This year's elections represent only beginning of process of fostering democracy

Great vigilance necessary against unrest, against election violence, against circumstances leading to disintegration of the Union

Inappropriate campaigning to be avoided

Parties urged to present policies, programmes to people and let them vote independently for whoever they favour

NAY PYI TAW, 27 March—The following is the full text of the address delivered by Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council Commander-in-Chief of Defence Services Senior General Than Shwe at the 65th Anniversary Armed Forces Day Parade today.

Comrades,

Our Armed Forces waged a decisive struggle against subjection by a foreign power on 27 March 1945 and became one with the people. Making its own decisions, it launched a successful revolution. The brilliant capability and courage of the entire people and the Armed Forces came as a shock to the colonialists. It was thus that our country regained independence and sovereignty. In the history of the independence struggle, the 27th of March is a landmark when the Armed Forces first made a stand relying on its own capability and today is the 65th anniversary of this landmark event.

Comrades,

Our Armed Forces was originally formed with patriotic heroes to fight for independence. The leaders of the Armed Forces turned from politicians into patriotic Tatmadawmen when armed struggle for independence was necessary, and they turned back into politicians engaged in national politics when the time came for political struggle. In this way, our Armed Forces has had a brilliant history of achievement both in politics and in military affairs. We, the patriotic Tatmadawmen, not only

Engage in modern farming by making use of water resources

Hailing the 65th Anniversary Armed Forces Day, Yenwe Diversion Dam was inaugurated in Kyaukdaga Township, Bago Division, on 25 March. It can irrigate more than 100,000 acres of farmlands, enabling the local farmers not only to grow monsoon and summer paddy but also to engage in double and mixed cropping.

According to Bago Division's geographical conditions, Sittoung River and Myitmakha River flow along Bago Yoma on both sides. Although there was a great deal of cultivable land, the regions close to the basin had to experience floods, farmers were unable to make full use of their farmlands.

The State has implemented Sittoung Basin development project with a view to tapping land and water resources in earnest. Yenwe Dam included in the project was opened. The hydropower station of Yenwe multipurpose dam project has been built to generate electricity.

Now again, the diversion dam has been built near Hsisonagon village, about seven miles downstream Yenwe Dam in order to use the water used by the hydropower station. The emergence of Yenwe diversion dam helps prevent Pyuntasa plain between Nyaunglaybin and Sittoung River from being flooded in the rainy season.

Moreover, it irrigates over 100,000 acres of farmlands in Kyaukdaga, Nyaunglaybin and DaikU townships in Bago Division. And the local people will be able to grow summer paddy and green gram as well as double and mixed crops.

The State is spending its funds on building irrigation facilities across the nation. So, farmers on their part are to extend farmlands and use modern cultivation methods. They have to use more quality paddy strains and modern farm equipment. Besides, the farmers are to work hard for the success of their agricultural undertakings by making full use of water resources.

Death toll in twin bombings in Iraq rises to 57

BAGHDAD, 27 March — Iraqi police say the casualty toll in twin bombings near a restaurant north of Baghdad has risen to 57 killed and 73 wounded.

Friday evening's attack took place in a busy area in the town of Khalis, about 50 miles (80 kilometers) north of Baghdad.

A car bomb exploded outside the restaurant at about 6:30 p.m. and was followed within minutes by a roadside bomb just a few steps away.

Police initially said at least 40 people died. But a police spokesman for Diyala province, Capt.

Ghalib al-Karkhi, gave the revised toll on Saturday morning.

The attack took place as Iraq's electoral commission released final results from the March 7 parliamentary elections showing former Prime Minister Ayad Allawi's bloc was the top vote getter.

Gunman attacks aid project in Afghanistan, kills one

KABUL, 27 March — A gunman attacked a group of German and Afghan aid workers inspecting a high school under renovation in eastern Afghanistan on Friday, killing one person and injuring several others, officials said.

One of those wounded in the attack in Khost Province was a German citizen, said a spokesman for the German Foreign Office, speaking on condition of anonymity in line with department policy. The person who was killed was Afghan. Separately, NATO said a serviceman died on Friday in a bombing in southern Afghanistan. The international force did not disclose the nationality of the soldier who died.

In Khost, the attacker opened fire from a vehicle as he approached the site in Khost City and then fled to a nearby house, where he engaged police in a gunbattle that was ongoing on Friday evening, said acting provincial Gov. Taher Khan Sabari. A total of three people were wounded in the initial attack, including the German and two Afghans, said the German spokesman and a local police official, Gulam Mohammad.

defend and protect the nation and the people with our lives but take part and serve in national politics whenever the need arises.

Comrades,

National defence is the duty of every citizen, with the Armed Forces bearing the principal responsibility. As the Armed Forces is organized and trained for military duty, the Tatmadawmen should have greater skill and expertise in military affairs than ordinary people do. For this reason, when it comes to national defence, the Armed Forces should join hands with the government and the people and serve in unity.

Comrades,

Our country fell into servitude because of military weaknesses. Under the divide-and-rule administration of the wily colonialists, in seeking independence, our leaders had to build national unity with great difficulty. With the independence of the country a priority, national unity was built through any means possible even with some conditions.

Comrades,

For perpetuation of a nation, independence and sovereignty are vital.

To ensure full protection of independence and sovereignty, our Armed Forces has to be strong, capable, modern, and patriotic. The conviction that the nation will be strong only when the Armed Forces is strong is deep-rooted among the people since the time of independence struggle. In this spirit, I would like to urge you to make continuous efforts to carry out the Four Unit-Building Tasks in order to ensure the Armed Forces has the three capabilities namely military capability, organizing capability and administrative capability, and carries on its Twelve Honourable Traditions. Preparations are being made to be ready in every aspect for a gentle transition to democracy and market-oriented economic system. mature citizens and a reasonable degree of wealth and prosperity on the part of the nation and the people. So, the Armed Forces has laid down the 12 objectives and the government, the people and the Armed Forces are building sound foundations in unity, while the Seven-step Roadmap has been laid down and the transition to a new order and a new system is being undertaken. And free and fair elections are slated to be held this year.

Comrades,

This year's elections represent only the beginning of the process of fostering democracy. I would like to mention here some of the points on which parties running the elections should show restraint at a time when the democratisation process has yet to reach maturity. Great vigilance is necessary against unrest in the country, against election violence that jeopardizes rule of law, stability and tranquility and against circumstances leading to disintegration of the Union. Improper or inappropriate campaigning such as slandering fellow politicians and parties in order to achieve election victory for one's own party at all costs and engaging in divisive acts that lead to disunity among nationalities and religions has to be avoided. I would like to urge parties to present their policies and programmes to people and let the people vote independently for whoever they favour.

Comrades,

Whatever system is practised in the country, the primary goal is peace and prosperity of the nation, with great momentum toward modernity and development. National development is not a one-off activity that ceases with the attainment of a particular objective, but is a programme that requires successive sustained endeavour. Efforts must be redoubled for the economic prosperity, sustained modernity and development of the nation. For this, there has to be political stability, community peace and tranquility, and the rule of law. People have to be free from worries and enjoy peace of mind in earning their livelihoods. There has to be the capability to defend against threats posed by internal and external destructive elements. To ensure all this, the government, the people and the Armed Forces have to work together.

Comrades,

In conclusion, I would like to urge you to:

- * make efforts to build up and make Our Three Main National Causes stronger than ever;
- * build the Armed Forces into a strong, capable modern patriotic Armed Forces, capable of providing full protection for national independence and sovereignty;
- * ensure that what you do, say or think is in the service of the people to the extent that the people are willing and satisfied regarding any action you may take.

With this, I conclude my speech.—MNA

Myanmar laws also have similar provisions. Article 74 of the 1947 Constitution stated that a person serving prison terms of not less than two years or a person during the period of five years from the date he is released shall not have the right to stand for election as an MP or to continue as an M.P. The 1948 Parliamentary Election Act stated that convicts are disqualified from MP as well as from voting. Article 13 of the First Pyithu Hluttaw and People's Councils at different levels Election Law 1973 stated that a person serving prison term for a certain criminal case shall have no right to stand for election as a Pyithu Hluttaw representative. So, we can draw a conclusion that the Article 11 (d) is reasonable and in accord with the past laws of Myanmar and international norms.

Article 82 of the Pyithu Hluttaw Election Law prescribes the instructions for election staff including all levels of sub-commissions. Article 87 states that the Commission its members and sub-commissions at all levels and their members, the election tribunal and its members and returning officers and staff as long as they are sincerely discharging duties in accord with law under the entrusted rights shall not be liable to legal charges under civil law or criminal code. The article is stipulated for the said members and staff not to have any hesitation in discharging duties. These laws will not protect them if they do misconducts.

Articles 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64 and 65 of Chapter XIII clearly state the punishments for every one including the said members and staff for committing any electoral crime. Here we all should note the expression saying "as long as they are sincerely discharging duties in accord with law under the entrusted rights". It is a proper act to provide legal protection for those members and staff as long as they are sincerely discharging duties in accord with law under the entrusted rights.

Accordingly the new laws have been enacted to revoke the old ones. The election held in accord with the old laws is automatically null and void.

The nation-building task will be in accord with the public approved Constitution in our country. In some cases, laws have been enacted to be in conformity with the Constitution. For example Article 91 (b) of the Pyithu Hluttaw Election Law states that the multi-party democracy general election held in accord with the law revoked by this law shall automatically be null and void as it is no more in accord with the Constitution. According to the present Constitution the legislative body of the Union will have hluttaws of the Regions and States in addition to the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw which is a combination of Pyithu Hluttaw and Amyotha Hluttaw. In accord with the previous Pyithu Hluttaw Election Law, the 1990 election is just for one parliament. Hence the result of the election is not in accord with the present Constitution.

Another factor is that the 1990 election was held 20 years ago. Under-18s during that time have now become people in their 30s and 40s. Even the persons who were not born then have already reached 18. Some persons including elder persons who cast votes then are no more at present. Hence the number of votes and voters has already changed. During the over 20 years, the knowledge, stance and conviction of the public including voters have also changed a lot. The results 20 years ago cannot be in conformity with the present situation which has already seen a lot of global changes in various sectors and aspects. Accordingly the new laws have been enacted to revoke the old ones. The election held in accord with the old laws is automatically null and void.

Hence, it is crystal clear that the election laws and rules have been enacted by the government in accord with the existing laws including the Article 443 of the Constitution. Moreover the said laws and rules meet the international standard.

The international practice is that referendum is held only to ratify the constitution and important constitutional amendments. Other laws are approved in the parliaments under voting system. Myanmar does not have any parliament yet. The Tatmadaw government is administering the nation with ordinance. As a legitimate government it is enacting necessary laws. There were no explanations about the 1990 Election Laws and public wish and suggestions were never collected in enacting those laws.

Our country has promulgated procedures in every sector such as the executive and judicial sectors. Responsible personnel carry out tasks in conformity with those procedures. As to the judicial sector, there have been rulings and procedures on scrutinization of cases and return of proposals and applications. In view of those procedures, law officers have to scrutinize the submitted cases to the Supreme Court to make sure that the cases meet the requirements. Qualified cases are then registered for serial numbers. They also have to make appointments for court appearance. Law officers can return such proposals and applications that carry mistakes and shortcomings. Therefore, law officers have the right to return such disqualified cases.

Here, mistakes and shortcomings comprise wrong courts, and lawsuits filed without power to judge along with missing necessary documents and stamps and incomplete addresses. So, law officers do not accept all the cases filed by clients or lawyers.

(See page 9)

According to the present Constitution the legislative body of the Union will have hluttaws of the Regions and States in addition to the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw which is a combination of Pyithu Hluttaw and Amyotha Hluttaw. In accord with the previous Pyithu Hluttaw Election Law, the 1990 election is just for one parliament. Hence the result of the election is not in accord with the present Constitution.

Not to leave an evil legacy behind (2)

For instance, no courts have power to take action in such cases filed to make some amendments to laws enacted by State legislative body and to issue orders to declare such laws ineffective. Only the legislative body has exclusive power to take action in that regard. In addition, any court does not have power to take action in such cases associated with the constitution. No right to take action at a court is no right to hand down a sentence. Therefore, power is bestowed upon law officers to dismiss the cases filed according to the court procedures.

The people should have knowledge of some court procedures on the constitution. In a case that is filed with charges in connection with the constitution, any courts do not have power to make a decision, according to the constitution. And in a case that is filed with matters associated with the constitution and other legal matters in combination, legal matters are heard only after hearing of the matters associated with the constitution. They are some court procedures.

Today, there is a boom in democratic rights in the nation, unlike anti-government groups have said that the people are in the dark about democracy. Without doubt, there will be a democratic government and a democratic country, following 2010 elections. However, we must have patience and pragmatic approaches in the process. A copied democracy that does not comply with the objective conditions of the nation and the people cannot flourish. Therefore, we have to show great patience and take only one step after another based on reality to become more mature and transparent.

A copied democracy that does not comply with the objective conditions of the nation and the people cannot flourish. Therefore, we have to show great patience and take only one step after another based on reality to become more mature and transparent.

A political party should not be impatient and should not disregard the objective conditions in the democratization if it puts the public interest in the fore. Any political parties should take into consideration their interest and public interest or national interest in combination.

Today's world history reveals that there are many countries, some of which have collapsed whereas some have achieved success in democratization without any adverse effect on national unity. Which way should a political party take: to make history by handing down good legacy to younger generations in the national interest, or to leave evil legacy after everything is destroyed. History is the records of today's activities. A notable point is that one will gain good reputation in the nation's history if one works right today, and one will gain notoriety in the history if one works wrong today. Surely, one will remain abysmally stupid in the history, if one sticks to evil policy.

Overall, today's promulgated election laws and rules are fair according to local and international laws and they meet international norms. In particular, provisions for designation of qualifications and disqualifications for a delegate were promulgated in line with the international norms.

Today, the ultimate goal of the entire people is to build a modern, developed discipline-flourishing democratic nation. Except highly qualified delegates with moral conducts, no one cannot guide the people towards the goal. If members of parliament include those without moral conducts and those serving their terms, that will tarnish the image of the parliament concerned, and the future of the nation and the people will be uncertain. Therefore, political parties should honour the systematically-promulgated laws and enhance their dignity in the long-term interest of the nation and the people.

Multiparty democracy elections will be held successfully in accordance with the promulgated laws and rules this year. So, there will be elected hluttaws formed with elected representatives. It is required of the electorates to elect correct candidates in the national interest. Otherwise, the people and the nation in addition to they themselves will come under evil consequences. So, the people should be convinced that they can do their bit in building a modern, developed democratic nation by choosing responsible candidates.

Mars rock coatings puzzle scientists

PASADENA, 27 March — US space scientists say a strange coating on Mars rocks discovered by the rover Opportunity near a crater has left them puzzled.

NASA said the rover spent six weeks investigating a crater dubbed Concepcion that was flagged in advance as a study target because it appears to be young.

The scientists said rocks ejected from the impact that formed the crater are chunks of the same type of bedrock Opportunity has seen at hundreds of locations since landing in January 2004 — soft, sulfate-rich sandstone holding harder peppercorn-size dark spheres like berries in a muffin. NASA said the spheres, rich in iron, gained the nickname "blueberries."

"It was clear from the images that Opportunity took on the approach to Concepcion that there was strange stuff on lots of the rocks near the crater," said Steve Squyres of Cornell University, principal investigator for Opportunity. "There's dark, grayish material coating faces of the rocks and filling fractures in them. At least part of it is composed of blueberries jammed together as close as you could pack them. We've never seen anything like this before."

While scientists continue to ponder the new images, Opportunity is again moving toward its long-term destination, Endeavour Crater, which is now about a 7-mile drive. "We want to get to Endeavour with a healthy rover," said Squyres. "It takes a compelling target for us to stop and study. And Concepcion was a compelling target."

Acne drug may be a defence against HIV

BALTIMORE, 27 March — US researchers said an antibiotic used to treat acne for more than 30 years may help treat HIV infection.

Scientists at John Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore found minocycline — the antibiotic used for acne — targeted the infected immune cells in which human immunodeficiency virus may lie dormant.

The study, published in The Journal of Infectious Diseases, found minocycline helped immune function by aiding cellular pathways that help keep the virus from reactivating.

The researchers said the drug has the potential of improving the current treatment regimen of HIV-infected patients — a drug cocktail known as Highly Active Antiretroviral Therapy or HAART.

"The big challenge clinicians deal with now in this country when treating HIV patients is keeping the virus locked in a dormant state," Janice Clements said in a statement. "While HAART is really effective in keeping down active replication, minocycline is another arm of defence against the virus." —Internet

Island sinks in rising waters

KOLKATA, 27 March — Scientists in India said a Bay of Bengal island claimed by both India and Bangladesh has been completely submerged by rising waters.

The School of Oceanographic Studies at Kolkata's Jadavpur University said the island, known in India as New Moore Island and in Bangladesh as South Talpatti Island, appears completely underwater on recent satellite images, and scientists said other islands could soon follow, the BBC reported on Wednesday. "What these two countries could not achieve from years of talking, has been resolved by global warming," the school's Professor Sugata Hazra said of the ownership dispute.

He said the island, which never hosted a permanent settlement and previously reached only 6 feet above sea level, could be only the first of many in the region to disappear. Hazra said his research indicates the speed of the rising water has increased during the past decade. —Internet

Flexible silicon medical device created

EVANSTON, 27 March — US researchers say they have developed a thin, flexible and stretchable electronic device to help locate and treat abnormal heart rhythms.

Scientists from Northwestern University, the University of Illinois and the University of Pennsylvania say they are the first to demonstrate a flexible silicon electronic device used for a medical application. The researchers said their device produces high-density maps of a beating heart's electrical activity, providing potential means to localize and treat abnormal heart rhythms. Researchers said the technology holds promise for a new generation of flexible, implantable medical devices, as well as flexible sensors, transmitters and photovoltaic and microfluidic devices.

"The heart is dynamic and not flat, but electronics currently used for monitoring are flat and rigid," said Northwestern Professor Yonggang Huang, a senior author of the paper. "Our electronics have a wavy mesh design so they can wrap around irregular and curved surfaces, like the beating heart. The device is thin, flexible and stretchable and brings electronic circuits right to the tissue." —Internet

The stomach-friendly coffee: Dark-roasted

VIENNA, 27 March — German and Austrian researchers said dark-roasted coffee may contain substances that reduce stomach acid. Veronika Somoza of the University of Vienna in Austria and Thomas Hofmann of the Technische Universität München in Germany said the finding was counter-intuitive, yet good news.

The researchers said their findings may mean future brews may be easier on the stomach yet retain coffee's rich taste and aroma. They noted processes now used to remove stomach irritants also reduce the amount of substances scientists link to benefits such as protection against diabetes and heart disease.

The researchers found espresso, French roast and other dark-roasted coffee contain a substance not found in raw coffee beans — N-methylpyridium — that tells the stomach to reduce the production of acid.

"This discovery is going to help a lot of people who suffer from coffee sensitivity," Somoza and Hofmann said in a statement. "As coffee-lovers, we're very excited about this research." Somoza, Hofmann and colleagues exposed cultures of human stomach cells to a variety of different coffee preparations — including regular, dark-roast, mild, decaffeinated and those processed to be stomach friendly. —Internet

Healthcare costs burden more Americans

WASHINGTON, 27 March— A growing number of Americans spend more than 10 percent of their income on out-of-pocket expenses for healthcare services and insurance, according to a study published on Thursday.

The percentage of Americans with a "high financial burden for healthcare" rose to 19 percent in 2006 from 14 percent in 2001, according to the Washington-based

Centre for Studying Health System Change.

The think tank defines a high out-of-pocket burden for healthcare as spending more than 10 percent of before-tax income on insurance premiums and medical care.

"The basic finding was that out-of-pocket costs for health insurance premiums and services were rising faster than family incomes," said Peter Cunningham, who led the study which was published online by the journal Health Affairs. (<http://www.healthaffairs.org/>)

President Barack Obama signed landmark legislation on Tuesday to revamp the $2.5 trillion US healthcare system. It will extend health insurance to 32 million uninsured Americans, expand the Medicaid government health insurance programme for the poor and impose new taxes on the wealthy.

Three charged over Tonga ferry sinking that killed 74

NUKU'U LOFA, 27 March — Tongan police have charged three people with manslaughter in the death of one of 74 passengers who died last year in a ferry sinking that was one of the tiny South Pacific country's worst disasters.

Police Commander Chris Kelley said Friday that a charge of sending an unseaworthy ship to sea had also been laid against ferry operator Shipping Corp of Polynesia. The manslaughter charges — against corporation managing director John Jonesse, ferry captain Makahokovalu Tuputupu and first mate Viliami Tu'ipulotu — relate to the death of one passenger. Other charges may be laid later concerning the deaths of the other passengers, Kelley said.—Internet

MONTERREY, 27 March— The body of the police chief of a northern Mexico town and the body of his brother were found inside the chief's patrol truck Friday, authorities said. Hours earlier, gunmen killed a deputy police chief and his bodyguard in another part of Mexico's north.

The body of Heriberto

Cerda, the police chief in Agualeguas, was found on the bed of a patrol pickup truck, which was left on a dirt road in the nearby town of General Trevino. His head was on his lap, said a spokesman for Nuevo Leon state prosecutors who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to discuss the case.

The body of the chief's brother, Jesus Cerda, was found inside the truck, the official said. He didn't say how Jesus Cerda was killed.

Nuevo Leon state secretary general Javier Trevino told reporters that Cerda and his brother had been reported missing Thursday.

DPRK displays archaeological gains

Photo released by Korean Central News Agency on 25 March, 2010 shows an archaeology exhibition in Pyongyang, capital of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK).

An exhibition of relics and fossil remains opened on Thursday at Kim Il Sung University's nature museum of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), the official news agency KCNA reported.

As part of archaeological gains collected during recent years of exploration in the River Taedong basin around Pyongyang, the exhibition displays seven pieces of anthropolites, 2,038 pieces of fossil animal bones of 33 kinds and 13 bonfire sites discovered at Chongphadae Cave in Hwangju County, according to the KCNA.

Five fossils of 20,000- to 60,000-year-old jawbones prove that River Taedong basin was the home to Korean ancestors.

The discovery of over 70 hand axes has refuted the consistent archaeological view that only chopper culture existed in the Asian region in the Paleolithic Age.

The displayed fossils of 33 pieces of animal remains and ro-pollens have also proved the suitability for human kinds to hunt and collect food in those areas.

Cat back nine months after 'death'

A British family said they were shocked when their pet cat turned up alive nine months after they had thought it had been killed by a car.

Angelo Petrillo, 39, of Milnrow, England, said he and his family buried a cat they believed to be Alfie the ginger tom after the feline wandered away and the corpse of an extremely similar animal was found on a nearby motorway in June, The Daily Mail reported.

However, Petrillo, whose family moved to a new home about a mile from their old house, said his former neighbours called a few days ago and said there was a cat trying its hardest to get into their old house.

Petrillo said he was still fairly certain Alfie was dead and buried, but his wife, Katy, 35, returned to the old house a couple days later and discovered a feline that was definitely their long-lost pet.

"We took Alfie to the vet and they think he probably climbed into a delivery van, got taken 30 or 40 miles away and it's taken him all that time to get back, only we'd moved," Petrillo said. "It's just a good job our old neighbours knew how to contact us."

He said Alfie is due to be outfitted with a microchip to prevent future incidents.

Photo taken on 23 March, 2010 shows the kitchen of the house made of more than 30,000 bottles by Argentine artist Tito Ingenieri, in Quilmes, Argentina.

Another type of proto-human discovered

European researchers say they have identified a previously unknown species of proto-human that existed at least 1 million years until about 40,000 years ago.

The species left Africa about 1 million years ago and migrated as far as southern Siberia before it disappeared, the researchers said in a study published in the scientific journal Nature.

The conclusion was based on DNA analysis performed on a small bone fragment, excavated in a cave, that was the only physical remains of the species recovered by the researchers, The Washington Post reported.

Because the single fragment is all that has been recovered, researchers are unable to determine what the species looked like, how they lived and how they came to disappear.

Ferguson still feels strain of title battles

MANCHESTER, 27 March—Manchester United manager Sir Alex Ferguson admits he still gets nervous during title run-ins despite having spent almost a quarter of a century at Old Trafford. Ferguson, 68, took over at United in 1986 and is battling Chelsea and Arsenal for a record fourth straight Premier League title, which would take his tally of English championships to 12.

Yet the veteran manager claims he will always feel anxiety before his team's matches no matter how experienced he is. And he feels that even the managers that seem calm on the outside are struggling with inner turmoil.

"You still get keyed up for games and it's part of it. It's that time when players are doing their warm-up that you're on your own in a sense and your staff are away doing their jobs," Ferguson said.

World Cup stadiums get FIFA approval

JOHANNESBURG, 27 March—World Cup organizers said on Friday that South Africa's stadiums have passed FIFA's final inspection, 76 days before the opening match of the world football championship.

"The final tour is now complete and we can say with confidence that we have delivered on our promise of 10 world-class stadiums," World Cup organising committee CEO Danny Jordaan said in a statement.

South Africa built five new stadiums and renovated five existing ones ahead of the June 11-July 11 tournament, spending more than 1.3 billion dollars (one billion euros). The stadium projects were plagued by early worker strikes and budgets that soared beyond initial projections as the rand took a hit on the foreign exchange market.

But Jordaan said the stadiums are now nearly ready. "The only remaining issues are questions such as parking for team buses, finalising security arrangements and posting signs to direct fans," he said.

"What we are looking at now is just the final detail."

Nadal eases through as Djokovic falls in Miami

MIAMI, 27 March—Rafael Nadal made an efficient start on a rain-soaked day at the WTA and ATP Miami Masters as the fourth seed subdued American Taylor Dent 6-4, 6-3 in his opening match.

The routine win in just over an hour was straightforward for Nadal, a two-time Miami finalist looking to stop the rot and win his first title since Rome last May.

The Spaniard moved through despite a painful wisdom tooth which must be removed after his tournament ends.

But there was high drama on court for most of the afternoon on Friday as Belgium's pocket rocket Olivier Rochus pounded out a 6-2, 6-7 (7/9), 6-4 opening upset over Novak Djokovic to knock the second-seeded Serb out.

The victory marked the second win over a top 10 player in Miami for Rochus, who stands just 1.67 metres and ranks 59th in the world.—Internet

Eleven more charged in Turkey match-fixing probe

ISTANBUL, 27 March—A Turkish court Friday charged 11 more people as part of a match-fixing probe, bringing to 15 the total number of suspects jailed pending trial, Anatolia news agency reported.

Among the 11 men were a coach and seven footballers from Turkey's second and third divisions, a manager, a retired player and a person who reportedly acted as a money courier, Anatolia said.

The detailed charges against the suspects will become known when prosecutors draw up their indictment.

Another seven people were released after questioning, Anatolia said.

The authorities have imposed a media blackout on the probe, handled by prosecutors in Istanbul, Turkey's biggest city and football centre.

The operation began Wednesday as police rounded up 46 suspects across Turkey, including players from the country's top league and lower divisions, managers and club administrators.

The most high-profile figure charged so far is former international Fatih Akyel, who played for Istanbul giants Galatasaray in his heyday and is now a defender at third-division Tepecikspor.

His manager was among those charged Friday.

Another former member of Galatasaray and the national team, Arif Erdem, currently a coach at first-division Istanbul Buyuksehir Belediyesi, was questioned and freed Thursday.—Internet
