Peasantry have to elect representatives capable of building peaceful, modern, developed nation and exercising democracy correctly

NAY PYI TAW, 2 March—The following is a translation of the message sent by Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council Senior General Than Shwe on the occasion of the Peasants Day (2010).

Esteemed peasantry,

The Union of Myanmar has been traditionally engaged in agricultural farming since the times of our forefathers to fulfil the basic needs of food and clothing of its people. As a gesture of honouring the role of the peasantry, the Peasants Day is designated in the Union of Myanmar. On this auspicious occasion of the Peasants Day (2010), I wish you the peasantry physical and mental well-being and greater success in the agricultural farming.

In its bid to shape the nation into a peaceful, modern and developed one, the State Peace and Development Council is well convinced that only when the living conditions of the peasantry have improved, will it be possible for the whole nation to enjoy economic growth. Therefore, "Development of agriculture as the base and all-round development of other sectors of the economy as well" is the highest in the economic objectives of the State.

In addition, the council has been working hard for ensuring better transport, supply of adequate irrigation water and potable water, improvement of education standard, better health care, and rural economic development in pursuance of the Rural Development Project designed for greater development of rural areas, home to the peasantry.

In order to scale up the development momentum of the agricultural sector, the government has given assistance in various sectors and taken measures such as reclamation of vacant lands, providing advanced agricultural methods and fertilizers for boosting per acre yields of crops, supply of irrigation water to launch mixed- and multiple-cropping patterns, and designating the 10 major crops of the nation.

Peasantry to boost agricultural production

The Peasants Day (2010) falls on the 2nd of March 2010 (today).

In pursuit of the goal of building a peaceful, modern and developed nation, the government focuses special attention on the drive for improving the living status of the people.

In the process, the government is trying its best for extensive reclamation of fallow lands and speeding up utilization of farmlands by harnessing the natural resources in the most efficient way. Furthermore, it has placed greater emphasis on boosting agricultural production for food security, one of the basic needs of the people.

From 1988 to 2008-2009, the nation's total sown acreage rose from 19.9 million to 29.32 million; utilization of farmlands, to 56.9 million acres; and the output of paddy, the staple food, from 631 million to 1561 million baskets.

The dams, river pumping stations and underground water tapping stations the government has constructed across the nation for supply of irrigation water benefit more than 3.6 million acres of farmlands.

With development in the agricultural sector, the government is boosting production of agricultural machinery and tools to transform the nation from conventional to mechanized farming. In order to expedite the drive, it not only manufactures tractors, combine harvesters, and winnowers but also provides agricultural equipment that can be used in combination with tractors, along with ploughs, harrows, paddy reapers and trailers.

Therefore, agricultural machinery should be operated at full capacity in order that farmers can save time and energy and boost agricultural production all the more.

KABUL, 1 March — Nearly a dozen non-combatants were killed in Taliban hotbed Helmand Province in south Afghanistan as roadside bomb struck a civilian vehicle on Sunday afternoon, spokesman for provincial administration Daud Ahmadi said.

“It occurred at 2:30 pm when a mini-bus ran over a mine planted by militants on a road in Nawzad District. As a result, 11 innocent civilians, including two children and two women, were killed,” Ahmadi told Xinhua.

He put the attack on the “enemies of peace,” a term used against Taliban militants, but the outfit has yet to make comment.

The bloody incident occurred while a military offensive has been going on against Taliban bastion in the neighbouring Marja district since 13 Feb.

To slow down the military onslaught, Taliban fighters rely on roadside bombings which often claim civilians’ lives.

Chile President steps up quake rescue

SANTIAGO, 1 March — Chilean President Michelle Bachelet has announced emergency measures to deal with the destruction caused by Saturday’s massive earthquake.

The 8.8 magnitude quake — one of the most powerful recorded — devastated central parts of the country, killing more than 700 people.

Troops are being deployed to help with rescue efforts and prevent looting.

A curfew is in force in some areas. Basic supplies are to be distributed as rescuers reach worst-hit areas.

“We face a catastrophe of such unthinkable magnitude that it will require a giant effort,” Ms Bachelet told reporters on Sunday in the capital, Santiago.

The curfew, which began at 2100 local time (2400 GMT), applies in the region of Maule — where more than 541 are confirmed dead — and in Concepcion, Chile’s second city. Both areas are being placed under special rules to speed up the delivery of aid.

The army has been sent to support police to prevent unrest in Concepcion, south of Santiago.

The mayor has said food is running out and the situation in the city is getting out of control. Supermarkets and chemists have been looted and thousands of people remain homeless.

Peru's free trade pact with China to boost exports

LIMA, 1 March — Peru's Free Trade Agreement (FTA) with China will create "immense opportunities" for Peru's export and external investment, Peru's Exterior Commerce and Tourism Minister Martin Perez said on Sunday.

"China is the second biggest commercial partner of Peru and the FTA between both countries will serve not only to consolidate the commercial ties with China but also the investments which already are very important for the country," Perez said.

Currently China's investment in Peru has exceeded 1.2 billion US dollars, the largest among Asian countries, he added.

The FTA, to be valid on 1 March, will enable many Peruvian products to enter the Chinese market duty-free, Perez said.

Peruvian entrepreneurs are ready to take this opportunity to expand business with their Chinese counterparts, he said.

Currently more than 1,000 Peruvian companies export goods to China, the number is expected to increase after the implementation of the FTA, he said.

Besides the traditional exports such as fish and minerals, the FTA will open door to new products, like farm produce.

Blaming the weather for high unemployment

WASHINGTON, 1 March —Snowstorms have repeatedly battered parts of the United States this winter, making it more difficult to discern returning weakness in the economy from seasonal distortions.

That means key US data on jobs and manufacturing for February, which hold big implications for global financial markets, could lead to a befuddled reaction from investors.

Confusion will also likely reign in Europe where fears about Greece's financial situation, potentially exacerbated by speculative activity in bond markets, have kept the euro zone's single currency under pressure.

China, a growing contributor to the global economic outlook, will release a business sentiment survey, which analysts expect to slip for a second month as the country tightens credit.

But the major indicator to watch is employment since it has a direct effect on the consumer spending that powers two-thirds of the world's largest economy.

The forecasting range is unusually wide, but median projections point to a loss of 50,000 jobs in February. The jobless rate is seen ticking back up to 9.8 percent after a January decline.

"Everybody who's thinking the economy is heading for a double dip (recession) is going to say this is evidence of that, and every one saying the economy is doing fine will dismiss it because of the weather," said Bob Barbera, chief economist at the Investment Technology Group in New York.

Oil rises above $80 as regional stocks gain

SINGAPORE, 1 March— Oil prices rose above $80 a barrel Monday in Asia as crude traders followed regional stock markets higher.

Benchmark crude for April delivery was up 56 cents to $80.22 a barrel at midday Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The contract added $1.49 to settle at $79.66.

Oil traders, who often look to equities as a measure of overall investor sentiment, were cheered by a jump in all the major Asian stock indexes Monday amid recent signs that Asian manufacturing is recovering from last year's slump.

This week, investors will be eyeing US jobs data to get a better sense of the recovery in the world's largest economy.

The Labour Department is scheduled to announce February's unemployment rate on Friday. Joblessness was 9.7 percent in January.

Oil prices have touched the low $80 level several times in the last six months, but fallen back into the $70s when US crude inventory data failed to justify investor optimism.—Internet

Car makers emerge from gloom into Geneva glitz

GENEVA, 1 March —

Car makers will emerge from the gloom of 2009 by presenting about 100 new models at the Geneva motor show over the coming week, hoping to counter uncertainty by wooing drivers with dreams, "downsizing" and discounts. "The mood is much better than last year; in 2009 it was the end of the world," explained Frank Schwöpe, an analyst at German bank

"Now there's hope of a recovery in the industry, not in Europe but in China and the United States," he told AFP.

Despite this, the European market risks a slump particularly in the second half of the year, when trade-in schemes which propped up the market in 2009, end or are cut back.

This year's show is taking place in the backdrop of the troubles engulfing the world's biggest auto maker Toyota, which was forced to recall some nine million cars world-wide.

In this uncertainty, car makers are churning out new models and concepts in a bid to entice buyers.

Some 250 exhibitors representing 700 brands from 30 countries will bring their latest creations to the Geneva show, organizers said.

Sales of all vehicles were up by 35.1 percent compared with the previous year, with 294,887 units sold in February.

Sales of cars stood at 131,548 for the month, an increase of 72.2 percent on the same month in 2009. Compact cars also saw sales grow by 17.8 percent, selling 138,841 vehicles over the course of the month.

Over the last few months millions have been recalled due to faults with brakes and accelerators, and in late February, Toyota company President Akio Toyoda testified before the US Congress in Washington, DC, on the safety of his company's cars.

Indian PM eyes further energy cooperation with "reliable" Saudi RIYADH, 1 March—Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh on Sunday said his country seeks further energy cooperation with Saudi Arabia, terming the Gulf kingdom as "reliable partner" in meeting his country's energy needs.

"We believe that conditions are ripe for moving beyond a traditional buyer-seller relationship to a comprehensive energy partnership," Singh said during a meeting with the Saudi Chambers of Commerce and Industry in Riyadh.

Singh, who is on the second day of a historic visit to the Saudi capital, said the Indian companies were well-equipped to participate in upstream and downstream oil and gas sector projects in the oil-rich Arab country.

"We should also establish new partnerships in the area of new and renewable energy through sharing of clean technologies and joint collaborations," he said.

Singh's visit is the first by an Indian premier in 28 years to the Gulf kingdom, which is India's top crude oil supplier, amounting to 20 percent of the South Asian country's total needs. "We deeply value Saudi Arabia's role as a reliable partner in meeting our energy needs," he said.—Xinhua

NAIROBI, 1 March—Somali pirates have released a Greek-owned Panama-registered cargo ship which was hijacked in December last year, a regional maritime official confirmed on Sunday.

"The Greek ship was released on Saturday evening. The vessel has

Europeans introduce avalanche air bags in Utah

ALTA, 1 March—Europeans are bringing expertise on avalanche safety to Utah.

A Swiss engineer and leading avalanche-safety expert Manuel Genswein was at a Wasatch ski resort east of Salt Lake City this weekend to show off a device meant for surviving a deadly snow slide—a set of air bags designed into a backpack for floating atop avalanche debris.

Skiers hit a rip cord to activate the air bags.

Genswein said the $1,000 air bag system is making its introduction in North America after years of use around Europe, where he says it has proven 98 percent effective.

"It's about being a bigger particle" in piles of moving snow, said Genswein, who held a demonstration at Snowbird resort for members of Wasatch Backcountry Rescue.

Snow-safety experts credit the concept to a German hunter and forestry official who in the 1970s found himself held aloft in an avalanche by the carcass of a deer he was carrying around his shoulders. Thousands of dead fish raise stink at Rio lagoon

RIO DE JANEIRO, 1 March—Thousands of dead fish washed up on the shores of a popular beachside lagoon in Rio over the weekend, offending joggers' olfactory senses and leading the city to fight the stench with disinfectant.

Following ancient copper trade routes in Yunnan Province

Once caravan routes, and copper merchants from throughout China converged in remote but bustling Nagu Town in Yunnan Province near misted mountains of rich copper mines.

Nagu means "black earth" in the language of the Yi ethnic group, indicating the richness of the Dongchuan (today's Huize County) mines and the town itself that stands at more than 1,900 meters.

Today it is called Baiwu Village, or White Fog Village, because the village is always shrouded in mist and fog in the early morning.

It is one of China's 40 "newly discovered" towns featured in an International Channel Shanghai (ICS) programme to promote tourism in little-known, unspoiled places with great development potential.

In 2005 the town was recognized as a National Cultural and Historic Village, known for its ore transport network and gorgeous assembly halls built by copper merchants from different Provinces. The halls display distinctive regional architecture. They were used for business, socializing and stage performances.

Atom smasher restarts to prepare for new science

GENEVA, 1 March — Operators of the world's largest atom smasher restarted their massive machine on Sunday in a run up to experiments probing secrets of the universe, a spokeswoman said.

The European Organization for Nuclear Research, or CERN, sent low energy beams of protons in both directions around the 17-mile tunnel housing the Large Hadron Collider under the Swiss-French border at Geneva, said Christine Sutton.

After a cautious trial period, CERN plans to ramp up the energy of the beams to unprecedented levels and start record-setting collisions of protons by late March, Sutton said.

The restart follows a 2 1/2 month winter shutdown during which scientists made improvements and checked out the smasher's ability to collide protons at energies three times greater than has ever been achieved previously.

The new collisions are expected to shatter the subatomic particles and reveal still smaller fragments and forces than previously achieved on any collider, including the previous record-holder — the Tevatron at Fermilab outside Chicago. The Large Hadron Collider was built to examine suspected phenomena such as dark matter, antimatter and ultimately the creation of the universe billions of years ago, which many theorize occurred as an explosion known as the Big Bang. "We've started up again," said Sutton.

Australia homes project rejected over sea level risk

SYDNEY, 1 March — Fears over rising sea levels have prompted planning authorities in Victoria, southern Australia to reject a coastal development. It is a decision that could affect other parts of the country. Officials say the residential scheme at Port Fairy, 300 km (186 miles) west of Melbourne, will not go ahead because of safety concerns.

There is growing fear in Australian coastal areas about storm surges and possible inundation from rising oceans.

The Victoria state government's decision was based on a projection that sea levels will rise by 80cm (11.8 inches) over the next century. Officials have insisted the area is also at risk from erosion and storm surges.

State authorities have set up a multi-million dollar fund to help coastal regions adapt to the challenges that could lie ahead

Suspected CIA suicide bomber calls American team 'gift from God'

KABUL, 1 March — The man believed to be the suicide bomber who killed seven CIA employees and contractors last year appears in a newly released video, claiming to have tricked Jordanian intelligence officers as a double agent.

The 43-minute video, posted on various Islamic radical Web sites on Saturday, shows Humam Khalil Abu-Mulal al-Balawi, whom a former US intelligence official identified as the suicide bomber.

Family members have said that the man in the video, who uses the alias Abu Dajana Al-Khorasani, is al-Balawi.

A much shorter version of the video was posted online in January.

The December 30 bombing at a US base in Khost, in southeastern Afghanistan, killed seven CIA operatives and a Jordanian army captain.

The video posted on Saturday is dated "Safar 1431" on the lunar calendar, which includes any day between 16 Jan, 2010 and 13 Feb, 2010.

Mother makes tearful plea to missing suspect

LONDON, 1 March — The mother of a missing man suspected of murdering his girlfriend and baby daughter collapsed in tears yesterday as she made an appeal for him to come forward. Anthony Marsh (21) has not been seen since Saturday morning, when the bodies of Stephanie Bellinger and eight-month-old Lily were found at their home in Totton, near Southampton in the UK.

A relative of Ms Bellinger (24) made the grim discovery just before 9am. It is thought the mother and her child were stabbed to death. Detective Constable John Woodward addressed Mr Marsh on behalf of his mother Wendy Marsh, who was visibly trembling, saying: "Anthony, if you are watching or if you read or hear this please understand that all your family are very concerned about you." —Internet

TV, Internet top US news choices

WASHINGTON, 1 March — US respondents to a Pew Research Centre poll on media usage indicate they are more likely to get daily news from television or the Internet.

The Pew Research Center's Project for Excellence in Journalism asked more than 2,200 people where they get their news. Nearly all — 92 percent — of the respondents said they use multiple platforms but television topped the list.

The data indicate 7 percent of those asked got news from a single platform, which was typically the Internet or local TV news.

About 80 percent said they heard and saw news from a local TV station's newscast while 73 percent cited a national network, such as CBS, or cable news outlet such as CNN or Fox News, as a source of news.

And 61 percent told pollsters they read some kind of news online.

Peasantry have...

So far, the government has constructed 200 dams, 31 sluice gates, 322 river water pumping stations, 8001 tube-wells, and 658 small-scale rural dams, and the agricultural sector has made significant progress, as a result. Every year, the nation has put over 20 million acres of land under monsoon and summer paddy, producing over 1500 million baskets of paddy annually. Now, the nation's rice supply has far exceeded the demand of the growing population. And regions concerned have achieved great success in growing such major crops as corn, black gram, green gram, pigeon pea, groundnut, sesame, sunflower, long staple cotton and sugarcane, thus increasing the nation's total sown acreage to 33.33 million, and utilization of farmlands, to 171.1 per cent.

The rapid development in the agricultural sector suggests that it is highly required to transform the nation from conventional into mechanized farming. Many new plans are now ongoing for the State-owned and private-owned industries to boosting production of farming machinery and tools. Therefore, I would like to urge you the peasantry to work harder than ever for your better socio-economic life.

Esteemed peasantry,

Now, the government, the people and the Tatmadaw are implementing the State's seven-step Road Map in concert. This year, elections will be held to elect members of parliament in accordance with the State Constitution of the Union of Myanmar, which has been approved with the massive support of the public. The role you the peasantry have played in the Myanmar politics is very important. So, you have to elect representatives capable of building a peaceful, modern and developed nation and exercising the democracy correctly. You also have to ward off potential dangers of those who will disrupt State stability and community peace with assistance of aliens in the background.

In conclusion, I would like to call on you the peasantry to do your bit in the drive for emergence of a peaceful, modern and developed nation.—MNA

Giant tech fair goes 3D to pull in the punters

HANOVER, 1 March—The world's biggest high-tech fair kicks off Tuesday with a focus on "smart" gadgets as well as "Avatar"-inspired 3D products to make consumers' lives easier — and more fun.

Germany's CeBIT, traditionally a showcase for computing and software firms to unveil their latest flagship designs, is evolving into more of a consumer-driven event, organizers said, as crisis-hit

IT companies stay away.

"We're trying to attract more consumers," said Hartwig von Sass, a spokesman for Deutsche Messe, that organises the event. Exhibitor numbers dropped by three percent this year with 4,157 firms from 68 countries due to erect stands at the vast centre in northern Germany. At the height of the dot-com boom, more than 8,000 companies set up shop at the CeBIT.

"Given the economic and financial climate, we consider it a success that our exhibitor numbers are approximately stable," said Sass.

And he pointed to some giants of the tech world that are visiting the CeBIT for the first time, such as Google and online book-seller Amazon, as well as sellers such as IBM, Microsoft, SAP, Vodafone, Fujitsu or Ericsson.

Merck KGaA to acquire Millipore for 7.2 billion dollars

WASHINGTON, 1 March—German pharmaceutical giant Merck KGaA announced late Sunday its acquisition of Millipore Corporation, a Billerica, Massachusetts-based biotechnology firm for 7.2 billion dollars (5.3 billion euros).

Under an agreement reached by the two sides, Merck KGaA will acquire all outstanding shares of common stock of Millipore for 107 dollars per share in cash.

"This transaction is very attractive to shareholders, customers and employees of both companies," said Karl-Ludwig Kley, chairman of the executive board of Merck.

"This is a combination with an excellent strategic fit, which will allow us to cover the entire value chain for our pharma and biopharma customers, offering integrated solutions beyond chemicals."

Last year, Millipore generated 1.7 billion dollars in sales. It has around 6,000 employees in more than 30 countries of the world.

Merck expects that the combined business will generate annual cost savings of around 100 million dollars (75 million euros).

The acquisition still requires approval by Millipore shareholders at a special shareholder meeting to be called at a later date, officials said.—Internet

Prudential to buy AIG's Asian arm for 35 bln dollars

LONDON, 1 March—US insurance giant AIG has agreed to sell its Asian arm, AIA, to British insurer Prudential for around 35 billion dollars (26 billion euros, 23 billion pounds), a source close to the deal said.

American International Group (AIG), which received a huge taxpayer bailout to stave off collapse during the financial crisis, had been persuaded to let Prudential take over its Asian businesses, said the source late Sunday.

The deal will transform Prudential into the world's top non-Chinese insurer by market capitalisation, ahead of major competitors Allianz and AXA.

It is understood the sale will be unveiled in the coming days, perhaps as early as Monday.

The purchase will be financed in cash, through a rights issue by Prudential, and through AIG taking a minority part of the British insurer, said the source.

Tidjane Thiam, who took up the job of Prudential chief executive in October, had never hidden his desire to expand the business in Asia.

The business chief, who has French nationality but was born in Ivory Coast, went to New York at the end of last week to persuade AIG's board to sell American International Assurance (AIA) to his company.—Internet

Buyers line up for Derbyshire nuclear bunker

LONDON, 1 March — A Cold War-era nuclear bunker in Britain has been put up for sale on online auction site eBay, and by yesterday bidders had pushed the price up to more than £19,300 ($32,647). "A rare opportunity to acquire a piece of Cold War history," read the sale advert on the website. "Set in a stunning location with glorious views. Your own nuclear bunker within a plot of land and much original equipment."

After being advertised at a starting price of £500 ($845) late on Thursday, a bidding war saw the price of the underground shelter rocket, increasing more than 50 times in less than three days. As of 9am (AEDT) today the price stood at £19,300 after 39 bids. The bunker came into service in 1959 and was used by the Royal Observer Corps, a civilian defence organisation composed mainly of volunteers who had the task of reporting nuclear attack and fallout.

The shelter, in the Peak District National Park in central England, was fully operational until 1991 when it was decommissioned as the Soviet Union collapsed.

Measuring 15m by 15m, the bunker is on farmland and in an "elevated position with panoramic views".

The bunker, which is "accessed via a metal hatch and shaft", lies 4.57m underground and has two rooms — a chemical toilet and monitoring room — and two ventilation shafts.

Cop dies after robber accidentally explodes

PORT MORESBY, 1 March — A Papua New Guinea policewoman died when a fugitive accidentally blew himself up with a hand grenade while trying to escape from police custody. Pawa Moni, 35, had been on the run since 2008 but was arrested in the notorious Western Highlands Province on Friday night for a string of offences, including bank robberies and murder.

Moni tried to escape from the police vehicle in Mt Hagen but accidentally detonated a hidden hand grenade, killing himself and 25-year-old police-woman Selly Mol. Police commander Simon Kauba told PNG's The National newspaper that this type of incident was the first of its kind in PNG.

Moni was wanted for robbing a Bank South Pacific teller machine in 2006 and killing a security guard last year, he said. "The officers put Moni into the police vehicle but they failed to search him properly," Mr Kauba said. "Moni jumped from his back seat, took out a hand grenade and struggled to escape through the front side of the vehicle," he said. "In the struggle the hand grenade's pin came off." Three other policemen were hurt in the explosion.

Philippine troops kill two gunmen linked to massacre

MANILA, 1 March — Philippine troops clashed Monday with armed followers of a political warlord who was arrested in connection with the country's worst election-related massacre, killing two gunmen, the military said.

Troops on combat patrol confronted about 30 men in the outskirts of southern Maguindanao province on Monday, triggering a gunfight that killed two, said military spokesman Maj Randolph Cabangbang.

Prosecutors have charged Andal Ampatuan Sr., a former three-term Maguindanao governor, and his son, Andal Ampatuan Jr, with murder in connection with the killings of 57 people on 23 Nov.

Among the massacre victims were supporters and relatives of Esmail Mangudadatu, who is running for governor of the province. They were headed to an election office to file Mangudadatu's candidacy papers when they were killed, along with at least 30 journalists and staff members who were providing news coverage of the event.

Stroke study finds neck stents safe, effective

SAN ANTONIO, 1 March — People at risk of a stroke because of narrowed neck arteries can be safely treated with a less drastic option than the surgery done now, the largest study ever done on these treatments concludes. If Medicare agrees to cover it, hundreds of thousands of Americans a year might be able to have an artery-opening procedure and a stent instead of surgery to remove built-up plaque, doctors say. A stent is a wire-mesh tube that props the blood vessel open.

Stents have long been used to fix heart arteries but are approved for use in the neck only for people too sick for surgery. The new study, in people with less severe disease, suggests stents may find much wider use. "The sea of people is gigantic" who could benefit, said Dr Walter Koroshetz, deputy director of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, the study's main sponsor.

"We now have two safe and effective methods" to treat neck vessels, said Dr Thomas Brott of the Mayo Clinic in Jacksonville, Fla. He led the study and gave results on Friday at an American Stroke Association conference.

However, the treatments have different complications, and not all doctors are convinced stents are as safe. Three previous studies found they were not, including one published online Thursday by the British journal The Lancet.

The Risk of BPA in Pregnant Moms

TEXAS, 1 March—Studies done at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston show that Bisphenol A (BPA), a chemical often found in baby bottles and the lining of aluminum cans, may lead to allergy related asthma. Production of the chemical started about 40 years ago, a timing that scientists note coincides with increasing asthma rates.

Tests on BPA have been done on lab mice. The researchers found the mice born to mothers exposed to 10 micrograms of BPA developed airway problems while mice born to mothers exposed to low or no BPA did not develop the problem. These tests show a significant enough increase in allergy related asthma that some states have begun banning the chemical in containers that could be used by children under the age of four. Scientist believe that this study is a good example of what could happen to humans, but they admit that mice studies are not always accurate in people.

The next step in this study will be to determine how much BPA and how often it is given before these problems are prevalent. Since there are other contributing factors in what causes asthma, scientist are planning on extracting cord blood in humans for their research. These subjects will be watched for a period of time to see if they develop Asthma. Groups will be based on their level of BPA exposure. This type of study will take years, but will certainly be more conclusive than the mice experiment.—Internet

1 in 4 parents buys unproven vaccine-autism link

CHICAGO, 1 March—One in four US parents believes some vaccines cause autism in healthy children, but even many of those worried about vaccine risks think their children should be vaccinated. Most parents continue to follow the advice of their children's doctors, according to a study based on a survey of 1,552 parents. Extensive research has found no connection between autism and vaccines.

"Nine out of 10 parents believe that vaccination is a good way to prevent diseases for their children," said lead author Dr. Gary Freed of the University of Michigan. "Luckily their concerns don't outweigh their decision to get vaccines so their children can be protected from life-threatening illnesses."

In 2008, unvaccinated school-age children contributed to measles outbreaks in California, Illinois, Washington, Arizona and New York, said Dr Melinda Wharton of the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Thirteen percent of the 140 who got sick that year were hospitalized. "It's fortunate that everybody recovered," Wharton said, noting that measles can be deadly. "If we don't vaccinate, these diseases will come back."

Striking number of obesity risks hit minority kids

CHICAGO, 1 March—The odds of obesity appear stacked against black and Hispanic children starting even before birth, provocative new research suggests. The findings help explain disproportionately high obesity rates in minority children. Family income is often a factor, but so are cultural customs and beliefs, the study authors said. They examined more than a dozen circumstances that can increase chances of obesity, and almost every one was more common in black and Hispanic children than in whites. Factors included eating and sleeping habits in infancy and early childhood and mothers smoking during pregnancy. In a separate, equally troubling study, researchers found signs of inflammation in obese children as young as 3 years old. High levels were more common in blacks and Hispanics. These inflammatory markers have been linked with obesity in adults and are thought to increase chances for developing heart disease.

Gene test aid to cancer treatment

LONDON, 1 March—Developed a gene test which predicts how well chemotherapy will work in cancer patients. Starting with 829 genes in breast cancer cells, the team whittled down the possibilities to six genes which had an impact on whether a drug worked. They then showed that these genes could be used to predict the effectiveness of a drug called paclitaxel in patients.

It is hoped the approach, reported in The Lancet Oncology, can be replicated for other cancers and treatments. The international project, including researchers from Cancer Research UK's London Research Institute, opens the way for breast cancer treatment to be targeted to those who will benefit the most.—Internet

Obese children show signs of heart disease

LONDON, 1 March—Young as three years old show signs of future heart disease, say US researchers. study of 16,000 children and teenagers showed the most obese had signs of an inflammatory marker which can predict future heart disease. 40% of obese three-to-five-year olds had raised levels of C-reactive protein compared with 17% of healthy weight children, Pediatrics reported.

But more work is needed to prove the link with heart disease in later life. The study, carried out by a team at the University of North Carolina (UNC), looked at children aged one to 17. Overall, nearly 70% were a healthy weight, 15% were overweight, 11% were obese and 3.5% were very obese. In the older age groups, the proportion of those in the very obese category with high levels of C-reactive protein (CRP) increased even further. By age 15-17, 83% of the very obese had increased CRP compared with 18% of the healthy weight children. CRP is found in the blood, and high levels are a sign of inflammation in the body. Because the damage seen in heart disease is caused by inflammation in artery walls, CRP can be used as a general marker for the risk of heart disease.—Internet

Fergie explains Rooney sub role

LONDON, 1 March—Sir Alex Ferguson admits he had one eye on future games after starting Manchester United's Carling Cup match-winner Wayne Rooney on the bench against Aston Villa. Rooney, who headed the semi-final winner against Manchester City, was replaced in the starting line-up by Michael Owen for Sunday's Wembley show-down.

Ferguson: Big games coming up

Owen repaid his manager's faith by scoring the equaliser before the striker pulled up with a hamstring injury to be replaced by Rooney before half-time. The in-form England ace then settled an open cup final on 74 minutes as he rose well to head Antonio Valencia's cross beyond the reach of Villa keeper Brad Friedel.

With United facing Wolves in the Premier League and AC Milan in the UEFA Champions League in the next fortnight, Ferguson felt it was an opportunity to give Rooney a break. "There's a lot of big games coming up now and that's why we didn't play him today, but he's had 45, 50 minutes," Ferguson told Sky Sports.—Internet

Porto hopes dented by Sporting

LISBON, 1 March—FC Porto's outside hopes of challenging for the Portuguese title look to be over after being thrashed 3-0 on Sunday by Sporting Lisbon. Yannick Djaló opened the scoring for Sporting inside the sixth minute at the Estádio José Alvalade, immediately putting the visitors from Porto—who entered the day nine points back of leaders Benfica—on the backfoot.

Matters only got worse for Porto just before the half-time interval when Russian midfielder Marat Izmailov struck past Helton to make it 2-0 to the home side. It was all over two minutes after the restart as Miguel Veloso struck an emphatic third goal to give Sporting a big win over a key rival. With only nine matches left to play in the league season, Porto's deficit almost certainly leaves Benfica and Braga to battle for the title.—Internet

Montpellier are on the same number of points, after beating Rennes 3-1 on Saturday, as Bordeaux but trail on goal difference and have played two more matches as the leaders game with relegation-threatened Le Mans was called off due to severe weather conditions.

Mahan edges Fowler to win Phoenix Open

Hunter Mahan

SCOTTSDALE, 1 March—Hunter Mahan has been one of the most successful golfers not to win a tournament the last two years. That's not the case anymore. Mahan came from four strokes back to win the Phoenix Open by a shot over Rickie Fowler on Sunday in a 1-2 finish for former Oklahoma State players. "It's always a little better to lose to a Cowboy," Fowler said.

The 27-year-old Mahan had an eagle and a pair of birdies in a late four-hole span to finish at 16-under 268. Mahan, whose first victory came at the 2007 Travelers Championship, closed with consecutive bogey-free 6-under 65s. He's the eighth US-born player still in his 20s to win more than one tournament.

Owen out for a few weeks

LONDON, 1 March—Michael Owen is expected to be out for a few weeks after the Manchester United striker suffered a hamstring injury against Aston Villa. Owen was starting his first game in over a month after he was given the nod ahead of Wayne Rooney for Sunday's Carling Cup final at Wembley.

The 30-year-old rewarded his manager's faith by drawing United level on 13 minutes with a crisp finish after Richard Dunne's tackle on Dimitar Berbatov saw the ball roll into his path. However, Owen pulled up with a hamstring injury just before half-time and he was replaced by Rooney, who headed home the second-half winner. Ferguson is expecting the former Liverpool ace to require a spell on the sidelines and acknowledged picking Owen from the start against Villa was always going to be a risk.

Hleb definitely leaving Stuttgart

STUTTGART, 1 March—On-loan midfielder Alex Hleb will definitely leave VfB Stuttgart when his contract expires at the end of the season. "Obviously my contract only states that I can play for 60 minutes of the match," he said sarcastically after being replaced in the second half of Saturday's 2-1 win over Eintracht Frankfurt.
