Let's take part in Maha Thingyan by preserving its traditions

Tagu is the first month of the Myanmar calendar, when the water festival is held.

Myanmar holds the 'bo' tree water pouring festival in Kason, the religious examination festival in Nayon, the ordination and novitiation festival in Waso, Sayantanme festival in Wagaung, the boat festival in Tawthalin, lighting festival in Thadingyut, the Kathina robes offering festival in Tazaungmone, the 'nat' festival in Nadaw, the equestrian festival in Pyatho, the Htamahne festival and Mee-pon-pwe in Tabodwe, and the sand pagoda festival in Tabaung.

As the water festival reflects the Myanmar's culture and traditions, it is the duty of the national people to maintain and preserve the tradition of holding Myanmar Thingyan festival.

Although the style of holding the Thingyan festival is slightly different among the national races due to geographical conditions, its basically same tradition has existed for hundreds of years.

In the Rakhine Thingyan festival, young men and women stand face to face and drench each other with water from the longboats. Offering wax smelly Thingyan rice is the tradition of Mon nationals. The tradition of paying respects to the elderly and providing free meals by seeking funds with the performance of Thaman Kyar dances in Dawei and Myiek regions is among the happy occasions of Myanmar national people in the Thingyan Festival.

Myanmar New Year Thingyan is not just a happy occasion but it reflects Myanmar's traditions, culture and politeness. So, the people of young generation are urged to happily participate in the Maha Thingyan Festival by preserving and maintaining its traditions.

East China province builds first large electric car charging station

JINAN, 11 April — The first large electric car charging station in east China's Shandong Province, capable of charging 45 cars at a time, is being built in Linyi City, as part of a program to promote the development of new-energy vehicles.

The project, costing 23 million yuan (3.37 million U.S. dollars), would be completed by May, said Li Guohua, deputy director of the sales department of Shandong Electric Power Corporation, which is developing the station. Shandong is one of China's biggest auto producing provinces and has been developing electric cars since 2004. The province has more than 30 electric car producers, and is aiming at an annual production capacity of 300,000 vehicles by 2015.

"How we charge the electric cars is the key to the industry's success. Whether the green cars can enter China's mainstream market depends on a nationwide charging network that we are building," said Li. China was the world's largest electric car producer and market, said Li. "Many other cities, including Shanghai, Shenzhen and Wuhan, have built electric car charging stations."

Developing and popularizing the zero-emission cars was one of the best ways to curb China's growing fuel demand and to reduce air pollution, said Yang Yusheng, an academician of the Chinese Academy of Engineering.

Sun-dried salt farms in bloom in Bago Division

NAY PYI TAW, 11 April—Minister for Rail Transportation Maj-Gen Aung Min yesterday visited a salt farm of owner U Min Swe in Mamauk Village, Kawa Township of Bago Division and U Myo Thein Tun's salt farm near Mamauk Village, inspecting production processes of salt.

At salt farming briefing hall near TadaU Village of Kawa Township, the minister attended to the needs after hearing the reports presented by officials and businessmen.

In the past, refined salt used with firewood came into disappearance in Bago Division thanks to forest conservation activities. On account of success in producing 50 acres of sun-dried salt in 2009, it was extended to 2000 acres in 2010 and plans are being made to raise the degree annually.

After the bus had driven along the uphill road, I witnessed Maw Creek Bridge and Kazundaunt Village.

On arrival at the village, I took a photo of the library and went to the house of my friend.

My friend took me by motorbike to Myittha Dam. We went along the embankment for one hour. Next, we saw the defile of Myittha River. The widest area of the river is 200 feet and the defile is 40-50 feet wide.

We observed the area for damming the river and viewed the site for construction of a hydropower station. At the briefing hall, a staff member gave me a pamphlet on Myittha Dam Project. I took photos of the long embankment several times.

Saddle dyke of the dam and the outlet channel were completed. The construction of a bridge across the outlet channel was also finished. I learned that implementation of the project has completed by over 50 per cent. It is expected to complete the project in 2011-2012. The hydropower station of the dam will generate 170 million kilowatt hours yearly and the dam will benefit 12,000 acres of land.

I thought that the sufficient water will boost cultivation and production of crops in the region. The embankment of the dam will be longest in the nation. It has 29,750 feet long including 27,450 feet long saddle dyke. The embankment will be RL 1030 feet high and the dam can store 377,600 acre feet of water. The still water area will be 70,800 acre feet and the water surface will be 5788 acres. The dam will have 14300 feet long and 100 feet wide diversion canal. The spillway is of RC duck bill type and it will be 1040 feet wide. The conduit for generating hydropower will be 19 feet diameters.

It is 205 feet high zone type earth embankment. The dam has 1,310,000 acre feet of inflow water yearly and its watershed area is 700 square miles. The area of river has 70 inches of rainfall annually. The dam is located near Pyntha Village of Gangaw Township, Magway Division, and it will be largest and longer irrigation facility in Yaw region.

In the near future, the dam will irrigate Yaw region and supply electricity to there. Not only Kazundaunt Village but also Yaw region will enjoy fruits of development. I firmly believe that the Myittha Dam will shape the happy lives for the local people.

Security video captured bloody shooting spree in Mexico

Security video shows two gunmen intercepting a car and sequestering the driver.—INTERNET

NEW YORK, 11 April—Chilling video captured by a security camera shows more than a dozen armed men carrying out a shooting spree in broad daylight that left eight people dead last month in Mexico's Chihuahua state.

In the video obtained by CNN on Saturday, the men — believed to be hit men for a drug cartel — are seen opening fire with assault rifles into nearby vehicles and a housing complex.

A 14-year-old girl was among the eight victims of the March 15 killings in the town of Creel, according to Carlos Gonzalez, a spokesman for the state attorney general's office.

"We don't know what group these hit men are part of, but here in Chihuahua there are two warring groups: the Sinaloa Cartel and Juarez Cartel," Gonzalez said. "We're working on trying to figure out which group was responsible."

Gonzalez said there is no evidence to suggest that the victims were involved in drug activity, adding that the motive for the shootings is unclear.

He said the video — captured by a state public security camera — is "important" evidence in the investigation.

"This is evidence to identify these people and it's part of the ongoing investigation to find them," said Gonzalez, who is the lead investigator in the case.

Stewart and Lynda Resnick's flashy bottles of Fiji Water and POM Wonderful are now coveted across the globe. Their donations keep the lights on in art museums across the country. And Gov.

Arnold Schwarzenegger and Arianna Huffington count them among their dearest friends.

But as their marketshare rises worldwide, one of the billionaires' competitors is fighting back, accusing the Western power couple of profiting at the public's expense, court records and interviews show.

Now, as drought-stricken California weighs whether to give private companies more control in managing its scarce water supplies, a new lawsuit claiming the Resnicks violated utilities law by making money from a vast, taxpayer-funded underground reservoir is causing a stir in the state Capitol.

"Water is a public resource, owned by the people," said Democratic Assemblyman Jared Huffman of San Rafael. "We shouldn't be giving away public funds to private sector interests, let alone choosing winners and losers in the business world."

The Resnicks, who live in a Beverly Hills mansion and have a second home in Aspen, Colo., are among the nation's largest corporate farmers and are generous philanthropists and political donors, giving $536,000 to Democratic and Republican California governors in the last decade.

The Los Angeles Business Journal estimates the couple's empire is worth $1.5 billion. It includes about 120,000 acres in California's Central Valley — where they say they own more fresh citrus, almond and pistachio trees than anyone else in the country — and a facility akin to the Fort Knox of water.

Quake-hit Haitians leave tent cities for camp

Homeless Haitians to safer locations.

PETIONVILLE, 11 April—Officials in Pétionville, Haiti, on Saturday prepared to move the first people out of a ballooning tent city — one of many erected in the wake of the 7.0-magnitude quake that devastated the country in January — and into a displacement camp as the rainy season gets under way.

About 50,000 people have sought refuge at the Pétionville Golf Club since the quake killed more than 200,000 people and reduced large swaths of Haiti to rubble.

The once lush fairways and rolling hills of the golf course have been transformed into a teeming tent city where residents have set up vegetable markets, pharmacies and other makeshift businesses.

But early spring rains have already turned portions of the course into rivers of mud and officials with the government and the International Organization for Migration fear that about 7,500 people are in danger now that the rainy season has officially begun.

Many of the residents' tents are located on a steep slope and are in danger of being washed away in mudslides, officials say. Engineers from the U.N. peacekeeping force, Minustah, and the U.S. military have identified several other areas that need to be cleared to prevent flooding and mudslides in the rest of the camp, according to IOM.

About 100 families were scheduled to be relocated Saturday to the Corail Resettlement Camp, a site north of Haitian capital Port-au-Prince that was prepared by IOM with help from military engineers and humanitarian groups. The site can accommodate 6,000 people, according to IOM.—Internet

Hiding out behind the Milky Way

SCIENCE DAILY, 11 April—A leggy cosmic creature comes out of hiding in a new infrared view from NASA's Wide-field Infrared Survey Explorer, or WISE.

The spiral beauty, called IC 342 and sometimes the "hidden galaxy," is shrouded behind our own galaxy, the Milky Way.

Stargazers and professional astronomers have a hard time seeing the galaxy through the Milky Way's bright band of stars, dust and gas. WISE's infrared vision cuts through this veil, offering a crisp view.

In a spiral galaxy like IC 342, dust and gas are concentrated in the arms. The denser pockets of gas trigger the formation of new stars, as represented here in green and yellow.

The core, shown in red, is also bursting with young stars, which are heating up dust. Stars that appear blue reside within our Milky Way, between us and IC 342.

This galaxy has been of great interest to astronomers because it is relatively close. However, determining its distance from Earth has proven difficult due to the intervening Milky Way.

Astronomer Edwin Hubble first thought the galaxy might belong to our own Local Group of galaxies, but current estimates now place it farther away, at about 6.6 to 11 million light-years. This image was made from observations by all four infrared detectors aboard WISE.

Blue and cyan represent infrared light at wavelengths of 3.4 and 4.6 microns, which is primarily light from stars. Green and red represent light at 12 and 22 microns, which is primarily emission from warm dust.

She told her family she would love to go to space someday together with them, and concluded with the words, "with the deepest love across the universe".

Daichi, who quit his job some years ago to support his wife's career, said the ease of e-mailing lets him feel very close to her.

He said his wife remembers well that their 7-year-old daughter once said to her how much she wants to go space with her mom and dad.

New agent chokes off energy supply, kills cancer cell

SCIENCE DAILY, 11 April — Cancer cells grow so fast that they can outstrip their blood supply, leaving them short of oxygen. The cells then produce energy in a way that needs less oxygen but more sugar.

Researchers at the Ohio State University Comprehensive Cancer Center-Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Richard J. Solove Research Institute have designed an experimental drug that chokes off that sugar supply, causing the cells to self destruct.

The agent, called OSU-CG12, is an example of a new class of anticancer drugs called energy-restriction mimetic agents. It is described in a paper published recently in the Journal of Biological

Dr. Ching-Shih Chen.

Chemistry.

"Energy restriction may offer a powerful new strategy for treating cancer because it targets a survival mechanism used by many types of cancer," says principal investigator Ching-Shih Chen, professor of medicinal chemistry, of internal medicine and of urology.

"Our study proves that this new agent kills cancer cells through energy restriction. This is important because it shows that it is possible to design drugs that target energy restriction, and it is exciting because energy-restricting mimetic agents may also be useful for other diseases, including metabolic syndromes, diabetes, cardiovascular disease and obesity," Chen adds.

Energy-restricting mimetic agents cause changes in cancer cells that are similar to those that occur in cancer cells deprived of their main energy source, the sugar glucose.

To design the new agent, Chen and his collaborators started with a drug called ciglitazone, which had been developed to treat type II diabetes but also showed anticancer activity in laboratory experiments.

Toyota may face second US penalty

TOKYO, 11 April—The US Transportation Department is considering a second penalty for Toyota for defects in its accelerator pedals.

NHK obtained a letter by the department notifying Toyota of the initial fine, which was announced on Monday.

The department is seeking the fine for Toyota's failure to immediately notify officials of the sticky pedal problem, despite having known of the defect since at least September of last year.

NHK has learned that the letter also says Toyota began to receive complaints from customers about the pedal problem in 2006, and changed its composition in 2008.

The problem was not resolved, and the automaker again changed the composition last year.

The department says it might pursue a second penalty based on these defects.

The letter adds that Toyota's headquarters sent documents to its production firm in North America to change the design of parts in October of last year, but that it withdrew the order 2 weeks later.

Achoo! Pollen at its worst in years in many areas

ST PETERSBURG, 11 April — Pollen: It's on your car, in the air and especially in your sinuses. From Florida to Texas to Colorado, 2010 is shaping up to be a monster of an allergy season. The words "pollen" and "allergy" are among the top 10 trending topics on Twitter in several US cities. Everywhere, it seems, is covered in a fine yellow dust that irritates our lives. Experts say it's the worst they've seen in years in many areas.

"It's wicked bad this year," said Dr Mona Mangat, an allergy specialist in St Petersburg, Fla, who can't recall a worse year in the six she's worked there.

"We're just overwhelmed with patients

We're double- and triple-booked with new patients, trying to work people in because we know how much people are suffering."

This year is especially bad in the Southeast, weather experts say, likely due to winter's unseasonably cold weather. "It's the fact that everything is coming out all at once."

Colour e-readers with video shown off

STOCKHOLM, 11 April — A colour e-reader that supports video and potentially web browsing has been shown off by Dutch researchers. The prototype uses screen technology — based on century-old science — that its

Once established in the e-reader market, Dutch firm Liguavista hope to see its displays integrated into other devices in the future. But analysts ques-

Miss America's AIDS platform: Making it personal

WASHINGTON, 11 April—Since 1989, the Miss America Pageant has required contestants to choose a platform to promote during their yearlong reign. This year's winner says she didn't choose her platform, her platform chose her.

When Caressa Cameron was 8-years-old, she lost her uncle to AIDS, after her family cared for him the last six months of his life. "At that age I didn't understand what AIDS was, I just knew he was sick," Cameron told FoxNews.com. Her uncle's death had such an impact on the Miss America titleholder's family that soon after, they signed on to care for a foster child who was born with pediatric AIDS.

As Cameron got older, caring for the foster child helped her understand what AIDS was, and the social stigma that came along with it. "There were a lot of kids in the neighbourhood whose parents would not allow them to play with us, because they thought that if they touched our toys, that they could get HIV," Cameron said.—Internet

Childhood deafness gene uncovered

LONDON, 11 April — A new genetic fault which may account for some cases of inherited deafness has been revealed by Dutch researchers. It means that parents with the hereditary condition may be able to predict more accurately the chances of passing it on to their children.

The new find, documented in the American Journal of Human Genetics, could even one day contribute to treatments, say the scientists. One child in 750 is born with severe hearing loss or profound deafness. The gene in question, labelled PTPRQ, appears to play a role in the development of the inner ear "hair cell" before the birth of the child. A genetic fault here means that these cells will not form properly or in sufficient numbers, leading to profound deafness or extremely poor hearing.—Internet

"Limited" smoking ban comes into effect in Croatia

BELGRADE, 11 April — Although a "limited" smoking ban came into effect in Croatia on Saturday, the hospitality industry is far from ready for its implementation, reported the Bosnian news agency Srna.

According to the new law, bars and restaurants of 50 square meters or less can permit smoking if an appropriate ventilation system has been installed. Larger hospitality establishments must provide segregated areas for smokers, not exceeding 20 percent of the total area. However, in either case, permission from the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare must be issued to permit smoking. To date, of the approximately 16,000 bars and restaurants in Croatia, permission has been granted by the ministry to only 156 cafes, one pizzeria, a single pension and three hotels.

Guests violating the smoking policy can be fined the equivalent of 140 Euros, while the waiter responsible can be charged from between 70 to 140 Euros. Potential fines to management vary from 4,000 to 20,000 Euros.

The smoking ban, however, applies only to interior spaces. Smoking will still be permitted outdoors and on terraces.—Xinhua

Barca wins in Madrid to take huge step towards Spanish title

MADRID, 11 April—Leo Messi and Pedro Rodriguez scored to give FC Barcelona a 2-0 win in Real Madrid's Santiago Bernabeu, taking them to the top of the Spanish Primera Liga table. The victory leaves Barca three points clear of Real Madrid and with the added advantage of superior individual goal difference. The result was no less than Barca deserved after outplaying their rivals for the majority of the match.

Barcelona coach Pep Guardiola surprised many with his starting lineup, playing just two strikers and pushing right back Dani Alves into an advanced role on the right of midfield with Carles Puyol covering behind him. Real Madrid

O'Neill turns on Terry as Villa suffer more woe

LONDON, 11 April—Martin O'Neill launched an angry attack on John Terry, accusing the defender of making a career-threatening challenge on James Milner during Chelsea's 3-0 FA Cup semi-final victory over Aston Villa. Villa manager O'Neill claimed Milner was lucky to escape with just heavy bruising following the 74th minute tackle that led to Chelsea captain Terry being booked by referee Howard Webb at Wembley on Saturday.

"It was an awful challenge on an England colleague and James Milner is very lucky his career is still intact," said O'Neill. "The referee has given him a yellow card. But it should have been a red. 'James is very sore and very, very lucky. We think he has got away with it. But if you see the challenge, his knee bends out.' I've just spoken to the doctor and he says he is very, very lucky. He was turning away from goal and Terry's coming in. I'm very disappointed with it. It should have been a red card. It was a desperately poor challenge. —Internet

Portsmouth relegated from Premier League

LONDON, 11 April—Crisis club Portsmouth were relegated from the English Premier League on Saturday after West Ham's 1-0 win against Sunderland. Portsmouth will now kick-off in their FA Cup semi-final against Tottenham at Wembley on Sunday knowing their seven-season stint in English football's top flight has come to an end.

Their fate was sealed by Brazilian striker Araujo Ilan's 51st minute goal at Upton Park for West Ham. The highest total Portsmouth, who have five league games left, can finish on is 29 points and that would still leave them in the relegation zone. Portsmouth, who have estimated debts of more than 76 million pounds (117 million dollars), had their demotion effectively confirmed last month when the Premier League docked them nine points for entering administration. —Internet

Bayern levels with Leverkusen, Schalke upset by bottom team

BERLIN, 11 April—German Bundesliga leader Bayern Munich defended the top place despite a 1-1 draw with Bayer Leverkusen while Schalke 04 lost surprisingly to bottom team Hanover 96 on Saturday. After the Champions League miracle at Old Trafford against Manchester United, Bayern started highly motivated to extend the gap in the Bundesliga table. Bayern sits on top with 60 points followed by Schalke with 58 points and Leverkusen with 54 points.

Bottom team Hanover surprisingly beat second-placed Schalke 4-2 in an entertaining seesaw match as both teams staged a concentrated start. Only 17 minutes into the match, Hanover defender Manuel Schmiedebach's pass into penalty area was deflected by Schalke defender Heiko Westermann into his own goal.

Hanover preserved the momentum until the 29th minutes to double the lead. Striker Didier Ya Konan utilized the chance in front of Schalke's goal and nutmegged Schalke goalie Manuel Neuer to extend the lead for Hanover. Schalke was absolutely out of sorts and unable to fight back within the break. —Xinhua

Querrey downs Odesnik to reach Clay Court final

HOUSTON, 11 April—Third-seeded Sam Querrey reached the final of the US Men's Clay Court Championships with a victory over Wayne Odesnik, who was playing with the threat of a drugs ban looming. Querrey, who said before the match that he would "refuse to lose" to Odesnik, triumphed 7-6 (7/3), 1-6, 7-5, Saturday, rallying from a third-set deficit to deny Odesnik his second straight trip to the final.

Odesnik pleaded guilty in an Australian court on March 26 to importing human growth hormone into Australia. He has denied taking the banned performance enhancer and is playing pending an investigation by the International Tennis Federation that could result in a suspension. Regardless of the outcome of the ITF's probe, Querrey said Odesnik owed the sport an apology. —Internet

Myittha Dam under construction for benefiting Yaw region

Recently, I made a trip to Kazundaunt of Htilin Township by car. Last seven years, I saw Kazundaunt Village pointed by a villager while visiting Mawle-Kyapat Village, but I missed a chance to visit there.

Therefore, I was pleased because I would be going to visit the village.

During the trip by car, I noticed that almost all the passengers on board the bus were female villagers of Kazundaunt Village, and male passengers were an older person, a young person and I.

Article & Photos: Kalay Win Thu

The bus ran along Gangaw-Htilin-Kyaukhtu-Mindat Road. I learned that the road would be upgraded in the near future. Local people thanked authorities concerned for construction of the road.

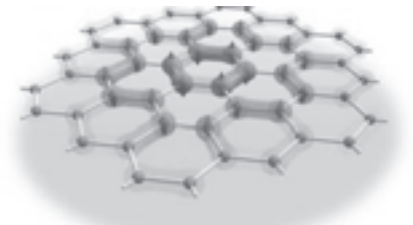

Daewoo bus which I took turned to a street and I saw the road signs reading "To Myittha Dam" and "To Kazundaunt Village".

(See page 9)

Myittha Dam, located near Pyintha Village of Gangaw Township, will irrigate 12,000 acres of lands.

Exotic quantum spin-liquid simulated: A starting point for superconductivity?

The simulation of the quantum spin-liquid was performed on a flat honeycomb structure, where the electrons show a dynamical phase lacking any order.—Internet

STUTTGART, 11 April — An exotic state of matter that physicists call a "quantum spin-liquid" can be realized by electrons in a honeycomb crystal structure. This is shown by scientists from the Universities of Stuttgart and Würzburg, Germany in a new study published in the journal Nature. Electrons inside a crystal exist in different states. In many cases it is the crystal structure that decides, if the material is a metal with a finite electric conductivity, or if it is an insulator, which does not carry an electric current. But there also exist insulating materials, whose crystal structures suggest that they should behave like metals. Such materials are called "Mott insulators," and it is the repulsion between the electrons, that suppresses a metallic behaviour, such that the electrons are locked to the atoms.—Internet
