Deepen China-Myanmar friendship through bilateral diplomatic relations

Myanmar and the People's Republic of China share a long common border of land, mountains and rivers. As good neighbourly nations, they have maintained traditional ties of friendship.

The establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries has turned 60 on 8 June 2010. So, on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries, messages of felicitations were exchanged between the Heads of State, Heads of Government and the Ministers for Foreign Affairs.

The message from Senior General Than Shwe, Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council of the Union of Myanmar, to Mr Hu Jintao, President of the People's Republic of China, states that as the countries co-exposed and consistently adhered to the five principles of peaceful co-existence, the relationship between the two countries have developed rapidly in the past decades. As a result of the efforts made by the leaders and the peoples of both countries, cooperations between two countries have strengthened significantly in various sectors, and the bilateral relationship has recently reached the level of strategic partnership.

Similarly, the message from the Chinese President to Senior General Than Shwe states that China values the Pauk-Phaw friendship between the two countries. To further consolidate and develop the long-term and stable good-neighbourly and friendly cooperative relations between China and Myanmar is an important factor of China's neighbouring policy. No matter how the international situation may change, China will be unswervingly committed to this policy.

Over the past 60 years since the establishment of diplomatic ties between the two countries, bilateral friendship has developed on a sustainable basis. There has been smooth progress in bilateral exchanges and cooperations in all sectors, including economy, trade, energy, transport, education and culture. The two foreign affairs ministries have been able to make close cooperation in regional and international arenas.

Overall, as friendship and amity between Myanmar and the People's Republic of China have been deepened, the two countries will be able to closely cooperate for regional development, peace and stability and the well-being of the two peoples.

10 foreign troops killed on deadly Afghan day

KABUL, 8 June—Ten foreign soldiers, including seven Americans, were killed in separate attacks on the deadliest day of the year for Western forces in Afghanistan. A US civilian contractor who trains Afghan police also died in a brazen suicide assault.

The bloodshed on Monday comes as militants step up bombings and other attacks ahead of a major NATO operation in the Taliban stronghold of Kandahar that Washington hopes will turn the tide of the nearly nine-year war.

Half the NATO deaths—five Americans—occurred in a single blast in eastern Afghanistan, US spokesman Col Wayne Shanks said without giving further details. It was a grim reminder the insurgents can strike throughout the country—not simply in the south, which has become the main focus of the US campaign.

Two other US troops were killed in separate attacks in the south—one in a bombing and the other by small arms fire.

Apple releases Safari 5 — faster, less cluster

BEIJING, 8 June—Apple announced the release of Safari 5 for Windows and Mac on Monday, just after the announcement of the new iPhone 4 at WWDC.

The latest version of the web browser adds a new Safari Reader feature that presents Web pages in a streamlined interface, support for developer-created extensions, new HTML5 capabilities, and performance increases.

"Safari continues to lead the pack in performance, innovation and standards support," said Philip Schiller, Apple's senior vice president of Worldwide Product Marketing. "Safari now runs on over 200 million devices worldwide and its open source WebKit engine runs on over 500 million devices."

Safari Reader makes it easy to read single and multipage articles on the web by presenting them in a slimmed-down, scrollable view without any additional content or clutter.

Safari 5 on the Mac runs JavaScript 30 percent faster than Safari 4, 3 percent faster than Chrome 5.0, and over twice as fast as Firefox 3.6.

From a developer perspective, Apple has at long last opened up Safari to extensions. Over a dozen powerful HTML5 features are added to Safari 5, which allow web developers to create media-rich experiences, including full screen playback and closed captions for HTML5 video.

Strange discovery on Titan leads to speculation of Alien life

NEW YORK, 8 June—New findings have roused a great deal of hoopla over the possibility of life on Saturn's moon Titan, which some news reports have further hyped up as hints of extra-terrestrials.

However, scientists also caution that aliens might have nothing to do with these findings.

All this excitement is rooted in analyses of chemical data returned by NASA's Cassini spacecraft. One study suggested that hydrogen was flowing down through Titan's atmosphere and disappearing at the surface. Astrobiologist Chris McKay at NASA Ames Research Centre speculated this could be a tantalizing hint that hydrogen is getting consumed by life.

"It's the obvious gas for life to consume on Titan, similar to the way we consume oxygen on Earth," McKay said.

Another study investigating hydrocarbons on Titan's surface found a lack of acetylene, a compound that could be consumed as food by life that relies on liquid methane instead of liquid water to live.

"If these signs do turn out to be a sign of life, it would be doubly exciting because it would represent a second form of life independent from water-based life on Earth," McKay said. However, NASA scientists caution that aliens might not be involved at all.

How Crocodiles cross oceans

SYDNEY, 8 June—How did the world's largest living reptile, the saltwater crocodile, reach so many South Pacific islands separated by huge stretches of water despite being a poor swimmer?

Apparently, like a surfer catching a wave, these goliaths can ride currents on the ocean surface to cross large areas of open sea, researchers now reveal.

The saltwater or estuarine crocodile (Crocodylus porosus) is a ferocious giant that can grow at least 23 feet long (7 meters) and weigh more than 2,200 pounds (1000 kilograms). These scaly monsters have been known to devour sharks, and even attack things they can't eat, often assaulting boats in the mistaken belief they are rivals or prey, biting down with nearly 2 tons of pressure - powerful enough to crush bone or punch through aluminum hulls.

These deadly predators hunt in tropical areas throughout eastern India, southeast Asia, northern Australia, and on an untold number of the islands in-between.

Drug companies cause water pollution

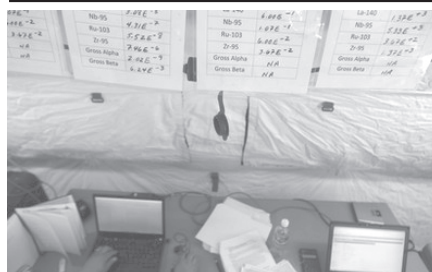

RESTON, 8 June—US Geological Survey scientists say they've identified pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities as significant sources of surface water pollution.

A study, conducted in cooperation with New York state officials, focused on outflow from two Researchers found concentrations of pharmaceuticals up to 1,000 times higher than from outflows at 24 wastewater plants nationwide that do not receive wastewater from pharmaceutical manufacturers.

"This is the first study in the US to identify pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities as a significant source of pharmaceuticals to the environment," said Matthew Larsen, USGS associate director for water.

Overtreated: More medical care isn't always better

WASHINGTON, 8 June—More medical care won't necessarily make you healthier — it may make you sicker. It's an idea that technology-loving Americans find hard to believe. Anywhere from one-fifth to nearly one-third of the tests and treatments we get are estimated to be unnecessary, and avoidable care is costly in more ways than the bill: It may lead to dangerous side effects.

It can start during birth, as some of the nation's increasing C-sections are triggered by controversial fetal monitors that signal a baby is in trouble when really everything's fine.

It extends to often futile intensive care at the end of the life. In between: Americans get the most medical radiation in the world, much of it from repeated CT scans. Too many scans increase the risk of cancer.

Thousands who get stents for blocked heart arteries should have tried medication first.

Post-combat stress disrupting daily lives of returning vets

SAN FRANCISCO, 8 June—Up to 14 percent of soldiers returning from Iraq suffer post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) or depression that is severe enough to disrupt their daily lives, new research shows. Overall, between 8.5 percent and 14 percent of soldiers reported mental health issues that caused difficulties in work or private life, said Major Jeffrey L. Thomas, chief of the department of military psychiatry at the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research and lead author of a report in the June issue of the Archives of General Psychiatry.

Interestingly, surveys of self-reported depression and PTSD among 18,305 Iraq veterans in four regular army units and two National Guard infantry brigade combat teams found a significant difference between National Guardsmen and those on active duty, Thomas noted.

A first survey, taken three months after returning from Iraq, found almost equal rates of mental health problems among Guardsmen and regular Army soldiers. A second survey, done at 12 months, found unchanged rates among the regulars but a sharp increase among the Guardsmen.

Muscle tone may play a role in GERD

WASHINGTON, 8 June—Reduced muscle tone in the esophagus may be the cause of acid reflux disease, new research suggests. Using molecular imaging, researchers examined the function of esophageal muscles in 49 people with suspected or confirmed gastro-esophageal reflux disease (GERD), and found what they described as strong evidence that poor esophageal muscle tone plays a role in the condition, whether people have mild, moderate or severe cases. The findings were to be presented during the annual meeting of the Society of Nuclear Medicine, being held 5-9 June in Salt Lake City.

GERD is thought to affect from 15 percent to 35 percent of the US population. In people with the condition, the circular muscle that seals off the stomach from the esophagus does not close properly. This enables the acidic stomach contents to rise up, or reflux, into the esophagus, resulting in inflammation and acid indigestion, or heartburn. Chronic reflux — occurring more than twice a week — is considered GERD, according to the US National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases.

SINGAPORE, 8 June—Oil prices rose to near $72 a barrel Tuesday in Asia after Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said he's hopeful the world's No 1 economy won't fall back into a "double dip" recession. Talks of writers

"Would you please give us a brief account of the conference?"

"On the opening day of the conference, the Secretary-1 and the Information Minister delivered speeches. The Secretary-1 instructed the association to preserve the fine traditions on national tasks in accordance with the bounden duty; to inculcate the people with correct views and a strong sense of patriotism; to encourage the people to take part in nation-building tasks; to crush subversives who are trying to undermine national solidarity; to pursue the people to learn lessons from untold miseries some countries are facing; to maintain the legislative, judicial and executive sectors as the fourth pillar; and to write works according to the press code of ethic in order to organize the people through the might of literature."

"Right, literature is, indeed, very influential and powerful. So, the works of the literati, who uphold national interest, is beneficial to the nation and the people. But, the pen of the subversives can harm the nation and the people. So, the Myanmar Writers and Journalists Association has to cope with the acts of the subversives through the might of literature, and to educate and organize the people in order that the people have correct concepts, do correct acts, and they will not divert themselves away from national interest."

"The association has to lead all in the media that is the fourth estate. So, it has to uphold the national interest and the press code of conduct in creating works of literature. It also has to make all possible arrangements because it is responsible for holding in check the legislative, judicial and executive sectors."

"I take serious the value of community peace and national unity. And I felt heartbroken when I witnessed the hardships the people were suffering before peace was restored. So, writers of us have to resist the subversives, and organize the people through the might of literature in order that the people and peace groups will realize the value of unity and peace and work together with Union Spirit in the national interest."

"As instructed by the Secretary-1, many countries faced untold miseries and some countries are facing untold miseries due to certain countries' invasion. So, writers of us are responsible for pointing out those incidents for the knowledge of the people."

"Certainly, I think all members of writers and journalists associations and writers, especially the Central Executive Committee of the association should adopt a work programme in this regard. And the associations of the townships, in which national races reside, should publish educative books in respective languages."

"Tell us something about the message of the Information Minister."

"In the first part of his message, the Information Minister urged the writers, who share common goal, to preserve and promote the prestige of the association in harmony. And in the final part, he called for building the association into a strong, efficient one. I notice according to the instructions, the minister placed a lot of emphasis on unity."

"Unity is strength, isn't it? We need to organize all writers and journalists to take shelters of the association. We have to build consolidated unity in the Central Executive Committee, unity between the central and township associations based on mutual respects, and intra-unity in township associations. If so, the strength of the association will be a driving force behind the interest of the nation and the people. In addition, the association will be able to serve the national interest forever."

"The minister also instructed the association members to serve the interest and carry out welfare service of writers, and to take active part in the functions of the foundation."

"Moreover, in the interest of all writers and the whole literature world, the minister called for extending the market of works of literature till reaching rural areas, and to publish fine works in English version in order to penetrate the international market."

"In addition, he called for nurturing writers through translation courses and seminars, and conducting journalism courses and basic written courses to sharpen the ability of writers."

"The message covers all points of views, and it implies that he places a great deal of reliance on writers."

"You are right. The minister not only created a prosperous future of writers, but also gave methods to do so. He stressed the importance of extending the literature market up to rural areas and penetrating the international market. In that regard, he instructed us to distribute interesting and educative books that are suited for rural people at reasonable prices; to organize the people to take more interest in reading, and to cultivate the habit of reading; and to work together for seeing to the foundation's functions for sustainable progress of rural libraries."

"The government is taking measures to transform into the International Standard Book Number (ISBN) system to use the electronic system in placing orders and distributing books in order to penetrate the international market. Now, the International ISBN Agency has accepted Myanmar as a member."

"Regarding the practice of democracy, the minister called for taking lessons from the weak points of newspapers, journals and magazines in the past democratic period of the nation in order to guide them in future; broadening the horizons of the people because the public pillar plays a major role in exercising democracy; check and balance of the three major forces: the people, parties and politicians, and media men for correct practice of democracy; and correct democratic practice of individuals and controlling one another. He also noted that we would have to prioritize national interest whatever we did and in carrying out democratization process."

"Sometime in the past, media men failed to give priority to national interest in exercising democracy, and had partiality for particular parties in news reporting and failed to honour the press code of ethic. To make matters worse, political parties and politicians centered self-interest instead of national interest. So, our country was on the verge of collapse. So, we have to take lessons from past events in transforming the nation from old system into democracy system.

Journalists need to know how to practise democracy to maintain the legislative, judicial and executive pillars in order that they will not deviate from the course of national interest. Furthermore, we have to expand the horizons of the people for development of human resources and enabling them to distinguish between good and bad. Therefore, I would say the duties of writers and journalists are very formidable."

"You are right. So, I would like to suggest that the association prescribe a lesson in the courses that all should prioritize the press code of ethic and national interest."

"Certainly, media men should be trained in advance because the fourth estate will have to take greater responsibility in the near future."

"Well, tell us a bit more about your conference."

"It was a normal conference. The representatives made positive comments on the strong and weak points on the reports that were presented in the previous four-year term, and they unanimously approved them. They also laid down follow-up programmes and approved them. Then, the old executive committee members resigned, and the new Central Executive Committee was elected by ballot."

"What about the new Central Executive Committee?"

"Four aged members from the old committee were appointed as patrons. A healthy member who wrote a lot and can share a lot of time was elected as the chairman. And some active, young members were elected as secretariat members. Some are old members, and some are new members. So, I think the new Central Executive Committee will be able to manage all the tasks."

"I see. If all shoulder duties with renewed strength and do their bit, they will be able to carry out literary and national duties well. I am sure they will overcome all forms of challenges if they are capable with a sense of duty, if they have good management skills, if they apply collective leadership system and undertake responsibilities individually, if they show mutual respects and goodwill to each other, and they work with understanding, a sense of forgiveness and unity. I believe the new committee will try its best in implementing the tasks."

"Well, it's a nice conversation. And the refreshments are delicious. Thank you. Ok, let's call it a day. See you later, bye."

After my fellow writers had left, I thought about our discussions. The demanding tasks of the Myanmar Writers and Journalists Association are designed to serve the interest of literary professionals and the whole literary world, boost their unity and strength, build the association into an active, dynamic one, and serve national interest. I wish the new Central Executive Committee a greater success and unity in implementing the tasks, serving the interest of the nation and the people and literary professionals. And may the Rural Library Foundation achieve success in its functions forever.

World Economic Forum on East Asia 2010 hosted by Executive Chairman Dr. Klaus Schwab of World Economic Forum.

Next, the Seminar on 'Making the Mekong: Regional Growth and Leadership' followed. Director and Head of Asia for World Economic Forum Mr Sushant Palakurthi Rao acted as Master of Ceremonies.

Executive Chairman Dr. Klaus Schwab of World Economic Forum, Prime Minister of Vietnam Mr Nguyen Tan Dung and Prime Minister of Thailand Mr Abhisit Vejjajiva made discussion points.

In his discussion, Prime Minister U Thein Sein said:

Let me share my views on the topic of how to balance the Greater Mekong Sub-region common goals of economic growth and the protection of natural resources.

Mekong Sub-region has potentials for development. With the view to be more harmonious and integrated among the six GMS countries, the Greater Mekong Sub-region Economic Cooperation Program covers 9 sectors and areas of cooperation.

There are specific projects/programs for development as well as sub-regional level cooperation projects/programs. The sub-regional projects and programs under the GMS Strategic Framework complement national development projects/programs of the GMS countries.

The Greater Mekong Sub-region is rich in natural resources along with its huge land area, water resources and mountain ranges. These natural resources are being extracted and used in implementation programs for national development. The nature itself of the natural resources is that some resources can be replenished whereas some are non-renewable; they are depleted after using them.

In this regard, it is to be noted that resources that are non-renewable or non-replenishable nature should be systematically used or exploited. Otherwise, they will be depleted gradually. Technologies for exploration and exploitation of natural resources should be in conformity with environment, in order that these natural resources will be sustained and at the same time, environment will be also managed.

To maintain the sustainability of the environment, development objectives of the GMS countries and conservation of environment should be harmonized. We must be fully aware that our economic development endeavors should not be deteriorating the environment.

We should be very careful about the number of national development projects using natural resources for their implementation and the amount they used.

The natural resources once depleted, could not be renewable. Environment impact of development or amount of resources needed for implementation of developmental projects and usable amount should be judged wisely.

The Union of Myanmar is one of the GMS Countries with abundant natural resources. Here, I would like to take the opportunity to brief you our efforts for economic development and also the conservation of environment and management of the utilization of natural resources.

Myanmar's economy is still agro-based and we are maintaining the sustainability of the agriculture sector that comprises of agriculture, livestock and fisheries and forestry areas.

Our net sown acreage is 67.3%, which shows we have arable land to expand. Higher economic growth rates are achievable in the foreseeable future, based on agriculture sector, in which we can expand both horizontally and vertically. Further development of our economy could be made by sustaining the agriculture sector without depleting the environment and the utilization of the natural resources.

In livestock and fisheries sector, studies have been undertaken for annual allowable catch and limit it to conserve the sustainable livestock and fishery resources.

the Myanmar Prime Minister participating in World Economic Forum on East Asia, that participation of Myanmar, one of the Greater Mekong Sub-region countries, in the forum contributed to success of the forum and also made the forum more meaningful.

He went on to say that he acknowledged hearty welcome and kind hospitality of Head of State Senior General Than Shwe and the Myanmar Prime Minister during his visit to Myanmar last April; that his visit to Myanmar was fruitful due to all assistance of Myanmar side.

He said that Myanmar and Vietnam had ever been friendly nations; that Vietnam wished Myanmar successful implementation of seven-step Road Map, that at present, diplomatic relations, trade and economic cooperation between the two nations was going from strength to strength.

The Myanmar Prime Minister in his speech said that he felt proud of Vietnam for being able to host World Economic Forum on East Asia for the first time which is usually held in developed countries; that Myanmar and Vietnam were friendly nations and assisting and supporting each other in international and regional affairs. He expressed gratitude to Vietnam for standing by Myanmar side.

He went on that twelve regions had been chosen for economic cooperation between the two nations; that Myanmar would coordinate with Vietnam to speed up momentum in economic cooperation. The Prime Minister then touched upon progress in political affairs of Myanmar, saying that required laws had been issued for election scheduled to be held this year and election commission had also been formed; that political parties had been scrutinized and passed; that there had been 42 parties that had submitted applications to form and to continue existence as political parties.

The Vietnamese Prime Minister replied that the two nations had been closely cooperating not only in regional organizations but in international community; that Vietnam was ready to assist and support Myanmar also in the future.

In conclusion, the Vietnamese Prime Minister said that Vietnam would help Myanmar in modernization and promoting stability; that Vietnam would support Myanmar's efforts for the international community to witness its successful holding of election.—MNA

Similarly in forestry sector, we have calculated the annual allowable cuts so as to maintain the sustainability of the forestry sector. We have greening projects at national level and forestation, afforestation and re-conservation programs are also being formulated and implemented.

The industry sector can cause resource-depletion. The industry sector accounted for 17% in Myanmar's economy. In the mean time, we have not many industries under mining sector and oil and gas sector where non-renewable resources are exploited. The production of mining, oil and other industries based on resource-depletion is only 4.1% of the total manufacturing and production sector.

The hydro-power generation is most essential in electric power sector. We are implementing reforestation programs and conservation of water-shed programs for the conservation of environment and water resources.

To sum up, I would like to stress that the use of non-renewable resources in Myanmar's concerted efforts for economic development is not much and that basically we are using replenishable or renewable resources. In this context, we could fairly state that the use of natural resources have been well-thought and also that there is no danger for the depletion of our natural resources in the foreseeable future. We will maintain this situation while we endeavor for the further development of our country. At the same time, we will promote and enhance our services sector where there is no resource-depletion.

Then Prime Minister of Cambodia Samdech Hun Sen and Prime Minister of Lao People's Democratic Republic Mr Bouasone Bouphavanh made discussion points.

After the ceremony, Prime Minister U Thein Sein posed for a documentary photo together with Heads of State/Government and heads of organizations from respective countries.

Gladiator graveyard discovered in northern England

Dozens of headless skeletons excavated from a northern English building site appear to be the remains of Roman gladiators, one of whom had bites from a lion, tiger, bear or other large animal, archaeologists said.

Experts said new forensic evidence suggests the bones belong to the professional fighters, who were often killed while entertaining spectators.

Most of the skeletons were male and appeared stronger and taller than the average Roman, with signs of arm-muscle stress that suggest weapons training that began in the men's teenage years.

In this image provided by Channel 4 on 6 June, 2010, a skeleton unearthed at a building site in York, England, is shown.

French archaeologists dig up 1983 picnic table

PARIS, 8 June—French archaeologists are to open to the public a ground-breaking dig: not the long-lost vestiges of Gaul but a vast, half-finished picnic, buried complete with food, drink, tables and chairs almost three decades ago. On 23 April, 1983, around 100 people sat down to a French feast in the grounds of a chateau near Versailles. On the menu: pigs' ears, tail and trotters, smoked udders, tripe and a host of dishes not for the faint-hearted.

Towards the end of the meal at the domaine du Montcel in Jouy-en-Josas, a whistle was blown and the merry throng downed knives and forks and buried the remains of the banquet in its entirety in a pre-dug 40-yard-long trench. Behind the curious exercise was a Swiss artist named Daniel Spoerri, a key figure in a movement called Eat Art. His guests were a bunch of celebrity French new realist artists, as well as filmmakers and critics. — Internet

Mexico bodies had hearts cut out

CANCUN, 8 June—Mexican police discovered six dead bodies in a cavern near the tourist resort of Cancun on Monday, three of them cut open with their hearts removed. Three of the bodies had the letter Z carved on their abdomens — a possible reference to the Zeta drug gang, though officials did not make an explicit connection to the cartel violence that has plagued many parts of Mexico. — Internet Incorporated in 1974, Petronas was vested with the entire ownership and control of the petroleum resources in Malaysia.

It has since grown into a fully integrated oil and gas corporation, ranked among the Fortune Global 500 largest corporations in the world.

Md Arif said that Petronas was keen on unconventional oil and gas sectors with high potential and new sources of energy beyond oil and gas in order to optimize value from its many investments back home or in other parts of the world.

Cameron warns of years of painful cuts as British economy in worse shape than thought

LONDON, 8 June—British new Prime Minister David Cameron said on Sunday that the country faced years of painful cuts as the economy was in far worse state than previously thought, and cuts would focus on welfare payments, public sector jobs and public sector pay.

Cameron came to power less than a month ago by forming a coalition between his Conservative party and the third force in British politics, the Liberal Democrats.

The principal task his coalition government has identified is tackling the record public sector deficit of 156 billion pounds (240 billion US dollars).

One of the major differences between the economic policies of the former Labour government and the new coalition government was the speed at which the deficit should be tackled, with Labour urging caution for fear of damaging the emerging economic recovery.

"There is a huge amount of debt that has got to be dealt with. Crossing our fingers, waiting for growth and hoping it will go away is simply not an answer."

Deforestation worsens in Brazilian Amazon

RIO DE JANEIRO, 8 June—About 103.5 square km of rainforests disappeared in March and April in Brazil's Amazon region, roughly the size of Paris, said a new report.

The National Institute of Space Research (Inpe) said in the report on Monday the deforestation in the Brazilian Amazon increased by 95 percent year-on-year over the period.

According to the Inpe, the state of Mato Grosso reported the highest deforestation figures in March and April: a loss of 76.4 square km of rainforests, or 79 percent of the total.

The real situation could be worse, since technicians could only observe 54 percent of the Brazilian Amazon in March and 56 percent in April. The rest of the region was covered by clouds due to the rainy season.

Brazil to enhance job training for low-income citizens

BRASILIA, 8 June—Brazil plans to step up job training for those receiving minimum income from the government, President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva said on Monday.

In his weekly radio show, Lula told the nation an initiative to that end is the "Next Step" programme, which will train beneficiaries of Bolsa Familia programme to work for civil construction projects.

About 13 million families receive a monthly aid of 200 reais (about 108 US dollars) on average under Bolsa Familia, the leading Brazilian social assistance programme.

"If we train all these people in the coming months, I think we will be taking an extraordinary step forward," said the president.

He said major Brazilian cities need about 150,000 new construction workers, which will be a job opportunity for participants of the "Next Step" programme.

Last week, Lula attended the graduation ceremony for the first 1,200 students who were trained through the "Next Step" program and will work for construction projects such as the Programme to Accelerate Growth (PAC) and the "My house, My life" housing plan.

Japan midfielder Hasebe facing injury scare

JOHANNESBURG, 8 June —Japan and Wolfsburg midfielder Makoto Hasebe has faced an injury scare ahead of his country's World Cup opener against Cameroon next Monday.

The 26-year-old cut short his training session with the Blue Samurai on Monday to check pain in his hip which he hurt in Japan's 2-0 warm-up defeat by Ivory Coast in the Swiss city of Sion on Friday.

"The pain was bothering him and he went to a hospital to see if it is alright," Japan Football Association spokesman Kazutake Nishizawa said. The extent of his problem was not immediately known.

Hasebe has played as a key defensive midfielder for Japan in recent years and as the captain in their last two warm-up matches.

Marquez back training with Mexico after leg injury

JOHANNESBURG, 8 June—Defender Rafael Marquez trained on Monday with Mexico for the first time since injuring his right leg in last week's 2-1 exhibition victory over Italy.

It was Mexico's first practice session with every player present since the team arrived in South Africa a few days ago.

Mexico opens the World Cup on Friday against host South Africa. Federation president Justino Compean said the squad "is nervous but confident" because Mexico has played more warmup matches to prepare for the tournament than any of the other 31 teams.

Mexico has played 12 friendly games, winning eight, drawing two and losing two.

The main question seems to be the status of midfielder Andres Guardado, who has been relegated to a reserve role in recent matches after mostly being a starter since coach Javier Aguirre took over the team 14 months ago.—Internet

HPV vaccine comes under spotlight in S Korea

SEOUL, 8 June— The human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccine, though a bit of a tongue-twister, has been one of the latest buzzwords for South Korean obstetricians and gynecologists.

Many of them have lately jumped on the global bandwagon of promoting the HPV vaccines designed to protect women against certain strains of the virus commonly associated with cervical cancer, the second leading cause of cancer-related death for South Korean women.

Violent video games may increase aggression in some but not others, says new research

LONDON, 8 June— Playing violent video games can make some adolescents more hostile, particularly those who are less agreeable, less conscientious and easily angered.

But for others, it may offer opportunities to learn new skills and improve social networking.

In a special issue of the journal Review of General Psychology, published in June by the American Psychological Association, researchers looked at several studies that examined the potential uses of video games as a way to improve visual/spatial skills, as a health aid to help manage diabetes or pain and as a tool to complement psychotherapy. One study examined the negative effects of violent video games on some people.—Internet
