Library for all

It is safe to say that nation-building tasks can only be carried out through the power of healthy and educated persons.

At present, systematic plans make formal education and non-formal education gain harmonious development. All the school-age children have easy access to primary education at over 40,000 primary, post-primary, middle and high schools opened throughout the nation.

Strenuous efforts are being made for realizing the literacy campaigns in line with the aim "Education for All". With the collaborative efforts of local authorities, educational staff, members of social organizations and local people, the basic literacy campaigns are being undertaken on a wider scale. As a result, the adult literacy rate hits over 94 per cent up to 2010.

Libraries have been opened for enabling the literates to have reading habit and to escalate their reading skills. So far, over 50,000 self-reliant village libraries have been opened across the nation. Thanks to concerned efforts of the State, wellwishers and social organizations, the number of libraries is increasing day by day.

Recently, new libraries were opened in Aingma Village of Pale Township, Dingaseik Village in Thaton Township and Sakhangyi and Ohnbingyi villages in Kayan Township. Library buildings, furniture and publications were donated to the libraries. Indeed, it is necessary to place emphasis on durability and development of libraries.

It is to take pride in raising the literacy rate of the nation. Efforts are to be made for raising reading habit. All the literates should continue reading. All the people are to study various subjects of literature at libraries daily for broadening their horizons.

HANOI, 17 Feb—An overnight boat packed with tourists, including Americans, Australians and Britons, sank early Thursday in Vietnam's scenic Ha Long Bay, killing 11 foreigners and their Vietnamese guide, officials said.

NEW YORK, 17 Feb—A teenaged Somali pirate captured in a dramatic high seas operation was sentenced by a US court Wednesday to nearly 34 years in prison, despite defence pleas for leniency due to his young age.

Federal Judge Lore-tta Preska in New York said the sentence of 33 years, nine months for Abduwali Abdukhadir Muse would serve as "general deterrence in this kind of crime." Muse was captured in 2009 at the scene of a dramatic clash between the US navy and Somali pirates holding hostage a US merchant captain, who was eventually rescued.

Prosecutors and the judge described Muse as a hardened pirate leader who displayed a cruel streak when he pretended to shoot the US captain of the Maersk Alabama cargo ship.

Preska highlighted "the extreme level of sadism and violence that MR Muse and his men employed."

After the sentencing, FBI assistant director-in-charge Janice Fedarcy said: "The stiff sentence handed down today sends a clear message to others who would interfere with American vessels or do harm to Americans on the high seas: Whatever seas you ply, you are not beyond the reach of American justice."—Internet

Japan may send chatty humanoid tweet-bot to space

TOKYO, 17 Feb—Lonely astronauts on the International Space Station may soon be getting an android friend from Japan.

And for the folks back home, it will tweet.

Japan's space agency is considering putting a talking humanoid robot on the International Space Station to watch the mission while astronauts are asleep, monitor their health and stress levels and communicate to Earth through the micro-blogging site Twitter.

Japan's space agency

JAXA announced this week that it is looking at a plan to send a humanoid robot to the space station in 2013 that could communicate with the ground through Twitter primarily feeding photos, rather than original ideas and provide astronauts with "comfort and companionship."

Following up on NASA's "Robonaut" R-2 programme, which is set for launch on the Discovery shuttle next week, the Japanese android would be part of a larger effort to create and refine robots that can be used by the elderly, JAXA said in a statement. Japan is one of the leading countries in robotics, and has a rapidly aging society with one of the world's longest life-expectancies.

Improving robot communication capabilities could help the elderly on Earth by providing a nonintrusive means of monitoring the robot owner's health and vital signs and sending information to emergency responders if there is an abnormality, JAXA said.—Internet

Rare leatherback turtle spotted in Indonesia

JAKARTA, 17 Feb—Conservationists say they got a rare glimpse of a 6-foot (2-meter) -long leatherback — the world's most endangered sea turtle — together with dozens of eggs in western Indonesia.

Soon after 65 eggs thought to belong to the leatherback were found in a nest — the third such discovery on the same beach this year.

Leatherbacks, which can grow up to 9 feet (3 meters) long, have roamed the oceans for 100 million years, but the globe-trotting sea turtles today number only around 30,000.—Internet

CSIRO to go CSIntelRO for supercomputer

SYDNEY, 17 Feb—Seeking to replace its existing SGI Altix supercomputer with a new model powered by 64-bit Intel processors, Australia's science organization has gone to tender to double its supercomputing power.

Australia's Commonwealth Science and Research Organization, the CSIRO has issued a tender over at the Australian Government's Tendering site seeking new supercomputing powers.

What the CSIRO wants in its place is a "system using x86 (ia32) compatible processors with 64-bit extension", and while this would presumably also mean AMD has a chance, Intel's processors appear to be the ones that will eventually win this deal and be in that big box of supercomputing tricks the CSIRO is seeking. "The system will be used for data-intensive computing, and general shared-memory and other parallel computing", and says the CSIRO, "it will interface to existing storage systems."

New factor may spot heart risks in healthy people

WASHINGTON, 17 Feb — A possible new risk factor for death from heart disease in seniors has been identified by researchers.

The study of almost 1,300 people aged 65 and older focused on

Over 14 years of follow-up, abnormal heart rate turbulence was associated with an eight to nine times increased risk of death from heart disease among participants who were considered at low risk for heart disease based on traditional factors such as age, gender, blood cholesterol and blood pressure levels, obesity, diabetes and smoking.—Internet

Pesticides associated with Parkinson's disease

NEW YORK, 17 Feb—People exposed to the pesticides rotenone and paraquat developed Parkinson's disease approximately 2.5 times more often than others, US researchers found.

Researchers at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, part of the National Institutes of Health, and the Parkinson's Institute and Clinical Centre in Sunnyvale, Calif, studied 110 people with Parkinson's disease and 358 matched controls from the Farming and Movement Evaluation Study.

US industrial production down slightly

WASHINGTON, 17 Feb — US industrial production fell 0.1 percent in January after climbing 1.2 percent in the previous month, the Federal Reserve said Wednesday. The Fed said manufacturing output rose 0.3 percent in January after rising an upwardly revised 0.9 percent in December. Excluding automobile production, manufacturing rose 0.1 percent.

Production at the nation's utility companies, which rose 1.4 percent in December due to high demand attributed to unseasonably cold weather, fell 1.6 percent in January, the Fed said. At the nation's mines, output fell 0.7 percent in the first month of the year.

Capacity utilization measuring production as a percentage of manufacturing, mining and utilities operating at full steam fell slightly to 76.1 percent, 4.4 percentage points below its average from 1972 to 2010, the Fed said.—Internet

Comcast 4Q profit, revenue rise, beat street view

LOS ANGELES, 17 Feb—Comcast Corp, the nation's largest cable TV company, on Wednesday posted a fourth-quarter profit that beat analysts' expectations as more customers signed up for multiple services and the loss of video subscribers slowed.

It also added more broadband Internet and telephone customers than analysts were looking for — surprisingly strong results that caused the share price to climb 97 cents, or 4 percent, to close at $25.13 Wednesday. "There's not a single meaningful operating number that it didn't beat," Bernstein analyst Craig Moffett said in a research report.

The Philadelphia-based company with operations in 39 states said it lost 135,000 video subscribers in the quarter, fewer than the 206,000 subscriber loss analysts expected and less than the 199,000 it lost a year earlier. It finished the year with 22.8 million subscribers.

There were fewer cancellations by people who signed up mainly for promotional prices in 2009, and more people stuck around thanks to more high-definition channels and expanded programming brought on by the move to digital delivery.

It added 292,000 Internet customers, above the 212,000 expected, and 257,000 phone customers, also better than the 210,000 expected. It ended the year with 17 million Internet subscribers and 8.6 million voice customers.

Fla girl dead in toxic truck; brother burned

FORT LAUDERDALE, 17 Feb—A state worker made the alarming discovery: a 10-year-old boy in the front seat of an exterminator's red pickup alongside a busy interstate, convulsing from seizures, dripping in chemicals so toxic they sickened rescue workers. Nearby, the boy's father lay on the ground, unresponsive and doused in gasoline in what he later told police was a futile attempt to kill himself.

The most horrifying find would come hours later because the truck was too toxic to search — the deteriorating body of the boy's twin sister, wrapped in plastic bags, wedged between chemical containers in the enclosed pickup bed.

The boy was in critical condition Wednesday, his burns, mostly below the waist, getting worse and doctors unsure of what chemical was used. His father, Jorge Barahona, was also in the hospital. He faces aggravated child abuse charges, but more were expected.

Meanwhile, an angry judge grilled state child welfare officials over missed opportunities to help the twins, Victor and Nubia, after an anonymous abuse allegation was called into a hotline 10 Feb four days before the children were found by the highway assistance worker along Interstate 95 in West Palm Beach.

OSLO, 17 Feb—A Norwegian shipping magnate was strongly criticized Wednesday for suggesting that pirates captured off the Horn of Africa should be sunk with their skulls or executed on the spot.

In a newspaper op-ed, the 79-year-old founder of the Stolt-Nielsen shipping group, Jacob Stolt-Nielsen, said history shows that fighting piracy requires a gloves-off approach.

"When piracy implies a great risk of being caught and hanged, and the cost of losing ships and weapons becomes too big, it will decrease and eventually disappear," Stolt-Nielsen wrote Tuesday in Norwegian financial newspaper Dagens Næringsliv.

"Pirates captured in international waters have always been punished by death, often on the spot," he wrote, arguing that modern navies should deal with the problem like Roman pirate hunter Pompey did more than 2,000 years ago.

"Not arrest them and say, 'naughty, naughty, shame on you,' and release them again, but sink their boats with all hands," Stolt-Nielsen wrote. "The pirates won't be frightened by being placed before a civilian court."

The animals were rescued from deplorable conditions after a law was passed last year in Bolivia prohibiting all performances involving animals, Animal Defenders International said. Most of the lions were dehydrated and suffered from eye and foot infections when rescued, the group has said.

Water Resource Utilization Department designated the project zones in Natogyi Zone, Meiktila-Thazi Zone, Pyawbwe-Phayangazu Zone, Nay Pyi Taw Zone and Hinthada Zone. Of them, a total of 104 wells have been sunk in Nay Pyi Taw Zone since 2003 for supplying drinking water to 624,000 local people.

In Pyawbwe-Phayangazu Zone, the 100 4-inch diameter tube-well sinking project commenced in October 2009. Up to February 2011, a total of 80 tube-wells have been sunk successfully. Among 80 tube-wells, 60 artisan wells pump 3000 gallons each of water per hour on average. Being a hot and dry area with water deficiency for cultivation, Phayangazu Zone cannot consume adequate water. Thanks to natural artisan wells, the region extends sown acreage through double and mixed cropping patterns with the use of adequate water supply. As such, the local people are enjoying higher living standard.

Water Resource Utilization Department is striving for supply of clean drinking water for the people as well as water for agricultural purpose through underground water tapping work. In so doing, the department plans to supply water to the farmlands for boosting production and extending sown acreage.

So far, the department has sunk 104 tube-wells in Nay Pyi Taw

Zone, 449 tube-wells in Meiktila-Thazi Zone, 80 tube-wells in Pyawbwe-Phayangazu Zone, 46 tube-wells in Natogyi Zone and 157 tube-wells in Hinthada Zone. These tube-wells are irrigating 4500 acres of farmlands and supplying drinking water to over 80,000 people.

The Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation imported 12 RG drilling rigs manufactured by RG-Petro Machinery Group Co Ltd of the People's Republic of China in 2010 for effectively carrying out the tasks of Water Resource Utilization Department. Up to now, six RG drilling rigs have arrived at the worksites. The machines were used in sinking four tube-wells in Nay Pyi Taw Zone and three in Pyawbwe-Phayangazu Zone. The remaining six machines will arrive in Myanmar coming March.

The machines can sink 1000 feet deep of well and it has capacity of drilling stone layers with the use of hydraulic system. Each sinking machine is valued at US$ 395,000.

Nowadays, Water Resource Utilization Department is speeding up the effective utilization of underground water with the use of RG drilling rigs so as to contribute to uplift development of the nation and socioeconomic life of the local people.

National reconsolidation can be achieved only through non-violence stance

Nga Min Swe

After Daw Aung San Suu Kyi's release, local journals featured "From Nga Min Swe to Daw Aung San Suu Kyi (2)" Open Letter. In the letter it is stated that due to the economic sanctions imposed by the US and West Bloc countries against Iraq, food and medicine supplies run out and lots of Iraqi children died; that thus it is undeniable that economic sanction is a terrorist attack that can claim lives; and that you can argue in public with tangible evidence that economic sanction is not a terrorist attack and if not, you must admit that economic sanction is a terrorist attack. I hoped Daw Aung San Suu Kyi would make a clarification in response to my claim.

Her NLD issued a statement on the economic sanctions against Myanmar, which I have learned. In the statement, the fact I pointed out that economic sanction is a terrorist attack is not dealt with at all. I assume no clarification means it is absolutely true that economic sanction is a terrorist attack.

The statement only said that the economic hardships being faced by Myanmar people are not because of economic sanctions; that sanctions cannot affect the general population and the economy of farmers; that the reason of economic sanctions are because of human rights violations and lack of democratic practices and that the sanctions did not stem from the demands of any political party, organization or individual in Myanmar and they were decided by the nations concerned.

Myanmar people have heard that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi made lots of demands such as dissuasion of foreign businesses from investing in Myanmar, dissuasion of tourists from visiting Myanmar and a dialogue or utter devastation. Coming to their knowledge that the Myanmar people have realized economic sanctions are an improper act of committing terrorism, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and NLD might have issued the statement only to protest that they have nothing to do with such acts.

According to a military strategy, it is the most effective way to cut off supplies of an enemy's camp rather than trying to occupy it, and it is also the strategy that causes the fewest casualties. In the name of democracy and human rights, the US and West Bloc resorted to various ways to topple the Tatmadaw government with the intent to make their lackeys come to power in Myanmar. In their attempt, they employed a strategy of imposing economic sanctions like the one mentioned above. Their stooges supported their acts. However, the economic sanctions against Myanmar were not effective thanks to united cooperation of the government, the people and the Tatmadaw and close friendships of the neighbouring nations. So it can be deduced that like the points stated in the NLD statement, the economic sanctions did not do much harm to the Myanmar people.

The root cause of imposing economic sanctions is human rights violations and lack of democratic practices, states the NLD statement. The US and West Bloc countries have already been strong economies. They have been familiar with democratic practices. Their citizens are highly educated. Those countries are like a person who has grown up. Myanmar and regional countries have yet to be ideal for their economy, education and democratic practices. So, they are like a young child. Human rights and democratic practices are tonics. The regional countries, including Myanmar, should not be administered such tonics in the way the West Bloc nations are done. Only the proper amount of tonics should be administered to the regional countries. With some regional countries exercising human rights and democracy on a proportionate basis, their economy has become strong. Myanmar on its part is building up a peaceful, modern and developed democratic nation on a proportionate basis.

While the US and its allies are imposing economic sanctions against Myanmar accusing her of violating human rights and lacking democratic practices, they are found to be dealing with some nations that breach human rights and lack democratic practices by giving them special economic opportunities. While imposing sanctions against Myanmar because of the rule of military government, they are proving economic and military aids for a country ruled by a general who purged a democratically-elected government. Realizing the truth, the Myanmar people have come to know that the sanctions of the US and West Bloc are an act of terrorism to fulfill their wishes. Myanmar citizens who love Myanmar are displeased with Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and NLD for demanding economic sanctions against Myanmar. Those sanctions harmed national reconciliation between the Myanmar people and the NLD.

I overheard that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi once said 'she accepts and believes in world peace leader Mahatma Gandhi's non-violence stance'. I myself believe in his stance. I would like to present some points from Mahatma Gandhi's non-violence stance in order that Daw Aung San Suu Kyi can study it again.

Mahatma Gandhi in his non-violence policy says that non-violence stance is the greatest among the applicable strengths. A person who lives in non-violence stance is ready to make the supreme sacrifice. For everyone, having love of others
(See page 9)

The root cause of imposing economic sanctions is human rights violations and lack of democratic practices, states the NLD statement. The US and West Bloc countries have already been strong economies. They have been familiar with democratic practices. Their citizens are highly educated. Those countries are like a person who has grown up. Myanmar and regional countries have yet to be ideal for their economy, education and democratic practices. So, they are like a young child. Human rights and democratic practices are tonics. Daw Aung San Suu Kyi lives in non-violence policy initiated by Mahatma Gandhi, the pioneer in the field of peace. Like her, I favour non-violence policy. If we are in support of a policy, we have to put it into action. Therefore, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, who lives in non-violence policy of Mahatma Gandhi, should oppose economic sanctions against Myanmar that represent coercion and violence against the nation and the people. And she should dissuade offender countries from imposing economic sanctions against Myanmar.

who love them is not non-violence stance. Only if we can keep showing love to those hostile towards us, can we cultivate non-violence stance. Non-violence represents truth. In this regard, we do not have to show truth by having hostilities to those who have different stances, but by making self-sacrifices.

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi welcomes sanctions against the country with the intent to make the government in a fix, whose stance is different from hers. So, her stance is absolutely against the non-violence policy initiated by Mahatma Gandhi and squeezes and sparks total violence to the government and the people. If Daw Aung San Suu Kyi is in favour of Mahatma Gandhi's non-violence policy, she should lift the sanctions. If so, there will be any disagreement between the government and the people and her party NLD, and national reconsolidation can be built.

The US sanctions against Myanmar led to closure of 80 per cent of the garment factories in the nation in 2003. In that case, the US did not need to use any bombers. That had adverse effects to female workers and their dependants. Here, the US uses economic sanctions as weapons at the instigation of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and NLD, which has come to the public knowledge. Like some other regional countries, Myanmar is carrying out smooth democratization processes in conformity with the criteria that are suitable for its people. Of the countries, Myanmar without economic strength is the only targeted country, which is abhorrent to Myanmar people. So, Myanmar people are more strongly equipped with a sense of national spirit that they will have to build the economy of the nation.

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi lives in non-violence policy initiated by Mahatma Gandhi, the pioneer in the field of peace. Like her, I favour non-violence policy. If we are in support of a policy, we have to put it into action. Therefore, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, who lives in non-violence policy of Mahatma Gandhi, should oppose economic sanctions against Myanmar that represent coercion and violence against the nation and the people. Frog re-emerges in India after century

WASHINGTON, 17 Feb—Researchers have rediscovered frog species including one last seen in India more than a century ago, potentially offering clues on why they have survived a global crisis killing amphibians.

But in a five-continent study released Thursday, conservationists largely had bleak news. Of 10 species at the top of a list of missing amphibians, only one — a harlequin toad in Ecuador — was found again.

Scientists estimate that more than 30 percent of amphibians are facing extinction due to a mysterious fungus that has spread around the world over the past decade, along with pressure from loss of habitat and climate change.

Robin Moore, an amphibian expert at Conservation International, said that scientists would closely examine how the rediscovered species survived.

"It may be that the survivors are somehow resilient to this disease that's wiped out a lot of species, whether it's a genetic resistance or whether they have some sort of beneficial bacteria to fight the disease," Moore said.

"It indicates that there are differences and some species are able to hang on. It's provided us with more lines of research."

The study, led by Conservation International and the International Union for Conservation of Nature, involved five months of expeditions across 21 countries.

Rare turtle dove causes stir in UK neighbourhood

LONDON, 17 Feb—Hundreds of British birdwatchers have poured into a quiet village and lined its streets to catch a glimpse of a rare Oriental Turtle Dove.

Sky News says that Steve Akers first saw the rare bird through his kitchen window. He is now charging birdwatchers 5 pounds ($8) to enter his house for a chance to see the bird.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds confirmed that the dove was an Oriental Turtle Dove. A spokesman, Grahame Madge, said Wednesday it may be a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for British enthusiasts to see the bird.

He says that it likely took a wrong turn while it was migrating from Siberia to its wintering ground in the Indian subcontinent.

Akers said he will donate the entry fee to bird charities.—Internet

20 killed in Tanzania military blasts

ZANZIBAR, 17 Feb—A military ammunition depot in Tanzania's capital blew up overnight in a series of explosions that leveled homes, killed at least 20 people and wounded about 145 others. The blasts were felt as far as 20 kilometers (12 miles) away.

Prime Minister Mizengo Pinda said several houses and a school were leveled during Wednesday night's explosions, which sent huge orange bursts into the night sky over Dar es Salaam. Debris showered parts of the city 15 kilometers (10 miles) from the Gongola Mboto military base where the depot was located.

It was at least the second recent accident at the base.

Military spokesman Lt Col Kapambala Mgwawe said 20 people have been confirmed killed. He said the explosions were accidental but gave no details. A hospital administrator, Mussa Wambura, said about 145 people were injured, some "badly hit by the blasts." The blasts closed the city's international airport, near the Gongola Mboto military base. Thousands of residents were evacuated to the national stadium.—Internet

St Louis Art Museum sues to keep mummy mask

ST LOUIS, 17 Feb—The St Louis Art Museum has filed a federal lawsuit to try to keep a 3,200-year-old mummy mask that Egypt wants returned, claiming it was stolen.

The museum says the US government is trying to seize the 20-inch-long funeral mask of Ka-Nefer-Nefer and return it to Egypt. But the museum says it has legal rights to the mask it purchased from a New York art dealer for $499,000 in 1998.

Egyptian officials have claimed the mask was stolen in the early 1990s from a storage room near a pyramid.

The suit claims there is no proof the mask was stolen and says the statute of limitations has expired for any seizure.

US Attorney Richard Callahan says the dispute is probably headed where it needs to go, and that's to court.

Google introduces online payment system

BERLIN, 17 Feb—Google Inc is undercutting rival Apple Inc with an online payment system that lets publishers keep more of the fees charged for reading their digital editions.

Google CEO Eric Schmidt unveiled the one-stop payment service, called One Pass, at Berlin's Humboldt University on Wednesday. Three German publishers, including the nation's leading Axel Springer AG, already have signed up.

Besides Germany, One Pass is available to publishers in Canada, France, Italy, the UK and the US. Google said Media General Inc, publisher of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, and Rust Communications, owner of the Southeast Missourian, plan to use One Pass.

The announcement came a day after Apple rolled out a long-awaited subscription service for applications designed for its iPhone and iPad. Apple is demanding a 30 percent cut of all subscriptions sold on those mobile apps while Google is charging 10 percent.

"We aren't in this to make money. Google makes money in other ways," Schmidt said. "We are trying to get money to people who are producing high-quality content."

Google makes most of its money from digital ads, including some that appear alongside online stories from newspapers and magazines.

The strategy has turned Google into one of the world's most profitable companies, fostering resentment among some publishers, which believe the Internet search engine has prospered by showing excerpts of newspaper and magazine stories.

Global art market rebounds from financial crisis

MADRID, 17 Feb—Sales of modern art are returning to levels seen before the global financial crisis, as collectors snap up works that have dropped in price in recent years as an investment or to decorate their homes.

Gallery owners taking part in ARCO, one of Europe's biggest contemporary art fairs which got underway Wednesday in Madrid, said many collectors had seen art values soar in the last decade and had bet they would profit from any new rise.

But they said buyers were being more selective this time around and it is mostly the very wealthy who have returned to the market as growth in the United States and other major economies, such as Germany, picks up.

"There was such a level of restraint in spending that people are now starting to buy stuff that before they would not buy," ARCO director Carlos Urroz at the opening of the fair which features 197 galleries from 26 nations.

"For this reason I believe ARCO can be a parenthesis in this austere time which we have all had and people who have money will allow themselves a treat."

Video making second mobile revolution

BARCELONA, 17 Feb—Smartphones and tablets are driving a mobile revolution, allowing video to take the lead in a business once dominated by voice calls, industry players and experts say.

Video already does or will soon account for the majority of mobile data traffic, according to companies that monitor traffic, and with the proliferation of tablet computers that is likely to increase.

"If you want to put 2011 into a nutshell you can say that for the mobile phone companies their business is changing from an ears business — people speaking and hearing — into an eyes business with people looking at little screens," said

Stefan Zehle, CEO of Coleago Consulting.

Cisco chief John Chambers told the mobile industry's annual trade fair in Barcelona this week that the visual medium would soon become ubiquitous in mobile communication.

Brazil's GDP up 7.8 percent in 2010

RIO DE JANEIRO, 17 Feb—Brazil's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth in 2010 was estimated at 7.8 percent, the country's Central Bank announced on Wednesday. According to the Central Bank's Economic Activity Indicator (IBC-Br), the IBC-Br reached 138.68 points last year, up from 128.64 points in 2009. The GDP expansion surpassed 10 percent at the beginning of the year, and registered some deceleration in the second half of 2010.

The IBC-Br is considered a preview for the official GDP figures, which will be released in March by the Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics (IBGE). EADS cuts price on US tanker bid WASHINGTON, 17 Feb—European aerospace giant EADS on Wednesday said it had lowered its bid for a $35 billion US Air Force aerial refueling tanker contract against US rival Boeing.

EADS North America chairman Ralph Crosby told reporters at a Washington news conference: "We did in fact revise our proposal and our price."

The European Aeronautic Defence and Space company "improved and updated the pricing" of the proposed A330 aircraft made by France-based unit Air-bus and submitted a "very competitive price proposal," he said.

In a politically charged battle, the US and European rivals delivered their revised final bids by last Friday's deadline to replace 179 tankers in an ageing fleet of Boeing KC-135s that date back to the 1950s.

Boeing's chief executive Jim McNerney last week described its final bid as an "aggressive" attempt to beat its "subsidized" European rival.

US export of coking coal increases nearly 50 percent in 2010

HOUSTON, 17 Feb—US exports of steelmaking coking coal rose to 55 million tons in 2010, the highest level since 1991, according to statistics released Wednesday by US Energy Information Administration (EIA).

US producers have steadily expanded coking coal exports in recent years and the exports rose from 37 million tons in 2009 to 55 million tons in 2010, or an 49 percent increase, EIA said.

Experts believe that, in 2011, US exports will reach 65 million tons, much of which will be in the form of relatively low grade blending coals.

The EIA said the export increase trend mainly results from a decrease of domestic consumption. The 2010 export level is nearly three times the consumption of coking coal at US coke plants. The United States consumed less coking coal domestically due to the continued adoption of technologies such as electric arc furnace (EAF) technology, an alternative steelmaking process.

The braincases from three individuals were fashioned in such a meticulous way that their use as bowls to hold liquid seems the only reasonable explanation.

Man, 84, survives desert ordeal over five days

There was a moment when Henry Morello began to lose hope, stuck as he was for five long days with his car in a ditch in the Arizona desert.

The 84-year-old drank windshield wiper fluid after he got thirsty, used car mats to stay warm and even read a car manual from cover to cover to pass time.

Then, he heard a knock on a window from a hiker, and suddenly his long, painful ordeal was over.

"I just kissed him," Morello said of the hiker.

"He looked like an angel to me."

Morello described his ordeal at a hospital news conference on Tuesday as he recalled making a wrong turn while driving home 7 Feb from a favourite restaurant in Cave Creek and ending up stuck in the desert near Interstate 17 north of Phoenix. His car and cell phone battery soon went dead as rescuers looked for him.

Zoo prepares cross-eyed cat for celebrity

Hot on the heels of cross-eyed opossum Heidi's smash success at the Leipzig Zoo, a nearby animal park in eastern Germany has been preparing its own cross-eyed creature for possible celebrity.

Meet Frank the jaguarundi, a 14-year-old wild cat from the Tiergarten Delitzsch in eastern Germany, who has his own pair of crossed eyes.

"I think many people probably just come to the zoo to see him," zoo head Katrin Ernst told Reuters. "They stand at his enclosure and call his name. I can hear here it from my office nearby." Jaguarundis are a type of puma native to North and South America.

Frank's handlers believe he was born cross-eyed, unlike opossum Heidi whose crossed eyes stem from a poor diet when she was young.

Frank, the eyra or jaguarundi, which is a type of wild cat, is pictured in a zoo in the town of Delitzsch, north of Leipzig.

Inside

Mahatma Gandhi in his non-violence policy says that non-violence stance is the greatest among the applicable strengths. A person who lives in non-violence stance is ready to make the supreme sacrifice. For everyone, having love of others who love them is not non-violence stance. Only if we can keep showing love to those hostile towards us, can we cultivate non-violence stance. Non-violence represents truth.
