Play an active role in serving the interest of national people

A ceremony to open workshop on cooperation between agriculturists, trainees who attended agricultural courses abroad and entrepreneurs, organized by the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation, was held at meeting hall of the ministry on 4 September with an address by Prime Minister General Thein Sein.

The agricultural sector of Myanmar has good prospects but there are weaknesses in the use of high technology in accordance with international standards, investment, skilled labour, crop quality control, crop storage and packaging and exploration of markets. The aim of the workshop was to weather these challenges, for agriculture produce to fetch good prices in the international markets and to modernize the agricultural sector.

In serving the interest of the State and the people, efforts are being made to transform the nation into an industrialized one in line with the already-laid down economic policies—the development of agriculture as the base and all-round development of other sectors of the economy as well.

In an effort to ensure the improvement of the industrial sector, it is required to strengthen the agricultural sector which plays an important role in national economy and to use modern agricultural methods which will help export more agricultural produce.

The government sent scholars from the field of agriculture abroad for further studies spending a large amount of funds. Now, it is incumbent upon the scholars to make all-out efforts for the development of the agricultural sector applying knowledge and skills they have gained in practice.

At such a time, all the agriculturists are to play an active role in serving the national interest combining qualified human resources and modern agricultural methods.

Iran says US nuke documents ‘forged’

VIENNA, 5 Sept — Iran accused the US on Friday of using “forged documents” and relying on subterfuge to make its case that Teheran is trying to build a nuclear weapon, according to a confidential letter obtained by The Associated Press.

The eight-page letter — written by Iran’s chief envoy to the UN nuclear agency in Vienna — denounces Washington’s allegations against the Islamic Republic as “fabricated, baseless and false.” The letter does not specify what documents Iran is alleging were forged.

It also lashes out at Britain and France for “ill will and political motivation” in their dealings on Iran.

Iranian envoy Ali Asghar Soltanieh sent the letter to Mohamed ElBaradei, the head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, whose 35-nation board will take a hard new look at Iran’s nuclear programme next week. Iran insists its nuclear activities are peaceful and geared solely toward generating electricity. The US and key allies contend the Islamic Republic is covertly trying to build an atomic bomb.

Teheran has bristled at the agency’s latest report, which accuses Iran of defiantly continuing to enrich uranium and refusing to clear up lingering questions about possible military dimensions to its nuclear programme.—Internet

British minister admits trade role in Lockerbie talks

LONDON, 5 Sept — Trade deals with Libya played a “very big part” in Britain’s decision to include the Lockerbie bomber in a prisoner transfer deal with Tripoli, a government minister acknowledged in an interview on Saturday.

Justice Secretary Jack Straw told the Daily Telegraph that trade and an oil exploration deal between BP and Libya were factors in deciding whether to make Abdelbaset Ali Mohmet al-Megrahi eligible for transfer to a prison back home.

However, his spokesman insisted Megrahi’s release was not agreed because any possible transfer was always subject to a veto by the Scottish authorities.

Asked if trade and oil were part of the discussions, Straw said: “Yes, a very big part of that. I’m unapologetic about that... Libya was a rogue state. We wanted to bring it back into the fold.

“And yes, that included trade because trade is an essential part of it and subsequently there was the BP deal.”

Megrahi, the only person convicted of the 1988 bombing of a plane over the Scottish town of Lockerbie which killed 270 people, was released last month on compassionate grounds because he is terminally ill.

Floods hit 350,000 in West Africa

GENEVA, 5 Sept — Some 350,000 people in West Africa have been affected by serious flooding, the United Nations said on Friday, noting that “significant” rainfall has lashed the region this year.

“Since June, the rainy season has been more significant, there has been much more rain than usual,” said Elisabeth Byrs, spokeswoman for the UN Office for Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

“Just like in 2007 when serious flooding had affected almost 800,000 people in this region, we have the impression that this year again, torrential rain has affected an enormous number of people,” she said.

Burkina Faso, Niger, Ghana, Guinea, Senegal and Benin have all been hit by the floods.

In Burkina Faso, five people have been killed and 150,000 people affected, while in Ghana, 25 deaths have been linked to the floods. Some 3,500 homes have been destroyed in Niger and in Guinea, 10,000 people have been affected by the floods.—Internet

Afghan anger after scores die in NATO air strike

KUNDUZ, 5 Sept — A US warplane summoned by German troops fired on hijacked fuel trucks in Afghanistan before dawn Friday, killing as many as 90 people in an incident that could trigger a backlash against NATO.

NATO initially said it believed the casualties were all Taliban fighters, but later acknowledged that large numbers of wounded civilians were being treated in hospitals in the area.

Villagers said their relatives were siphoning fuel from the hijacked trucks and were burned alive in a giant fireball. Patients arrived in hospitals completely covered with burns.

President Hamid Karzai’s office gave a death toll of 90. It said he was deeply saddened and had sent investigators.—Internet

Peres says Palestinian state first, full peace later

CERNOBBIO, 5 Sept — Israeli President Shimon Peres, a longtime advocate of peace with the Palestinians, said on Friday that a comprehensive settlement resolving the century-old dispute was not currently achievable. He called instead for a Palestinian state under a provisional arrangement even without a formal peace deal.

“Israel has decided to make peace on the basis of two states — an Israeli state and a Palestinian state,” he told the Ambrosetti Forum, a gathering of political and business leaders on the shores of Italy’s Lake Como. “I would like that we do it in one step. Apparently we cannot do it in one step.”

Arab League Secretary-General Amre Moussa, who squared off against Peres at the meeting, expressed skepticism at the gradual approach and said the time for a deal was “now or never.”—Internet

Bomb targets German troops in north Afghanistan

KUNDUZ, 5 Sept — Associated Press reporters say a roadside bomb has exploded near a convoy of German troops in northern Afghanistan.

Afghan officials confirmed that an explosion occurred on Saturday near the northern city of Kunduz, but couldn’t immediately provide details.

Two AP reporters say a German military vehicle was damaged in the bombing.

Another AP reporter at a nearby German base says the blast created a shock wave that could be felt inside the base. Officials announced that the base had been targeted in an attack. The roadside bomb comes one day after a NATO fighter jet targeted two fuel tankers in Kunduz Province in an attack that Afghan officials say killed up to 70 people, including civilians.

US unemployment rate rises to 9.7% in August

WASHINGTON, 5 Sept—The US unemployment rate rose to 9.7 percent in August, the highest since June 1983 and worse than economists had expected, the Labour Department reported on Friday.

Nonfarm payroll employment declined a net total of 216,000 jobs in August, less than July's upwardly revised total of 276,000, and was the lowest in a year. Analysts expected the unemployment rate to rise to 9.5 percent from July's 9.4 percent.

In August, the number of unemployed persons increased by 466,000 to 15.9 million. Since the recession began in December 2007, the number of unemployed persons has risen by 7.4 million, and the unemployment rate has grown by 4.8 percentage points.

If laid-off workers who have settled for part-time work or have given up looking for new jobs are included, the so-called underemployment rate reached 16.8 percent, the highest on records dating from 1994.

WTO says Airbus loans illegal

WASHINGTON, 5 Sept—The World Trade Organization ruled on Friday that European loans for Airbus were illegal subsidies under world trade rules, US lawmakers said, but European sources said Washington did not win a sweeping victory.

The findings, which came in a confidential 1,000-plus page ruling, are the latest chapter in decades-old battle between US manufacturer Boeing and European rival Airbus for dominance of the global aircraft market, a major source of jobs on both sides of the Atlantic.

The decision, which will not be made public for months, was handed out to the United States and the European Union at WTO headquarters in Geneva.

Lawmakers from Washington state, where much of Boeing's production work is done, said the WTO agreed with the United States that European "launch aid loans" to help Airbus develop the A380 and other top-selling planes violated global rules.

The Dong Xanh Joint-Stock Company of Vietnam began building the ethanol plant in the central province of Quang Nam in 2007 as part of the government project to develop bio-fuel by 2015.

Weak passwords put people at risk, study says

BEIJING, 5 Sept—Internet users are leaving themselves open to security risks by adopting weak passwords, a new study reveals.

British insurer CPP said that too many people are using things like memorable dates, names of their children and are even sharing them with friends and colleagues. The survey also found that some 46 percent were even using the same password to login to banking, shopping and social networking sites.

More worrying was that of 1,661 Britons questioned, nearly 40 per cent of adults admitted that at least one other person knows their passwords, ranging from children, colleagues and friends. With phishing and smishing attacks, as well as malicious software attacks, on the rise, consumers and Internet users need to be more careful with their personal data.—Xinhua

France seen leading race to equip Brazil Air Force

RIO DE JANEIRO, 5 Sept — France’s modern combat jet, the Rafale, is seen as the leading contender in a four-billion-dollar race to supply the Brazilian Air Force ahead of a visit by French President Nicolas Sarkozy.

Analysts say France’s offer to give Brazil the technology behind the multi-role combat aircraft as part of the sale of 36 planes could give it the edge over rival bids from the United States and Sweden.

If France’s Dassault does sell its Rafales to Brazil, it would be the first time the jets have been sold abroad.

Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva told AFP in an exclusive interview ahead of Sarkozy’s two-day visit that the technology transfer offer gave the Rafale “an exceptional comparative advantage” over Boeing’s F/A-18 Super Hornet and Saab’s Gripen NG fighters.

While cautioning that Brazil’s decision process still had to be approved by air force commanders and lawmakers, he praised France as “the only important country ready to discuss transfer of technology in all areas with us.”—Internet

Health Tip: Help prevent yeast infections

While yeast infections usually can be treated easily with medication, there are steps you can take to prevent them altogether.

The American Academy of Family Physicians offers these suggestions to reduce your risk of a yeast infection:

- * Avoid tight-fitting pants and underwear in favor of loose-fitting clothes. Always choose natural materials, instead of synthetic.

- * Use cotton underwear. And avoid wearing pantyhose or leotards every single day.

- * After you shower, make sure the genitals are completely dry. Consider using a hair dryer on a low, cool setting.

- * After using the toilet, always wipe from front to back.

- * If you’re wearing wet clothing, change as soon as possible.

- * Avoid douching, feminine hygiene sprays, fragranced and colored toilet paper, or deodorant tampons and pads.

Amsterdam lets “beer bike” ride on, with limits

The outsized bikes, seating groups of people around a central bar, are something of a fixture in the city’s center. But two accidents within two months prompted the city councillor responsible for transport to launch an investigation in June.

They will, however, need permits from the various city boroughs, and those permits are likely to come with restrictions on hours of operation and requirements for a sober driver.

While non-drinkers already typically steer the bikes, their size has also been an issue in some cases on the city centre’s narrow streets. One of the better-known operators, PartyFietsnl, offers two-hour tours on bikes that seat up to 22 people and carry 30 litres (7.9 gallons) of beer.

Pontoons have been built in order that ships can be moored at villages that should have jetties. The town has got a new pontoon recently due to unity of local residents and the hard work of IWT. It is heartening to see the view of people extending a warm welcome to the passengers including us. Kyonmange is situated on the west bank of Kyunpyathet River, a tributary of Ayeyawady River, in Myaungmya District. It shares the borders with Wakhema in the east, Labutta in the west, Myaungmya in the north and Mawla-myinegyun Township in the south.

In Kyonmange area, paddy is mainly grown and fishing is the major source of income. Local people always take part in development tasks of Kyonmange. They have striven to scale up the development in social, education, health and agriculture sectors and get new roads, bridges, markets and

On arrival at Kyonmange jetty, we met responsible persons and local people from Kyonmange. So, it is fair to say that Kyonmange jetty built by the IWT is a testament to smooth transport, swift flow of commodities and a boom in trade of local people.

Then, the clashes of the two sides grew into full-scale battles. Only in the afternoon of 29 August did the fire exchange cease. In the mission to save the 39 policemen held hostage, 25 hostages including 11 injured victims could be rescued, and 14 others were found dead. Troops of U Phon Kya Shin group shot them dead at close range in the custody and in some other sites; that was an atrocious slaughter. Obviously, the incident proved U Phon Kya Shin group bloodthirsty, disguising themselves as peace group members. So, they do not deserve peace at all.

The troops led by U Phon Kya Shin was cruel enough to shoot the hostages dead at close range, but the barbarians were too cowardly to face the combined group led by the Tatmadaw. In the face of the Tatmadaw column, they tried to flee, abandoning all their weaponry small and heavy. So, the battle lasted only a short time, the Tatmadaw, Myanmar Police Force and Kokang militia took Kokang Region under control. According to the foreign media, over 700 troops loyal to U Phon Kya Shin fled to the other country and surrendered their arms.

The armed engagements left 11 Tatmadaw members dead and 34, wounded, and 15 policemen dead and 13, wounded. The combined force captured dead bodies of eight Kokang troops and seized more than 400 heavy and small arms in the battles, more than 200 assorted arms in the arsenals of their camp, more than 40 brand-new small arms and rounds of ammu-

Myanmar's border areas are very far-flung ones and they are still difficult of access. And local residents are by nature simple and honest, and the region still badly needs to develop with peace and stability. Therefore, the government gives first priority to the drive for progress of border areas. As regards Kokang ings and raising the education standard.

The government has announced that when it comes to the recent violation of the law that occurred in Kokang, the four leaders namely U Phon Kya Shin, U Phon Kya Phu, U Phon Ta Shwin and U Phon Tarli are mainly held responsible, and the issue did not concern the remaining Kokang troops and Kokang nationals. The Kokang troops who got engaged in the actions had to carry out the orders, so they are not deemed to have violated the law. So, all the Kokang troops, who engaged in the battles, are allowed to return to the legal fold. Moreover, the government has invited the Kokang troops who have re-entered the legal fold to join Kokang Provisional Leading Committee in Laukkai.

The early news stories released by the government featured only the illegal arsenal, but later news stories stated wholesale production of narcotic drugs by "Phon" group. The team made up of the Kokang Region Provisional Leading Committee, the Myanmar Police Force, the Special Anti-Drug Squad and Kokang forces exposed a narcotic drug factory between Mukwakeng Village and BP 127 and seized more than 150,000 WY Brand stimulant tablets and precursor chemicals; 3000 WY Brand stimulant tablets and precursor chemicals in the residence of U Phon Kya Phu in Si-aw Village, Acetic Anhydride and precursor chemicals in a corn plantation in the same village. Today, the government is launching anti-narcotic drug campaigns in all seriousness, (See page 9) munition around the illegal arm factory. After all, the good triumphed over the evil, and security, stability and peace returned to normal in Kokang Region.

Now, peace and stability have been restored and the administrative machinery has been functioning in the region. The inhabitants, who fled due to the armed conflicts and regional instability, are now returning to the native places. The returnees are being received in a systematic way through coordination the authorities of the two countries and they are being rendered necessary aid. It is heartening to learn that now Kokang Region has regained peace and stability, and resumed regional development tasks.

In fact, governmental departments have been set up in Kokang Region for long. So, arrangements will be made to restore the executive power and judicial power in Kokang Region because it will be a Self-Administered Zone in the near future according to the State constitution. Only then will it be possible to avert needless incidents in the border of the two countries.

Region, the government will soon form Special Group for Development of Laukkai Region comprising departments of various fields for ensuring the rule of law and improving the administrative machinery. whereas “Phon” clan is producing narcotic drugs on a commercial scale, which is completely unacceptable. The case is an unforgivable sin not only for Myanmar people but for the international community. And the law will not favour the offenders.

It is stated in the announcement of Kokang Region Provisional Leading Committee that U Phon Kya Shin, U Phon Kya Phu, U Phon Ta Shwin and U Phon Tarli are urged to seize the opportunity to address the issue in accord with the law in their individual interests and in the interests of their region or people. No one can escape from legal charges if he commits a crime. So it will be better for them to face the law instead of going into hiding for good. This is why the committee might have urged its brethren ex-leaders to face the law in their own interests. The four responsible persons should deeply consider cooperation.

Regarding the incidents in Kokang region, outside media have made accusations that the government launched attacks on the Kokang group of U Phon Kya Shin on charges of arms smuggling as it turned down the proposal to form a frontier force. In reality, acting on the information of the neighbouring country, Myanmar Police Force exposed and seized the arms factory in Yanlonkyaing. Twenty-one items of machine parts used in producing arms were seized. Moreover, according to the sources, 40 new small weapons and various kinds of ammunition were confiscated. It is irresponsible to air one-sided fabricated news although there has been material as well as human evidence. But as usual, they will continue airing slanderous news about our country with the ill intention of harming the State and the people. Our only duty is to continue doing our own work for peace and stability and development of our nation without being swayed by their slanderous news realizing their ulterior motive.

Again, there has been a piece of fabricated news in order to cause misunderstanding between the government and the remaining peace groups by saying that the government was likely to continue to carry out attacks with the use of military power until the national race armed groups that had made peace with the State bow to the pressure to transform themselves into frontier forces. In practice, the government in favour of peace endeavoured for all national race armed groups to return to the legal fold after holding negotiations with them. After achieving peace, the government strived for all parts of the country to develop in all aspects with peace and stability. As a result, all can witness that border regions have enjoyed fruits of peace and development more than ever. It is the fact that no one can deny.

In making peace with the government, some national race groups unconditionally surrendered their arms while some are still holding their arms. It has been known to all that the general election will be held in 2010 and a new democratic government will emerge in accord with the constitution. Then, the State will have a Tatmadaw and it is not possible for national race armed groups to continue to hold their arms. This is why the State is seeking ways to negotiate with the national race groups in order to promote temporary peace into eternal peace in accordance with the constitution. Coordination and discussion are essential if a future nation is to be considered based on the point of maintaining peace. Nonetheless, internal and external anti-government elements are attempting to make coordination and discussion unsuccessful and cause misunderstanding. As I have said, they are doing their work and we have to continue our own way to achieve success. We, all the people, believe coordination and discussion with the national race groups will be successful.

The incidents in Kokang region are not the problem between the government and Kokang nationals nor between the government and other national races. It is not the political or racial problem either. It is not the problem that happened due to one-sided pressure. It is just an incident in which action was taken against U Phon Kya Shin's group in accord with the law for rapacious acts to smuggle narcotic drugs and arms although they had been given the special rights to do business in their special region the government had established.

The cases of establishing arms factory to trade arms and ammunition illegally and smuggling narcotics might cause terrorism, threats and rampant crimes not only in Kokang region but also in the border region of two countries. And peace and stability of both countries could be threatened as a consequence. Besides, regional peace and development could be harmed as arms and narcotic drugs were being smuggled to neighbouring nations and other countries. Therefore, the government in cooperation with the neighbouring country took measures to maintain regional peace and stability and development. In other words, the government got rid of the dark area in Kokang region.

Now, Kokang region has returned to normalcy with the dark clouds disappeared. As from 29 August, the local people who fled to the other country have reentered Laukkai en masse as regional peace and stability has prevailed.

The whole Kokang region has been able to put its administrative machinery in place. Moreover, under the leadership of the special group for development of Laukkai region, more progress will be seen in all sectors such as social, economic, education, health and transport sectors. All in all, the moon is full bright in Laukkai. The whole Laukkai region has restored peace and stability, fruits of happiness, delight and confidence.

Emergence of The-ein Station Hospital would take care of health of some 15,000 locals from five village-tracts plus those of nearby village-tracts and Nyaungchaung village-tract of Thaton Township.

Shwe Alin library is opened in accordance with the five norms with a view to enabling rural folks broaden their horizons. Villagers could borrow books from the library with book-borrowing card after paying membership fees. The library is staffed with one

Chinese economy may keep 8% growth for two years: economist

BEIJING, 5 Sept—The Chinese economy is experiencing a “V” shape recovery and the growth rate may reach 8 percent both this year and next year, said Chinese economist Fan Gang said here Saturday.

Fan, a monetary policy adviser to China’s central bank, said at the 2009 annual conference of CEO in Beijing, that the economy will see a sustainable recovery and will be back to normal in 2011, according to a report of the China News Service. He predicted that the real estate investment will increase by around 30 percent in 2010, which will add one percentage point to economic growth.

Corporate investment is expected to grow prominently next year and as the global trade is warming up, Chinese export, which still enjoys the cost advantage, will recover.

“After the economy is back to normal in 2010, the government will adjust the macro-economic policy. But before that happens, the current stimulus policy should stay to sustain the recovery,” he said.

Fan said people should adjust their expectation of economic growth and not regard recovery simply as a double-digit growth. A growth rate of 8 percent to 9 percent is sustainable growth.—Internet

Report: Indian young people want age limit on drinking lowered

NEW DEHLI, 5 Sept—A majority of young people in the Indian capital want the legal age of 25 for drinking to be lowered, reported the Indo-Asian News Service on Saturday.

The report quoted voluntary organization Campaign against Drunken Driven (CADD) as saying in a survey that around 12 percent of young people under the age of 25 drink frequently, while 16 percent of those from 16 to 18 years old admit drinking.

About 1,000 people in the city, including 761 from the age group of 16-24, joined the survey, said the report.

The survey found that there is a demand for bringing down the current drinking age from 25 years to 21 years, said the report.

Only one percent of the respondents felt that the current age limit is a deterrent to the drinking pattern and 70 percent felt the limit was unreasonable.—Xinhua

Thousands suspected of having A/H1N1 flu in US university

SAN FRANCISCO, 5 Sept—At least 2,000 students are suspected of being hit by the A/H1N1 influenza in Washington State University (WSU) in the northwest of the United States, the university said on Friday.

“We estimate that we have been in contact with about 2,000 students with influenza-like illness in the first ten days of our fall semester. At this time of year, we would typically only see a handful of patients with influenza-like illness,” WSU Health and Wellness Services said in a latest posting on the university’s A/H1N1 information blog.

The university noted that it has no way of estimating the additional numbers of sick students who are handled by healthcare providers in the local community or are self-caring at home. The overwhelming majority of sick students have had mild symptoms and are usually better in three to five days, and none of the students has yet required hospitalization. The university has distributed about 200 flu self-care kits for students and is planning to hand out 1,000 more.—MNA/Xinhua

Most US airlines report traffic declines in August

NEW YORK, 5 Sept—Most major US airlines reported another month of declining traffic in August as rising unemployment hurt leisure demand and corporate cost cuts continued to hamper business travel.

Seven of the nine largest US carriers reported a drop in traffic in August, except Southwest Airlines (LUV.N) and JetBlue Airways Corp (JBLU.O).

Delta Air Lines (DAL.N), the world's largest carrier after its merger with Northwest last year, saw its traffic slump for the eighth straight month.

Dwindling demand has forced carriers to cut capacity this year to keep planes full. Nearly every carrier, except JetBlue, reported a drop in available seat miles (ASMs) for August. Load factors, a measure of how full a plane is, were mostly higher.—Internet

New oil production not to affect ethanol industry in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, 5 Sept—The imminent production from Brazil's new-found off-shore oil field will not have a negative impact on the country's booming ethanol industry, a top energy expert assured on Friday.

Mauricio Tomalsquim, president of the Brazilian Power Research Company (EPE), said that the huge pre-salt layer oil reserves will not alter Brazil's energy sector, which will continue to depend heavily on renewable sources.

He explained that the new reserves will lead to an increase in the export of oil byproducts, thus not affecting the bio fuel sector in the country.

Brazil boasts one of the highest rates of ethanol-fuelled motor vehicles in the world — 85 percent to 90 percent of the cars manufactured in the country are flexibly fuelled.

The EPE chief added that ethanol-fuelled cars would remain competitive compared to oil-fuelled ones, as the prices of petrochemical products in Brazil tend to follow the moves on the international market. Tomalsquim did not see either an increase of use of oil in the electricity generation section in the country since oil-fuelled thermal power plants are not only less competitive but also more polluting.

Warming in Arctic reverses 8,000 year old cooling trend

CHICAGO, 5 Sept—An abrupt warming of the Arctic has reversed a cooling trend that began about 8,000 ago, according to a study published on Thursday which sheds light on the threat of rising sea levels and climate change.

Increased greenhouse gas emissions appear to have overridden the natural cooling caused by a wobble in the Earth's axis which has been gradually pulling the planet away from the Sun.

This wobble has cooled summer temperatures by an average of about 0.2 degrees Celsius per thousand years, the study published in the journal Science found.

But Arctic temperatures began to rise at the beginning of the 20th century even though the orbital cycle that produced the cooling continued.

The result was summer temperatures that were about 1.4 degrees Celsius warmer than they should have been by the year 2000, according to the study which mapped Arctic temperatures for every decade of the past 2,000 years.

Temperatures for four of the last five decades were among the highest on record.

At least 2,837 die from H1N1 flu: WHO

GENEVA, 5 Sept—The A/H1N1 pandemic has killed at least 2,837 people worldwide since the new flu virus first emerged in April, the World Health Organization (WHO) said on Friday.

Of all the deaths, 2,234 occurred in the Americas, followed by the West Pacific region, with 279 deaths. The other four WHO regional offices, South-East Asia, Europe, East Mediterranean and Africa reported 188, 104, 21 and 11 deaths respectively.

The WHO's recorded number of lab confirmed A/H1N1 cases worldwide is more than 254,206, but it actually understates the real number of cases as countries are no longer required to test and report individual cases, the UN agency said.

Lebanon's first 'artificial heart' implant success

BEIRUT, 5 Sept—A medical team in Lebanon has successfully performed the first "artificial heart" implant in Lebanon on a 37-year-old man suffering from terminal heart failure.

A team of doctors at the the American University of Beirut Medical Centre (AUBMC) oversaw the six-hour operation last Friday and deemed it successful after the patient survived the first critical 72 hours, an AUBMC press release said.

"The operation was a huge success as it was this patient's last chance at life," said surgeon Pierre Sfeir, who conducted the operation.

"His vital organs are functioning normally and the new device implant is pumping blood properly," said the patient's cardiologist Hadi Skouri.

Recovering in the special care unit, the patient, a father of four, was all smiles the third day after the surgery.

"I was facing death when I arrived here," he said. "Merely lifting an arm would knock the wind out of me. I could barely breathe. Now, I have a new lease on life."

Vitamin C may be key to newborn brain

COPENHAGEN, 5 Sept—Danish researchers say animal studies suggest vitamin C deficiency may impair mental development.

The study, published in The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, shows new-born guinea pigs subjected to moderate vitamin C deficiency had 30 percent fewer nervous system cells in the hippocampal part of the brain and markedly worse spatial memory than guinea pigs eating a normal diet.

Study leader Jens Lykkesfeldt of University of Copenhagen suggests human beings, like guinea pigs, depend on diet for vitamin C. Five percent to 10 percent of new-born babies in Denmark or other Western countries may be suffering from vitamin C deficiency, the study estimates.

"We may thus be witnessing that children get learning disabilities because they have not gotten enough vitamin C in their early life," Lykkesfeldt said in a statement.—Internet

Scientists find new way to study quakes

EDIMBURGH, 5 Sept—A new method of monitoring earthquakes allows scientists to better understand the behavior of deep tremors, Scottish researchers said.

By studying seismic waves from separate earthquakes, scientists at the University of Edinburgh were able to measure tremors deeper in the Earth than they could with a seismometer, which measures motion on the Earth's surface, Edinburgh geoscientist Andrew Curtis said.

"By using earthquakes themselves as virtual microphones that record the sound of the Earth's internal movements, we can listen to the Earth's stretching and cracking from directly within its most interesting, dynamic places," Curtis said.

Monitoring earthquakes this way significantly increases the number of locations that could be used to detect seismic activity and lets scientists monitor tremors far deeper than was previously possible, said Brian Baptie, Seismology Team Leader at the British Geological Survey.—Internet

Astronauts relish space's international food court

WASHINGTON, 5 Sept—When it comes to grabbing a bite to eat, the international space station is living up to its first name.

It's a veritable food court of international cuisine, observed new resident Nicole Stott, an American astronaut who will stay aboard the space station until November.

Stott said she found that for different meals she could sample foods from various parts of the world: US, Canada, Japan, Europe and Russia.

"I think you can find something for anyone," Stott said in a Friday night news conference by the 13 members of the joint crews of the space shuttle Discovery and space station. Stott is moving into the space station, after getting a ride on the shuttle.

Stott and her fellow astronauts addressed reporters through a video link hours after a piece of space junk sped safely by the two spacecraft. NASA had been monitoring the situation but decided it was unlikely to be a problem, and the old rocket part passed Friday morning as the astronauts slept.

In past years, astronauts have complained about the poor taste and variety of food in space. Astronaut Norm Thagard, the first American to fly on the Russian space station Mir, bemoaned jellied perch and borscht in his diet and lost a considerable amount of weight.

Study finds potential way to make an AIDS vaccine

WASHINGTON, 5 Sept—The discovery of immune system particles that attack the AIDS virus may finally open a way to make a vaccine that could protect people against the deadly and incurable infection, US researchers said on Thursday.

They used new technology to troll through the blood of 1,800 people infected with the AIDS virus and identified two immune system compounds called antibodies that could neutralize the virus.

And they found a new part of the virus that the antibodies attack, offering a new way to design a vaccine, they reported in the journal Science.

"So now we may have a better chance of designing a vaccine that will elicit such broadly neutralizing antibodies, which we think are key to successful vaccine development," said Dennis Burton of The Scripps

Research Institute in La Jolla, California, who led the study.

"The findings themselves are an exciting advance toward the goal of an effective AIDS vaccine because now we've got a new, potentially better target on HIV to focus our efforts for vaccine design," added Wayne Koff of the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative, or IAVI, which sponsored the study.

Study suggests type 2 diabetics eat poorly

WINSTON, SALEM, 5 Sept—A study of people with type 2 diabetes suggests many of them would benefit from dietary counseling, researchers in North Carolina said.

"The most important thing about controlling diabetes, especially type 2 diabetes, is being able to manage energy in and energy out, and the best way to do that is through diet," said Mara Vitolins, lead author of the study at Wake Forest University School of Medicine.

In a study of 2,575 type 2 diabetics though out the United States, Vitolins and her team found 93 percent exceeded the recommended percentage of daily calories from fat, 85 percent exceeded the saturated fat recommendation and 92 percent consumed too much sodium.

Less than half of those in the study met the minimum recommended daily servings of fruits, vegetables, dairy products and grains based on the year 2000 US Food Guide Pyramid recommendations, Vitolins said.

"It's important that people with type 2 diabetes follow the recommendations," she said. "They can't afford to let their pyramids fall."—Internet

How broccoli can protect your arteries

LONDON, 5 Sept—It's long been thought that broccoli is good for your heart, and now British scientists think they know why. Researchers at Imperial College London have found evidence a chemical in broccoli and other green leafy vegetables could boost a natural defense mechanism that protects arteries from the clogging that can cause heart attacks.

In a study funded by the British Heart Foundation charity and conducted on mice, the researchers found that sulforaphane — a compound occurring naturally in broccoli and other brassicas — could "switch on" a protective protein which is inactive in parts of the arteries vulnerable to clogging.

"We know that vegetables are clearly good for you, but surprisingly the molecular mechanisms of why they are good for you have remained unknown for many years," said Paul Evans of the National Heart and Lung Institute at Imperial College.

"This study provides a possible explanation for how green vegetable consumption can promote a healthy heart."

Scientists already know that arteries don't clog up in a uniform way, but that there are bends and branches of blood vessels — where blood flow is disrupted or slower — which are much more prone to the build-up of fatty plaques that cause heart disease.—Internet

S Africa launches 'Football Fridays' in World Cup buildup

JOHANNESBURG, 5 Sept—South Africa wants to change to the nation's wardrobe in the run-up to the 2010 World Cup, urging people to wear football jerseys every Friday until the kick-off in June.

"We are encouraging everyone to adopt Football Friday and to wear the shirt of their favourite team. Obviously, we'd prefer it if their favourite team were the national team," said Paul Bannister, head of the International Marketing Council of South Africa (IMC).

The IMC is heading the government's efforts to promote the games, having already launched TV commercials to promote the "diski" — a dance that mimics footballers' moves. Organisers also hope to encourage South Africans to learn their national anthem, which is sung in five of the country's most spoken languages, leaving many people stumbling over some of the verses.

Terry wants England to be more streetwise

LONDON, 5 Sept—England captain John Terry believes his team must become more streetwise if they want to end the country's long wait for World Cup glory.

After a fortnight in which diving has been top of the British football agenda due to controversial incidents involving Eduardo, Wayne Rooney and Aiden McGeady, Terry hinted that England's stars have often been too honest for their own good. While Arsenal striker Eduardo was handed a two-match European ban for his theatrical fall against Celtic and Celtic midfielder McGeady was sent off for diving against Hibernian, Terry knows from first-hand experience that many cheats have got away with their acts of deception.

Serena wins grudge match at US Open

NEW YORK, 5 Sept—Defending champion Serena Williams reached the last 16 of the US Open on Friday with a 6-3, 7-5 win over Spain's Maria Jose Martinez Sanchez. It was a match that had an undertone of friction to it as the two had been at odds during a third-round match at the French Open when Williams accused her opponent of cheating by refusing to admit that a ball had hit her arm.

The American eventually won that match in three sets, but she was outspoken in her criticism of Martinez Sanchez afterwards. This time around, Williams let her tennis do the talking as she jumped out into a 3-0 lead with a succession of power serves and thumping groundstrokes.—Internet

Capello hoping to stay as England manager till 2012

LONDON, 5 Sept—Fabio Capello wants to remain as England manager at least until 2012, the Italian said on Friday.

The 63-year-old told a news conference he has no intention of quitting after next year's World Cup finals in South Africa and hoped to be around for the 2012 European championships in Ukraine and Poland.

"My contract ends in 2012 and I want to respect it," he told reporters at England's training headquarters at London Colney, north of London, before Saturday's friendly with Slovenia. "It is not only a matter for me but also the FA, but in my mind the target is to respect my contract."

Capello has transformed England's fortunes since taking charge of the team for the first time in February last year. His 16 matches have resulted in 12 wins, two draws and two defeats — a record that includes seven successive World Cup qualifiers. England will ensure their place in next year's finals if they beat Croatia at Wembley on Wednesday.

The-ein village in Paung Township gaining development momentum as a result of better transport Development projects have been planned and are being implemented across the nation for development of border areas and rural regions.

As the majority of population are residing in rural regions, everything necessary is being fulfilled to speed up the development momentum in rural regions so that progress in urban areas are matched by parallel trends in rural areas.

As district-to-district Road No.2 in Thaton District is built through a large number of villages including The-ein village of Paung Township, villages along the road have become much developed.

The-ein village is located about twenty miles east of Paung Township and is surrounded by Kawkadaik village in the east, Kadaik village in the west, Sinywa village in the north and Donthami river in the north. The village area covers 19.62 square miles.

The mainstay of The-ein village is agriculture. The cultivation target of monsoon paddy for this year is 1,138 acres which has already been achieved and it is targeted to grow 1,096 acres of summer paddy. Apart from paddy, rubber is mainly grown in the village. At present, over 1,000 acres have been put under rubber plantations and 136 acres have been put under pepper cultivation.
