Sweden and told Saturday's Gazzetta dello Sport that the club's fans would have more affection for Eto'o.

"I thought he would stay because only Real Madrid — and they weren't interested in him — could spend such crazy money, but then Barcelona did too," said Mourinho of the deal which will see the Italians also net Belarus winger Alexander Hleb on loan and 50 million euros.—Internet

Manchester United boss Sir Alex Ferguson

HANGZHOU, 26 July—Manchester United boss Sir Alex Ferguson has labelled big-spending Manchester City a "small club" who are "arrogant" and "stupid" as his side prepare to wrap up their Asian tour on Sunday.

In an interview with English newspapers during United's pre-season tour, the Scot said it would be tricky for City to break into the Premier League's top four despite their huge summer spending spree.

And he expressed anger at a prominent city-centre billboard in Manchester that says "Welcome to Manchester" under a sky-blue graphic of Argentina's Carlos Tevez, who crossed to United's bitter rivals this summer.

Inbred bumblebees less successful due to 'inefficient' males

SCIENCE DAILY, 26 July — Declining bumblebee populations are at greater risk of inbreeding, which can trigger a downward spiral of further decline. Researchers have provided the first proof that inbreeding reduces colony fitness under natural conditions by increasing the production of reproductively inefficient 'diploid' males.

The sex of bumblebees is normally determined by the number of chromosome sets an individual receives. Males, born from unfertilised eggs, are haploid (just one chromosome set), while females receive genetic material from a father and a mother and so are diploid (two sets of chromosomes).—Internet
