Grow rubber plant everywhere

Rubber is widely used as an essential raw material, especially in producing tyre and industrial goods in industrialized countries. So, rubber is much in demand worldwide.

In Myanmar, rubber plant is grown on a commercial scale in Shan State that has favourable climate patterns apart from Taninthayi Region and Mon State.

Among them, Mon State is nurturing its goal of becoming a land of rubber plant farms. Now, much of the townships in Mon State is covered with rubber plant farms. Mon State is blessed with suitable amount of rainfall, climate patterns and fertile soil, so rubber plant grows very well in it.

In 2009-2010, Mon State's total acreage of rubber plant farms stood at 423,692, up from only 76,607 in 1988. Rubber plant farms in Mon State make up 37.06 percent of the total rubber plant coverage of the nation. Mon State produces rubber largely, with the per acre latex yield of 645.5 pounds.

The Perennial Plants Utilization Department in Pha-auk Village, Mawlamyine Township, Mon State, is doing research to produce high-yield rubber plant species. Five years into the constant research, the department has been able to produce rubber plant species of high yields.

The Rubber Plant Research and Reproduction Centre in Kyonpaik Village, Mudon Township, also produces high-yield species. Rubber products produced in Mudon, Thanbyzayat and Mawlamyine are of high quality.

If rubber plant is grown extensively everywhere with favourable conditions throughout the nation, farmers can improve State's economy in addition to their own.

NATO kills more than 10 militants in Afghanistan

KABUL, 10 Jan—NATO says it has killed more than 10 militants and captured two others in an operation targeting a Taliban leader in north Afghanistan.

The coalition said in a statement Monday that its forces, along with their Afghan counterparts, were searching for a Taliban leader who was the district leader of Khanabad in Kunduz Province. The coalition says he is linked to Taliban leaders in Pakistan and is involved in aiding the militants with roadside bombs and weapons.

NATO said troops attempted to draw the occupants out of the compound where the man was believed to be. When that failed, they entered the compound, a gunbattle ensued, and several militants were killed.

Kunduz police chief Abdul Rahman Sayedhkaili said 13 people were killed.—Internet

Iran plane crash toll rises to 77, black box found

TEHERAN, 10 Jan—Investigators on Monday found the black box from a passenger jet that broke to pieces on impact while trying an emergency landing in a snowstorm in northwestern Iran, killing at least 77 people.

The pilots of the Boeing-727, operated by Iran's national airline and carrying 104 passengers and crew, reported a technical failure to the control tower before trying to make the landing Sunday night, state-run TV reported. The IranAir aircraft broke into several pieces, but Mahmoud Mozaffar, head of the rescue department of Iran's Red Crescent Society, said there was no explosion or fire. Footage on state TV showed the plane's crumpled fuselage lying in a field, torn apart in several places, under whirling snow in the darkness as rescue workers and local farmers searched for survivors in the hours after the crash.—Internet

Melting snow floods German rivers

BERLIN, 10 Jan—Mild temperatures are melting record December snowfalls across Germany, causing rivers from the Rhine in the west to the Oder in the east to burst their banks, flooding cities, towns and fields.

Officials were watching flood levels on the Rhine river in the city of Koblenz on Monday which were expected to peak at 25 feet, 4 inches (7 metres, 70 centimetres). Further south, the Mosel river in western Germany peaked already on Sunday, after flooding several villages in the

Flash floods kill two in water-weary NE Australia

A man is rescued by emergency workers after he was stranded clinging to a tree on a flooded street in Toowoomba, Australia, during a flash flood on 10 Jan, 2011.—INTERNET

BRISBANE, 10 Jan—Flash floods swept through an Australian City Monday, killing at least two people, trapping others in cars and leaving some clinging to trees as relentless rains brought more misery to a region battling its worst flooding in decades.

The raging torrent of muddy water picked up cars and tossed them like toys, carried away furniture as it washed through stores and prompted scores of emergency calls as it swamped Toowoomba, a city of about 90,000 in Queensland State in the northeast.

At least two people were killed, including one female pedestrian, Queensland Fire and Rescue Service Assistant Commissioner Tom Dawson said. Video taken at the scene shows a man clutching a tree as the gushing water sweeps down a street, pushing vehicles off the road, into each other and flinging one van into trees. One small sedan was tossed about in murky brown rapids.

"We've had multiple calls requesting urgent assistance from people caught in vehicles, caught on the street, caught in flood ways," said Queensland Deputy Police Commissioner Ian Stewart, adding that the flash flood happened with no warning.

NATO to investigate alleged mistakenly killing three Afghan police

KABUL, 10 Jan—The NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) said on Monday that it is sending a joint team to look into an operation conducted in Daykundi Province 290 km west of Afghan Capital Kabul that allegedly left three Afghan police dead and injured three others.

"While conducting a patrol to Baladas Village, an ISAF team identified nine armed individuals setting up what appeared to be an ambush position," ISAF said in the statement. The team requested and received air support that engaged the armed individuals. It was later determined the air weapons team may have engaged an Afghan police team, the statement added.

Afghan girls hate war, hoping to compete in international cricket

KABUL, 10 Jan—Although Taliban-led militancy is going on unabated in the war-torn country, Afghan girls and women have been exercising their rights envisaged in the post-Taliban country's constitution. "I want to be flag bearer in the upcoming competition due in February in Kuwait," said Noshin, a member of Afghan women cricket team. An energetic Noshin, 19, like many Afghans, uses only one name and attired in sport costume, told Xinhua that "I don't want the conflicts to destroy my dreams and ruin my future. I hate the war." Noshin like many others, looks ambitious and was playing cricket in Bagh-e-Zanana, the only women park in the capital city Kabul where women even could not go inside during Taliban regime which collapsed in late 2001 by the NATO-led military campaign.

Dozens of women cricket players were busy in playing the game in this January, and the best ones of them will form Women National Cricket Team to compete in Kuwait next month.

The hardliner Taliban regime during its six-year reign had confined women to their houses and outlawed education for girls. Afghanistan only Sport Stadium — Ghazi Stadium in Kabul had seen chopping hands, flogging and killing people on charge of involvement in criminal activities during Taliban reign on each Friday — the Muslim weekly holiday.

Longstanding mystery of Sun's hot outer atmosphere solved

Narrow jets of material, called spicules, streak upward from the Sun's surface at high speeds.—INTERNET

BOULDER, 10 Jan—One of the most enduring mysteries in solar physics is why the Sun's outer atmosphere, or corona, is millions of degrees hotter than its surface.

Now scientists believe they have discovered a major source of hot gas that replenishes the corona: jets of plasma shooting up from just above the Sun's surface.

The finding addresses a fundamental question in astrophysics: how energy is moved from the Sun's interior to create its hot outer atmosphere.

"It's always been quite a puzzle to figure out why the Sun's atmosphere is hotter than its surface," says Scott McIntosh, a solar physicist at the High Altitude Observatory of the National Centre for Atmospheric Research (NCAR) in Boulder, Colo, who was involved in the study.

"By identifying that these jets insert heated plasma into the Sun's outer atmosphere, we can gain a much greater understanding of that region and possibly improve our knowledge of the Sun's subtle influence on the Earth's upper atmosphere."—Internet

Climate change would continue without emissions

CALGARY, 10 Jan—A study predicts there will be havoc akin to a big-budget Hollywood disaster movie in the next 1,000 years even if people stop emitting all carbon dioxide into the atmosphere now.

Researchers from the University of Calgary and Environment Canada's climate centre at the University of Victoria say coastal areas will flood and the Earth's land mass will shrink as global sea levels rise by at least four metres.

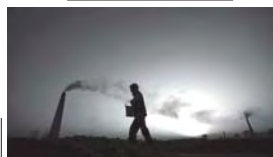

They also believe parts of North Africa will dry out by up to 30 percent and ocean warming is likely to trigger widespread collapse of the West Antarctic ice sheet, a region the size of the Canadian Prairies.

"It's probably slower playing than some of the disaster movies," said Shawn Marshall, a geography professor at the University of Calgary who holds the Canada Research Chair in Climate Change.

"We were kind of surprised by the result, actually. Even if we change behaviour and totally change society, we're still in store for a lot of bad scenarios. I feel a bit defeatist from it."

The team used computer modelling to speculate how the world would change by the year 3000 in a "zero emissions" scenario. The results are published in Sunday's advanced online publication of the journal Nature Geoscience.—Internet

Love music? Thank a substance in your brain

MONTEAL, 10 Jan— Whether it's the Beatles or Beethoven, people like music for the same reason they like eating or having sex: It makes the brain release a chemical that gives pleasure, a new study says.

The brain substance is involved both in anticipating a particularly thrilling musical moment and in feeling the rush from it, researchers found.

Previous work had already suggested a role for dopamine, a substance brain cells release to communicate with each other. But the new work, which scanned people's brains as they listened to music, shows it happening directly.

While dopamine normally helps us feel the pleasure of eating or having sex, it also helps produce euphoria from illegal drugs. It's active in particular circuits of the brain.

The tie to dopamine helps explain why music is so widely popular across cultures, Robert Zatorre and Valorie Salimpoor of McGill University in Montreal write in an article posted online Sunday by the journal Nature Neuroscience.—Internet

Hands-on with Haier's New HDTVs

SAN DIEGO, 10 Jan—Haier's 2011 HDTVs look bright, sharp, and slick—and as the official TV brand of the NBA, we simply had to stop by at the CES show floor and check out their upcoming gear.

First, we took a look at their revamped edge-lit LED TV lineup—the high-end EV series, which comes in 42-inch, 46-inch, and 55-inch models. Design-wise, their glass bezel and swivel stand look slick, if slightly conservative.

Next, we got a quick tour through their Internet-connected features, which were served by the built-in Wi-Fi adapter. At the moment, they've got Netflix, Pandora, and Hulu Plus, with plans to add Blockbuster's video rental service. Of course, the EV series can automatically update the firmware through the Wi-Fi network connection, so they'll be able to add new services as they become available.

Babies process language in a grown-up way

NEW YORK, 10 Jan—Babies, even those too young to talk, can understand many of the words that adults are saying — and their brains process them in a grown-up way.

Combining the cutting-edge technologies of MRI and MEG, scientists at the University of California, San Diego show that babies just over a year old process words they hear with the same brain structures as adults, and in the same amount of time. Moreover, the researchers found that babies were not merely processing the words as sounds, but were capable of grasping their meaning.

This study was jointly led by Eric Halgren, PhD, professor of radiology in the School of Medicine, Jeff Elman, PhD, professor of cognitive science in the Division of Social Sciences, and first author, Katherine E Travis, of the Department of Neurosciences and the Multimodal Imaging Laboratory, all at UC San Diego. Archos 70 Android tablet packs a hulking hard disk drive

WASHINGTON, 10 Jan—Archos' Android tablets tend to be pretty generic, but its latest 7-inch tablet has one big distinction: a 250 GB hard disk drive.

Yup, that's a good old-fashioned spinning disk — the first to appear in an Android tablet. Picking up the Archos 70 at the company's CES booth, the hard drive's presence was obvious. The tablet was warm to touch, particularly on its bottom half, and it's noticeably heavier and chunkier than Archos' 7-inch tablet with flash storage.

To be more specific, it weighs 14 ounces and measures 0.55 inches thick, compared to 11 ounces and 0.43 inches for the A70 with 8 GB flash drive.

Still, the use of a hard drive wasn't a serious detriment to the tablet's performance. The HDD-equipped A70, which runs Android 2.2 with a 1 GHz processor, was pleasantly responsive, and the video game Real Racing ran without a hiccup. Previously-opened apps resumed immediately, and freshly-executed ones lagged just slightly behind Archos' solid state A70. —Internet

Smoke alarm raised as tobacco plays leading screen role

A sign that reads "Non-Smoking Wards" in Chinese is seen in a hospital in Meishan City, southwest China's Sichuan Province on 8 Jan, 2011.—INTERNET

BEIJING, 10 Jan—Smoking is commonly depicted on films and TV and could mislead young people into associating the habit with glamour, according to supporters of tobacco control.

While smoking scenes on TV did not constitute outright tobacco advertisements, they could easily mislead adolescents and leave them with a wrong understanding of the health implications, Yang Gonghuan, director of the National Tobacco Control Office, said.

"A decrease in such screen shots will be good for protecting the young from tobacco," Yang said.

Smoking features regularly on TV and one recent night's viewing provides an example.

Reporters monitored seven television channels on 4 Jan, and during the peak viewing hours from 8 pm to 10 pm, there were 49 screen shots of smoking from four TV series.

However, these findings are only a part of the bigger picture.

The Chinese Association on Tobacco Control (CATC), a non-profit organization, issued a report in August 2010 after monitoring 40 domestic Chinese movies and 30 local TV series.

Immune disorders may raise blood clot risk in hospitalized patients

LONDON, 10 Jan—People with immune-related disorders such as rheumatoid arthritis and lupus may be at increased risk for developing potentially deadly blood clots during hospital stays, a new study has found.

Researchers at the University of Oxford in the United Kingdom analyzed 45 years' worth of medical records of patients who were hospitalized for immune-related disorders and had no evidence or prior history of blood clots in a vein, also called venous thromboembolism (VTE)—one type of which can break off and travel to block a blood vessel in the lungs.

The patients were divided into different groups based on their immune-related condition. The researchers then compared them to patients who were hospitalized for minor, non-immune-related problems such as broken bones and minor surgical procedures.

The findings are published in the current online edition of the journal BMC Medicine.

Prozac shows promise in recovery from stroke

LONDON, 10 Jan—Giving the antidepressant drug Prozac to people who have just had a stroke could help them to regain more control over their movements and allow more of them to live independently, scientists said Monday.

In the largest study yet of the effect of this type of antidepressant on stroke recovery, French researchers found that stroke patients given Prozac improved their scores in motor skills tests more than those given a placebo, or dummy pill.

Experts commenting on the findings said they had "enormous potential to change clinical practice" and raised the question of whether most stroke patients with motor skill problems should be treated with this relatively cheap type of antidepressant.

Stroke is the single largest cause of adult disability and the third-largest cause of death in the developed world.

The cost of caring for its victims, who often have motor function difficulties like paralysis or weakness on one side, puts a heavy burden on already stretched healthcare systems.

A few previous small trials had already suggested that giving drugs like Prozac, which belongs to a drug class known as selective serotonin re-uptake inhibitors (SSRIs), might improve motor skill recovery after stroke.

Prozac was developed by Eli Lilly and is now available in a cheaper generic form as fluoxetine.—Reuters

Laos to open stock market

BANGKOK, 10 Jan—Laos is set to open a stock market Tuesday, hoping it will attract capital to its largest enterprises and thus boost the economy of one of the world's poorest nations.

The Lao Securities Exchange, headquartered in the capital of Vientiane, will debut with shares offered by just two state-owned enterprises—Electricite du Laos Generation Company (EDL), the country's major energy enterprise, and the Banque Pour Le Commerce Extérieur Lao, official Lao media said Monday. Foreign participation will be limited.

South Korea's Korea Exchange is investing $9.8 million, or 49 percent of the venture, most of it for technology systems and training, according to the Seoul-based stock market operator. The Bank of Laos, the country's central bank, is investing $10.2 million, or 51 percent.

Neighbouring Thailand also offered assistance.

"There's a twofold reason. The exchange will allow an alternate source of capital other than banks and allow public participation in the growth of the economy," said Lorraine Tan, director of equities research at Standard & Poor's in Singapore.

TUCSON, 10 Jan—Christina-Taylor Green, the nine-year-old who was killed Saturday along with five other people at an Arizona political event, was drawn to politics from the awareness she was born on 11 September, 2001, her parents have said.

"She was born back east, and 11 September affected everyone there, and Christina-Taylor was always very aware of it. She was very patriotic and wearing red, white and blue was really special to her," Roxanne Green told the Arizona Daily Star.

S Korea battles bird flu, foot-and-mouth

SEOUL, 10 Jan—South Korea confirmed three new cases of bird flu on Sunday as the outbreak that began last month further hits farmers who are also battling the nation's worst-ever outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease.

The agriculture ministry confirmed three new cases of the highly contagious virus at duck farms in the southwestern county of Yeongam, bringing the total number of cases to seven since 31 December.

At least 396,000 chickens, ducks and other birds have been or will be culled, the agriculture ministry said on its website, as the fresh cases were reported after a week-long pause.

China defence chief says military hardware drive no threat

BEIJING, 10 Jan—China's military technology lags decades behind the world's most advanced armed forces and does not threaten any country, the Chinese defence minister said on Monday after talks with Defence Secretary Robert Gates. Gates's visit from Sunday to Wednesday comes a week before Chinese President Hu Jintao's state visit to Washington.

"The efforts that we place on the research and development of weapons systems are by no means targeted at any third country or any other countries in the world, and it will by no means threaten any other country in the world," Chinese Minister of Defence Liang Guanglie told reporters after talks with Gates.

US officials have noted quick advances in China's anti-ship ballistic missile programme, which could challenge US aircraft carriers.

China may also be preparing to launch its first aircraft carrier in 2011, faster than some estimates, and new photos indicate it has a prototype of a stealth fighter jet.

51 executed in Mexico drug violence

MEXICO CITY, 10 Jan—Drug-related violence over the weekend claimed 51 lives across Mexico, including 15 decapitations in the beach resort of Acapulco, authorities reported.

The beheadings, mutilations, drive-by shootings and summary executions were carried out in southeastern Guerrero and northern Chihuahua states, as well as in the Mexican capital, despite the government's five-year, 50,000-troop crackdown on organized crime.

By far the grisliest scene unfolded Saturday at an Acapulco shopping centre where the decapitated bodies of 15 men were found on the sidewalk, with their severed heads bunched nearby. Two of the victims were 17 years old, a Guerrero official said.

It was the worst mass decapitation since August 2008, when 12 headless bodies were found in eastern Yucatan state capital Merida, in a crime attributed to the notorious Los Zetas drug cartel.

Another six murder victims were found Saturday in Acapulco stuffed inside a taxi near a supermarket, and four other men were murdered in two separate incidents in the city, Guerrero state police said.

Oil jumps above $89 after Alaska pipeline leak

SINGAPORE, 10 Jan—Oil prices jumped above $89 a barrel Monday in Asia after a pipeline leak cut Alaskan crude output.

Benchmark oil for February delivery rose $1.35 to $89.38 a barrel midday Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract fell 30 cents to settle at $88.03 in Friday.

The 800-mile (1,300-kilometre) trans-Alaska pipeline, which normally carries between 630,000 and 650,000 barrels a day, was shut Saturday after a leak was discovered at a North Slope pump station, said Alyeska Pipeline Service Co, which manages the line. North

Volkswagen to keep Passat name on new midsize

DETROIT, 10 Jan—Volkswagen is keeping the Passat name for a new midsize vehicle that will be built at the company's new US plant in Tennessee.

Volkswagen of America Inc announced plans Sunday to maintain the Passat nameplate at an event before media previews of the North American International Auto Show. The German automaker plans to reveal the new car to journalists on Monday.

VW said the Passat will carry a starting price of around $20,000, allowing it to compete with its rivals in the competitive midsize segment. Current Passat models, which are built in Germany, start at $27,195.

The new Passat is a key part of the company's plan to triple sales in the US by 2018. Jonathan Browning, VW's North American president and CEO, said that while the company thrived in Europe in past years, the company "became a marginal player here in one of the world's most important markets. That is no longer acceptable."

Volkswagen will produce the new Passat at its $1 billion Chattanooga, Tenn, plant. The car is expected to go on sale later this year.

The facility, which will employ 2,000 workers, is the company's first US assembly plant since it closed its New Stanton, Pa, plant in 1988 following disappointing sales.—INTERNET

BEIJING, 10 Jan—Apple is expected to release a new generation of its popular tablet computer iPad in the next "three to four" weeks, according to Kevin Rose, the founder of content-sharing website Digg.

No sign of fishing trawler missing in Russia

MOSCOW, 10 Jan— The head of Russia's fisheries agency says a fishing trawler that disappeared last week after sending an SOS either has sunk or sent the distress signal to disguise its escape from the Asia-Pacific region.

The Partnyor, with about a dozen Russian crew aboard, was last heard from Friday near Sakhalin Island. A search turned up no trace of the ship.

Federal fisheries agency chief

Andrei Krainy told Russian news agencies Monday that the Partnyor may have sunk. Another possibility, he said, was that the vessel, which had been caught poaching last year, may have fled the region. To the north in the Sea of Okhotsk, Russian icebreakers were working to free two vessels that have been trapped in thick ice for 11 days. Officials say the crews are in no danger.—Internet

Chrysler hopes to rev up comeback with new 300

DETROIT, 10 Jan—The Chrysler 300, once a hot-selling sedan distinguished by a tall grille and big wheels, will attempt a comeback at the Detroit auto show. It's an important car in a pivotal year for the company, which must start making money before a public stock sale can happen.

The new 300, which will be revealed Monday during the show's opening media day, keeps the basic look of the old: It's a muscular car with a long hood and short back. But the remade version is sleeker, and Chrysler toned down the gangster-mobile grille and replaced its round headlamps with subtle rectangular ones. Gas mileage went up 8 percent and the interior has softer-looking surfaces and cool-blue dashboard lighting.

Chrysler wants it to attract a broad range of buyers, from those who want a larger car to those who seek high-performance luxury.

Like the company that builds it, the 300 used to generate millions in profits but has been neglected for years. Introduced in 2004, sales peaked in 2005 at 144,000, but barely topped 37,000 last year. And just like the reborn company, the big car has the odds stacked against it.—Internet

LONDON, 10 Jan—Virgin Atlantic will stop paying its bills to Heathrow until the airport's operator explains why one heavy snowfall stranded thousands of passengers for days just before Christmas, a report said Monday.

Richard Branson's airline has written to operator BAA, saying it plans to withhold landing and parking charges until it sees the results of an inquiry into the disruption, to be published in March, reported the Financial

Heil Hound: Nazis dogged by Hitler-mocking mutt

Newly discovered documents have revealed a bizarre footnote to World War II: the Nazis' dogged obsession with a Finnish mutt who gave not a howl, but a heil. And, just as absurdly, the totalitarian state that dominated most of Europe was unable to do much about the canine's paw-raising parody of Germany's Fuehrer.

In the months preceding Hitler's invasion of the Soviet

The undated photo taken from a book on the history of Finnish Tamro Group shows Tor Borg and his dog Jackie.

Union, Berlin's Foreign Office commanded its diplomats in the Nazi-friendly country to gather evidence on the dog and its owner — and even plotted to destroy the owner's pharmaceutical business.

Historians were unaware of the scheme until some 30 files containing correspondence and diplomatic cables were found by a researcher in the Foreign Office archives.

Man's aviary ruffles local feathers

A New York City man has made his home into a bird sanctuary in gratitude for being spared in Vietnam, but his neighbours are not thankful.

The fence around Manny Loupadriere's house is adorned with hundreds of birdcages, birdhouses and model birds, drawing many birds — and vermin, too, neighbours tell the New York Daily News.

"It harbors rats. It's ugly as sin but there is nothing I can do about it," said Brian Simpson. "It's disgusting."

Loupadiere, 65, said a bird kept him from getting shot while he was in the Air Force during the Vietnam War, the Daily News reported Sunday.

"My job was to pick up wounded soldiers," he said. "I was picking up a soldier when I heard a bird whistling in the tree."

I looked up and when I did that a bullet went by my head. The bird saved my life."

The newspaper said it did not verify his military service.

Loupadiere said the cages attract songbirds who serenade him in the morning, and some neighbours bought him extra houses for Christmas.

Other neighbours say they have complained repeatedly, but the city said it has only received two calls in the past three years.

Penguin in zoo strolls into lions' den

A resourceful baby penguin took advantage of Germany's wintry weather to give her minders the slip and embark on a tour of the zoo before waddling into the lions' den.

A visitor spotted the African penguin, born in September, taking a stroll in the lion enclosure but the animal was lucky as the lions were asleep inside rather than braving the icy weather outside, Muenster zoo said on its website. It took keepers a day to get the penguin out of the den, luring her out with a trail of herrings, the statement said. The escape gave the penguin, up to then only known as number 459, a name. Her minder now calls her Leona, the zoo said.

Contractors demolish wrong house

A Pittsburgh man said his house was demolished by mistake when a city contractor took it down along with a neighbouring home.

Andre Hall said the house, which the city agreed not to demolish for 6 months when he bought it in November, had been demolished with a backhoe when he arrived to work on the property Monday, WPIX-TV, Pittsburgh, reported Friday.

"I leave for the holidays, come back and see a backhoe sitting on my house," Hall said. "This is not the way I thought I would start off my new year."

The Pittsburgh Bureau of Building Inspection said the contractors were told to demolish a neighbouring home and instead took down both houses.

"True Grit" nudged out "Little Fockers" to rule box office

LOS ANGELES, 10 Jan—"True Grit" has walked off its third weekend run at the North American box office triumphantly, gaining an upper hand over its celluloid arch rival, "Little Fockers," to be the top player, preliminary statistics suggested on Sunday.

The Coen brothers' retooling of the 1969 western classic which originally casted John Wayne, is expected to garner 15 million dollars in ticket receipts for three days over the weekend, well on pace to gross a total of 110.4 million dollars in a lackluster weekend. Award-season contenders flock to Palm Springs gala

PALM SPRINGS, 10 Jan—The road to Oscar brought a blast of expected contenders to this desert town some 100 miles east of Hollywood as the Palm Springs International Film Festival held its annual awards gala.

Among those attending the Saturday night affair was James Franco, a likely Academy Award nominee for the drama "127 Hours" and also cohost along with Anne Hathaway of the 27 Feb Oscar telecast.

"Yeah, it's weird," said

Franco, who does some of his studies at Warren Wilson College in Asheville, NC. "Yesterday, I was in North Carolina and it was snowing. And I flew out at 9 pm and landed at about 1 am in LA. And then I met with Anne Hathaway and did some preparation for the Oscars. And now here I am in Palm Springs. And then I'm going to go back to the snows of North Carolina and study poetry. I'm sure I'm developing a split personality."

Youthful Vienna Ballet continues revival

VIENNA, 10 Jan—A youthful premiere of con-temporary choreographies by Jiri Bubenicek, Paul Lightfoot and Jiri Kylian on Sunday proved the Vienna Ballet was well on the path to a renaissance.

"Schritte und Spuren" (Steps and Traces), the third premiere under Manuel Legris's five-month-old reign as ballet director, showed a fresh company light years away from stuffy old productions. The evening kicked off with its highlight, "Le Souffle de l'Esprit" by Czech Jiri Bubenicek.

Set against a pure white background, the performance was sleek and playful, featuring the always excellent Ketevan Papava and Denys Chere-vychko, and bringing forward young talents like corps de ballet member Davide Dato, who more than did justice to the buoyant choreography.

The wonderfully grot-esque "Skew-Whiff" by British-Spanish duo Paul Lightfoot and Sol Leon meanwhile drew the loudest cheers of the evening, carried by its four dancers. —Internet and close to within two points of leaders Barcelona.

Portuguese star Ronaldo took his season's tally to 22 league goals with strikes in the eighth, 44th and 78th minutes after third-place Villarreal had threatened an upset after twice going in front in a pulsating first half at the Santiago Bernabeu.

Barcelona's 4-0 win over Deportivo La Coruna on Saturday had put the pressure on Real to respond.

Villarreal twice took the lead only for Ronaldo to pull Real back into the game with his 20th and 21st league goals of the season to cancel out goals from Ruben Cani, after six minutes, and Marco Ruben in the 17th.—INTERNET

'Sloppy' Milan could throw title away, warns Gattuso

ROME, 10 Jan — Combative midfielder Gennaro Gattuso believes Milan risk throwing away the Serie A title after fighting back three times to snatch a 4-4 draw at home to Udinese.

Milan trailed 1-0 and 3-1 before also heading into injury time 4-3 down but they kept fighting back to eventually earn a hard-earned point.

"If we don't win the title this year we won't win it again," he said after the San Siro encounter.

"It's true we had a number of players missing but our weakness showed in the goals we conceded, we have to give more."

Milan have twice had the potential to open up big leads with a home victory, but have taken only one point from their last two home games.

Ancelotti issues Chelsea warning after Cup rout

LONDON, 10 Jan — Carlo Ancelotti has told FA Cup holders Chelsea their 7-0 third round thrashing of Ipswich Town will "count for nothing" if they cannot transfer their form into the Premier League.

English champions Chelsea, who did the 'double' last season, are currently fifth in the table — nine points behind leaders Manchester United having played one game more than the table-toppers.

That has led to speculation about Chelsea manager Ancelotti's position at Stamford Bridge and, while the rout of second division Ipswich was a welcome distraction from league duty, the Italian knows the pressure will be back on if the Londoners lose to top-flight rivals Blackburn next weekend.

Coach sacked after Syria stun Saudi Arabia 2-1

DOHA, 10 Jan — Saudi Arabian football chiefs sacked coach Jose Peseyro on Sunday immediately after his demoralised side slumped to a shock 2-1 defeat at the hands of unfancied Asian Cup outsiders Syria.

The 2007 finalists and three-time champions announced that Nasser Al Johar will take over from the 50-year-old Portuguese for the remainder of the showpiece event in Doha. The Saudis had been expected to compete for the title alongside the likes of Japan, Australia and South Korea, but a brace from Abdulrazak Al Husein consigned them to defeat against Syria.

Gulbis confirms relationship with Dustin Johnson

KAPALUA, 10 Jan — LPGA Tour player Natalie Gulbis was in the gallery following Dustin Johnson on the back nine on Saturday at Kapalua, and apparently it was no coincidence.

Gulbis told golf.com they are dating.

"I'll let Dustin handle our PR," Gulbis said with a laugh after confirming to the website they are dating. Johnson declined comment.

The 25-year-old Johnson is a rising American star with two victories last year, including close calls in the US Open and PGA Championship. He was the top American on the world money list in 2010. The 28-year-old Gulbis, who had a relationship with Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger in 2005, struggled on the LPGA Tour while recovering from back surgery.
