Seek knowledge from libraries

Literacy can change not only people's living standard but also the status of a family, a small community or the whole society. So, studying literature, seeking literary knowledge and reading are good habits to cultivate.

The progress of a nation is usually measured by its literacy rate. In this age of knowledge, literacy yields benefits for a person to be able to read and seek knowledge about international affairs.

According to the goal of 'Education for All', literacy campaigns are being launched on a constant basis. Thanks to the concerted efforts of regional bodies, education staff, social organizations and local people, basic literacy campaigns are meeting with success, and there has been 94 percent of adult literacy rate.

It is necessary for every literate to have the habit of reading. Libraries are being established across the nation, the number has reached over 50,000. More and more libraries will be opened with the contributions of the State as well as well-wishers and social organizations.

This month, new library buildings and libraries have been opened in Wasu Village of Hpa-an Township, Haikyin Village of Kyeeekha Township, Phuhti Village of Mawlamyinegyun Township, Aungmyintha Village of Kalay Township and Taungletaw Village of Ngazun Township. Furniture, publications and cash were donated at the library opening ceremonies. Measures need to be taken to maintain those libraries.

It is the national pride and glory to see an increase in literacy rate. But it is important that all literates must keep reading. With the increasing number of libraries across the nation, the people will broaden their horizons by cultivating the daily habit of reading.

William and Kate marry as world watches

LONDON, 29 April—Prince William married Kate Middleton in regal splendour at Westminster Abbey Friday as huge crowds and a global TV audience watched Britain's monarchy pin its hopes on a new generation.

In the biggest royal celebration for three decades, Kate, wearing an ivory and white satin wedding dress with long lace sleeves, a veil and a flowing train, exchanged vows with William, who wore a scarlet military tunic.

"I will," the future king and queen each pronounced solemnly, before William put a ring fashioned from a nugget of Welsh gold on her finger and the Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams pronounced them man and wife.

William, 28, mouthed "You look beautiful" to his bride after she walked up the aisle to the soaring strains of a choral piece that was used at the wedding of William's late mother Diana to Prince Charles in 1981. The absence of Diana, who died in a car crash in Paris in 1997, was keenly felt despite the joyful atmosphere of Friday's service, which also featured a hymn used at her funeral in the same abbey.

Eighteen people were injured in the blast in the city of Balad Ruz, 45 miles (70 kilometres) north of Baghdad, said the police spokesman, Maj Ghalib al-Karkhi. There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but Sunni militants have often targeted Shiite mosques as a way to incite sectarian violence.

Obama names team for 'new phase' in Afghan war

WASHINGTON, 29 April—US President Barack Obama charged his reshaped national security team with managing a "new phase" in the long war in Afghanistan the struggle to put Afghans in charge of their own security. Obama nominated CIA boss Leon Panetta as defence secretary, veteran diplomat Ryan Crocker as ambassador to Kabul and chose Lieutenant General John Allen as the new Afghan war commander, refashioning his security braintrust.

He also announced his choice of famed General David Petraeus, the mastermind of US strategy in Iraq and current NATO commander in Afghanistan, to lead covert intelligence operations as new director of the CIA. "In Afghanistan, we're moving into a new phase, transferring responsibility for security to Afghan forces, starting to reduce American forces this summer, and building a long-term partnership with the Afghan people," Obama said.

Though Obama did not specifically mention an eventual US withdrawal from Afghanistan, his remarks were peppered with references to "transition" hinting at a White House desire to see a smaller US footprint in the troubled nation.—Internet

Next-generation US space racers outline plans

SpaceX's Falcon 9 rocket lifts off in 2010 to launch the Dragon space capsule into orbit.

INTERNET

WASHINGTON, 29 April — A handful of companies competing to make the spaceship to replace the iconic US shuttle said Thursday they are racing to shrink what will be a long gap in flying Americans into space aboard US craft.

Boeing, SpaceX and Sierra Nevada Corporation were among the big winners of the latest round of US government funding, totaling 269.3 million dollars, through a NASA programme to boost private companies' efforts. It will likely be 2015 before a US vehicle is ready to take humans into space again, a timeline that has been widely touted by NASA as a reason for American optimism as the 30-year-old shuttle programme comes to an end later this year. But according to Mark Sirangelo, programme manager at the Coloradobased Sierra Nevada Corp, his team could eke out a crew flight one year earlier with its Dream Chaser, modeled on a NASA design for a space station rescue vehicle.

"Our vehicle has been in testing for 12 years," said Sirangelo, adding that atmospheric tests would begin in 2012 and the first orbital tests would follow in 2014.

"By that time we would be crewed and ready in 2014," he said. Sierra Nevada won the largest amount of NASA seed money, $20 million, in the first round in 2010, and the second largest sum in the latest round of NASA contracts issued earlier this month at $80 million.—Internet

First stars were massive, fast-spinning

LOS ANGELES, 29 April — The first stars that dotted the universe were not only immense, but probably also fast-spinning, according to a new study that sheds light on the nature of stellar evolution.

These early stars died out long ago, but astronomers can get a glimpse of what they were like by looking at later generations of stars.

A team of scientists led by Cristina Chiappini of the Astrophysical Institute Potsdam in Germany reanalyzed data from the Very Large Telescope of a 12-billion-year-old star cluster. They found high levels of metal in the stars — a chemical signature that suggests earlier generations, perhaps even the first stars, were massive and rotated much faster than their present-day counterparts.

This is important because a star that spins more rapidly can live longer and suffer different fates than slow-spinning ones. Findings appear in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

CERN marks advance in universe mysteries search

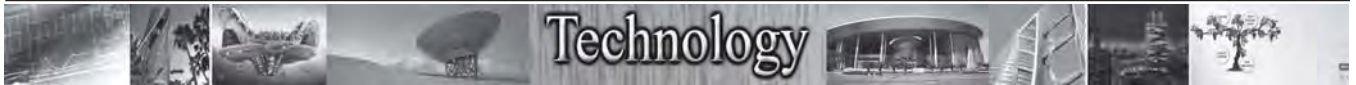

GENEVA, 29 April—Scientists at the CERN physics research centre reported on Friday that they had smashed particles together at a record intensity in a key advance in their programme to unveil mysteries of the universe.

The development came in the early hours after they fed beams into the giant Large Hadron Collider (LHC) with some 6 percent more particles per unit than the previous record, set by the US Fermilab's Tevatron collider last year.

Each collision in the LHC's 27-kilometre (16.8 mile) circular underground tunnel — at a tiny fraction under the speed of light — creates a simulation of the Big Bang which brought the universe into existence 13.7 billion years ago.

The higher the "beam intensity" or number of particles in each beam, the more collisions take place and the more material the scientists have to analyze. Many millions of these mini-Big Bangs are already being produced daily.

Microsoft 3Q growth overshadowed by tablet threat

WASHINGTON, 29 April—Even as Microsoft Corp's earnings grow at a robust rate, investors can't seem to shake the feeling that the boom days are winding down for the world's largest software maker.

The company's fiscal third-quarter results, released Thursday, provided little reassurance despite a 31 percent increase in earnings, exceeding analyst estimates. Microsoft shares still dipped.

The main reason for the anxiety: Revenue in the division that includes Microsoft's foundation, the Windows operating system, declined from the same time last year for the second-straight quarter. The slide stems from consumers buying fewer personal computers that run the company's software.

The downturn occurred during the same period that rival Apple Inc couldn't produce enough iPads, a potentially game-changing computer tablet, to meet the rabid demand.—Internet HELSINKI, 29 April — Strong demand for smartphones gave a further boost to overall cellphone market volumes in January-March, and making iPhone supplier Apple a rare winner on the market, research firms said on Friday.

IDC saw January-March market growth of 20 percent, helped also by strong gains by smaller vendors as the three largest phone makers Nokia, Samsung Electronics and LG Electronics lost market share.

Apple's iPhone sales more than doubled from a year ago, buoyed by strong sales on Verizon Wireless and additional carrier deals elsewhere, with market share rising to 5 percent.

"The iPhone once again sold particularly well in developed economic regions of the world, such as North America and Western Europe," IDC said.

Apple is now within striking distance to LG, who had 6.6 percent market share in the quarter. Nokia's share dropped to 29 percent from 35 percent a year ago, while Samsung slipped to 19 percent, IDC said.

Strategy Analytics estimated handset shipments grew 17 percent from a year ago, driven by surging smartphone demand in mature regions and increasingly popular models with multiple SIM cards in emerging markets.

"The first quarter of 2011 was marked by supply-chain disruptions related to the Japan earthquake tragedy and by ongoing mild component constraints in areas such as touchscreens, memory and cameras," said Neil Mawston, analyst at Strategy Analytics.

Mawston said component shortages would continue for at least the next 6 to 9 months, causing restricted volumes or rising input prices, but operational challenges from this would remain minor for most manufacturers.

Simple test helps spot autism in infants

CHICAGO, 29 April—A five-minute screening test could help detect autism in babies at 12 months of age, giving parents and doctors far more time to intervene, US researchers said Thursday. The study is the first to show that a simple screening tool could be

"The benefit of this study is children get into treatment much earlier than they would otherwise," Karen Pierce of the University of California, San Diego, whose study appears in the Journal of Pediatrics, said in a telephone interview.

Autism, a complex and mysterious brain disorder, strikes one in 110 children in the United States and affects four times as many boys as girls. The disorder is characterized by difficulties in social interaction, communication and understanding other people's emotions and behavior.—Internet

China bans smoking in public venues in theory

BEIJING, 29 April—China launches a ban on smoking in indoor public spaces Sunday but the effort is widely viewed as vague and half-hearted and few expect it to have much of an impact in the tobacco-addicted country.

The nationwide prohibition is designed to bring China — which has more than 300 million smokers, roughly equal to the entire population of the United States — more in line with health regulations in developed countries.

But it faces a tough test.

Tobacco use is deeply ingrained in China, where offering a cigarette is a common greeting ritual. Lighting up in elevators or even hospital waiting rooms is routine and second-hand smoke is considered a serious health threat.

"I don't think this ban on smoking will have a big effect," Yang Lei, a 32-year-old Beijinger who has been smoking for four years, told AFP.

"In China, when you are in a restaurant, people smoke even if there is a 'No Smoking' sign. When you eat with friends, few people ask others if it's OK to smoke and restaurant managers rarely stop clients who smoke."

Many health experts have warned that China, the world's largest producer and consumer of tobacco, faces a ticking health timebomb unless it curbs smoking, and the ban marks a significant move for the Chinese government.—Internet

WASHINGTON, 29 April—More Americans signed contracts to buy homes in March, up 5.1 percent from February, according to the National Association of Realtors' pending home sales index released Thursday.

Signings are 24 percent above June's reading, the low point since the housing bust. But March's 94.1 index is below 100, which is considered healthy.

Contract signings are usually a good indicator of where the housing market is heading, with about 80 percent of contracts resulting in sales. But some buyers have canceled purchases after the properties were valued much lower than their initial bids.

Daimler's robust Q1 underwhelms hopeful market

FRANKFURT, 29 April—Daimler posted robust quarterly results that underwhelmed investors whose expectations had been inflated by recent stellar reports by peers such as Volkswagen (VOWG_p.DE) and truck maker Volvo (VOLVb.ST).

Shares of Daimler slid to the bottom of the German blue-chip index (.GDAXI) as well as the STOXX Europe 600 Automobiles & Parts (.SXAP) index, trading 2.1 percent lower at 51.97 euros at 0829 GMT.

Daimler's first-quarter earnings before interest and tax (EBIT) rose 71 percent to 2.03 billion euros ($3 billion), helped by strong passenger car demand from emerging markets and a robust truck business. That was slightly above the average analyst estimate of 1.99 billion euros in a Reuters poll but not enough to move Daimler shares higher.

"While the first quarter was definitely a good quarter for Daimler, it also shows that it becomes more difficult for the company to surprise positively as expectations are high," Equinet analyst Tim Schuldt said. Kia's first-quarter sales rose 37 percent to 10.7 trillion won.

Vehicle sales totaled 619,089 during the first quarter, up 30 percent from the year before, Kia said. Domestic sales rose 20 percent, exports gained 37 percent and sales from Kia's overseas factories increased 29 percent.

GENEVA, 29 April—Swiss mountain guide Erhard Loretan, one of the few climbers to ever reach the summits of all 14 of the world's peaks above 8,000 metres, has died in a climbing fall on his 52nd birthday.

Swiss police said Friday that Loretan died leading a client up the summit ridge of the Grunhorn, in the Bernese Alps. The accident occurred on Thursday noon. The pair had skied up part way, then roped up for the final ascent.

They fell for unknown reasons at 3,800 metres (12,500 feet) up the 4,043-metre (13,264-foot) peak. Loretan died at the scene, police from the Swiss canton (state) of Valais said. His 38-year-old Swiss client was flown to a Loretan, originally from the canton of Fribourg, began climbing at age 11. He climbed his first 8,000-metre peak, Pakistan's difficult Nanga Parbat, in 1982. It took him 13 years to make it up the other 13 eight-thousanders.

Pakistan tests nuclear capable cruise missile

ISLAMABAD, 29 April—Pakistan on Friday successfully conducted flight test of indigenously developed air launched cruise missile, which "can deliver nuclear and conventional warheads with great pin point accuracy," the army said.

The "Hatf-VIII Ra'ad Cruise Missile" has the range of 350 kilometres, an army statement said.

The missile has been developed exclusively for launch from aerial platforms, the statement from the Inter-Services Public Relations said.

"The missile test was conducted as part of the continuous process of improving the technical parameters of the weapon system," it said.

The statement said the missile system has enabled Pakistan to achieve a greater strategic stand off capability on land and at sea.

"Cruise technology is extremely complex and has been developed by only a few countries in the world. The state of the art Ra'ad Cruise Missile with Stealth Capabilities is a Low Altitude, Terrain Hugging Missile with high maneuverability, and can deliver nuclear and conventional warheads with great pin point accuracy," it said.

The successful launch has been appreciated by the president, the prime minister of Pakistan, and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee who congratulated the scientists and engineers on their outstanding achievement.

Defence analysts said that Ra'ad is an air launched cruise missile which can be fired from all the aircraft in the Pakistan Air Force. The cruise missile can be used in an anti-shipping role via aircraft against the ground/static targets.

I visited the brokerage house trading in fruit from Sagaing, Mandalay, Bago and Ayeyawady regions and the place where mer-

In addition, agricultural produce and forest products of various items are on sale in the export divisions. Furthermore, 10 to 25 truck loads of marine products are sent to the the Fishery Department and Manager U Tin Maung Win from National Development Co Ltd. It was heartening to see that boxes of crabs were being unloaded from trucks and crabs were being sorted and packed, and fish and prawn were stored systematically in cold storages.

S Korea to run emergency inspections on milk

SEOUL, 29 April— South Korea has decided to conduct emergency inspections on milk sold in the market by four major dairy companies, to check the presence of formalin, a state quarantine service said Friday.

The National Veterinary Research and Quarantine Service (NVRQS) said it will collect and test milk products made by the companies with high market share, namely Maeil Dairies, Namyang Dairy Products, Seoul Milk and Dongwon Dairy Foods, to detect formalin, a liquid form of formaldehyde.

The move comes after Maeil Dairies was found to have produced milk from cows given feed tainted with formalin. Formalin, a liquid form of formaldehyde gas, was largely used in the past as a disinfectant, pesticide and bactericide for preservation of biological specimens.—Xinhua

Chrysler to repay bailout loans by June

CHICAGO, 29 April— Chrysler Group LLC on Thursday announced that it plans to repay its 7.4 billion US dollars of loans to the US and Canadian governments by the end of June.

Chrysler said in a statement that it plans to repay its government loans with proceeds from new term loan and newly issued debt securities, which will be sold to institutional investors in a private offering, as well as the funds that it will receive from Fiat.

Italian automaker Fiat announced earlier that it plans to buy a 16 percent stake in Chrysler for 1.27 billion dollars. Chrysler said that the completion of the term loans, debt offering and the equity investment by Fiat would occur concurrently.

"Chrysler has come a long way in a short time," said Edmunds.com's senior analyst Michelle Krebs in an e-mail to Xinhua, "Many thought the brand wouldn't survive, but now it is gaining momentum with new models. The Chrysler 200 was the hit of the Super Bowl and gives Chrysler an entry to weather the current storm of high gas prices."

Spain jobless rate up to 21.3 percent

MADRID, 29 April— The government says Spain's unemployment rate rose sharply to 21.3 percent in the first quarter of 2011, leaving nearly 5 million people without work.

The rate compares with 20.3 percent at the close of 2010 and illustrates the huge challenges Spain faces as it tries to recover from nearly two years of recession and find a new economic model after depending for years on construction as the key driving force in its economy.

Singapore's unemployment rate falls to 3-year low

SINGAPORE, 29 April— The overall unemployment rate in Singapore fell to a three-year low of 1.9 percent in March, reflecting the tight labour market, statistics released on Friday by the Ministry of Manpower showed.

In comparison, the unemployment rate was a seasonally adjusted 2.2 percent in December last year.

Total employment grew by 23,700 in the first quarter of the year, thanks to healthy economic expansion, lower than the 33,900 in the fourth quarter last year and the 36,200 in the first quarter of this year but still remarkable, considering that the strong hiring last year was partly generated by the recovery and the casino resorts.

Among the resident labour force, the unemployment rate declined to 2.7 percent. An estimated 57,100 residents were unemployed in March on a seasonally adjusted basis.—Xinhua

Two Oregon dogs survive 175-foot slide down cliff

Oregon authorities says two Golden Retrievers swept 175 feet down a cliff in a landslide survived their tumble to the edge of the Clackamas River.

A Clackamas County sheriff's spokesman says rescuers from the sheriff's Marine Patrol and a local fire district were able to retrieve 8-year-old George and 10-year-old Doug after their Wednesday afternoon fall down an 80-degree slope. Their owner, John Grady, was working on a fence at his Eagle Creek property when he saw the dogs wander out onto an unstable overhang that collapsed.

Police dress up as doctors to test citizens

Turkish police donned white coats and stethoscopes to disguise themselves as doctors, then knocked on people's doors to see how easily they would fall for a confidence scam.

The undercover police officers told residents of the southeastern city of Gaziantep they were screening for high blood pressure and handed out pills, according to Turkish media. They were alarmed when residents at 86 out of 100 households visited on Tuesday swallowed the pills immediately.

Police later returned to warn residents to be more cautious. The police pills were harmless placebos. But a local gang had been using the same technique to give people heavy sedatives and then burgle them.

Turkish police in other provinces have also used novel methods to test citizens' gullibility. Officers in Adana in southern Turkey last week called at houses, announcing through the intercom: "I am a burglar, please open the door."

Police said they were stunned at the number of people who opened the door, the Radikal daily newspaper reported.

Super Falcao sinks Villarreal, Benfica edge Braga in Europa League

PARIS, 29 April—A stunning four goal show by Colombian striker Falcao saw Portuguese champions Porto come from a goal down to overwhelm Spanish side Villarreal 5-1 on Thursday in their Europa League semi-final first leg clash in Oporto. Falcao's goals took him to a record 16 in the competition, beating Jurgen Klinsmann's total of 15 for Bayern Munich in the 1995/96 competition when it was the UEFA Cup.

With Porto set fair for the final in Dublin in May, they will be joined there by another Portuguese club, with Benfica holding a slight edge over Sporting Braga after beating them 2-1 at home also on Thursday. Villarreal — who were only in this season's competition because Real Mallorca were disqualified from competing because they didn't meet financial regulations set by UEFA - had looked to be in control at the break after Cani had put them ahead.— Internet

Cyclist Cunego wins Tour de Romandie second stage

ROMONT, 29 April—Former Tour of Italy champion Damiano Cunego got back to winning ways with victory in the 171.8 km second stage of the Tour de Romandie on Thursday. Cunego led Australia's 2006 race winner Cadel Evans of BMC by two seconds in a sprint finish, followed by Alexandre Vinokourov of Kazakhstan, after a series of breakaways split the pack and left yellow jersey Pavel Brutt trailing.

While the Russian Team Katusha rider kept his overall lead, Cunego cut it by two-thirds to about 40 seconds after his Lampre team-mates helped reel in a succession of breakaways including a final bid by Briton David Millar. "This win was also built by my team mates," Cunego, who rides for Lampre, said.— Internet

Veteran Seedorf plans to keep going

Veteran midfielder Clarence Seedorf

ROME, 29 April—Veteran midfielder Clarence Seedorf brushed off talk of retirement on Thursday as he was presented with a Dutch Knighthood. The 35-year-old is one of the most decorated players in the history of the game and the only one to have won the Champions League crown with three different clubs, including twice with Milan. And on the brink of landing his fifth league title, and second in Italy, Seedorf insists he has no intention of hanging up his boots.

"In my job the important things are motivation and your physical condition and as long as I still have those, I'm not setting myself limits," he said from the Rome residence of the Dutch ambassador to Italy. — Internet

Schweinsteiger sees red at Press Conference

BERLIN, 29 April—Bayern Munich star Bastian Schweinsteiger saw red at a Press Conference here on Thursday, lambasting a journalist before turning his attention to teammate Arjen Robben. Two days before Bayern take on Schalke Schweinsteiger threatened and insulted the reporter, then telling him:

"It's a joke what you write, you don't understand anything, you should treat me with more respect."

The midfielder then left the conference room, only to return to criticise Robben, who the day before had questioned Schweinsteiger's lack of authority when he was captain. Without mentioning the Dutch international by name he said: "I'm not a small captain, when I say something everyone in the changing room listens to me." Bayern face Champions League semi-finalists Schalke on Saturday with the pressure mounting to finish in the top three and secure Champions League football next season.— Internet

WASHINGTON, 29 April — Serena and Venus Williams have shaken off injuries that have sidelined them from competitive tennis, but whether or not they will be ready for next month's French Open remains uncertain. "The French Open is a great tournament. It's a fun event. We definitely want to be there," Venus Williams said. "We're taking it week to week right now. Our goal is sooner than later."

NYON, 29 April—UEFA on Thursday announced it had launched a disciplinary inquiry into events surrounding on Wednesday's fractious Champions League semi-final tie between Real Madrid and Barcelona. One of the incidents being investigated is Real coach Jose Mourinho's post-match outburst in which the Portuguese suggested referees always showed favoritism to Barcelona, who won 2-0 in Madrid to take a huge step towards the final.

Mourinho also came under fire from Barcelona, who later Thursday announced they were lodging an official complaint with European football's governing body over his tirade. — Internet

Bubba Watson, Matt Jones share Zurich Classic lead

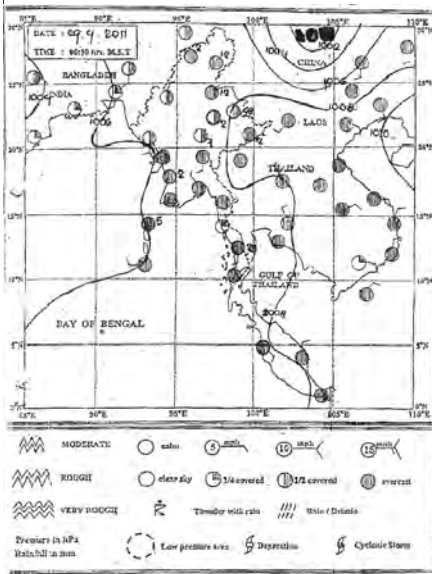

AVONDALE, 29 April—Bubba Watson entered the Zurich Classic as a favor to his mother. "My mom really wanted me to come," said Watson, tied for first-round lead with Matt Jones after opening with a 6-under 66 on Thursday. "My mom always comes to this golf tournament, so when my mom says she wants to come, I'm here. And somehow I shot 6 under today."

Watson, the winner at Torrey Pines in late January, made a 32-foot eagle putt on the par-5 11th and had six birdies and two bogeys at TPC Louisiana — far from his favorite course. "The way the course is, it just doesn't fit my eye the way it is," Watson said. — Internet

Sprawling devastation as US storm toll reaches 313

A couple try to salvage items from a flattened shop in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.—INTERNET

TUSCALOOSA, 29 April Friday sifted through the Shocked Americans on the rubble from the worst US tornadoes in decades, which carved a trail of destruction across the south claiming at least 313 lives. Communities like Alabama Governor Robert Bentley's home town of Tuscaloosa were virtually wiped off the map, and officials warned the body count would rise as rescuers uncovered more dead in the debris.

Disbelief was written on faces across eight states crippled by the ferocious spring storms — the deadliest tornado tragedy to strike the United States since 332 people were killed by a tornado outbreak on 21 March, 1932. Recalling the more recent horror of Hurricane Katrina in 2005, families picked through the remains of homes, businesses and schools, bearing witness to scenes of devastation more common in war zones or after earthquakes.
