Use electric power most efficiently

Supply of sufficient electric power is a sine qua non for national development. Across the nation are a large number of water sources from which hydropower can be generated on a massive scale.

Tarpein (1) Hydropower Plant in Momaik Township, Kachin State, was inaugurated on 23 January. With four 60-megawatt turbines, the plant has an installed capacity of 240 megawatts and can produce 1065 million kilowatt hours per annum.

Of the 18 ongoing hydropower projects in Kachin State, Tarpein (1) Hydropower Plant is the first to have been put into service.

It yields multifarious benefits including increased power supply to the peoples of Myanmar and China, creation of jobs, supply of electric power to surrounding areas for their economic growth, and improvement in the economic and social conditions of the people.

During the time of the Tatmadaw government, the nation has witnessed 14 hydropower plants including Tarpein (1) Hydropower Plant, one coal-fired power plant, seven gas-fired power plants, totaling 22 more power plants with total capacity of 2756 megawatts. So far, the nation has 31 electric power plants, whose installed capacity is 3185 megawatts in total.

So, electric power is to be used most expeditiously to further improve the socio-economic status of the people and scale up progress of industries and enterprises.

Dinosaur's single digit draws world attention

BEIJING, 25 Jan—Scientists have discovered a new dinosaur species whose members were similar in size to a parrot but only had one finger. Scientists view that rare solitary digit as evidence that the evolution of dinosaurs was more complex than they first believed.

The new dinosaur was found in rocks formed from 84 million to 75 million years ago in Linhe, a city near the Yellow River.

The species belongs to a family within the carnivorous dinosaurian group theropods, which later gave rise to modern birds, according to Xu Xing of the Institute of Vertebrate Palaeontology and Paleoanthropology, which is under the Chinese Academy of Sciences.

The new dinosaur, called Linhenykus, "most likely grew to a few feet tall and weighed only as much as a large parrot", said Xu, who led the international team of scientists that discovered the species.

Unlike previously known types of theropods, this dinosaur is unusual in having hands with just one large claw, which may have been used to dig out insects like ants, said the scientists in a report to be published online on Tuesday in the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

The unusual physical attribute makes the specimen the only dinosaur known to have one finger. That uniqueness is what most piques the interest of scientists, Xu said.

IEA's Birol: Say goodbye to climate goals

PARIS, 25 Jan—Without a serious policy turnaround from the world's largest emitters, the world won't meet its target of limiting the global temperature increase to no more than 3.6 degrees Fahrenheit, a top IEA official has warned.

The 3.6 degree F cap — 2 degrees Celsius — a threshold scientists say is crucial to avert the most catastrophic effects of the temperature increase, can't be reached given the international community's current level of commitment, said Fatih Birol, the chief economist of the International Energy Agency.

"As we stand now, we're only a few meters away from saying goodbye to the 2-degree target," The New York Times, in a story from the ClimateWire, quoted Birol as saying. "When I look at the next 10 years, even if I take into consideration the pledges made after the Copenhagen meeting, the best case is that this could put us on a trajectory in line with 3.5 degrees C," or 6.3 degrees F. Decarbonization efforts had to be increased by 400 percent to stay within the 3.6 degree F limit, Birol said.

At a climate summit in Cancun, Mexico, the limit was included in a joint statement by the countries present, including the world's two biggest emitters of greenhouse gases, China and the United States.

Yet the international community has still not agreed to a binding climate protection treaty. Adding up industrialized nations' reduction targets while considering all the loopholes buried in the current agreements amount to carbon dioxide reductions of 2 percent in 2020 based on 1990 levels, the Heinrich Boell Foundation, a policy think tank linked to the German Green Party, said in its analysis of the decisions taken at the Cancun climate summit.

Going digital may not improve US patient care

CHICAGO, 25 Jan—Electronic health records — touted by the White House as a key way to improve healthcare in the United States — may actually do little to improve quality, US researchers said on Monday. A team from Stanford University in California analyzed nationwide survey data from more than 250,000 visits to physicians' offices and other outpatient settings between 2005 and 2007.

They found electronic health records did little to improve quality, even when there was "decision support" software that gives doctors tips on how best to treat individual patients.

"Across a wide range of quality indicators there was no consistent association between having those electronic tools available and providing better quality of care," said Dr Randall Stafford of Stanford, whose study appears in the Archives of Internal Medicine.

Electronic health records systems that include this software have been shown in other studies to significantly improve health quality. President Barack Obama has made using information technology a central plank in his plan to cut costs out of the US healthcare system, offering up to $27 billion in government funds aimed at speeding the switch to electronic medical records.

Security apps boost Apple as BlackBerry alternative

TORONTO/SAN FRANCISCO, 25 Jan—A slew of small security software developers are helping Apple's iPhone gain a foothold within corporations that were once the exclusive domain of Research In Motion's BlackBerry.

The shift reflects efforts by some companies to accommodate the preference of many employees for Apple's iconic smartphone, a trend that has led software makers to develop programmes to deliver secure email and other data over the iPhone.

To be sure, the status of BlackBerry's security features as the industry standard is not under threat. But the new programmes could mean that many employees may no longer have to carry a company-sponsored BlackBerry in addition to their store-bought iPhones.

Facebook is already challenging big Web businesses such as Google and Yahoo for users' time online and for advertising dollars, thanks to its audience of more than 500 million users and the information they share.

It has built a significant advertising business from social gaming, thanks to companies like Zynga who build games specifically for the Facebook platform,

Social ties aid breast cancer patients

NASHVILLE, 25 Jan— Breast cancer patients may benefit from strong social ties the first year after diagnosis, a US researcher says.

Study leader Meira Epplein of Vanderbilt-Ingram Cancer Centre in Nashville said six months after being diagnosed with breast cancer, women with the highest social well-being, quality-of-life scores had a 48 percent reduction in risk of cancer recurrence and a 38 percent reduction in risk of death — vs. women with the lowest scores.

“We found that social well-being in the first year after cancer diagnosis is an important prognostic factor for breast cancer recurrence or death,” Epplein said in a statement. “This suggests that the opportunity exists for the design of treatment interventions to maintain or enhance social support soon after diagnosis to improve disease outcomes.”

The study, published in the Journal of Clinical Oncology Women, found patients reporting high satisfaction with marriage and family had a 43 percent risk reduction in cancer recurrence. Those with strong social support had a 40 percent risk reduction.

Those with favorable interpersonal relationships had a 35 percent risk reduction but social benefits became less important after the first year and lost significance by the third year after diagnosis.

Computer game may aid decision-making

BELFAST, 25 Jan— A computer game can help those who play it improve their decision-making, researchers in Northern Ireland say.

Researchers led by David Newman of Queen's University Belfast say people can be trained to make better decisions by improving their ability to recognize and make allowances for subjective opinions and biases, and to accurately “factor in” their level of uncertainty about a decision's likely outcome.

The researchers say this new kind of teaching game — available for anyone to try out at the Web site quiz.worldofuncertainty.org/ — could be used for both educational and entertainment purposes.

Decision-makers in the public and private sectors could enhance their decision-making abilities, the researchers say. “It's the first ever online quiz designed to let people estimate how sure they are of their answers and score more highly if they don't ignore their uncertainty but realistically assess it,” project leader David Newman says in a statement. “Whether the choices facing us are simple or complex, a greater awareness of uncertainty and of our own biases can improve the quality of our decision-making.”—Internet

Australian house price expectations turn negative

SYDNEY, 25 Jan— Australia's housing market conditions are expected to deteriorate over the next 12 months, following four interest rate rises in 2010 and ongoing tight credit conditions, a bank survey showed on Tuesday.

The National Australia Bank (NAB) Residential Property Index for December fell to 27 points, down from 44 points in November. It was still above the zero level that separates growth from contraction. “National house price expectations have now turned negative,” NAB said in a statement on Tuesday. “Tight credit conditions and rising interest rates continue to be identified as the main impediments to new residential developments and existing property sales.”

The central bank raised the cash rate four times in 2010, taking it from 3.75 percent to its current 4.75 percent. The survey showed house prices in Australian capital cities are tipped to fall by 0.5 percent over the next 12 months, with small increases in Adelaide, Canberra and Sydney offset by declines in Brisbane and to a lesser extent Perth and Melbourne. Capital growth of houses is expected to outpace apartments, with lower value properties (under 500,000 AU dollars, about 497,200 US dollars) set to record the strongest growth over the next 12 months.—Xinhua

Manager (Engineering) U Aung Kyaw Thu of ERES Co said that they had set up 15 solar lamp posts along the four main roads of the village, and solar chips on each house in the village; that each lamp post was installed with an 85-watt solar chip, and houses, with 40-watt solar chips; that each house was equipped with 5-watt lamps, and each lamp post had a 25-watt high power LED bulb.

We found that each house was installed with a solar chip, solar power charging system, DC to AC system, 12 V 70 AH battery, 5-watt lamps, and a set of solar power equipment made up of wire and related accessories. If the solar chip is exposed to the sun for five hours, it is enough to light six bulbs at the same time for eight hours in a row.

However, the light from one central bulb thoroughly covers the whole home. So, villagers can use electric power the whole night.

Using TVs, cassettes and radios with solar power, all houses in the village enjoy better socio-economic status.

U Sein Maw, 73, who has lived in the village for over 50 years, said, "We never expected to get solar power in our wildest dreams. But, how nice it is to see the whole village is bright with electric power. I thank all those who worked for our village."

Lack of services for homeless youth in California

SAN FRANCISCO, 25 Jan—Homeless teenagers in California cannot obtain even the most basic services in most counties, according to a new study.

The study by the California Homeless Youth Project finds that 38 of the state's 58 counties don't have any services at all for kids living on the street: no shelters, no substance abuse treatment, no counseling.

Two state senators have introduced a package of bills to try to address the lack of homeless youth services. But since the state is in the midst of a budget crisis, for now the bills simply seek to set a minimum standard for shelters, develop a statewide plan, and prevent any further cuts in homeless youth funding.

"The goal right now is to really raise the visibility of the issue," said Sherilyn Adams with the Larkin Street Youth Services in San Francisco.—Internet

Alaska sexual violence far worse than reported

ANCHORAGE, 25 Jan—For every case of rape reported to police in Alaska, the state that consistently posts the nation's highest rate of sexual assault, another nine cases likely go unreported, according to a new study presented on Monday to the state legislature.

The study, conducted by the University of Alaska Anchorage's Justice Centre and cooperating researchers, found that 37 percent of surveyed Alaska women had been victims of sexual violence, and 4.3 percent within the last year.

The 871 women surveyed for the study reported "astonishingly high" rates of sexual violence, said Andrew Rosay, director of the university's Justice Centre.

"More than one out of every three experienced sexual violence at some point in their lifetime," Rosay told state senators at a committee meeting held on Monday in Juneau.

The survey used extended telephone interviews of women around the state conducted last year, and was limited to English speakers with home telephones, Rosay said.

Nearly half of those surveyed said intimate partners had threatened them with violence or committed violence against them, according to results presented by Rosay and fellow researchers.

The survey found that 44.8 percent had been victims of actual violence at some time in their lives, and 8.6 percent had been victims of such violence in the past year.

Peruvian court: No more prison for Lori Berenson

LIMA, 25 Jan—A Peruvian appeals court rejected a prosecutor's attempt to revoke the parole of US activist Lori Berenson, who was released in May after serving 15 years for aiding leftist rebels. Berenson and her attorney told The Associated Press on Monday that the ruling is final and cannot be appealed by prosecutors, ending eight months of excruciating legal purgatory.

"I'm pleased with the decision and grateful for it," Berenson said by telephone, adding that she was "greatly relieved."

"The only thing that she can do now, with tranquility, is to plan her life," said Anibal Apari, her attorney and the father of Berenson's 20-month-old son, Salvador.

Under her parole, the 41-year-old New Yorker cannot leave Peru until her 20-year sentence ends in 2015 — unless President Alan Garcia decides to commute it. He has said he would consider doing so only once the legal case ran its course.—Internet

Hezbollah-backed Mikati set to lead Lebanon government

Lebanon's caretaker Prime Minister Saad al-Hariri (L) speaks as former Lebanese Prime Minister Fouad Siniora (R) listens during a news conference after meeting Lebanon's President Michel Suleiman at the presidential palace in Baabda, near Beirut, during the start of the two-day parliamentary consultations to choose a new Prime Minister, on 24 Jan, 2011. —INTERNET

BEIRUT, 25 Jan—Hezbollah and its allies won support on Monday to nominate their candidate for Lebanon's Prime Minister, giving them the upper hand in attempts to form a government and sparking accusations of a pro-Iranian coup.

Caretaker Prime Minister Saad al-Hariri, whose government collapsed earlier this month, said he and his group would not serve in an administration dominated by Hezbollah, and Hariri supporters in north Lebanon called for a "day of anger."

Leaks show Palestinians giving much ground to Israel

JERUSALEM, 25 Jan—Palestinian negotiators secretly told Israel it could keep swathes of occupied East Jerusalem, according to leaked documents that show Palestinians offering much bigger peace concessions than previously revealed.

The documents, obtained by the Al Jazeera television channel, could undermine the position of Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas, whose public declarations about Jerusalem are at odds with what his officials were promising in private.

Equally sobering for the Palestinian people, who want to create a state on land Israel seized in a 1967 war, is the fact that Israel offered nothing in return for the concessions and turned down their offer, saying it did not go far enough.

A sports bar owner in Minnesota is showing his support for the Green Bay Packers in this weekend's game against the Chicago Bears in a very literal way - by roasting a bear.

Blake Montpetit, the co-owner of Tiffany Sports Lounge in St Paul, says he plans to cook a 180-pound black bear in a pig-roaster over hickory and charcoal on Sunday.

He says his cousin shot it in northern Wisconsin during bear hunting season, which runs in September and October, and then froze it.

Montpetit says he planned to serve the meat to customers, but the state health department rejected the plan because the meat is unprocessed.

Man used bombs to clear snow

Among the many unpleasantities that can come from living in northern regions is being forced to shovel hundreds of pounds of snow during winter months.

A Massachusetts man found a way around that this winter. According to police, he was blowing up snow banks to avoid shoveling them.

Low J Powers, 23, of Abington, Mass, has been charged with threats to commit a crime and possession of incendiary devices, reports the Patriot Ledger.

Abington Police Chief David Majenski told the Patriot Ledger his department was tipped off about Powers explosive snow clearing, and they tracked the offender down to a rooming house.

Eventually, Police discovered

Shoveling snow is tough, but not your only option, apparently.

Powers had "military-grade ammunition and other stuff, including powders of some sort" at his former address, the Patriot Ledger reports. The powder turned out to be an explosive of some kind, and these were the materials he had been using to blow up snow banks, police allege.

Largest Stone Age building found in NW China's Shaanxi

Archaeologists have identified the remains of the largest Stone Age building ever found in China — thought to be a prehistoric "town hall" — in the northwestern Shaanxi Province.

The remains of the pentagon-shaped structure, discovered at the Xiahe Site in Baishui County, date back to the Yangshao culture era of 5,000 to 3,000 BC in the New Stone Age.

Covering 364 square metres, the building had a capacity to hold hundreds of people and might once have been used as a meeting hall, said Zhang Pengcheng, a researcher with the Shaanxi Archaeological Research Institute.

"The ancients erected four large wooden pillars and columns along the walls, making the structure of this size possible," said Zhang.

Actress Jennifer Aniston. —INTERNET

LOS ANGELES, 25 Jan—"The Twilight Saga: Eclipse" and actress Jennifer Aniston were among the honorees that have performed worst enough to land on the list of the 31st Golden Razzie Awards, the organizers said on Monday.

The worst player, according to the Golden Raspberry Award Foundation, is an adventure fantasy film "The Last Airbender," a live-action film adaptation based on the first season of the animated television series "Avatar: The Last Airbender."

It leads a pack with nine nominations including worst picture, worst actor, worst actress and worst screenplay. This is "a jumbled, jump-cut mess of a movie" that "fans of the TV show hated even more than critics did," the organisers said.

Chelsea destroy Bolton in Premier League

BOLTON, 25 Jan—Didier Drogba, Florent Malouda, Nicolas Anelka and Ramires were all on target as Chelsea ended their miserable run of away form with a 4-0 victory at Bolton here on Monday to keep alive their dim hopes of the Premier League title.

Carlo Ancelotti's side had fallen away from contention for the title with a record of one win in nine matches but they have now won their past eight matches at the Reebok Stadium without conceding a goal.

Victory moved them up to fourth and to within seven points of leaders Manchester United, who travel to Blackpool on Tuesday which continued the poor run of Owen Coyle's side, who have now suffered four defeats in their last five matches in a damaging run of form and are just eight points above the bottom three.—Internet

Winter World Cup would pose no problem: Platini

ROME, 25 Jan—Switching the dates of the 2022 World Cup finals to be hosted by Gulf state Qatar from its traditional mid year date to December would not be a problem, claimed European football's supremo Michel Platini on Monday. FIFA's decision to award the World Cup to Qatar - a tiny oil-rich nation where temperatures in summer regularly soar past 43 degrees - has attracted a firestorm of controversy.

But UEFA president Platini said that despite protests raised by Europe's major leagues over the disruption that would cause he could see it being switched.

Asian football chief praises Qatar

DOHA, 25 Jan—Asian football chief Mohamed Bin Hammam has praised Qatar's hosting of the Asian Cup, calling it the perfect rehearsal for the World Cup in 2022.

Bin Hammam, himself a Qatari, who was instrumental in helping bring the World Cup to his homeland, also hailed the quality of football on show at the continental showpiece. "It's been an extremely well organised event by Qatar," said the Asian Football Confederation president, who has not ruled out running against FIFA boss Sepp Blatter when he stands for re-election in May.

"Although it is 12 years (sic) between now and 2022, it was a very good rehearsal for that competition."

The tiny but wealthy country has thrown plenty of money at the Asian Cup — the stadiums are shiny and modern, the organisation is excellent, facilities are top-notch and communications work flawlessly.

The Arctic: a new frontier for oil, gas firms

LONDON, 25 Jan—BP's deal with Rosneft to jointly explore the Arctic's huge oil and gas reserves sets out a new frontier in the race for resources, but one that is dogged by technical and environmental concerns.

More than one fifth of the world's undiscovered but technically recoverable reserves of hydrocarbons are located north of the Arctic Circle, according to the US Geological Survey (USGS).

The region accounts for about 13 percent of the world's undiscovered oil and 30 percent of the undiscovered natural gas, USGS data shows. About 84 percent of the resources occur offshore, trapped below the icy waters. After its disastrous oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico, BP hopes to secure its future with the 14 January deal with state-owned Russian firm Rosneft, which gives it access to 125,000 square kilometres of sea in the Russian Arctic.

Konno's penalty, Kawashima's saves send Japan past S Korea in thriller

DOHA, 25 Jan—Japan moved within one victory of lifting a record fourth Asian Cup as Alberto Zaccheroni's side defeated South Korea 3-0 on penalties to reach the final on Tuesday evening.

With the score at 2-2 after 120 minutes, Yasuyuki Konno struck the winner from the spot as Eiji Kawashima kept out South Korea's first two penalties and Hong Jeong Ho fired wide for Cho Kwang Rae's side.

Japan, who beat South Korea for just the 12th time in 71 meetings, will face Australia in the final on Saturday.

Ki Sung Yong opened the scoring midway through the first half with a penalty won by captain Park Ji Sung, who was making his 100th international appearance.

Ryoichi Maeda leveled later in the half before substitute Hajime Hosogai put Japan up in the first half of extra time, followed by Hwang Jae Won who made it 2-2 at the last gasp in the 120th minute.

The two teams did not disappoint as they staged a thrilling opening half featuring end-to-end action at Al Gharafa Stadium.

The second half was more of the same but without the goals. Neither side came close before the final whistle, which sent the match into extra time — just like four years ago when they met in the third-place match which South Korea won on penalties.—Internet
