Taikkyi, Hmawby Townships on fast track to infrastructural development

YANGON, 12 March — In pursuance of rural development tasks, the government is striving for ensuring better transport, food sufficiency and improvement of living standard of rural people.

Yesterday morning, Lt-Gen Myint Swe of the Ministry of Defence together with Chairman of Yangon Division Peace and Development Council Commander of Yangon Command Maj-Gen Win Myint looked into progress of construction of Okpon-Phokhachoe inter-village gravel road in Taikkyi Township. After inspecting concrete bridge across left canal of Tabuhla dam, he called for extended cultivation of summer paddy.

Next, Lt-Gen Myint Swe oversaw Uto-Thanutchaung inter-village gravel road at Uto village in the township. After hearing reports on progress in construction of Taikkyi-Gyobu Lake road, he stressed the need for completion of task prior to rainy season. On his arrival at Myaungdaga village in Hmawby Township, Lt-Gen Myint Swe inspected removal of different strains at a quality paddy strain farmland and supplying irrigation water to summer paddy farmlands, and met local farmers.

At Myaungdaga Industrial Zone, Lt-Gen Myint Swe visited Yangon Tharaphu Foundry Shop and Soe Moe Khine Steel Plant. (See page 8)

DNA barcodes show migratory patterns very dynamic and caterpillar diets

Asota caricae moth. This moth has a two-inch wingspan and a 2,500 mile distribution.

SCIENCE DAILY, 12 March — University of Minnesota researcher George Weiblen and colleagues have found a faster way to study the spread and diet of insect pests.

Using a technique called DNA barcoding, which involves the identification of species from a short DNA sequence, Weiblen and an international team of researchers studied populations of numerous moth and butterfly species across Papua New Guinea. DNA barcodes showed that migratory patterns and caterpillar diets are very dynamic. In one case, a tiny moth that is distributed from Taiwan to Australia, has recently crossed thousands of miles of Pacific Ocean.

Improve social, economic conditions

With stability and peace, every region can enjoy development in the economic and social sectors. If so, the socio-economic status of the people will get higher and higher.

So, stability and peace are at the top of the government's list of priorities. The government has been implementing varieties of projects to improve the living conditions for the entire people. It is also in constant pursuit of national education promotion plans for development of human resources. On the top of that, it is constructing infrastructural buildings in various sectors such as transport, education and health care.

Now, the government is working hard to materialize the democratization process in compliance with the desire of the entire people.

Carrying out the task to build a new nation must be based on the past experiences, objective conditions and potential results. Therefore, such an onerous task is the concern of the whole nation. In other words, the entire people have to do their bit in the task with correct concept and conviction and a strong sense of patriotic spirit for progress of the Union.

Today, stability and peace have been restored across the nation. Even some regions in Shan State (North), which once lagged behind other regions in development, have been on the threshold of development in all sectors, and local people have been enjoying economic prosperity.

The process of building a new nation is now in progress in line with the national policy—non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national solidarity and perpetuation of sovereignty. A harmonious human society has been established with Union Spirit. The entire people are, therefore, to work hard, while maintaining the stability, peace and development momentum region-wise to be able to improve their socio-economic life.

Chile lifts tsunami alert after 7.2-magnitude earthquake

SANTIAGO, 12 March — The Chilean government lifted the tsunami alert in the centre-south coast of the country after ruling out the presence of high waves which could be produced by the 7.2-magnitude on Thursday, Deputy Interior Minister Rodrigo Ubilla said.

"The alert has been lifted based on a recommendation of the Army," Ubilla said, who took charge on Thursday together with Chile's new President Sebastian Pinera.

The alert was issued after a strong earthquake measuring 7.2 on the Richter scale shook the country, which had its epicentre in Rancagua city, some 150 km south to the capital Santiago. This is the biggest aftershock since the 8.8-magnitude quake on 27 Feb.

The earthquake on 27 Feb killed about 500 people and left tens of thousands of people homeless. Most of the deaths were due to an ensuing tsunami on the coasts of Maule and Bio Bio regions, because the tsunami alert was not issued on time.

Gas line explosion reported in Oklahoma

HOUSTON, 12 March — A high pressure gas line exploded on Thursday afternoon south of state Highway 66 just west of Chandler, in the US state of Oklahoma.

There were large flames and smoke coming from the scene, about 2 miles west and half a mile south of Chandler, some 40 miles northeast of Oklahoma City, according to news reaching here.

Images presented by TV news helicopters in the Oklahoma City area showed towering flames shooting into the sky in a rural area.

The explosion happened around 3:30 pm local time, local TV reported, adding that there are no homes or businesses within a mile of the explosion.

So far no injuries have been reported.

By 4:15 pm, local media reported that the gas line was turned off, and the fireball went away.

Joey Wakefield, manager of the Lincoln County Emergency covering the city of Chandler and surrounding area, said it is unclear exactly what caused the line explosion.

Iran launches production line of new surface-to-air missile

TEHRAN, 12 March — Iran's Defence Minister Ahmad Vahidi said on Thursday that Iran has started the production of new medium-range surface-to-air missile, local satellite Press TV reported.

The smart missile has a range of more than 40 km and travels at supersonic speed before hitting the targeted enemy aircraft, Vahidi said in Iran's southern port city of Bandar Abbas.

He said the technologically advanced missile can be used in electronic warfare and the missile breaks into small pieces and acts as shrapnel upon impact, according to the report.

The Iranian Navy successfully test-fired a new missile from its first indigenously-built Jamaran destroyer in the waters of the Persian Gulf, Press TV reported on Tuesday. In a footage shown on Press TV, the surface-to-surface Nour missile successfully hit its target at a distance of 100 km in the test-fire on Tuesday.—Xinhua

Unemployment tops 20% in eight California counties

LOS ANGELES, 12 March—Unemployment topped 20 percent in eight counties in the US state of California, leading to more than one in five people losing jobs, according to statistics published on Thursday.

Moreover, revised numbers for last year show that fewer people were employed than was previously believed, The Los Angeles Times said.

The state was one of five, along with Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina, that reached their highest unemployment rates since the government began keeping track in 1976, according to the Bureau of Labour Statistics.

Most counties were still struggling under the burden of joblessness, especially the eight counties where rates were higher than 20 percent.

Merced County, for instance, had an unemployment rate of 21.7 percent in January, and Imperial County's rate was 27.3 percent.

The state's jobless rate of 12.5 percent in January was its worst on record and the fifth highest in the nation. For many California areas, unemployment rates moved persistently higher in January, indicating that the national economic recovery hasn't yet translated into jobs for the Golden State, the paper said.

The state's revised data for last year showing elevated unemployment indicate that a recovery could take longer than previously predicted, said the paper.

Brazilian government optimistic despite GDP fall

RIO DE JANEIRO, 12 March—Brazil's Finance Minister Guido Mantega said on Thursday that the 0.2-percent contraction in the country's GDP in 2009 was in fact a good result given the effects of the international financial crisis.

Compared to several other countries that registered much sharper falls last year, Brazil had an acceptable performance, said the minister.

He believed that his country has bottomed out and is growing with a good pace in the beginning of 2010. Brazil's GDP may grow up to 5.7 percent this year, he added. Mantega said Brazil's President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva is satisfied with the 2009 figures, announced earlier in the day, and is now more interested in the country's economic performance in 2010.

The Brazilian industry was severely affected by the global crisis in late 2008 and early 2009, but managed to recover and registered an expansion of 4 percent in the fourth quarter of 2009.

Japan's economy not yet on self-sustaining recovery path

TOKYO, 12 March—Japan's Finance Minister Naoto Kan said on Friday the economy has shown some improvement but it is not yet showing a self-sustaining recovery.

"I still can't say the economy is on a self-sustaining recovery path," Kan, also Deputy Prime minister, told a regular news conference after a cabinet meeting.

"But the overall trend shows that it has moved one step forward," he said.

The government said on Thursday that Japan's economy grew an annualized 3.8 percent in real terms in the October-December quarter, slower than the initially reported 4.6 percent growth, as private-sector capital investment turned out to have improved less than previously expected.

"The government and the Bank of Japan (BOJ) are sharing a common goal and have been taking various steps to turn price moves positive this year if possible," said Kan, who became Finance Minister in January, in Parliament recently.

Kan has been advocating for the government and the central bank to aim for a positive annual inflation rate of about 1 percent to pull the nation out of deflation—in November the government said Japan was in deflation, citing falling consumer prices.—Xinhua

Vietnam, US to boost cultural exchanges

HANOI, 12 March—Vietnam and the United States will organize a six-week cultural exchange programme beginning from Thursday, according to a Press conference held here on Thursday.

The activity will be held in Vietnam's capital city of Hanoi and southern Ho Chi Minh City, and Pasadena and Los Angeles cities in the American state of California.

Under the programme, a US musician delegation will come to Vietnam and perform from 11 to 21 March and a Vietnamese musician delegation will make their performance in the United States from 14 April to 4 May.

The activity is the biggest musical exchange event ever since the establishment of Vietnam-US diplomatic relations. It is also part of a series of activities to celebrate the 1,000th anniversary of Vietnamese capital city of Hanoi. The musical exchange is expected to give chances for Vietnamese audiences to enjoy current Vietnamese and international music, and bring opportunities for international friends to understand more about Vietnamese music and culture.

India, Russia expected to settle aircraft issue with Putin's visit

NEW DELHI, 12 March—Six years ago, New Delhi signed a deal worth almost one billion US dollars with Moscow to pull out an abandoned aircraft carrier from the Russian junkyard and arm it with some of the most modern MiGs: the Mig29Ks.

Russia delivered the first four of the 16 combat jets recently but there is no sign yet of the carrier.

With Russian Prime

Minister Vladimir Putin arriving here for a one-day visit on Friday, the two countries are expected to definitely settle the aircraft issue with a possible signing of agreement, said Indian official sources. India recently has agreed to shell out 2.34 billion US dollars for the aircraft.

According to highly placed sources in the Indian Defence Ministry, a price row between India and Russia had delayed the delivery of the carrier, which was originally named after the legendary Soviet Admiral Sergei Gorshkov and now rechristened by India as INS Vikramaditya, an ancient Hindu king.

Russia has told India that it cannot build the ship at the cost offered in 2004 and added a new price tag of 2.9 billion US dollars.

European heritage label seeks to bind EU states

BEIJING, 12 March — In an effort to create a sense of shared history, the European Union has launched an initiative to promote important sites of culture and heritage across its 27 member states and the continent.

The European Heritage label — modeled on the UN World Heritage programme — brings together dozens of locations that have had a part to play in forging the culture and history of modern Europe.

The label has already been awarded to 64 places, from Poland's Gdansk shipyards, a hotbed of the Solidarity movement that helped bring an end to communism, to the Acropolis in Athens, a relic of ancient Greece and a symbol of democracy.

The European Commission formally signed off on the idea this week, and it will now be expanded across the union, with each member state allowed to nominate two sites for the label each year, although only one, at most, will be chosen. In its sweep, the initiative seeks to contribute to the political and economic integration of Europe by binding its 4,000-year-old history and culture more tightly together, and building on the European City of Culture programme that has been running since the 1980s. —Internet

World's oldest malt whisky costing £10,000 a bottle goes on sale

The world's oldest malt whisky — costing up to £10,000 a bottle — went on sale today.

The Mortlach 70-year-old Speyside was sampled by a select group of tasters at a ceremony in Edinburgh Castle.

Bottles of the rare piece of Scotland's 'liquid history' have now hit the market.

Only 54 full-size bottles, costing £10,000 each, and 162 smaller bottles at £2,500 have been made available.

The whisky has been released under Gordon and MacPhail's Generations brand.

It was filled into its cask on October 15 1938 on the order of John Urquhart, the grandfather of the firm's joint managing directors, David and Michael Urquhart.

Exactly 70 years later, the decision was made to empty the cask and bottle its contents.

A bottle of Mortlach was piped into Edinburgh Castle today and tasted by guests in the Queen Anne Room.

The rare whisky was matured in a former sherry cask made from Spanish oak. It has been bottled in a teardrop-shaped hand-blown crystal decanter with a silver stopper.

Whisky writer Charles MacLean described the dram as 'delicate, fresh, vital and fruity', with hints of waxiness and smokiness.

TV host driving 210 miles in coffee car

A British TV host is driving 210 miles from London to Manchester, England, in a coffee-powered car as part of a major science fair.

Jem Stansfield, one of the hosts of science-themed TV show "Bang Goes the Theory," is due on Thursday in Manchester for the 11-13 March Big Bang Science Fair at Manchester Central, the BBC reported on Thursday.

Stansfield said before his journey that he was planning to stop at several schools on the road from London to his destination. "It's important for kids to understand that power is not something that is simply there at the flick of a switch," he said. "With the energy challenge facing the world, the more we encourage children to think about alternative fuels, where energy is stored and how it can be released, the better!"

The host said his journey will use enough coffee for 10,000 espressos, and he will need to stop for filter cleanings after every hour of driving.

US troops to take over from British forces in Musa Qala

KABUL, 12 March — A town which played an iconic and controversial part in the British mission in Afghanistan is to be handed over to the Americans in a move signalling a major change in Western strategy.

Musa Qala, where 23 British soldiers died, will be the first of a number of areas which will be transferred from UK to US control, reflecting the new military balance in Helmand where American troops now outnumber the British force.

A number of other areas currently under UK command will also go to the Americans as part of a "rebalancing" process.

Sangin is expected to stay in British hands, but with the addition of an US contingent.

The 500-strong British force in Musa Qala, along with the troops withdrawn from other places under the plan, will move to the population centres of central Helmand.

In effect this will mean that they will be concentrating on providing security for reconstruction projects while the US forces take on more offensive operations against the Taliban.

What took place at Musa Qala had come under repeated scrutiny and led to bitter recriminations involving the British, the Americans and the Afghan government.

British Airways employee faces terrorism charges

LONDON, 12 March — A British Airways employee accused of funding terrorism and planning suicide bombings — including his own — appeared in court on Thursday. Prosecutor Colin Gibb called the suspect, Rajib Karim, "a very dangerous individual, facing very serious offenses and likely to face a serious term of imprisonment."

Authorities said Karim — who was born in Bangladesh and is now a British citizen — collected money in Britain and sent it to Yemen and Bangladesh to fund terrorist activities. British authorities believe he had significant success in financing terrorist operations, security sources with knowledge of the case told CNN.

He volunteered to recruit suicide bombers and to be one himself, prosecutors said in court. He said he would go to Yemen or Pakistan for training, they charged.

Kidnappers release two European aid workers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, 12 March — Kidnappers have freed two Swiss women snatched off the streets of Haiti's capital and held for five days, officials said on Thursday. It is the first reported kidnapping since Haiti suffered a magnitude-7 earthquake with catastrophic damage on 12 Jan. More than 5,000 prisoners fled jails that collapsed or were damaged in the temblor. Only about 200 have been captured.

Doctors Without Borders confirmed the kidnapping. Agency spokesman Michel Peremans said the victims were released on Wednesday night and are "in good health." He would not say if a ransom was paid.

New Jersey man suspect in Yemen rampage

SANAA, 12 March — Federal authorities are investigating a New Jersey man suspected of being an al-Qaeda member and going on a deadly rampage at a hospital in Yemen. The FBI is investigating Sharif Mobley, a 26-year-old from Buena, New Jersey, said Rich Wolf, a spokesman at the agency's Baltimore, Maryland, office. He wouldn't comment further.

Mobley had worked at nuclear plants operated by PSEG Nuclear for different contractors from 2002 to 2008, doing routing labour such as carrying supplies and assisting with maintenance activities, company spokesman Joe Delmar said. Mobley, who also worked at other nuclear plants in the region, satisfied federal security background checks required to work in the US nuclear industry as recently as 2008, he said. —Internet

Briton tells of torture during Iraq kidnap ordeal

LONDON, 12 March — A Briton held hostage in Iraq for more than two-and-a-half years has revealed harrowing details of the torture meted out to him by his captors.

In media interviews two months after his release, Peter Moore told how he was subject to mock executions and hung from a door by his arms as a punishment.

The computer expert was released unharmed in December after 31 months in captivity during which all four of his bodyguards — abducted with him — are thought to have been killed.

Moore, 36, told The Times on Friday how guards put a gun to his head and pulled the trigger, at the same time firing a live round from another weapon.

"I remember thinking: I'm dead. It's not that bad. It's not that painful".

EU assesses antitrust concessions by transatlantic airline alliance

BRUSSELS, 12 March — The European Commission on Wednesday invited comments from interested parties on concessions proposed by British Airways, American Airlines and Spanish carrier Iberia to address antitrust concerns.

The commission, the antitrust watchdog of the European Union (EU), said it may adopt a decision to make the concessions legally binding if the market test confirms that the proposed commitments remedy the competition concerns.

In September 2009, the commission formally charged the three airlines, citing concerns that their extensive cooperation, which involved revenue-sharing and joint management of schedules, pricing and capacity, may be in breach of EU antitrust rules.

British Airways, American Airlines and Iberia then jointly offered a set of commitments to avoid antitrust fines, which were primarily aimed at enabling competing airlines to start operating on the affected routes by lowering barriers to entry. Concretely, they offered to make available landing and take-off slots at London Heathrow or London Gatwick airports on routes to Boston, New York, Dallas and Miami. In addition, the three airlines undertook to provide access to their frequent flyer programmes on the relevant routes, allowing passengers of the qualified new entrants to accrue and redeem miles on the parties' frequent flyer programmes.—Xinhua

Nile cruises never boring

BEIJING, 12 March—The only way to travel between Luxor and Aswan is by ship, as overland travel is banned because of terror threats. There are several companies offering Nile cruises, ranging from modest to extravagant.

Dine on deck and watch the sun go down on the horizon, colouring the waters with its many hues, enjoy the evening entertainment of belly dancers in the ship's interior, explore the onboard shop or make small talk with others onboard — a Nile cruise is never boring. But my abiding memory is not of any of these.

CIA used LSD to make French lose the loaf

PARIS, 12 March—In 1951, a quiet, picturesque village in southern France was suddenly and mysteriously struck down with mass insanity and hallucinations. At least five people died, dozens were committed to asylums and hundreds afflicted.

For decades it was assumed that the local bread had been unwittingly poisoned with a psychedelic mould. Now an even more extraordinary explanation has emerged, with evidence suggesting the CIA peppered local food with the hallucinogenic drug LSD as part of a mind-control experiment at the height of the Cold War.

The mystery of Le Pain Maudit (The Cursed Bread) still haunts Pont-Saint-Espirit, in the Gard, south-east France. On 16 August, 1951, the inhabitants suddenly suffered frightful hallucinations of terrifying beasts and fire.

One man tried to drown himself, screaming that his belly was being eaten by snakes. An 11-year-old tried to strangle his grandmother. Another man shouted "I am a plane" before jumping out of a second-floor window, breaking his legs. He then got up and carried on for 50 yards.—Internet

Two missing after boat with 92 passengers sank in the Amazon

BRASILIA, 12 March — Two people were declared missing after a boat with 92 passengers aboard sank early on Wednesday in a river located in the Brazilian Amazon, official sources said. According to the spokesmen for the Amazon state's Fire Department, the other passengers were rescued by a boat nearby.

The sinking of the ship A Nunes was recorded at 1 am local time (0400 GMT) on Wednesday in the Solimoes River, which joins the Negro River to form the Amazon, in a place close to Anori, located about 190 km from Manaus, the capital of Amazon State and largest city in the region.

According to firefighters, A Nunes, a passenger ship that had departed from Manaus and was heading to the city of Tefe, began to sink after colliding with a tree trunk floating in the river, opening a hole in the hull.

The two missing persons were apparently crew members who jumped into the river to repair the ship and were washed away. Brazil's Navy said that a patrol ship and a boat were sent to the accident site to search for the missing persons with the help of a team of divers.—Xinhua

Normal birth or C-section?

BEIJING, 12 March — A panel of medical experts in US are working on reversing the trend that it becomes more and more difficult for pregnant women who had caesarean section to try to give vaginal birth, according to media reports on Friday.

Fifteen years ago, nearly three in 10 women who had a first C-section were able to deliver their next baby vaginally, a trend called VBAC for "vaginal birth after caesarean." Now that rate has dropped to one in 10 in part because a third of hospitals and half of physicians ban women from attempting VBAC, the panel convened by the American National Institutes of Health said.

"We found the use of VBAC is certainly a safe alternative for the majority of women who've had one prior caesarean," provided that the incision is horizontal and low on the uterus, said Dr F Gary Cunningham, the conference chairman and a professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Centre in Dallas.

There is the rule that "once a Caesarean, always a Caesarean." Doctors almost always recommend a repeat C-section, worrying the scar on the uterus would rupture during labour, which can be life-threatening for both the woman and the child.

In 1980 an expert panel declared vaginal birth safe for many women who had had Caesareans, citing evidence that their risk of a uterine rupture was less than 1 percent.—Xinhua

Australia goes from 'best job' to 'best taxi ride'

PERTH, 12 March — Australian tourism authorities are seeking five foreign couples to take part in what is touted as the world's longest, and most extraordinary, taxi ride.

Building on last year's highly successful "Best Job in the World" campaign, officials are hoping to promote remote and rugged Western Australia by launching the "Extraordinary Taxi Ride".

In a nine-week journey over some 11,000 kilometres (7,000 miles) of road, five couples — one from New Zealand, Malaysia, Singapore, Germany and Britain — will travel the state in the back of a taxi.

The couples, along with six Australian pairs, will travel one section each of the 11-leg journey, which starts in Perth on April 9 and traverses Outback and the beach-lined west coast before winding north to ex-pearling centre Broome.—Internet

Great White shark gets a little too close for comfort

BEIJING, 12 March — It's the toothy grin that nightmares are made of.

But despite staring into the jaws of death, this diver still had the presence of mind to take a picture.

The shots were taken off Guadeloupe Island, Mexico by Mr Carpenter, who spent two days diving with the female Great White.

Six injured in Indian stampede triggered by chimney collapse

MUMBAI, 12 March — Six people were injured in a stampede caused by the collapse of an under-construction chimney of a power station project in central India on Thursday afternoon, said the police on Friday.

No one was trapped in the chimney ruins, and the injured in the stampede were rushed to the nearby hospitals, said the police. The cause of the chimney's collapse is being probed.—Xinhua

sergeant killer

HUNTSVILLE, 12 March—Texas on Thursday executed Joshua Maxwell for the robbery and murder of Bexar County, Texas, Sheriff's Sgt Rudolfo Lopes. Maxwell and his girlfriend at the time, Tessie McFarland, killed Lopes and an Indiana man, Robby Bott, during a 2000 crime spree that began in Indiana and ended following a shootout with police in San Francisco, the San Antonio News-Express said.

McFarland, 30, is serving a life sentence. Before he was put to death in Huntsville, Texas, on Thursday, Maxwell apologized to his victims and their families. "I hurt a lot of people with the decisions I made," he said. "I can't be more sorry than I am right now. "This person who did that 10 years ago isn't the same person you see today," he said.

Lopes was 45 when he was killed in San Antonio in October 2000. A 15-year veteran in law enforcement, his body was found dumped behind a strip mall, authorities said. He had been shot in the head, bound and blindfolded. Maxwell was the fourth person executed this year at Huntsville, the newspaper said.—Internet

pics of women

SANTA ANA, 12 March—California prosecutors asked the public for help in identifying women pictured in photographs found in the home and storage locker of a convicted serial killer. Orange County prosecutors say they believe Rodney Alcalá took the photos before he raped and murdered 12-year-old Robin Samsøe in 1979. A jury convicted Alcalá on 25 Feb of killing Samsøe; Jill Barcomb, 18; Georgia Wixted, 27; Charlotte Lamb, 32; and Jill Parenteau, 21.

It was Alcalá's third conviction in the death of Samsøe, and he had been sentenced to death in both previous convictions but both convictions were overturned. Some photos show women or young girls in the nude and engaging in sex acts, the Orange County Register reports. Others show women or young girls who appear unconscious. Still others show women staring into the lens of a camera held by Alcalá in remote settings similar where Robin Samsøe's body was found in 1979, the newspaper says.

A few are of young men in sexually suggestive poses. "We know that he used his camera many times in the past to gain the trust of several of his victims," prosecutor Matt Murphy told the newspaper. "And then we found dozens of photos of unidentified young women who posed for him." "We'd like to locate the women in these pictures," Murphy said.—Internet

Research discovers molecule that can switch off cancer

EDINBURGH, 12 March — Scientists have found a "switch" that can turn off cancer without the side effects of chemotherapy. Researchers have found a molecule that actually triggers cell death, and they are confident it can be developed into a treatment for cancer and other illnesses.

They found that the molecule called caspase, which was already well known for killing cells, could be used to target specific cancerous ones. If the finding can be turned into a treatment it would be a dramatic improvement on chemotherapy which kills healthy cells and well as the cancerous cells to treat the disease.

The study, from the University of Colorado, was published in the 12 March issue of Science. Professor Ding Xue, who led the five-year study, said: "Our findings initially seemed too good to be true. "We wound up looking at the results from a number of angles, including genetics, cell biology and biochemistry. "Eventually we reached the only logical conclusions we could make." He added: "This is a completely novel finding, and all of the players in this story are well-known, well studied aspects of a very important process in our lives. The experiments were undertaken on a common, eyelash-sized nematode known as Caenorhabditis elegans, a popular laboratory organism for genetic and biomedical experiments.

Pollution affects women's marathon times

BLACKSBURG, 12 March — A US researcher said women's marathon running times are affected by poor air quality.

Civil and environmental engineer Lynsey Marr of Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg said higher levels of pollution particles in the air were associated with slower running times for women.

However, men were not significantly affected.

Marr suggests the gender difference may be due to the smaller size of women's tracheas, which makes it easier for particles to deposit there and possibly cause irritation.

Marr and Matthew Ely of the US Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine evaluated marathon race results, weather data and air pollutant concentrations in seven marathons held in major US cities, including New York and Los Angeles, over a period of eight to 28 years.

"Although pollution levels in these marathons rarely exceeded national standards for air quality, performance was still affected," Marr said in a statement.

Gene causes neuropathy and brain disease

ROCKVILLE, 12 March — US and Australian scientists say they've determined a gene that causes a fatal childhood brain disorder can also cause peripheral neuropathy in adults.

The researchers say their findings are the first to show different mutations in the same gene can produce seemingly unrelated disorders.

Charcot-Marie-Tooth disease involves a broad range of inherited peripheral neuropathies that cause loss of muscle tissue in the hands, feet and lower legs of affected patients, usually starting in adulthood. Various genetic causes have been identified for the severe childhood brain disorder called Menkes disease that is fatal if not treated.

In the current study, the researchers said they determined people with a CMT-like neuropathy have a mutation in the same gene that causes Menkes disease. The researchers said the gene, called ATP7A, codes for a protein needed to move the trace metal copper between different compartments within the body's cells, or out of cells altogether.

"The findings provide insight into how peripheral nerves function and may ultimately lead to new treatments for some peripheral neuropathies," said Dr Alan Guttmacher, acting director of the Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, which collaborated in the study.

Shellfish suffering in polluted marine environment

BEIJING, 12 March — Shellfish from water off the country's shores has become more toxic as more pollutants including heavy metals and oil damaged the marine environment, the State Oceanic Administration (SOA) reported on Thursday.

About 147,000 sq km of ocean failed to meet the standard for clear water last year, an area 7.3 percent greater than the previous year's, the SOA's annual report on the oceanic environment showed.

Most shellfish in offshore areas contained excessive harmful chemicals like lead, cadmium and DDT, a common pesticide in China, the report said.

Lead detected in shellfish was 50 percent higher than standard levels, while cadmium and DDT levels were about 40 percent higher, test results showed.

Lead is a poisonous metal that can damage the nervous system and cause blood and brain disorders if it is consumed. The World Health Organization classifies DDT as "moderately hazardous".

The lead in shellfish must be less than 1 mg for every kg for it to be safe, according to national seafood standards. DDT levels must be less than 1 mg for every 1 kg to meet safety standards.—Xinhua

More ethanol usage may be bad for Earth

WEST LAFAYETTE, 12 March — A Purdue University study suggests the increased use of corn ethanol might boost the Earth's greenhouse gas emissions.

Professor Thomas Hertel and his five co-authors said their new economic analysis of the effects of increasing use of corn-derived ethanol on greenhouse gas emissions confirms the corn-based biofuel is unlikely to reduce global production of carbon dioxide.

The study focused on how mandated increases in production of the biofuel in the United States will trigger land-use changes domestically and elsewhere. In response to increased demand for corn, the scientists said farmers convert additional land to crops. And that conversion can boost carbon dioxide emissions, the scientists said.

The investigators said their main conclusion is stark: The indirect, market-mediated effects on greenhouse gas emissions "are enough to cancel out the benefits the corn ethanol has on global warming."

The study appears in the journal BioScience.

Garlic may be strong cancer fighter

COLUMBUS, 12 March — A new test hints garlic may be a strong cancer fighter, Ohio State University researchers say. Senior author Earl Harrison and colleagues say gas chromatography-mass spectrometry separates components of a mixture to detect specific substances to design a urine test to measure the extent of a potential carcinogenic process known as nitrosation.

The small pilot study, reported in Analytical Biochemistry, found the results of the urine test suggested the more garlic people consumed, the lower the levels of the potential carcinogenic process were. "Our results showed that those were inversely related to one another — meaning that the more we had the marker for garlic consumption, the less there was of the marker for the risk of cancer," Harrison says in a statement.

The nitrosation process is mostly initiated by consuming substances from certain processed meats, high-heat food preparation practices, or water contaminated by industrial or agricultural runoff called nitrates — about 20 percent of which convert to nitrites.—Internet

UNESCO highlights culture protection in Haiti reconstruction

PARIS, 12 March — The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) on Thursday highlighted the importance of salvage of culture heritages in Haiti's reconstruction, saying culture should be an integral part in humanitarian aid.

"Culture must go hand in hand with humanitarian aid. It must be present in Haiti's reconstruction strategies because culture and development are closely linked," UNESCO Director-general Irina Bokova said in a Press release summarizing her two-day official visit to the Caribbean nation hit by a devastating earthquake on 12 Jan.

She visited several national heritages and met with the Haitian Culture Minister and local officials before leaving on Wednesday.

"We are aware that emergency humanitarian aid is not the only appropriate response to the country's needs and that your know-how and your traditions must be taken into account in the reconstruction effort," said Bokova while reiterating UNESCO's commitment to safeguarding Haiti heritage.

Chelsea's Didier Drogba wins African football award

Drogba is the skipper of Ivory Coast and a key player for them.

LONDON, 12 March — Ivory Coast and Chelsea striker Didier Drogba has been named African Footballer of the Year. Drogba scored five goals as Ivory Coast qualified for the 2010 World Cup and scored for Chelsea in the FA Cup final.

Chelsea team-mate and Michael Essien and Cameroon forward Samuel Eto'o were also shortlisted for the award. Drogba, who turned 32 on Thursday, had previously won the award in 2006, while Algeria were named team of the year at the ceremony in Accra, Ghana.

Algeria qualified for the World Cup finals in South Africa after defeating Egypt in a play-off game.

Drogba has scored 25 goals so far this season for Chelsea, who are in contention for the Premier League title and remain in the Champions League and FA Cup.

And the Ivorian claimed as he celebrated his 32nd birthday that his appetite for the game is as strong as ever. —Internet

Schwartzel takes lead at Doral

DORAL, 12 March — Five birdies were enough to put Charl Schwartzel among the leaders at the CA Championship. No mistakes is what put in the lead alone on Thursday on a rough-and-tumble day at Doral. Schwartzel, who got into the elite field with two victories in his native South Africa at the start of the season, managed to get around the famed Blue Monster without a bogey on his way to a 5-under 67 and a one-shot lead in the World Golf Championship event.

Not so fortunate were Ernie Els, Robert Allenby and Vijay Singh, all of them poised to claim a share of the lead or better until they stepped to the tee on the 443-yard closing hole at Doral that was playing into a wind strong enough to knock the caps of some players. Singh was in the lead until putting his tee shot into the water and making double bogey, giving him a 68. —Internet

Manchester United in Telekom Malaysia sponsorship deal

United's shirts will be sponsored by Aon from next season.

LONDON, 12 March — Manchester United have signed a five-year sponsorship deal with communications group Telekom Malaysia. The deal will make Telekom Malaysia the "Integrated Telecommunications Partner" of the Old Trafford club in Malaysia. Announcing the deal, chief executive David Gill said the partnership was proof of the Glazer family's long-term commitment to the club.

"We will be around for the length of this deal and many more in addition to that," Gill said. "This demonstrates the strength of the club. It is a long-term partnership for five years. But Gill admitted that the green and gold scarves used by anti-Glazer fans during the side's 4-0 victory over AC Milan on Wednesday had not gone unnoticed. —Internet

Woods likely to return at Masters

Tiger Woods.

DORAL, 12 March — Tiger Woods intends to remain out of golf at least until the Masters, two people with knowledge of his plans told The Associated Press on Thursday. Woods has been practicing at Isleworth near his Orlando home the last two weeks, and swing coach Hank Haney flew there during the weekend to work with him. That led to speculation on Thursday he was close to playing again.

The two people, who spoke on condition of anonymity because only Woods is supposed to release such information, say he is likely to play first at Augusta National in April. Woods twice has gone nine weeks without competing before showing up at a major. The first time was in 2006, when he didn't play after the Masters while coping with his father's death, then missed the cut in a major for the first time in the US Open at Winged Foot. Two years ago, he was out with knee surgery until winning the US Open at Torrey Pines on a shattered left knee.

Real give vote of confidence to Pellegrini

MADRID, 12 March — Beleaguered Real Madrid coach Manuel Pellegrini has received a vote of confidence for the club's director-general Jorge Valdano despite their disastrous Champions League exit to Lyon on Wednesday night.

The nine-time European champions were held to a 1-1 home draw in the Bernabeu to go out 2-1 on aggregate to the French side, who won the first leg 1-0.

It is the sixth year in a row that Real have failed to get beyond the last 16 knockout stages of a tournament they once made their own and to add to the disappointment, this year's final will be held in their home stadium in Madrid.

INTERNET

NEW YORK, 12 March — Ian Poulter can become the top-ranked European golfer for the first time in his career if he can clinch his second world title of the season in Florida this week.

But it seems the Englishman is still starstruck from the goodwill messages he received after securing his first Accenture Match Play title in Arizona in February.

The world number five told the European Tour: "Greg Norman gave me a call, Nick Faldo dropped me a line and Arnold Palmer wrote me a letter.

I can't express how much it means. It's just so nice — Greg was just off to Asia and took time out of his schedule to call. "And when Arnie sends you a letter to say he was watching and 'congratulations, well played' it can't really get better than that.

Juventus overwhelm Fulham, Lille put Liverpool in danger

LONDON, 12 March — Juventus assumed command of their Europa League last-16 tie against Fulham with a 3-1 first-leg win on Thursday, after beleaguered English giants Liverpool were beaten at Lille.

Juve took an early lead in Turin when centre-back Nicola Legrottaglie headed home from a ninth-minute corner before right-back Jonathan Zebina extended their advantage with a thunderous 25-yard effort.

Dickson Etuhu's deflected shot reduced the arrears but former France international David Trezeguet restored the home side's two-goal cushion by volleying home in first-half injury time after his shot came back off the post. Liverpool, a disappointing sixth in the Premier League after losing 1-0 to Wigan on Monday, were short of fluency on an uneven playing surface and sank to defeat when Eden Hazard's 84th-minute free-kick drifted straight in from wide on the left-hand flank.

Gunnars boss Arsene Wenger had rated the Spain midfielder's chances of facing Hull as 50-50, but his creative talisman looks certain to absent from the trip to the KC Stadium. Wenger also has fitness doubts over Czech midfielder Tomas Rosicky, who has a groin strain, and French defender Bacary Sagna, who has an ankle problem.
