Preserve water resources for long-term use

As a Myanmar saying goes: water is more valuable than money, it is invaluable. Every living being needs adequate amount of water for daily consumption.

While carrying out the construction of dams, river water pumping stations, underground water tapping works and supply of water in the regions facing shortage of water, the government is sinking many tube-wells in the rural regions as part of efforts to implement the rural water supply project.

Many tube-wells have been sunk in States and Divisions in order to sufficiently supply clean water to the rural areas facing water scarcity. Up to now, a total of 14,979 villages enjoy clean drinking water.

As water is essential for all the living beings, the people should use water in a systematic way. All the people are to work in concert for storage of clean water conscientiously.

Some countries facing shortage of water import drinking water for their public consumption spending a large sum of foreign currency. Therefore, Myanmar blessed with rich water and land resources should utilize the existing water resources in a systematic way.

It is incumbent upon all the people of Myanmar to dutifully maintain the durability of dams, reservoirs and tube-wells built by the government by minimizing loss and wastage.

Five killed, 19 injured in Baghdad bombings

BAGHDAD, 13 May—Five people were killed and 19 wounded in two bomb attacks in Baghdad overnight and Thursday morning, an Interior Ministry source said.

Five people were killed and 11 wounded when a parked car bomb ripped through the Shiite bastion of Sadr City neighbourhood in eastern Baghdad before midnight on Wednesday, the source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

Sadr City is a heavily populated Shiite neighbourhood and is the main stronghold for Mahdi Army militia loyal to radical cleric Moqtada al-Sadr.

On Thursday morning, a roadside bomb struck a police patrol near the Ghazali Intersection on the eastern side of Tigris River in central Baghdad, destroying a police vehicle and wounding three policemen aboard, the source said.

Two traffic policemen and three civilians who were close to the scene were also wounded by the blast, he added.

Waves of violence and sporadic attacks continue in the Iraqi cities more than two months after the country held its landmark parliamentary election which is widely expected to shape the political landscape of the war-torn country.

On Monday, Iraq saw its bloodiest day in the year after a wave of bomb attacks across the country killed at least 114 people and wounded hundreds.

First proof that chemicals from seaweeds damage coral on contact

Georgia Tech graduate student Doug Rasher is shown with a rack holding corals transplanted into concrete cones for experiments on reefs off the Fiji Islands.—INTERNET

SCIENCE DAILY, 13 May—Field studies have shown for the first time that several common species of seaweeds in both the Pacific and Caribbean Oceans can kill corals upon contact using chemical means.

While competition between seaweed and coral is just one of many factors affecting the decline of coral reefs worldwide, this chemical threat may provide a serious setback to efforts aimed at repopulating damaged reefs. Seaweed is normally kept in check by herbivorous fish, but in many areas overfishing has reduced the populations of these plant-consumers, allowing seaweeds to overpopulate coral reefs.

A study documenting the chemical effects of seaweeds on corals was scheduled to be published on 10 May, 2010 in the early edition of the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS). The research was supported by the National Institutes of Health, the National Science Foundation, and the Teasely Endowments at the Georgia Institute of Technology.

Scientists better prepared to judge ash cloud

PARIS, 13 May—Scientists say they are now better prepared for measuring Iceland's volcanic ash problem, which is expected to continue for several months, after experiments using modelling and lasers to probe the atmosphere.

By knowing how much ash is spewed from the volcano, scientists can map the way the cloud will spread depending on the wind, Pierre Flamant from a meteorological laboratory near Paris explained.

During the air traffic chaos in mid-April, "there was an error in calculating ash emissions at the source", Gian Paolo Gobbi from Italy's institute of atmospheric sciences and climate said.

"The Icelanders were not so well prepared when it came to measuring this," and the flaw subsequently skewed computer modelling of the plume, he said.

But a German team carried out its own measurements of the output from Eyjafjall volcano in early May, and this has given scientists a better fix.

In an eruption event measuring three tonnes per second, many of the heaviest particles fell back down again within seven hours of being emitted.—Internet

Mom's voice just as comforting as a hug

SCIENCE DAILY, 13 May—Moms can bring comfort, even at a distance, a new study finds. The results show simply hearing mom's voice over the phone works just as well at calming nerves of stressed children as does a real-life pat on the shoulder. The soothing effect is likely due to the release of the hormone oxytocin in the brain, the researchers say. This "love hormone" is known to quell stress, and is likely involved in social bonding, including that between a mother and a child. Previous work has revealed this hormone was released during physical contact from mom. "But it's clear from these results that a mother's voice can have the same effect as a hug, even if they're not standing there," said study researcher Leslie Seltzer, a biological anthropologist at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Israeli researcher: happy marriage cuts male stroke risk

JERUSALEM, 13 May— Growing old together with a loving wife may be one key to lessening a man's chance of dying from a stroke, according to a recent research of Tel Aviv University.

Professor Uri Goldbourt's initial work at the Neufeld Cardiac Institute at the Sheba Medical Centre, points to a possible connection between marital "happiness" and the odds of suffering a lethal stroke.

The survey is based on data culled from 1963 through 1997 covering 10,059 Israeli male, middle-aged civil servants. It included information from the country's national death registry and other records, using "clinical, biochemical, anthropometric, sociodemographic and psychosocial evaluations."

Thirty-four years of follow-up polling showed that unmarried men and unhappy married ones were about 64 percent more likely to die from stroke than happy married men, Goldbourt said in a presentation before a recent session of the American Stroke Association.

The results were "very consistent with what we're seeing in the United States," according to Dr. Daniel Lackland of the Medical University of South Carolina.

Lackland, who was not involved in the study, said it "demonstrates the benefit of having a partner or somebody that's there that can be supportive," and noted that a spouse's positive impact could include administering medication, making healthy food choices or even getting medical aid quickly in an emergency.

Caffeine helps shift workers avoid mistakes

LONDON, 13 May — A new review suggests that caffeine consumption can help night-shift workers avoid making mistakes.

At least 15 percent of workers in industrialized countries are thought to be engaged in shift work or permanent nighttime work, which can disrupt their body clocks. Some suffer from shift-work disorder, in which they only sleep for short periods of time and become sleepy on the job, boosting the risk of errors, the researchers explained.

In the review, released online on 12 May in The Cochrane Library, researchers looked at 13 studies into the effects of caffeine on shift-work performance. Most of the studies, however, only simulated the workplace.

The participants took caffeine through a variety of sources, including coffee, pills, energy drinks or food, and some were given placebos.

The reviewers found that caffeine appeared to do a better job of preventing errors than naps or the placebos, and also improved performance in areas such as memory, attention, perception and reasoning.

"It seems reasonable to assume that reduced errors are associated with fewer injuries, although we cannot quantify such a reduction," lead researcher Katharine Ker, of the London School of Tropical Medicine, said in a news release from the journal's publisher.

The 'Reality' of sex addiction stirs debate

WASHINGTON, 13 May— Compulsive sexual behavior can be a real problem in some people, causing them to engage in risky and self-destructive acts revolving around their libido, experts say.

The career of professional golfer Tiger Woods took a beating from revelations of cheating with as many as a dozen women. Former New York Mets general manager Steve Phillips was fired from his job as a baseball analyst on the ESPN network after a workplace sex scandal.

But are they, and others like them, suffering from an actual addiction?

Both Woods and Phillips have claimed they are, and both men sought treatment at sexual addiction programmes. Mental health professionals agree that some people indulge in uncontrollable and harmful sexual behavior and that they truly cannot help themselves.

They disagree, however, about whether this behaviour constitutes a true addiction or is better characterized as some other sort of mental disorder. The new edition of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, the book considered the bible of psychiatry, will contain a new category of behavioral addictions — but sexual addiction will not be included in that category.

"There's not enough empirical evidence to call sex an addiction at this point," said Dr. Martin P. Kafka, an associate clinical professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and a member of the task force that's revising the manual. Therapists active in sexual addiction disagree.

"We've been treating sexual addiction for more than 20 years now," said Douglas Weiss, a psychologist and executive director of the Heart to Heart Counseling Centre in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Bone drugs not linked to rare fractures

WASHINGTON, 13 May — A new study finds no association between the use of a popular class of osteoporosis medications known as bisphosphonates and an unusual type of thigh bone fracture.

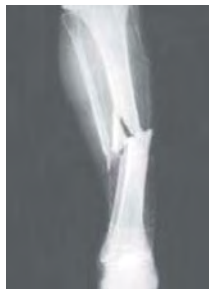

Bisphosphonates include blockbuster drugs such as alendronate (Fosamax), risedronate (Actonel) and ibandronate (Boniva).

The conclusions, appearing as a letter-to-the-editor in the May 13 issue of the New England

Journal of Medicine, do little to settle an ongoing debate about whether or not these drugs cause this type of rare fracture.

A pharmaceutical company sponsored study published in March in the same journal concluded that bisphosphonates did not boost people's risk for this type of fracture, although prior studies had suggested they did.

That "very large study," said Dr. Kenneth A. Egol, chief of the Orthopaedic Trauma

Service at New York University Hospital for Joint Diseases, "certainly can allay some fears regarding the drug."

Working overtime links to heart attacks

BEIJING, 13 May— A new study has found that staff who regularly work over 10 or 11 hours a day are up to 60 percent more likely to suffer heart disease, media reported quoting Wednesday's European Heart Journal.

Researchers who tracked 10,000 UK civil servants aged between 39 and 61 over 11 years found overtime junkies were more prone to heart attacks and angina — even when factors such as age, weight and smoking were included.

The increased risk was linked to working between three and four hours extra a day on top of a normal seven-hour day.

The researchers said there could be a number of explanations for the possible link between overtime and heart problems. These include "hidden" high blood pressure that is not always picked up, stress, anxiety or depression, and being a "Type A" personality who is highly driven, aggressive or irritable.

"The association between long hours and coronary heart disease was independent of a range of risk factors that we measured at the start of the study, such as smoking, being overweight or having high cholesterol," said Marianna Virtanen, who led the study at the Finnish Institute of Occupational Health in Helsinki and University College London.

Dr John Challenor, of the Society of Occupational Medicine, said: "This study confirms what we know — that work/life balance plays a vital role in well being."

Kan sales tax hike cuts against state's image

TOPEKA, 13 May—Come July, shoppers in Kansas will be handing over more money on every purchase because of a sales tax increase at odds with the state's image as a conservative stronghold.

Even as Republicans from Kansas talk up lower taxes and smaller government in Congress, the GOP-led state Legislature approved the jump in sales tax from 5.3 percent to 6.3 percent that critics say makes Kansas more like California than its Midwestern neighbours.

Across the country, much of the talk has been about budget cuts as states try to wrestle their spending down to balance out lower revenues. After severe reductions last year, Kansas lawmakers were hearing concern from many voters about preserving schools as districts began

Microsoft looks to 'cloud' with Office 2010

NEW YORK, 13 May—Microsoft released the latest update to its popular Office software on Wednesday including a Web-hosted version aimed at countering competition from emerging "cloud" products offered by Google.

Asia shares rise on Europe, IBM; euro wobbles

HONG KONG, 13 May—Asian stocks rose on Thursday as fresh austerity measures promised by Spain and Portugal gave investors hope that Europe's debt crisis can be contained, while IBM's strong profit forecast gave a further boost to tech shares. The euro struggled near 14-month lows, however, on worries that steep government spending cuts in parts of Europe would drag on the region's already feeble economic growth.

Doubts about the euro's long-term viability and worries about inflation continued to spur a flight into gold, which shot to a fresh record for a second day in a row. The jump to $1,248.15 an ounce brought gold's gains to nearly 20 percent since early February. Spain said on Wednesday it will slash civil service pay and cut public jobs while Portugal's finance minister told Reuters his government had identified new austerity measures to reduce its budget deficit, offering investors some reassurances that those countries are addressing their deep-rooted fiscal problems. While worries remain that Greece and other governments will not be able to deliver on deeply unpopular spending cuts, there were signs that recent strains in global money markets were easing, further buoying investor confidence.

Bring about skilled librarians

Than Tun (IPRD)

The Ministry of Information, adhering to the guidance of the Head of State, has been opening self-reliant village libraries since 2004 with the aim of broadening the horizons and improving the socio-economic status of rural people, who constitute the majority of the population of the nation. The establishment of village libraries generates a variety of benefits such as rural folks, old and young — having easy access to publications; gaining knowledge; being able to distinguish between right and wrong; spending valuable time in a beneficial way; becoming more polite and upright; and bringing about reliable people for the nation. In addition, establishment of libraries is a national duty for building a modern, developed discipline-flourishing democratic nation.

The Ministry of Information is in pursuit of ensuring sustainable development of the libraries in line with the five work programmes as follows:-

- to organize rural people to cultivate a good habit of reading,
- to keep the publications for their durability, and to raise funds to increase the number of the publications,
- to get a land and a building for a library,
- to furnish libraries,
- to bring about skilled librarians, and form library committees.

With a growing number of libraries that meet the five work programmes, rural residents will have greater knowledge. So, libraries will enable the people to practise democracy effectively.

Moreover, a plan has been laid down to form community learning centres by providing Internet access for self-reliant village libraries. Therefore, establishment of self-reliant village libraries not only widens the horizons of country people, but also represents an important national duty of building a modern, developed discipline-flourishing democratic nation.

Today, the government and the ministry are planning to build Rural Library Foundation to contribute towards the tasks for sustainable development of self-reliant village libraries, and render necessary assistance. The lofty aim of the foundation is to enable the village libraries to possess the five standards in order to build a life-long learning Myanmar society, and to ensure their sustainable development.

Today, the government and the ministry are planning to build Rural Library Foundation to contribute towards the tasks for sustainable development of self-reliant village libraries, and render necessary assistance.

The lofty aim of the foundation is to enable the village libraries to possess the five standards in order to build a life-long learning Myanmar society, and to ensure their sustainable development.

After the foundation has been built: the patron and executive committees will serve as volunteers in its functions, cash donations will be entrusted to the Myanma Economic Bank, the interests will be used in implementing the functions, and the annual budget for foundation's management will be fixed through coordination.

In compliance with the instructions of the Minister for Information, service personnel of the Information and Public Relations Department are trying in conformity with the five programmes for sustainable development of the village libraries. In the process, to produce skilled librarians plays a key role. Therefore, IPRD offices are conducting courses to nurture ward clerks to bring about competent libraries of self-reliant village libraries. At a time when Rural Library Foundation is mobilizing collaborative efforts to achieve development of human resources, young villagers should be nurtured to become skilled libraries.

That needs the following points:—for township IPRDs to cooperate with township Peace and Development Councils in conducting courses for librarians from village librarians, to collect the list of librarians, who will attend the courses, in cooperation with officials of respective villages, and village library committees concerned, for the departments related to rural development to disseminate knowledge of libraries in cooperation with course instructors and Township PDCs, for township IPRDs to form committees for organizing in-service courses to inspect the courses, and to award outstanding trainees, to train trainees to know library works of the township IPRD office, to organize courses in consistence with the directives of Self-reliant Village Library Manual published by IPRD (Head Office), to give assistance and advice to expedite the tasks of trained librarians once every three or six months and for township IPRDs to report work progress to division/district headquarters.

In particular, it is needed to sharpen the skills of the librarians of village libraries in accordance with the instructions of the Ministry of Information. In that regard, IPRD staff need to collect the list of the villages that have yet to meet the standards, under the aegis of the Rural Library Foundation concerned in cooperation with local authorities.

Let's work in concert to bring about skilled librarians.

US man found dead in northern Mexico

MEXICO CITY, 13 May— US officials confirmed Monday that an American citizen was found dead in northern Mexico.

The US Embassy said the body of Ronald C. Ryan was recovered in Sonora state, across from Arizona, but gave no other details.

Jose Larrinaga, spokesman for Sonora state prosecutors, told reporters Sunday that Ryan's body was found the previous day partially buried near a creek on the outskirts of Santa Ana, a city 60 miles south of Nogales, Arizona. A cause of death had not been determined and the body was taken to the border city of Nogales, Mexico, for an autopsy, he said.

Larrinaga said Ryan, 67, of Phoenix, Arizona, had been reported missing 3 May.

State police had reported detaining three men the following day who had left Ryan's pickup truck at a carwash in Santa Ana. Officers seized several automatic rifles, dozens of bullets and marijuana from the men, ages 18, 20 and 21, state police said.

Local media said two of the men are the son and a nephew of Jose Vasquez Villagrana, an alleged key operator of the Sinaloa cartel who was arrested in February.—Internet

China helps Cuba modernize earthquake warning system

HAVANA, 13 May— China has donated modern seismic equipment to Cuba to help the nation upgrade its earthquake warning system, the Cuban government said Monday.

Vladimir Moreno, director of the National Earthquake Research Center (CENAI), said the donation includes highly sensitive seismometers, accelerometers, radio facilities for voice communications and mobile stations for earthquake engineering studies.

Moreno said he was expecting the arrival of Chinese specialists to install the equipment.

Renewal of the screening and monitoring services could ensure real-time transmitting of alert signals through an interconnected system of seismic stations, Moreno said.

Cuba would "have modern technology which could provide faster and better information before the occurrence of earthquakes," Moreno said.

CENAI, the governing body of Cuba's seismological research, is responsible for monitoring seismic activities across the island.

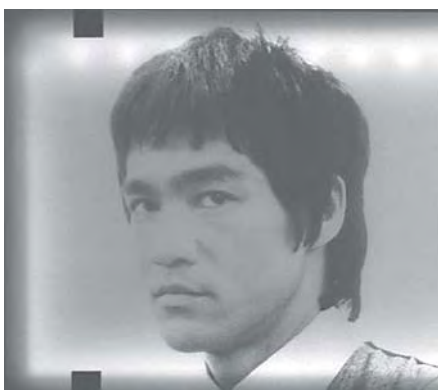

Cuba is located in a region that has several fault systems that produce about 2,000 mostly minor seismic events a year. A 5.6 magnitude earthquake occurred near Guantanamo, Cuba, on March 20 but caused no reported casualties or significant damage.

Peru moms celebrate their day in the boxing ring

Forget brunch. Sports promoters in a Peruvian city are honouring its mothers by inviting them to slip on gloves and head protectors and try to punch each others' lights out.

Sunday's Mothers Day bouts took place in a grassy, makeshift ring in Huancaayo, at 10,500 feet (3,200 metres) above sea level.

Ten women took a day off from farm work to spar in three-round bouts while clad in "polleras," the colourful, embroidered skirts typical of the Andean region.

Some were knocked down by powerful blows, but quickly got back up.

Promoters said the success of Peruvian boxer Kina Malpartida, the current world super flyweight champion, is inspiring women in Junin state to take up the sport.

Sugar drops 'ease baby jab pain'

TORONTO, 13 May — Babies might be given something sugary before a jab to reduce pain, Canadian researchers say. Experts at the University of Toronto say newborns are less likely to cry if given a few drops of a sugar solution before immunization. Data based on 1,000 injections suggests infants given a glucose solution are 20% less likely to cry following a jab. The research, published in Archives of Disease in Childhood, is based on clinical data from 14 studies.

A team led by Dr Arne Ohlsson, of the University of Toronto, looked at data from clinical trials in babies up to a year old. As well as the findings related to glucose, the researchers found that between a few drops and half a teaspoon of sucrose and glucose also led to a small reduction in the amount of time a baby spent crying. The Canadian researchers, who worked in collaboration with colleagues in Australia and Brazil, concluded: "Healthcare professionals should consider using sucrose or glucose before and during immunization."

Family killed as home swallowed up by giant sinkhole in Quebec

OTTAWA, 13 May — The earth opened up and swallowed a family of four in their home in Canada as they watched ice hockey on TV. The bodies of Richard and Lynn Prefontaine and their daughters, Amelie, 11, and Anais, 9, were found in the basement of their two-storey house in Saint-Jude, Quebec. Only the green roof of the property was visible after the disaster. The family's golden retriever, Foxy, was found safe outside tethered to a tree in the mud.

"After digging and going through the rubble we found the four victims," said Michael Dore, Quebec's emergency management co-ordinator. "They were very close to one another, some of them lying on the couch in the family room in the basement."

The giant sinkhole was caused by a landslide on Monday in the farming town of 1,000, about 50 miles northwest of Montreal. It ate up three cars, a stretch of concrete road and most of the Prefontaines' house on a cliff over a tributary of the Yamaska River.—Internet

Egypt detains NY passenger with guns in luggage

CAIRO, 13 May—Police detained an American-Egyptian man who arrived in Cairo on a flight from New York with firearms in his luggage, airport officials said Wednesday.

The officials said the man was taken into custody as he tried to pass through customs with a metal box containing two 9 mm handguns, 250 bullets, several swords, daggers and knives.

The box had been checked and the contents were discovered during a routine inspection upon arrival on an Egypt Air flight from New York's JFK International Airport in Cairo, according to the officials. They said customs inspectors were then alerted and the man was detained.

He was only identified as a botany teacher.

The US Transportation Security Administration confirmed the man had two firearms in the suitcase and ammunition.

The agency said in a statement on Wednesday that transporting firearms in checked baggage within the US is permitted if declared to the airline, but noted that other countries have different laws on the transportation and possession of firearms.

A police official confirmed the man was questioned by agents of the State Security Apparatus and the case had been turned over to prosecutors for further investigation.

All officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they are not authorized to speak to reporters.

Somali pirates hijack Bulgarian chemical tanker

NAIROBI, 13 May—Somali pirates have hijacked a Bulgarian chemical tanker carrying a crew of 15, all Bulgarians, in the pirate-infested Gulf of Aden, the European Union Naval Force said on Wednesday.

The naval force said in a statement that the Bulgarian-flagged tanker, the MV Panega, was seized about 100 nautical miles east of Aden, Yemen, en route from the Red Sea to India.

"As long as the pirates are on board of the ship, we are just monitoring the situation," said Anders Kallin, a Swedish navy commander for the EU naval force. He said he had no reason to believe that anyone had been hurt.

The force's Operation Atalanta focuses on escorting merchant vessels carrying humanitarian aid for the World Food Programme and those of the African Union Mission in Somalia, protecting vessels in the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean, and deterring and disrupting piracy.—Xinhua

Celtics stun Cavs, take 3-2 lead in series

CLEVELAND, 13 May — His team down by 27 points and a promising season suddenly in peril, LeBron James walked off the floor to a smattering of boos and rows of empty seats.

If this was goodbye Cleveland, it wasn't the send-off he imagined.

The Boston Celtics have pushed the two-time MVP and the Cavaliers dangerously close to an early start to the Summer of LeBron.

Ray Allen scored 25 points, Rajon Rondo scored all of his 16 in the second half and the Celtics, once thought too old to challenge for another title, beat James and the Cavs 120-88 in Game

5 on Tuesday night to move within one win of knocking the league's top team from the playoffs.

Lyon close on Champions League place

PARIS, 13 May — Lyon took a big step towards Champions League qualification for next season by beating Monaco 3-0 on Wednesday.

Goals either side of half-time from Miralem Pjanic and Bafetimbi Gomis and a late strike by Lisandro Lopez secured a comfortable victory for Claude Puel's side over the beaten French Cup finalists. Lyon, who lost to Bayern Munich in the semi-finals of this season's Champions League, are now third in the table, a point behind second-placed Lille and a point above Auxerre.

With the top three qualifying for the Champions League, Lyon can make sure of a place in Europe's top club competition with victory at home to already-relegated Le Mans on the season's final day on Saturday. "It was a good match. It had everything — good control, two lovely goals and opportunities that we could have taken," said Puel. —Internet

Atletico wins Europa League

HAMBURG, 13 May — Diego Forlan scored his second goal of the game with four minutes remaining in overtime, giving Atletico Madrid a 2-1 victory over Fulham on Wednesday night in the first Europa League final.

Clint Dempsey became the first American to play in a European club soccer final when he entered in the 55 minute in place of Bobby Zamora. A day earlier, the 27-year-old from Nacogdoches, Texas, was selected for the 30-man preliminary US World Cup roster.

Forlan put Atletico ahead in the 32 minute when he redirected a mis-hit shot by teammate Sergio Aguero, but Simon Davies tied the score five minutes later with a right-footed volley.

Fulham, a small London club, was trying for the first major trophy in its 131-year history. Its only previous major final was a 2-0 loss to London neighbour West Ham in the 1975 FA Cup.

Hosts S Africa add Fransman to World Cup squad

JOHANNESBURG, 13 May — Hosts South Africa on Wednesday added Israel-based defender Bevan Fransman to a preliminary World Cup squad they named last month.

There are no other changes to the original 29-strong list released by Brazilian coach Carlos Alberto Parreira 13 days ago for the 11 June -11 July tournament.

Fransman, a tall, 26-year-old native of Cape Town who plays for Maccabi Netanya, owes his call-up to an injury which ruled out Morgan Gould from champions Super-Sport United.

Gould has been sidelined since February and Parreira said the South African Premiership star would not be ready for a challenging Group A schedule against Mexico, Uruguay and France. Coach of the 1994 Brazil World Cup-winning team, Parreira has five central defenders and one is likely to drop out by 1 June when the 32 qualifiers must cut their squads to 23 players. —Internet

Iraqi officials: seven killed in Sadr City bombing

BAGHDAD, 13 May – A bomb in a parked car ripped through a Sadr City neighbourhood on Wednesday evening, killing seven young people who had gathered at a nearby cafe to drink tea and play dominoes, Iraqi officials said.

The attack comes just days after a string of shootings and bombings convulsed the country in Iraq's worst violence so far this year. The violence appears designed to stir up sectarian tensions at a time when Iraq still has no new government after inconclusive parliamentary elections and as US troops prepare to go home.

Police and hospital officials said the blast took place near a popular cafe where young people were gathered. —Xinhua
