Generate brighter future for women

Myanmar women preserve fine traditions. They are well capable of serving the interests of others with a sense of mothering spirit and loving-kindness. They equally share family duties with their spouses, and national duties with their male counterparts.

As more than half of the nation's population are women, the Myanmar Women's Affairs Federation has been established with a view to improving the development of women. The federation dedicates itself to a variety of functions for life security, development and improving the socio-economic status of women.

In order to achieve its lofty aims, the Myanmar Women's Affairs Federation has formed state/division, district, township, ward and village women's affairs organizations, which take an active role in operations for prevention of women against violence, prevention and control of trafficking in persons, and nurturing and rehabilitation of victims.

The Myanmar Women's Affairs Federation works in collaboration with related ministries and international organizations in non-formal education programmes, literary campaigns, continuing education plans, birth-spacing projects, disease prevention and control projects, and home care projects, which are a testament to the fact that the federation pays serious attention to development of women.

More than that, the Myanmar Women's Affairs Federation is trying to step up its operations by conducting technological courses, seeking jobs and carrying out income generation programmes. Simultaneously, it is guiding mass of women to the tasks for bolstering the sense of patriotic spirit, national solidarity, and preservation of cultural heritage.

Myanmar women's performances are of high caliber. In the course of the nation's history, they have been in perpetual service of the public. Each and every woman is therefore to continue to work hard under the leadership of the Myanmar Women's Affairs Federation in creating a brighter future of the entire Myanmar women and nurturing new generations.

Runaway horses kill one, injure 24 in US Independence Day parade

BEIJING, 5 July—One woman, 60, was killed and 23 others were injured Sunday at the Independence Day parade in Bellevue, Iowa, by two runaway horses which rammed into spectators.

The horses ran out of control after they rubbed their heads against each other, causing one's bridle to come off. They then took off, taking the wagon they were pulling behind them, running into families watching the parade along the way, injuring spectators as young as two years old.

A police officer said the woman died of her injuries sustained in the incident Sunday evening at the University of Iowa Hospital in Iowa City, according to media reports.

Police said victims suffered injuries ranging from multiple fractures to collapsed lungs and bruises and abrasions. Five of the injured were in critical condition, including the woman who died.

NATO: soldier killed on patrol in Afghanistan

KABUL, 5 July—A soldier serving with NATO's forces in Afghanistan has been killed in the country's south, where the fight against the Taliban is at its fiercest, NATO said Monday.

The soldier was killed on Sunday while on combat patrol, NATO's International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) said.

The death brings to 329 the number of foreign soldiers to have died in the Afghan war so far this year, according to an AFP tally based on that kept by the independent icasualties.org website.

The Fourth of July casualty, the sixth for the month, came as US General David Petraeus assumed command on Sunday of the 140,000 NATO and US troops in Afghanistan fighting the militancy.

He replaced his sacked predecessor US General Stanley McChrystal, and takes over as criticism of the war, increasingly seen as bogged down to the Taliban's advantage, is reaching a crescendo.

Is bug spray dangerous?

WASHINGTON, 5 July—A summer necessity, bug spray keeps insects away - but is it also bad for our health? Researchers are debating whether the anti-pest sprays with which we douse ourselves are putting our health in danger.

One chemical found in many repellents is DEET (N,N-diethyl-m-toluamide). Developed and tested in the 1940s and 1950s by the US Army for use in jungle warfare during World War II, DEET is extremely efficient at repelling mosquitoes, ticks, fleas, chiggers and blood-feeding flies such as black flies and deer flies.

In addition to popular forms such as aerosols and pump sprays, DEET is also found in towelettes, lotions, creams and gels. The chemical keeps insects away for hours after application and can be applied over sunscreen.

But as long as DEET has been around, it has raised questions over its safety from citizens and scientists alike. Some are bothered by the smell, while others worry that it may irritate skin; many have felt the burning sting of accidentally spraying bug repellent over a minor cut.

Although the Environmental Protection Agency re-approved the use of DEET in 1998 after an extensive safety review, new data suggests that the substance may affect our cells in unintended ways.

A 2009 study found that DEET can interfere with the activity of enzymes that are vital for the nervous system to function properly. In the study, the researchers found that DEET blocked the enzyme cholinesterase, which is essential for transmitting messages from the brain to the muscles in insects.

Japanese lab finds 'minute particles' in asteroid pod

TOKYO, 5 July—Japan's space agency said Monday it has found "minute particles" of what it hopes is asteroid dust in the capsule of the space probe Hayabusa which returned to Earth last month.

Scientists hope any dust samples from the potato-shaped asteroid Itokawa could help reveal secrets about the origins of the solar system.

"We have started the opening process of the sample container of Hayabusa since 24 June, 2010 and confirmed there are minute particles," the Japan

Aerospace Exploration Agency (JAXA) said.

But the agency added it remained unclear whether the particles are contaminants from Earth or come from Itokawa which the space probe landed on during its multi-billion-kilometre (mile) journey.

It is expected to take months to get the final results of the analysis.

When Hayabusa was launched in 2003, the canister was open, meaning it may contain materials that originated on Earth, a JAXA spokesman said.

The capsule carried by the Japanese Hayabusa spacecraft is shown after it parachuted back to land before being retrieved within the Woomera military zone in the Australian Outback. The analysis of minute particles of dust found in the capsule is expected to take months.

Malians mobilise to protect dwindling elephants

BANZENA, 5 July—Ali Ag Rhissa, a young Touareg nomad, sits in his tent, his gun ready, on the frontline of one of Mali's battles — protecting its majestic but dwindling herds of desert elephants. Faced with the dual threat of drought and poachers, the elephant population has almost halved in recent decades.

But help is at hand from local people in northern Mali, who have started to form conservation brigades to ward off poachers and protect the animal from extinction.

A desert elephant walks in the north of Mali, known as the Gourma area.

Between 1972 and 1974 there were 550 elephants in the Gourma region, now there are no more than 354. In June alone, severe drought killed 21 of the animals.

The elephants of the Gourma are the biggest in Africa and are tempting quarry for poachers, both for their ivory tusks and their meat, which is popular in neighbouring countries. "When we hear the sound of a vehicle, we get ready to make sure the poachers can't settle here and kill our elephants," said Rhissa, who lives in a tent with his wife and three children in Banzena, near Timbuktu.

Australia launches research on drug delivery system to kill cancer

CANBERRA, 5 July—Australian researchers on Monday said they were working on a “smart bomb” drug delivery system which they said would actively search out and destroy cancer cells within the body.

It would also have fewer side-effects than conventional chemotherapy, said Deakin University’s Associate Professor Wei Duan, who heads the project in collaboration with scientists in India.

“Cancer cells are particularly difficult to kill as they contain so-called cancer stem cells, the root or seed cancer cells that are resistant to drugs,” Duan said in a statement on Monday.

“While current treatments kill the bulk of the cancer cell, the cancer root escapes the therapy and can regenerate into a new cancer mass. “The aim of our research is to develop a smart bomb that can penetrate the cell and release the drugs within the cells, rather than from the outside, and kills the whole tumor, root and all.”—Xinhua

Transient kidney failure not so bad

CINCINNATI, 5 July—Heart patient kidney failure — if transient — may not be as harmful as once thought, US researchers say.

Dr Andrew Burger of the University of Cincinnati says heart patients had better outcomes if worsening kidney function was transient rather than persistent. The study of acute heart patients found that 17.3 percent of those without worsening kidney function died, 20.5 percent with transient kidney dysfunction died, but 46.1 percent with persistent kidney failure died. “This study is the first of its kind to look at this relationship to help physicians assess out-comes and possibly determine the most efficient way to treat heart patients who develop kidney failure at any degree,” Burger said in a statement.

Burger and colleagues studied 467 acute heart failure patients and gauged kidney function on days 2, 5, 14 and 30 of the study by checking levels of creatinine — produced by the muscles and brain filtered out of the blood by the kidneys.

Do video games cause attention problems in kids?

NEW YORK, 5 July—Long hours in front of the television, whether channel surfing or gaming, could make it difficult for kids to concentrate in school, psychologists said Monday.

While researchers are still divided on the issue, the findings jibe with most earlier work on the effects of television watching in kids, they said.

“What we don’t know at this point is why TV and video games really would cause attention problems,” said Douglas A Gentile, who worked on the study.

Gentile, who runs the Media Research Lab at Iowa State University in Ames, added that too much screen time had also been linked to increased aggression and, perhaps less surprisingly, expanding waistlines.

Sleep woes linked to weight gain for middle-aged women

BEIJING, 5 July—New research shows that having trouble sleeping means more possibility to gain weight for middle-aged women, according to Reuters reports.

The new findings, which were reported in the International Journal of Obesity, strengthen the evidence that sleep problems are related to weight gain.

Finnish researchers, led by Peppi Lyytikainen of the University of Helsinki, followed more than 7,300 40- to 60-year-old adults for seven years. They found that women who reported significant sleep problems at the outset generally put on more weight over time than women who slept well.

Roughly one-third of the women with frequent sleep problems gained at least 11 pounds, versus about a fifth of the women with no sleep difficulties at the outset.

While the findings do not prove cause-and-effect, they raise the possibility that improving sleep quality might help stave off excess weight gain, Lyytikainen told Reuters Health by e-mail.

The 17 percent of men who reported sleep problems were no more likely to gain weight than those who slept without difficulty.

Gold's break shakes out some bugs, but not all

NEW YORK, 5 July—Gold's bad week shakes conventional analysts, but the radical gold bugs remain confident if cynical.

Gold broke badly, especially on Monday and Thursday, losing nearly 4% on the week.

The respected institutionally oriented service Gartman Letter asked the key question on Friday: "Has the 'game' changed? Are we now going from a bull market to a bear market, and did it happen in the course of one trading session? Likely not, but only a fool would say unequivocally that it has not. ...We've gone from a huge profit to a swift loss in the course of one session. We are clearly not happy."

The technical damage, of course, has been considerable — enough for long-term chartist Martin Pring of Pring.com to put out an unusual interim report on Thursday evening: "Gold, which was in a narrowing trading range and looking like it may break to the upside, has instead broken to the downside. Not only that, but the gold/silver ratio has also completed a top. ... We think the gold break is valid. Consequently, we are no longer recommending a 5% allocation to the yellow metal."

Friday, however, gave some relief, with August gold gaining a dollar. JSMineset's Dan Norcini pointed out that the metal "put in an 'inside day' — an inside day is one in which the market high and low of the current session do not exceed the previous day's high or low — so that is encouraging to the friends of gold that sellers could not manage any further additional downside traction." —Internet

Airbus China joint venture delivers

BEIJING, 5 July—The country made a major move up the manufacturing value chain over the weekend as an Airbus joint venture in Harbin churned out its first work package, a set of A320 elevators.

Experts say it will still take time, however, for the domestic firms to improve their own research and development.

European aircraft producer Airbus holds a 20 percent stake in the Harbin Hafei Airbus Composite Manufacturing Centre, which began parts production at the end of 2009 for the A320, a single-aisle passenger plane.

The centre is one of six enterprises engaged in components production including back boarding gates and cargo doors for Airbus. Half of the 5,900 Airbus planes in operation worldwide have parts made in China, where Airbus is expected to raise its purchasing sum to $450 million by 2015 from $200 million this year.

Laurence Barron, president of Airbus China, said last month the company was prepping one or two joint ventures outside traditional industrial areas in China, which may include aircraft financing and leasing, air traffic control, maintenance, repair and overhaul, and onboard wireless communications connectivity.

Travis Perkins buys BSS Group in £557.6m deal

LONDON, 5 July—Builders' merchant Travis Perkins has agreed a £557.6m deal to buy plumbing and heating company BSS Group.

The offer, made up of cash and shares, values each BSS share at 435.8 pence, a 4.7% premium on Friday's closing price of 416.2p.

The firms said the deal would create the UK's leading plumbing and heating distribution business.

Travis Perkins said it believed it could achieve pre-tax savings of at least £25m in 2013 through the deal.

"Our respective businesses are complementary and we look forward to working with BSS's customers, suppliers and employees," said Robert Walker, chairman of Travis Perkins.

Peter Warry, chairman of BSS, added: "The management team and employees have succeeded in building BSS into a leading specialist distributor to trade customers and a market leader in the UK plumbing and heating sector, creating significant value for shareholders."

Chrysler to set up separate Fiat dealer network

Australia's CSR sells sugar arm

SYDNEY, 5 July—Australian manufacturer CSR said on Monday it was selling its sugar and renewable energy arm to Singaporean agribusiness Wilmar for 1.47 billion US dollars, ditching an offer from China's Bright Food Group.

CSR said it had looked at different options for off-loading sugar-giant Sucrogen before agreeing the 1.75 billion Australian dollar sale, which matched Bright Food's conditional offer in April.

"We have been working towards this objective for some time and having explored a number of strategic alternatives, the board believes a sale to Wilmar is in the best interests of shareholders and stakeholders in CSR," chairman Ian Blackburne said in a statement.

Sucrogen produces about two million tons of raw sugar a year, about 40 percent of the total from Australia, a major regional supplier.

CSR had been in talks for several months with Bright Food, which was reportedly considering lowering its bid.

Oil rises near $73 amid light 4th of July trading

SINGAPORE, 5 July—Oil prices rose to nearly $73 a barrel Monday in Asia as investors worried about a weak US economic recovery amid light holiday trading volume.

Benchmark crude for August delivery was up 38 cents to $72.52 a barrel at midday Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract lost 81 cents to settle at $72.14 on Friday.

US markets are closed Monday for the Fourth of July holiday.

Oil prices fell the previous six trading sessions and dropped almost 10 percent last quarter amid ongoing fears about Europe's financial crisis and slowing economic growth in China.

On Friday, the Labour Department said the US economy added a net 83,000 workers, which was more than May but fewer than March and April, stoking concerns that global economic growth and crude demand could be slowing.

Farmers find opportunity in immigrant vegetables

SOUTH DEERFIELD, 5 July—Maxixe, a Brazilian relative of the cucumber, is relatively unknown in the US, but it may one day be as common as cilantro as farmers and consumers embrace more so-called ethnic vegetables.

Agriculture experts at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and elsewhere are teaching farmers to grow non-native vegetables that appeal to a growing market of African, Asian and Latin American immigrants. These immigrants and their children already account for more than one-third of produce sales in supermarkets, said Frank Mangan, a plant and soil sciences professor at UMass. And as other customers become more familiar with ethnic foods, experts expect sales to grow even more.

The number of Massachusetts farmers markets that carry ethnic vegetables jumped by 25 percent in a year, to 202 last year, said Scott Soares, commissioner of the state's Department of Agricultural Resources.

Bob Ehart, public policy director of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture, said the organization doesn't track the popularity of ethnic crops, but the trend in Massachusetts appears to be happening in other states as well.—Internet

Show gathers both heirs to marvel at Picasso, Klee

An exhibition in Switzerland has brought together the genius of modern art contemporaries Pablo Picasso and Paul Klee with an added twist: the first meeting of their two heirs.

Picasso and Klee the elders, among the most influential artists of the 20th century, met only twice.

Once when Klee (1879-1940) was among a group of artists who visited the ebullient Spaniard's studio in Paris in 1933.

The second time was four years later when Picasso (1881-1973) came to see the pensive German and Swiss painter in the Swiss capital Bern.

More than 70 years on, the Zentrum Paul Klee museum in Bern is attempting to draw parallels between them with an exhibition of more than 180 works called "Klee meets Picasso".

TOKYO, 5 July—Toyota started recalling more than 90,000 luxury Lexus and Crown vehicles Monday in Japan over defective engines — the latest setback for the automaker beset with quality problems.

Toyota Motor Corp. spokesman Paul Nolasco said recalls in overseas markets will follow soon, totaling about 270,000 vehicles globally. That includes: 138,000 vehicles in the US, 15,000 in Europe, 10,000 in the Middle East, 6,000 in China, 4,000 in Canada, and 8,000 in other regions.

Toyota told the Japanese government Monday it was recalling 91,903 vehicles for flaws in the valve springs, a crucial engine component, that could make the automobile stall while in motion.

BEIJING, 5 July—Elin Nordegren, Tiger Woods' soon-to-be ex-wife, will get 100 million US dollars in their divorce settlement, according to US media reports Monday.

In addition to 100 million dollars, Nordegren has also won the right to gain some child benefit for their children- Charlie Axel (17 months) and Sam Alexis (3 years old), according to KWGN reports.

The reports also suggest that Woods is prevented from bringing his new girlfriends around his children who are expected to live primarily with their mother.

On the other hand, Nordegren will be prevented from speaking about their marriage or Woods' alleged affairs in interviews. She will also be prevented from writing a book about the events leading up to their divorce, according to foreign media reports.

The divorce, which is expected to be finalized sometime next week, is going to be one of the top ten most expensive celebrity divorces of all time.

New "Twilight" sequel earns less than predecessor

LOS ANGELES, 5 July—The latest "Twilight" movie earned $262 million during its first five days at the worldwide box office, but fell short of forecasts in North America while the foreign sales picture was murky.

"The Twilight Saga: Eclipse" sold about $162 million worth of tickets in the United States and Canada, distributor Summit Entertainment said on Sunday.

But a day earlier, the closely held studio had forecast a five-day haul of about $173 million. Its predecessor, "The Twilight Saga: New Moon," had earned about $165 million at the same point last November.

Summit said the Saturday forecast was simply a rough estimate, and it was not too concerned about "Eclipse" getting off to a slower start than "New Moon."

Even though the relentless hype on the vampire romance series soared to new levels, Americans in general are more concerned with US Independence Day holiday weekend festivities, said Richie Fay, Summit's president of domestic theatrical distribution. He predicted strong midweek sales.

'Fever' urges governments to fight malaria locally

MUMBAI, 5 July—"The Fever: How Malaria Has Ruled Humankind for 500,000 Years" (Sarah Crichton Books/Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $26), by Sonia Shah: At age 7, author Sonia Shah visits her grandmother in southern India. She must take anti-malaria pills, and she lies in a stuffy cage of netting — mosquitoes perched menacingly above — while her local cousins sleep nearby, unencumbered in the warm breeze.

The mosquitoes "sneak into the gap my protruding limbs create, and they feast," she complains. The next morning, her grandmother rubs talcum powder into Shah's pink scabs while her smooth-skinned cousins snicker. Shah's relatives profess the ancient Jain religion, which holds all life sacred and forbids violence. Her reaction is heretical, the author recalls vividly.

"When no one is looking," Shah writes in "The Fever: How Malaria Has Ruled Humankind for 500,000 Years," "I crush the mosquitoes' poised little figures with my palm and smear the remains on a hidden seam in the couch."

Jam said to be made from Princess Di's hair

LONDON, 5 July—The royal hair? Jam made from what its maker claims is one of Princess Diana's hairs is up for sale at an art exhibition in London.

The preserve, called "occult jam," is part of a surrealist art show at London's Barbican Art Gallery that includes exhibits by Salvador Dali and Rene Margritte. The 5-pound-a-jar ($7.60) jam is both art and food, Sam Bompas, who founded catering company Bompas and Parr, said on Sunday.

He said the preserve is made by infusing a tiny speck of the late princess of Wales' hair with gin, which is then combined with milk and sugar to create a product with a taste resembling condensed milk.

The hair was bought on eBay for $10 from a US dealer who collects what he says is celebrity hair and sells it in extremely tiny parts.—Internet

Number 10 flops at World Cup

PARIS, 5 July—It has long been seen as the magic number in football, but the number 10 shirt has failed to live up to its star billing at the South African World Cup.

Wearing the number ten on your back has earned exalted, almost sacred, status over the years thanks not least to the exploits first of Pele with Brazil, then Diego Maradona with Argentina with Zinedine Zidane reprising the role in 1998.

But while what the Brazilians call the 'dez' and the Argentines the 'diez' has taken on iconic stature, the current generation have thus far failed to live up to their forebears.

Brazil number ten Kaka had hoped to engrave his name in the World Cup hall of fame despite coming into the tournament on the back of an injury-plagued, below par season at Real Madrid.

But his showing remained obstinately on a lower plane as the Brazilians never hit the heights of Pele's generation, bowing out meekly to the Dutch after Kaka again failed to hit the target.

Three assists and no goals was not what fans of the auriverde had been demanding.

As for Lionel Messi, the record books will show that his second World Cup finals ended in similar ignominy as his first.

In 2006, he was left on the bench as Germany beat Argentina on penalties. This time, he failed to live up to his billing as the world's greatest player continually running down blind alleys as the Germans this time thrashed his countrymen 4-0.

Kaka was not fit for duty - Brazil doctor

RIO DE JANEIRO, 5 July—Brazil team doctor Jose Luiz Runco admitted on Sunday that star midfielder Kaka, who failed to shine at the World Cup, was not properly fit and wouldn't have played at a lesser event.

"Maybe in other situations Kaka would not have played even the World Cup, but he really wanted to be there," said Runco as the squad touched down in Rio following their flight back from South Africa.

Kaka came into the tournament on the back of a disappointing season with Real Madrid which CAPE TOWN, 5 July—One player celebrated the Germany-Argentina World Cup quarterfinal with a somersault of joy. Another cried his eyes out. Few could have predicted which would be which before the tournament.

Argentina's Lionel Messi went into the World Cup as FIFA's world player of the year, an odds-on choice to be the star of South Africa 2010. Germany's Miroslav Klose seemed all washed up, a veteran striker ready for retirement who had lost his touch for good.

But Klose's simple shots did more for Germany than Messi's darting runs and intricate passing did for Argentina. Just look at the scoreboard: Germany 4, Argentina 0.

Nadal reclaims Wimbledon crown in style

LONDON, 5 July—Rafael Nadal reclaimed the Wimbledon men's singles title on Sunday, putting in a classy performance to beat Tomas Berdych 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 in the final.

The Spanish world number one was too good for the Czech 12th seed on Centre Court and was rarely troubled as he won his second championship at the All England Club.

In securing his eighth Grand Slam, Nadal went level with Andre Agassi, Jimmy Connors, Ivan Lendl, Fred Perry and Ken Rosewall.

And with Switzerland's Roger Federer showing signs of weakness, Nadal could easily go on to eclipse their efforts.

Petacchi wins 1st stage of Tour de France

BRUSSELS, 5 July—Alessandro Petacchi of Italy won Sunday's crash-marred first stage of the Tour de France, with top sprinters and contenders such as Lance Armstrong delayed as they got around the pileups.

Three crashes tangled up riders in the last few miles, including a big spill within the last half mile that stalled race leader Fabian Cancellara and Armstrong amid a large bunch.

The top of the standings didn't change: Cancellara, the Swiss rider who won Saturday's prologue, retained the yellow jersey and seven-time Tour champion Armstrong remains fourth, 22 seconds back.

Rooney is fit, insists Ferguson

LONDON, 5 July—Manchester United manager Sir Alex Ferguson has insisted a lack of fitness cannot be blamed for star striker Wayne Rooney's mediocre World Cup.

Before the tournament, the 24-year-old United forward was seen as the key to England's hopes of a first global title since 1966.

But the former Everton striker failed to fire in South Africa, returning home without a goal to his name after England suffered a record 4-1 tournament loss to arch-rivals Germany in the last 16.

That led to speculation Rooney was still struggling with the ankle injury he suffered towards the end of last season but Ferguson told the Mail on Sunday: "There is nothing wrong with the lad or his fitness."

"He's relaxing on holiday in Barbados and I expect him to come back refreshed for the new season."

Nowitzki's adviser: Dirk staying in Dallas

DALLAS, 5 July—Dirk Nowitzki is sticking with the Dallas Mavericks.

Next question: Will he and Jason Kidd be able to lure anyone to join them?

Nowitzki's adviser, Holger Geschwindner, told The Associated Press late Saturday night that Nowitzki and Mavs owner Mark Cuban have agreed "to get it done." Teams and free agents can strike deals at any time, but can't sign them until Thursday.

According to a person familiar with negotiations, the deal is for more than $80 million over four years, with a no-trade clause. The person spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity because of the NBA's moratorium until Thursday. Team officials couldn't comment because of that same rule.

"I think it's a great deal," Geschwindner said. "We're pumped."

The deal was first reported by ESPN.

Returning farmland to wilderness in tanzania

SCIENCE DAILY, 5 July — The Swiss wanted to rear cattle in Tanzania and in so doing completely disturbed the ecosystem: the example of the Mkwaja Ranch shows how dependant agriculture is on a functioning ecosystem. And what a serious effect its encroachment can have on a sensitive balance.
