Technical innovation for industrialization

With the agrarian economy, the nation is transforming itself into a modern industrialized one through further development of agriculture and all-round development of other sectors of the economy as well.

In pursuit of the ultimate goal of becoming an industrialized nation, the people have to make sustained efforts for industrial development. Now, more and more electric power plants are being built to meet the fundamental requirement of electricity for national industrialization.

A growing number of industrial regions and zones are emerging across the nation. Heavy industries and import-substitute goods enterprises are gathering momentum. And the State-owned and private-owned industries are making a good headway.

In addition, the government is rendering technical assistance and attending other needs to expedite the processes.

Productivity of the industrial regions and zones is very encouraging, but they have yet to boost production of high-quality items, build capacity of workforces, and minimize loss and wastage to be able to compete with their counterparts in other countries for greater market share.

Quality control is of paramount importance in manufacturing goods. Factories and plants should pay more attention to customer satisfaction, operation at full capacity, innovations and collaborative efforts to help achieve the national goal.

Bomb kills three tribal elders in western Afghanistan

KABUL, 11 April—A roadside bomb killed three tribal elders in western Afghanistan on Sunday, possibly in retaliation for their cooperation with the government.

The men were driving to a meeting with villagers and other tribal elders to discuss what sort of projects the Afghan government and international donors should fund when their vehicle hit a roadside bomb, killing all of them, officials said.

One of the dead, Sayid Ahmad, was the head of the group of tribal elders who organized the meeting, said Abdul Basir Kherkywi, the head of Farah Province's local council.

The meeting was common knowledge in the area and officials said the men were probably directly targeted.

"The enemy probably knew they'd be driving on this road," said Yonus Rasouli, the deputy governor.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack, but the Taleban and other insurgent groups regularly target Afghans working with the government or international forces.—Internet

Gordon Brown admits 'big mistake' over banks

LONDON, 11 April—Ex-prime minister Gordon Brown admitted that he made a "big mistake" in not seeking tighter regulations on banks in the lead up to the financial crisis.

The former leader told a conference in the US that he had not fully appreciated how "entangled" the global financial system had become when establishing the Financial Services Authority (FSA), the country's regulatory body.

"We set up the FSA believing the problem would come from the failure of an individual institution," Brown said. "That was the big mistake. We didn't understand just how entangled things were."

"I have to accept my responsibility," New Chancellor of the Exchequer George Osborne has announced plans to break up the FSA and hand more regulatory power to the Bank of England.

Brown said he believed the will to tighten regulation was weakening in the face of lobbying by the financial sector. "I do believe we're going back to a race to the bottom," he warned.

Bombs in two Iraqi cities kill 10

BAGHDAD, 11 April—Bombings in two central Iraqi cities killed at least 10 people Monday, with twin blasts near a school and market in a former insurgent stronghold leaving at least six dead, officials said.

In the city of Fallujah, police chief Brig Gen Mahmoud al-Issawi said a parked car packed with explosives blew up at about 11:00 am as police were trying to defuse it. The blast killed two policemen.

About 15 minutes later, the second car bomb exploded about 150 meters (yards) away, targeting people gathered near the scene of the first blast, Al-Issawi said. That blast killed four civilians and injured 20, including two policemen. The target was unclear, but both cars exploded near a school and market.

Fallujah is located 40 miles (65 kilometres) west of Baghdad in the Sunni-dominated Anbar Province. It was once a capital for Iraq's militancy.

Earlier Monday, four civilians were killed and 11 others wounded when a minibus hit a roadside bomb in southeastern Baghdad, officials said. Among the dead was a 10-year girl.

Bus passengers kidnapped for recruitment in Mexico gangs

MEXICO CITY, 11 April—A bus was hijacked in a northern Mexican state to recruit the male passengers as gunmen in drug gangs, according to witnesses.

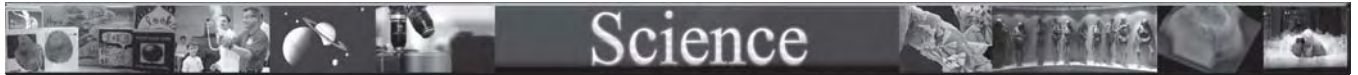

The bus, heading for the border with the US, was stopped by armed men in San Fernando city in Tamaulipas state. The armed men forced young men off the bus and let the rest of the passengers go, the Reforma newspaper reported citing witnesses' accounts.

The young men taken off the bus were led away by the gunmen, it said. Several drug cartels operate in Tamaulipas, a state on the border with Texas.

Some gangs have resorted to using unusual methods to recruit gunmen because of high casualties in the gang war being waged by rival drug traffickers for control of territory, the federal government said.

At least 20 sites in total are jockeying for the chance to display pieces of the former space programme's fleet.

Titan may have 'ghost' crater

TUSCON, 11April— US astronomers say a huge impact scar may exist, and would be the largest such structure, on the otherwise mostly smooth surface of Saturn's moon Titan.

Compared to other moons throughout the solar system, Titan has very few impact craters.

Robert Brown of the University of Arizona and colleagues spotted the roughly circular, 1,100-mile-wide bright patch near Titan's equator while studying infrared images snapped by the Cassini spacecraft, NewScientist.com reported Friday. Radar data suggest Titan's crust is fractured in this area, something the researchers say would be expected following an impact.

The team says they believe a 35-mile wide body crashed into Titan early in its history, creating the surface feature. Unlike fresh craters, the interior of the feature is only slightly lower than the surrounding landscape, suggesting its great age. "It's like the ghost of a crater," Brown said.—Internet

Ads a drawback with LockMenu for Android

NEW YORK, 11 April—LockMenu for your Android phone is a practical alternative to your phone's default lock screen.

A standard application that helps you preserve battery life, that lock on your phone is a simple, single, sliding-lock mechanism you tap and drag to get to your phone's home screen.

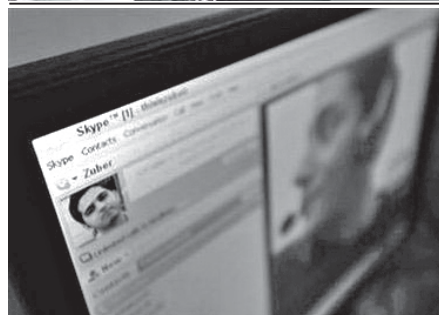

What's neat about LockMenu, though, is that instead of having just one of these sliders, the app allows users to configure as many as seven of them. This way, as soon as you pick up your phone, you can directly navigate your way to all of your most frequently used applications.

It doesn't take a lot of energy to unlock your Droid after it has timed out (it's just a quick flick of the thumb), but it still can be an aggravating task when you have to do it every few seconds. What's really neat about LockMenu is that by tapping into the app's preferences (tap your phone's menu) you can change the amount of time that passes before your phone screen locks up. The options range from five seconds to 30 minutes.

The sliders themselves maintain the tight, sleek look of your Android's default lock application, but the app's ads do clutter the screen a bit.

Caffeine may contribute to diabetes

DURHAM, 11 April—Caffeine may contribute to type 2 diabetes, US researchers say, citing a study that challenges previous research that caffeine helps prevent diabetes.

James Lane of Duke University says studies have shown the increase in blood glucose levels that occurs after adults with type 2 diabetes eat carbohydrates is exaggerated if they also drink a caffeinated beverage such as coffee.

The inaugural issue of Journal of Caffeine Research: The International Multidisciplinary Journal of Caffeine Science reports a growing body of research suggests caffeine disrupts glucose metabolism and may contribute to the development and poor control of type 2 diabetes.

This caffeine effect could contribute to higher glucose levels in those with diabetes and could compromise treatment aimed at controlling their blood glucose, Lane says.

"The links that have been revealed between diabetes and the consumption of caffeine beverages especially coffee are of monumental importance when it is acknowledged that more than 80 percent of the world's population consumes caffeine daily," Jack E James, editor in chief of journal and of the National University of Ireland, says.—Internet

Successful schools may help keep kids out of trouble

CHICAGO, 12 April—Students who go to schools that achieve better-than-expected academic results may be less likely to use drugs or alcohol, steal or fight, finds a new study. University of Florida researchers looked at academic achievement scores at 61 inner-city middle schools in Chicago between 2002 and 2005. Seven schools did better than expected and the rates of drug and alcohol use and delinquency by students at those schools were as much as 25 percent lower compared to other schools.

The study was published in the March issue of the journal Prevention Science. The schools in the study all had high numbers of students from ethnic minorities and poor homes, factors that are often associated with lower achievement in school, noted lead author Amy Tobler, a research assistant professor of health outcomes and policy at the University of Florida College of Medicine.

"It could be good teaching, better administration, whatever these schools are doing, if we can replicate it, it will lead to not only academic achievement but improvement in healthy behaviors as well," she said in a university news release. Warner board to review bids this week

NEW YORK, 12 April — Warner Music Group's board is expected to review second-round bids for the company at a meeting in the coming week, a source familiar with the matter said.

Up to 10 investors have put in bids ahead of the meeting, offering a range of valuations from $2.8 billion to slightly above $3 billion on an enterprise-value basis, the source said.

Among the potential buyers for all or part of Warner are music companies Live Nation and BMG Rights Management, a joint venture between Bertelsmann and private equity firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts and Co, the source said.

Other bidders include Platinum Equity, billionaire Ron Burkle's Yucaipa Co, billionaire Len Blavatnik, investor Ron Perelman and Sony Corp, which is specifically interested in the song publishing unit. A Warner spokesman declined to comment.

Warner Music effectively put itself up for sale in January when it hired Goldman Sachs Group Inc and AGM Partners to explore strategic options after it was approached about selling its assets.

TOKYO, 11 April — Japan's core private-sector machinery orders, a leading indicator of corporate capital spending, fell by more than expected in the month before a massive earthquake, data showed on Monday.

Core machinery orders fell 2.3 percent from a month earlier in February, with the bigger-than-expected fall during pre-quake conditions raising concerns about the severity of the March 11 quake's impact in the months to come. The first fall in three months compares with the median forecast for a 1.1-percent fall in a poll of economists surveyed by Dow Jones Newswires and the Nikkei.

US citizen among bus passengers abducted in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, 11 April—At least one US citizen was among dozens of men reportedly forced off passenger buses by armed attackers in the northeastern border state of Tamaulipas, where 72 bodies were found in mass graves last week, US officials said Sunday.

It is not unusual for people living or working in Mexican border states to have been born in the US.

S Korean nuclear experts to visit Japan over nuclear crisis

SEOUL, 11 April—South Korean and Japanese experts will meet later this week in Tokyo to discuss Japan's nuclear debacle, the first such meeting since the devastating earthquake and tsunami last month crippled nuclear reactors in Japan's northeastern province of Fukushima, local reports said Monday.

The two-day meeting starting Tuesday will bring together six South Korean experts including those from the Korea Institute of Nuclear Safety and their Japanese counterparts, who are expected to discuss threats of radiation leaks from the damaged reactors and check and monitor radiation levels.

The meeting comes after South Korea expressed concern last week over neighbouring Japan's release of water contaminated with low-level radiation into the sea without any prior warning, which sparked public criticism here for a lack of communication between the two neighbours.

Depending on the outcome of the meeting, South Korea might consider dispatching a team of nuclear experts to Japan or conducting a joint research with Japan, according to local reports.

Woodside shares rise on reports of BHP takeover

SYDNEY, 11 April—Shares in major Australian energy producer Woodside Petroleum jumped more than six percent in early trade Monday, on renewed speculation that mining giant BHP Billiton had the company in its sights.

An Australian spokeswoman for BHP

Kachin State is in nurturing its goal of becoming the fourth granary in Myanmar. As a result of increasing sown acreage of Hsin-ekari-3 paddy and using advanced agricultural methods, average per acre yield of paddy touched 77.07 baskets in Mohnyin Township despite climate changes in 2010-2011.

Mohnyin Township branch of the Myanma Agriculture Service founded a model farm at Plot (317) in Maringon Village, Farmer U Aung Bala from Ingyingon Village.

Ingyingon Village-tract, to produce Hsin-ekari-3 paddy (Grade-II) to boost paddy per acre yields. In addition, it is growing Hsinnweyin and Shweyinaye paddy strains in the township with 55 staff at different levels. Official In-Charge of the farm U Myint Than said that they were producing quality seeds of Hsin-ekari-3 paddy, organizing local farmers to use organic and inorganic fertilizers in a systematic way, and disseminating agricultural methods for boosting per acre yields of paddy.

A seminar on advanced agricultural methods and a demonstration of growing crops took place at Mohnyin Agricultural Research Farm in October 2010. On the occasion, farmer U Aung Bala from Ingyingon Village whose Hsin-ekari-3 paddy fields fetched per acre yield of over 100 baskets in an interview said that farming was their family business; that his Hsin-ekari-3 strain paddy field was successful both in per acre yield and in quality; that Hsin-ekari-3 paddy tasted good and was the most suitable paddy strain for his region; and that farmers would gain bumper harvests of paddy if they chose favourable soil and high-yield strains and used advanced agricultural methods.

In 2010-2011, Mohnyin Township could produce 9,726,011 baskets of paddy, growing 124,700 acres of fields. If quality seeds of high-yield paddy strains and agricultural methods are provided and model farms are established all the more, there will be more townships that enjoy food security like Mohnyin Township.

Singapore nuclear decision "long way away"

SINGAPORE, 11 April—Singapore is "a long way away" from a decision on whether to include nuclear power as part of its energy policy, a senior government official said on Monday.

S Iswaran, the Senior Minister of State for Trade and Industry, said a "pre-feasibility study" was being carried out in order to "better understand the complex field of nuclear energy."

But "even with the completion of the pre-feasibility study, we will still be a long way away from making any decisions on nuclear energy for Singapore per se," Iswaran told parliament.

He said the crisis at Japan's Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant, which was crippled by the March 11 quake and tsunami, made it even more crucial for Singapore to embark on the study. Insights gained from the study will enable Singapore to understand the industry better since its neighbours including Vietnam, Malaysia and Indonesia have indicated plans to use atomic power.—Internet

Australia flags tough budget due to floods

SYDNEY, 10 April—Massive floods that hit Australia this year will likely slash Aus$4 billion from government revenues, Finance Minister Penny Wong said Sunday as she flagged a tough budget.

The centre-left Labour government of Prime Minister Julia Gillard has already signalled spending cuts in the upcoming 10 May budget, in part due to the unprecedented floods that hit coal exports and destroyed key infrastructure.

Senator Wong said the enormous deluge, which covered much of coal-producing Queensland state and swamped farmland in Victoria, had forced the Treasury to revise the revenue forecasts it had released in November.

"There's been a hit on revenue," Wong said, adding that the floods had contributed to company tax revenue dropping by Aus$3 billion ($3.15 billion) and personal income tax receipts likely falling $1 billion. "These are the facts. It's going to be a tough budget," she told ABC TV. Wong said the floods, and the destructive Cyclone Yasi that followed, had hurt the economy, amid cautious consumer sentiment and an Australian dollar at historic highs.—Internet

Philippines to import additional 300,000 MT of rice

MANILA, 11 April—The Philippine government plans to increase its rice imports by additional 300,000 metric tonnes (MT) to ensure supply to ease possible shortage which will be caused by storms in the second half of the year. If the government approves the additional imports volume, this will be on top of the 860,000 MT that is expected to enter the country, local media Philippine Daily Inquirer reported on Monday.

Earlier this year, the Southeast Asian country said it plans to cut rice imports for 2011 because it still had enough stock stored from previous years.

The Philippines is the world's biggest rice importer last year, having brought in 2.13 million tonnes of the commodity in 2010 after the El Nino dry spell cut down production by 3.04 percent to 15.77 million MT.

Australia's LNG sector calls for carbon tax exemption

CANBERRA, 11 April—

Australia's booming natural gas sector on Monday launched a campaign to be exempted from the federal government's proposed carbon tax, arguing the energy source is helping to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. According to chief executive of the biggest Australian-owned liquid natural gas (LNG) company Woodside Petroleum, Don Voelte, LNG can help deliver a "better world" and should be excluded from the carbon tax.

"Everywhere else in the world understands (liquid natural gas) ... (is a) cheap clean transitional fuel to a better world," Voelte told ABC Radio on Monday. "Gas should be excluded (from the tax)". Voelte said Australia was "going it alone" in the world with its plans for a carbon tax, which would penalize gas as a clean energy source, push up domestic gas prices and the cost of living, and hurt exports and manufacturing.—Xinhua

Indian industrial growth slows to 3.6%

NEW DELHI, 11 April—India's industrial output growth slowed to 3.6 percent from a year earlier in February, below analyst forecasts and far down on its 2010 peaks, official data showed on Monday.

February's output was less than January's revised 3.95-percent annual growth and substantially lower than its 15.1-percent expansion in February 2010, when Asia's third-largest economy was emerging from the global downturn.

Analysts had expected India's industrial growth in February to be around 5.2 percent.

The below-expectation output comes after eight interest rate hikes in 12 months to tame stubborn inflation — the most aggressive monetary tightening in Asia — prompted manufacturers to scale back production. Manufacturing output, which accounts for 80 percent of the industrial index, rose 3.5 percent in February, down from 16.1 percent growth a year earlier.

India's output performance contrasted with neighbouring China's industrial production, which expanded by 14.1 percent in the first two months of the year, compared with the same period in 2010.

Australian watchdog fines JAL over cargo cartel

SYDNEY, 11 April—Australia on Monday fined Japan Airlines (JAL) Aus$5.5 million (US$5.8 million) after the carrier admitted its role in a long-running cargo cartel case involving 15 airlines.

The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) said JAL admitted to "making and giving effect to illegal price-fixing understandings with other international airlines" on fuel, insurance and security surcharges.

ACCC chairman Graeme Samuel said JAL had earned a "significant discount" by making Monday's admissions at an early stage of legal proceedings and agreeing to cooperate in hearings against the other airlines.

JAL is the seventh of 15 airlines named in the case to settle and brings total penalties to Aus$46.5 million, he added.

"This outcome continues to send a clear message to those involved in cartel behaviour — the ACCC will not stop its endeavours to identify and bring to an end illegal price-fixing conduct," Samuel said.—Internet

Du Toit was named Monday among six recipients of this year's Goldman Environmental Prize, the most prestigious international award for environmental activists, citing them as "fearless emerging leaders working against all odds to protect the environment and their communities."

Du Toit heads a rhino conservation project in southern Zimbabwe that has helped rebuild and maintain the highest population of rhino in the southern African nation.

San Antonio produces Texas-sized enchilada

San Antonio laid claim to the world record for longest enchilada after a cadre of volunteers whipped one up that stretched 300 feet this weekend.

A coalition of 20 restaurants marshaled 200 volunteers who gathered in Milam Park Saturday to break the record previously held by Mexico City.

The old record was not specified but organizers in San Antonio said they were not about to let their city play second fiddle.

"The enchilada is one of the most popular, important items at Mexican restaurants in San Antonio," Nick Garza, a retired caterer, told the San Antonio Express-News. "I told my friends, 'San Antonio has got to have this record.'"

Garza and friends answered the challenge, the Express-News said. They combined 1,900 pounds of cheese and 400 rectangular corn tortillas together and cooked them on a line of pans. By late afternoon, the creation was being cut up and served. "I thought it would just be slapped together and not taste very good," said spectator Grace Howard. "But it is very good: warm, beefy and cheesy."

Postcard arrives late — minus postage

A Connecticut woman says a postcard managed to reach her from Greece without benefit of postage, zip code or address — 46 years late.

Vasilisa "Vas" Mazzotta of Cromwell, Conn, received the Easter greeting from her grandfather in Greece last month.

The postcard was addressed to "Miss Vassoula Sitara," Mazzotta's maiden name, "Hartford Con." It was dated, "Athens 20 April 65."

"I almost didn't believe what I was reading. I must have read it three times to decipher that, wow, this is from my grandfather 46 years ago," Mazzotta, 59, told the Hartford (Conn) Courant.

Hawk hurt at Md school to fly in February

Officials at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore say a female hawk that careened into a plate-glass window at a campus library in November will fly again.

The bird that has gained notoriety at the Baltimore school's Homewood Campus still has soft tissue damage, but did not break any bones in the accident.

It is being treated at a wildlife rehabilitation centre elsewhere in Baltimore County, Kathy Woods, an expert treating the red-tailed hawk, told The Baltimore Sun.

Such birds of prey have become a point of pride among students and faculty in recent years, the paper reported.

Kathy Roush, who works at the Milton S Eisenhower Library where the bird injured itself, has sent money to pay for the six mice per day the hawk eats.

The accident 16 Nov broke a quarter-inch pane of glass, before the bird, which weighs four pounds, plummeted some 25 feet to the ground. Officials expect the bird to be able to fly sometime around February.

"I became a director because of my admiration for westerns like 'She wore a Yellow Ribbon' (1949 by John Ford), '3:10 for Yuma' (1957 by Delmer Daves), 'Bend of the River' (1952, by Anthony Mann) or 'Pursued' (1947 by Raoul Walsh).

"Suddenly I felt again what these directors must have felt, when they filmed cavalcades, landscapes," he told AFP in Beverly Hills. "It was like going back to my roots, to what I felt when I was 15."

"I saw myself again, a young cinema lover, discovering the fantastic sword fights in 'Scaramouche' by George Sidney (1952)," he added.—Internet

Bob Dylan makes debut in Vietnam

HO CHI MINH CITY, 11 April—Legendary American musician Bob Dylan, whose songs became anthems of the anti-Vietnam war movement, played a symbolic first-ever concert in the communist country on Sunday. A hero for the West's ageing "counter-culture" generation, Dylan and his protest songs are less well-known among the young population of the nation, who have no memory of the years of war with the United States.

But that didn't stop a number of young Vietnamese, as well as foreigners, from turning out for the gig in Ho Chi Minh City and cheering for Dylan, who made no comment on Vietnam or the significance of his appearance there. "We all really enjoyed it," said a 29-year-old banker, who gave his name as Quan, as he and his friends left the concert in the former Saigon, Vietnam's largest and most westernised city.—Internet

'Hop' keeps top spot as Brand pulls double duty

LOS ANGELES, 11 April—British bad boy Russell Brand dominated the North American box office, with a starring turn in the top-earning "Hop," as well as in the remake of the 1980's classic "Arthur," the number two weekend film, industry estimates showed Sunday.

"Hop," a partially animated Easter-themed romp, remained atop the box office for a second consecutive week, with a weekend gross of $21.7 million, bringing its two-week total to $68 million. Brand voices the character "EB" in the film, the wayward son of the Easter Bunny. In "Arthur," which debuted in second place with $12.6 million, he plays the lovable but irresponsible billionaire Arthur Bach in a role originated by Dudley Moore in the 1981 hit.—Internet

City deserve top four spot says Mancini

LIVERPOOL, 11 April — Manchester City manager Roberto Mancini insists his side have proved they deserve a Champions League place as they prepare to face Liverpool at Anfield on Monday.

Mancini's men have seven games remaining as they look to hold on to a top-four spot in the Premier League table.

Big spending City have failed to launch a challenge for the Premier League title and were also frustrated to be knocked out of the last 16 of the Europa League by Dynamo Kiev.

City supporters are desperate to end their long wait for a trophy, which stretches back to their League Cup win in 1976.

But former Inter manager Mancini, who has faced constant speculation about his future, feels that taking their place in the Champions League for the first time will be key to developing the club.

This year our target at the start of the season was to finish in the top four and be in the Champions League," he said.

Schwartzel wins the Masters after a wild day

AUGUSTA, 11 April — The finishing touch of a most amazing Masters was Charl Schwartzel slipping into a green jacket. Until that moment late Sunday afternoon, everything else at Augusta National was up for grabs. The roars came from everywhere, for everyone, and never stopped. Tiger Woods made up a seven-shot deficit in nine holes — too bad it was the front nine. Geoff Ogilvy ran off five straight birdies.

Rory McIlroy matched the greatest collapse in Masters history with a stretch of holes not even Greg Norman would want to watch. It was so wild that eight players had at least a share of the lead on the back nine.—Internet

Valencia trounce Villarreal to move clear in third

Valencia's forward Roberto Soldado (L)

MADRID, 11 April — Valencia staked their claim for third place in La Liga with a stylish 5-0 win in Sunday's head-to-head clash with local rivals Villarreal. Neither side tried to play down the importance of the match with both teams comfortably clear of the chasing pack, with the victory pushing Valencia six points ahead of Villarreal.

Valencia had more time to prepare as Villarreal were in European action on Thursday night and it showed as they were far livelier and put plenty of pressure on the Villarreal players. If the visitors were in good spirits after their 5-1 win over Twente then they were brought back down to earth quickly as Roberto Soldado gave Valencia an early lead. Although they had further chances it was not until the second half that the floodgates opened against a tired looking Villarreal.—Internet

Lyon on the move as Ligue 1 leaders flounder

PARIS, 11 April — Former champions Lyon kept their French league title bid alive Sunday with a 3-0 win at home to struggling Lens as the leading trio Lille, Marseille and Rennes all floundered. A first half strike from South Korean forward Park Chu Young ensured Lille suffered just their fourth defeat of the season on Saturday as Monaco won 1-0 to move out of the drop zone.

Champions Marseille threw away the chance to pile the pressure on the leaders as they were held 2-2 by Toulouse Sunday as Lyon's win sees them move into third at the expense of Rennes who lost 2-0 at midtable Brest. BERLIN, 11 April — Bayer Leverkusen cut Borussia Dortmund's lead at the top of the Bundesliga to just five points on Sunday as they came from behind to seal a 2-1 win at home against relegation-threatened St Pauli.

After Dortmund were held to a 1-1 draw at Hamburg on Saturday, second-placed Leverkusen chipped away at Borussia's lead and fought back as Germany

One-foot cycle ride ends Baden Cooke's Roubaix bid

ROUBAIX, 11 April — Australia's Baden Cooke was left disappointed but buoyed by his future hopes after an incident-packed ride on the gruelling Paris-Roubaix classic. Cooke, a former winner of the Tour de France green jersey for the race's points competition, went into the 258 km cobbled classic with the "best legs" of his life and as Saxo Bank's best bet for a podium place.

However it was racing with just one leg for a few kilometres that probably cost the 32-year-old from Benalla a chance at challenging for a coveted podium place. AC Milan's Ibrahimovic apologises for red card

ROME, 11 April — AC Milan's Swedish striker Zlatan Ibrahimovic has apologised after getting sent off for a foul-mouthed tirade at a linesman during his side's 2-1 win at Fiorentina.

Ibrahimovic had only just returned from a two-game ban for striking Bari's Marco Rossi in the ribs.

The 29-year-old was already facing a one-match ban having picked up a yellow card during the game, meaning he had earned a suspension for an accumulation of cards over the season.

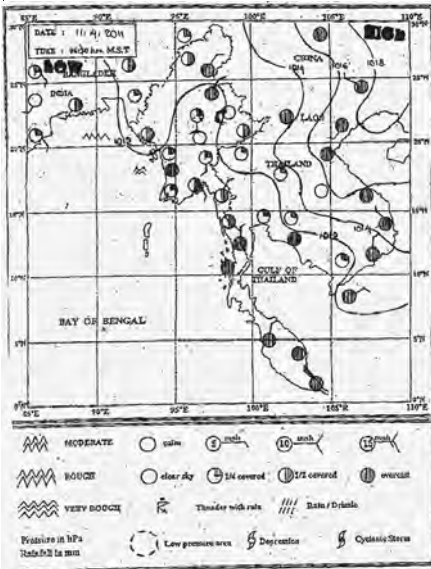

But late on he aimed a rant lined with expletives at a linesman after a throw-in decision went against him. He was duly dismissed by the referee and walked off without protest.—Internet

Schwartzel win shuts out Americans in majors

AUGUSTA, 12 April — Good news travels much faster than when Gary Player first won the Masters. It was only fitting that on the 50th anniversary of Player becoming the first non-American player in a green jacket, he watched another South African, Charl Schwartzel, become the first champion at Augusta National to finish with four straight birdies.

Player wasted no time sending his congratulations—on Twitter, of course, in a sign of the times. In the hours after Schwartzel won against a leaderboard that featured players from every continent on which golf is played, the 26-year-old champion sent Player a reply. “Proud to follow your tradition!”

Hsin-ekari paddy strains become popular in Mohnyin Township

Byline & photos: Reporter Myo Aung (Mohnyin)

Now, all possible ways and means are being applied in all regions and states to boost production of crops especially rice, the staple food in Myanmar.

The Paddy Seed Division of the Agricultural Research Department under the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation in Yezin is producing paddy seeds of hybrid strains in the 24 agricultural research farms in Regions and States it has established with a view to increasing per acre yield of paddy. One of them is the Agricultural Research Farm in Ingyingon Village-tract, Mohnyin Township, Mohnyin District, Kachin State.

The farm aims to produce high-yield paddy strains for the state, to carry out research on agricultural methods and basic cropping patterns, and to provide high-yield paddy strains and technical assistance. Under the paddy reproduction programme, the farm has been producing Hsin-ekari-3 paddy strains in cooperation with the Paddy Seed Division of the Agricultural Research Department in Yezin since 2005-2006.
