Raise productivity with might of workers

In his message sent on Workers Day, which falls on 1 May, President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar U Thein Sein said, "... if workers and peasants work with might and main under the leadership of the government in productivity and services, the nation will enjoy greater development in the political, economic and social sectors."

Now, the first sessions of Hluttaws have been held successfully in accord with the approved constitution. And according to democratic practice, legislative, executive and judicial bodies have been formed firmly for democratization.

The nation will keep implementing industrialization process with peasants and workers, the two main social classes.

Now, sound foundations have been laid for further development of agriculture for economic development. And the government is taking steps to meet the requirements for national industrialization by raising funds based on natural resources and bringing about a growing number of intellectuals and intelligentsia.

National entrepreneurs and the government are establishing modern factories, plants, and industrial regions and zones. Workers are familiar with modern machines and electronic devices. So, workers are enjoying higher salaries, rights and jobs.

At a time when the nation is in the process of being built into a peaceful, modern and developed democratic one, workers and peasants are to join hands firmly with the government in pursuing the goals of sustainable development in agriculture, industrialization guarding the nation against neo-colonialists and their stooges' disruptions to nation-building tasks.

Mayor orders flood-threatened Illinois city evacuated

CHAMPAIGN, 1 May—The mayor of a small southern Illinois city threatened by two swollen rivers ordered all residents to leave by midnight Saturday because a “sand boil,” an area where river water was seeping up through the ground behind the levee, had become dangerously large.

Cairo Mayor Judson Childs issued a mandatory evacuation order for the city of 2,800 residents late Saturday afternoon hours after meeting with Maj Gen Michael Walsh, the Army Corps of Engineers officer tasked with deciding whether to blow a hole in the Birds Point levee in Missouri, downstream from Cairo, to relieve pressure on levees along the dangerously high Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

Walsh, who toured

Cairo’s levee area, described the boil that has been growing since it was first spotted Tuesday as the largest he had ever seen, the Southeast Missourian newspaper reported.

Sand boils occur when high-pressure water pushes under flood walls and levees and wells up through the soil behind them. They’re a potential sign of trouble.

Three Killed, 12 wounded in Iraq violence

BAGHDAD, 1 May—Three people, including a security officer, were killed and 12 people wounded in gunfire and bomb attacks in northern and central Iraq on Sunday, police said. Lieutenant Colonel Nozad al-Talebani, an Iraqi counter-terrorism officer, was killed when gunmen in their car opened fire on Talebani’s car in southern the city of Kirkuk, some 250 km north of Baghdad, a police source in the city told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

In central Iraq, an Awakening Council group member was killed and his son wounded when a roadside bomb detonated outside his house in Abu Ghraib area, some 20 km west of Baghdad, a local police source told Xinhua.

The Awakening Council group, or al-Sahwa in Arabic, consists of paramilitary groups, including some powerful anti-US, Sunni insurgent groups, who turned their rifles against the al-Qaida network after the latter exercised indiscriminate killings against both Shiite and Sunni Muslim communities.—MNA/Xinhua

Three civilians killed, 11 injured in suicide bombing in E Afghanistan

KABUL, 1 May—Three civilians were killed and 11 injured Sunday morning when a suicide bomber blew himself up in Afghanistan’s Paktika Province 155 km southeast of capital city of Kabul, the Interior Ministry said in a statement.

“A suicide bomber detonated an explosive device attached in his body at around 07:30 am local time (0300 GMT) in Ashkin bazaar in Barmal District.

As a result three innocent civilians were killed and 11 others injured,” said the statement released by Interior Ministry here.

However, the statement did not Provide more details, saying police has initiated an investigation and details will be released to media later.

Hotel fire in China kills 10, injures 35

BEIJING, 1 May—A fire at a hotel in northeastern China killed 10 people and injured 35, state media reported, in the latest deadly accident to highlight lax Chinese fire safety.

The blaze broke out about 3:30 am (1930 GMT Saturday) at a hotel operated by Chinese budget hotel chain Home Inns in Tonghua city in Jilin Province, the official Xinhua news agency said. It was extinguished half an hour later.

The victims died of smoke inhalation after the fire started in the stairwell and sent thick plumes of smoke to the upper floors of the hotel, Xinhua said, citing the city’s publicity department.

The injured have been taken to hospital, including three in a critical condition, Xinhua said.

Authorities are investigating the cause of the blaze.

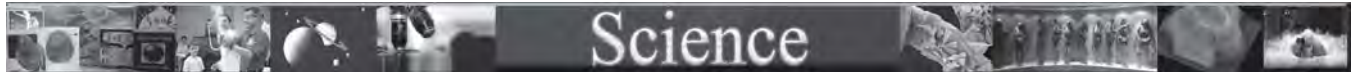

Deadly fires are common in China and are typically blamed on lax observation and enforcement of fire-safety measures. Last week, 18 poor migrants died and nearly two dozen were injured when a fire swept through an illegally constructed building in Beijing.—Internet

Suicide bomber kills eight, wounds 19 in Northern Iraq

MOSUL, 1 May—Eight people were killed and 19 wounded on Saturday when a suicide bomber blew himself up at an Iraqi army checkpoint next to a market in the northern city of Mosul, police and hospital sources said.

Attacks against Iraq’s army and police are rising as they prepare to take full responsibility for security in the country ahead of a full withdrawal of US troops by 31 December, more than eight years after the US-led invasion of Iraq.

“Eight killed, 19 wounded. Five soldiers were killed and three civilians, and two soldiers are among the wounded,” Nineveh Province police Lieutenant Colonel Mahmoud al-Jibouri told Reuters. The toll is final. A hospital source confirmed the number of dead and wounded and said the attack had taken place at a popular market in eastern Mosul, 390 km (240 miles) north of Baghdad.—Reuters

Alien Giant Tortoise helps restore ecosystem

Alien Giant Tortoise.
INTERNET

NEW YORK, 1 May— Rather than wreaking havoc on a tiny island in the Indian Ocean — as alien species can sometimes do — a giant tortoise appears to be helping to restore the native ecosystem.

Wildlife scientists introduced Aldabra giant tortoises — which can reach up to 661 pounds (300 kilograms) — to an island, called Ile aux Aigrettes, off the coast of the island nation of Mauritius. By 2009, 19 adult giant tortoises called the island home. The tortoises were to replace the role of their extinct kin. Before humans first arrived on Ile aux Aigrettes, various giant tortoises lived there, as did giant skinks — a type of lizard — and, most likely, flightless dodo birds. The disappearance of these animals affected other things living on the island, in particular the native ebony trees, which have been devastated by people hunting for firewood.

The giant tortoises and the skinks ate the fruit of these trees, spreading the seeds. Without these fruit-eaters around, the trees could no longer disperse; young trees only grew directly below the adults.

Worldwide, invasive species are considered one of the greatest threats to biodiversity, so, the idea of replacing an extinct creature with a foreign one is controversial. It has been done elsewhere with the new species often closely related to the one being replaced. For example, the North American peregrine falcon was re-established from seven subspecies from four continents, and yellow crowned night herons have been introduced to Bermuda to replace extinct herons and to control pesky land crabs. At the most extreme end of the spectrum, conservation scientist Josh Donlan has suggested that the Pleistocene ecosystems of North America be reconstituted with large African mammals — horses, camels, tortoises, lions, elephants and cheetahs — thus protecting these species from the threats they face in their natural range.—Internet

Scientist rethinks wallowing pigs

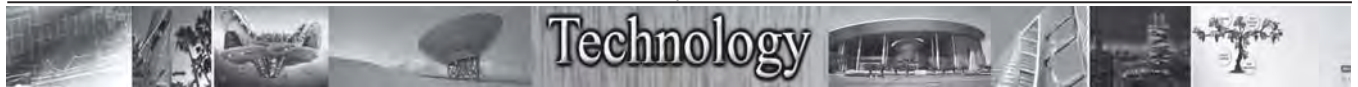

WAGENINGEN, 1 May — A Dutch scientist says pigs' love of wallowing in mud may have a courtship function and may help explain how whales evolved.

Marc Bracke of Wageningen University published his report on porcine wallowing in a British journal, Applied Animal Behavior Science, the BBC reported.

In the past, scientists have suggested pigs wallow to keep cool because they do not have sebaceous or sweat glands. Bracke suggested the opposite is true, that pigs did not develop sweat glands because they spend so much time in cool mud. Bracke believes the love of mud has roots deep in time.

"We all evolved from fish, so it could be that this motivation to be in water could be something that was preserved in animals that are able to do so," he said. His suggestion about wallowing playing a reproductive role comes from observing deer. They do not wallow, but they do mark off territory by rolling on the ground, a behavior that is a mating ritual.

As for whales, Bracke believes they may have been wallowing animals who spent so much time in the mud and water they evolved into marine mammals.—Internet

Google brings video chat to Android via update

WASHINGTON, 1 May— On its Google Mobile blog, the Mountain View company has announced the imminent arrival of its video chat software for Android phones, Google Talk with video. While some apps for Android phones already allow you to video chat (eg. Fring and Tango), Google Talk will become part of the forthcoming Android OS update (2.3.4).

Google Talk with video will allow users to video chat with others using either the same software or Gmail with Google Talk on computers. It'll be possible to make calls over 3G, 4G or Wi-Fi — unlike, for example, Apple's FaceTime, which currently only works over Wi-Fi.

Google's blog post explains: "In your Google Talk friends list, a video or voice chat button will appear next to your contacts and you can simply touch the button to connect with them. Any text chats from the person you're talking with will be overlaid on your phone's screen so you can read them without having to leave the video." The post continues, "And, if you need to check something else, the video pauses automatically so you can go back to your phone's home screen or another app. The audio will keep going even though the video has paused."

For most people, it just doesn't feel natural to look down the lens of a camera while talking — unless you happen to be a news anchor. Still, at least having the video chat software available gives us the option, and allows Granny on the east coast to see her grandkids on the west any time she wants.

Verizon to warn cellphone buyers on tracking data

NEW YORK, 1 May— Verizon will put a peel-off sticker on the screen of cellphones it sells, warning that the user's location may be tracked. The sticker also advises users to be careful which apps they install if they wish to avoid location information being shared with third parties.

The move isn't in response to the recent location-tracking scandal surrounding Apple iPhone and Google Android phones; it's a Verizon initiative that has been planned for some time. It was revealed in a written response from Verizon to the House Bipartisan Privacy Caucus (PDF link), which had written to the four major mobile companies last month after learning that a German mobile operator tracked users' locations.

Verizon also revealed that it holds personally identifying data, including location details, for up to seven years. This in itself is astonishing. Do you know where you were on, say, 21 Nov, 2008? Verizon does, if you were using one of its handsets equipped with GPS, such as the popular Samsung Omnia or BlackBerry Storm phones, released around that time.

Of the other mobile carriers, AT&T says it'll hold location data for anywhere from a few days to five years, while Sprint says it'll hold it for five years. T-Mobile would only say it "retains personal information for only as long as we have a business need, or as applicable laws, regulations or government orders require."—Internet

Folic acid may not accelerate cancer

HAMBURG, 1 May—Mandatory fortification of foods with folic acid is a subject of controversy in Germany, researchers say.

Wolfgang Herrmann and Rima Obeid say higher dosages of folic acid have been suspected of accelerating the growth of certain cancers. But they say they evaluated different international studies and conclude that suspicion is not supported by the evidence.

Their study, published in the Deutsches Arzteblatt International, found no such association. For example, for the observed increase in the number of patients with colorectal cancer after folic acid fortification programmes began in the United States and Canada, the researchers said the cancer increase can be explained by improved early detection programs during this same time period.

The study results could have an impact on whether doctors advocate women ingest folic acid before and during early pregnancy to help ensure their fetus does not develop spina bifida.

Every year, 800 pregnancies in Germany are diagnosed with spina bifida and most of these pregnancies are terminated. The researchers said extensive folic acid fortification of foods might prevent this defect in 85 percent to 100 percent of cases as it has in other countries, such as the United States where folic acid is added to food.

Melatonin may help in weight loss

GRANADA, 1 May—Melatonin, a natural hormone produced by the body and involved with the sleep cycle, may also help in controlling weight gain, researchers in Spain say.

The researchers from the University of Granada, the University Hospital San Cecilio in Granada, the University of Salamanca, the University of Jordan and the Service of Endocrinology of the Hospital Carlos III in Madrid found melatonin was found to be beneficial for young rats that had not developed metabolic or heart disease.

The study, published in the Journal of Pineal Research, found melatonin in the rats improved blood lipid profile, reduces triglycerides, increases high-density lipoprotein — the “good” cholesterol — and reduces low-density lipoprotein — the “bad” cholesterol — even without reducing food intake.

Researchers say melatonin might help in preventing heart diseases associated with obesity and dyslipidemia — an abnormal amount of lipids in the blood.

If this finding is confirmed in humans, administration of melatonin and intake of food containing melatonin — mustard, Goji berries, almonds, sunflower seeds, cardamom, fennel, coriander and cherries — might be a useful tool to fight obesity and the risks associated with it, the researchers say.

Australia to flag 4.5% unemployment in budget

SYDNEY, 1 May—Australia's upcoming budget will forecast 500,000 new jobs to be created in two years as the country rides a mining boom, bringing unemployment down to 4.5 percent, Treasurer Wayne Swan said Sunday.

Swan said secure employment was the first responsibility of the Labour government of Prime Minister Julia Gillard and the budget to be delivered on 10 May would have that as its central emphasis.

“What I can say about the budget is that we will see the creation of an additional 500,000 jobs in the next couple of years, with an unemployment rate coming down to 4.5 percent,” Swan told Channel Ten's “Meet the Press”.

“We are going to... get more Australians into work and we are going to spread the opportunities of the boom.” Swan gave no details on how this would be achieved in Australia, which currently has an unemployment rate of 4.9 percent.

“We are looking at a range of initiatives to lift workforce participation,” he said. “With an unemployment rate coming down at 4.5 percent we do not have a person to waste.”—Internet

Police discover hidden arsenal in Ciudad Juarez

CIUDAD JUAREZ, 1 May — Mexican federal police said Saturday they discovered a basement arsenal hidden behind the mirrors of a home gym that included three anti-aircraft guns, dozens of grenades, a grenade launcher, AK-47s and other high-powered weapons.

The neatly ordered stockpile found in an upscale neighbourhood in Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, Texas, also contained several makes of machine guns, rifles, a shotgun and more than 26,000 ammunition cartridges, according to Raul Avila Ibarra, the federal police commissioner in charge of the City. Police say they discovered the weapons Friday while searching a house near the US -Mexico border. Avila said the police acted on an anonymous tip that there were kidnapping victims in the house, but no one was found. The mirrors of the gym opened at the touch of a button near the floor, allowing access to the secret shelter, which also held more than 50 military uniforms, as well as bulletproof vests and gas masks.

Three money-counting machines were also found. No one was detained in the search. The police didn't reveal the origin of the weapons found.—Internet

PlayStation hacker may have obtained millions of users' credit card info

Sony on Sunday said it would "shortly" begin restoring its PlayStation Network and Qriocity online services following a major security breach that compromised millions of users.
INTERNET

TOKYO, 1 May — Kazuo Hirai, the head of Sony's PlayStation video game business said Sunday that there was no concrete evidence that information from 77 million credit cards registered by customers through Sony's PlayStation Network had been stolen by a hacker, the possibility did exist.

Speaking at a Press Conference convened by the firm at their headquarters in Tokyo, Hirai, Sony's executive vice president, conceded that the hacker may have obtained the users' credit card numbers, expiration dates as well as purchase history and password security answers. "While there is no evidence that the credit card data has been compromised, we also can't rule it out," Hirai said.

Sony said that two weeks ago a hacker breached the company's online video game network and Qriocity streaming entertainment service and swiped the names, addresses, e-mail addresses and birth dates of some 77 million users registered to use the firm's network. Following the breach, which has potentially huge global implications, Sony suspended the two online services on 20 April.

Hirai, while apologizing for the monumental blunder, said the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) is looking into the matter, following Sony's request.

Storm cellar saves Alabama couple, as neighbours perish

PHIL CAMPBELL, 1 May—Travis Roberts invited his neighbours into the storm cellar he built for $600, but they figured they would ride out the twister bearing down on them. Five were killed and two critically injured when it struck, splintering their homes, but Travis and his wife Brenda survived below ground in their storm-rocked concrete shelter.

"We did not respect the warning enough," said Roberts of the tiny Alabama town of 1,100 people, which was largely flattened in the deadly tornado outbreak that killed at least 350 people across seven states. He credits his wife Brenda's fear of twisters for saving their lives.

When they bought their property in the town 35 years ago, he accommodated her worries by building a storm cellar. "It is patterned after a Cold War fallout shelter. I spent $600 on it. I got my money's worth," Roberts told Reuters.

The families behind and in front of his home did not elect to join him, and five of them did not survive the storm. "Two of my neighbours chose to ride it out. They rode all right literally about 200 yards. I rescued them," he said. The other two remain in critical condition in hospital. During the storm, the concrete shelter shook with the violent winds. He knew his house was gone before he clambered out of the shelter. "It wasn't wind, it was an explosion," he said.—Reuters

Aharathukha Market seen in an evening.

Aharathukha Market is one of the large markets in Nay Pyi Taw, Capital of Myanmar, established for comfort and convenience of the dwellers. Now, the market has become a housewives' paradise as it directly gets fresh fruit and vegetables from growers.

Most of the goods on sale in the market come from the farmlands in Lewe and Tatkon townships in Nay Pyi Taw District. Fruit and vegetables from Aungban in Shan State also flow to the market. Some of the goods that are transported to the market go to other markets across the nation including Thabyegon Market, Myoma Market, Pyi Shwe San Aung Market and Ywadow Market.

Aharathukha Market is composed of 100 brokerage houses alongside five complexes, each of which has 240 shops. The day market runs and the evening market, from 5 am to 6 pm from 3.30 pm to 9 pm for the residents.

Major goods on sale in the market are onion, garlic, potato, cabbage, cauliflower, mustard, cord, watermelon, pineapple, apple, orange, cucumber, coconut, banana and vegetables. For smooth transport for shoppers and swift flow of commodities, a Tawwin Bus Line and many other bus lines ply between the market and many other regions. There is a garbage system with two garbage trucks in the market in order that there is no detriment to the health of times in daytime and one time at night.

Merchant U Tin Ohn, also the proprietor of a brokerage house of onion, garlic and potato, said that his house had been busy since the opening of the market. Daw Thein Nu said that she lived in Mandalay and sold fruit and vegetables and Shan traditional foods there. U Myint Aung who sells coconut and banana said that he traded mostly in with his business.

Previous to Aharathukha Market, for local growers, to transport their goods to and get goods from other regions was a big challenge, but now due to smooth transport, the commodity flow had become swift and they could supply fruit and vegetables to consumers daily.

With the aim of enhancing the national interest, the Article 35 of the 2008 Constitution of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar clearly states that the economic system of the Union is market economy system. The Article 36 also states that the Union shall:

- (a) permit all economic forces such as the State, regional organizations, cooperatives, joint-ventures, private individual, so forth, to take part in economic activities for the development of National economy;
- (b) protect and prevent acts that injure public interests through monopolization or manipulation of prices by an individual or group with intent to endanger fair competition in economic activities;
- (c) strive to improve the living standards of the people and development of investment;
- (d) not nationalize economic enterprises;
- (e) not demonetize the currency legally in circulation. These provisions were adopted for strengthening the State economy.

With regard to economic development of the State, the President in his address at the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw said, "Ours is an agro-based country. Successive governments paid serious attention to agriculture, so the country has enjoyed surpluses of crops. However, agricultural development alone is not enough for

In reviewing the trade sector, Myanmar has achieved remarkable trade volume, which is about 20 times than that of 1988-89 when the market-oriented economic system commenced in the nation. The Myanmar economy was called the rice economy due to placing too much reliance on paddy only in the successive eras. At present, the nation can extend export promotion for beans and pulses, maize, sesame, rubber products and paddy in addition to new export items such as natural gas, ready-made clothes, marine products and jewellery year after drawing of the rules for brokerages with right commodities, right price and right trading in various regions for ensuring equal standardization across the nation and exchange of market price and information. At present, the people are enjoying the fruits of economic development to some extent due to formation of 29 brokerages in the entire nation under the supervision of the Ministry of Commerce and the leadership of the UMFCCL. Thus, the brokerages are to calculate production of commodities, consumption and surplus or deficiency and build the information network for market, price and commodity flow. In so doing, it is necessary to create the network as a centre that can disseminate market price, information and new technology to the farmers and information on marketable crops.

Farmers' requirements are met and agricultural production has been boosted to some extent due to the farm subsidiaries, seeds of high-yield strains of crops and fertilizers supplied by special companies formed the country to become a developed one. So, we must turn to national industrialization to transform country into a developed, rich one with a lot of employment opportunities and high per capita income. Therefore, our government will try our best for national industrialization while scaling up agricultural development. For emergence of the market economic system, necessary infrastructures, law and rules, procedures have been adopted."

In implementing the five-year short-term plans for economic development of the nation, the aim has been set to achieve 10.5 per cent of economic development on average per year in 2011-2012 financial year, the first year of the fifth five-year short-term plan. Hence, the private sector is to participate in the realizing the aim under the leadership of the UMFCCL.

In practising the market economic system, the higher trade promotion will put the State economy on the increase. Asian countries have higher economic development in the past decade due to export promotion and establishment of export industries.

year thanks to encouragement of the government and collaborative efforts of the private entrepreneurs.

To be able to see development of the economic sector in the long run, it is necessary to improve the industrial sector through progress of agricultural sector. Moreover, it is needed not only to extend the export of primary items but also to establish the export oriented industries. As the State has enacted the Special Economic Zone Law and solved problems for the foreign direct investment and small- and medium-scale industries, the private entrepreneurs are to try their best for trade promotion and increasing the value-added exports.

Moreover, it is necessary to start to establish firms businesses for their stand because there may be tough competition in the ASEAN Free Trade Area that will be launched in 2015.

To ensure sustainable development of agricultural exports, measures have been taken for systematic domestic production and trade, and systematic with the public private partnership system since 2009.

The companies have to sustain such prudent programmes and remedy the weak points through heart-to-heart discussions among shareholders and to find out the difficulties farmers are facing. The federation will keep observing the functions of each company and render assistance for their development.

Instead of being complacent about present achievements, the companies should try to achieve the goal of bringing about a capital market. In that case, the federation should try to stay in touch with the developments in the national and international economy, do research, distribute facts about markets and commodity prices and information, disseminate business knowledge and conduct more seminars, talks and courses with national and foreign experts.

(See page 9)

Instead of being complacent about present...

Last year's recruitment of 1439 new members brought the total membership to 21,162, and now the federation has become a strong one with 59 brother associations under it.

Moreover, ambassadors and charges de affaires of 20 foreign embassies and 2139 entrepreneurs of business organizations and enterprises visited the federation. It is heartening to note that it sent 453 members to attend seminars, courses and meetings in 15 foreign countries, sent 623 entrepreneurs to attend 23 international trade affairs in 10 foreign countries with the aim of boosting trade. And it is cooperating actively with regional organizations including ASEAN and has signed 75 MoUs with 20 foreign countries. The federation is believed to be able to boost trade with foreign organizations.

When it comes to the economic sector today, every entrepreneur badly needs to observe business ethic due to immense competition. They have to care for quality control, keep compromises, and sell goods at right prices to stand as regular suppliers in foreign trade. And only then will they build mutual trust with their partners and achieve sustainable development. The federation and brother associations are urged to deal with those points with all seriousness.

Now, global climate change is worsening, which has adverse effects on agricultural productivity more or less. They should not harm domestic food security in trade inside and outside the country.

Development of the private sector is large part in building up a modern, developed nation with sustainable progress. So, the government will generate better opportunities, and in response, the federation and entrepreneurs should work in collaboration for economic growth of the nation.

In conclusion, the Vice-President called on the federation and congenial associations to preserve fine traditions and keep working hard to achieve the federation's goals and future plans; to try their best to stand tall with dignity as traders and industrialists with high calibres in the ASEAN and international economic and trade field; and to compliance with the President's economic guidelines in building a modern and developed nation such as for proper evolution of the market economy, transforming the nation into an industrialized one maintaining the development momentum in the agricultural sector, and bringing about more national entrepreneurs by creating opportunities for individual entrepreneurs and private enterprises in regions and states.

The Vice-President and guests observed the documentary photos on the federation's activities implemented at home and abroad, and on works of brothers associations.

Rehabilitation undertaken in Giri-hit regions

NAY PYI TAW, 1 May—Union Minister for Labour and for Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement U Aung Kyi discussed post-Giri rehabilitation, the remaining tasks and reducing loss due to natural disaster in meeting with Chief Minister of Rakhine State U Hla Maung Tin and State Ministers, at Sittway of Rakhine State on 29 April.

The Union Minister, the Chief Minister and the Ministers inspected relief supplies at the office of Head of Relief and Resettlement Department at Bumay ward. There, the Union Minister met staff under Ministry of Labour and Ministry of Social Welfare, Relief and Resettlement.

After that, the Union Minister visited dispensary of social security board, labour exchange office of Labour Department and maintenance of fire engines and water tanks at State Fire Station and relief supplies warehouse at Pyidawtha ward.

In the afternoon, the Union Minister and party met village administrators and local residents from storm-hit villages at Natshin village, Pauktaw Township and presented gifts to local people.

They also met local people at Laungdareik village, Myebon Township and provided them with gifts.

The proposal to establish "ASEAN Natural Disaster Risk Management Centre" is absolutely seconded as the regional and international cooperation plays an important role in implementing rescue and rehabilitation tasks promptly and effectively in a short period of time.

Strategic objectives and procedures of ASCC Blueprint will be continued to carry out for further achievement in Myanmar's education and health sector. Distance College Education system started in 1981 to provide all students who completed high school to be able to pursue higher education. Languages of ASEAN-member countries and other nations are being taught at Universities of Foreign Languages and plans have been laid to conduct undergraduate course of ASEAN studies in universities.

As to the public health sector, the Ministry of Health is undertaking emergency health management projects and national-level contagious disease prevention projects. In addition, it is taking cooperative measures with internal and international organizations for reduction in the death rate of infants, promotion of the health care for pregnant women, combating of infectious diseases including HIV/AIDS and malaria and reduction in HIV/AIDS outbreaks that are included in the millennium development goals. Thus, Myanmar supports the proposal to mark the 10th anniversary of ASEAN declaration on HIV/AIDS at ASEAN Summit to be held in Indonesia.

reintegration of the disabled into human society. The nation has about 1.3 million disabled people. The Social Welfare Department is taking measures for them to be able to take part in education, social and sport activities at township to national levels. Moreover, the work plan (2010-2012) for the disabled is being drawn.

Myanmar will remain as a good neighbourly nation as well as a member of ASEAN. From the democracy transition to the emergence of a modern, developed democratic nation, Myanmar is committed to working more steadfastly not only for ASEAN socio-cultural community but also for ASEAN creating the single community, said the Union Minister.

At the fifth ASEAN socio-cultural meeting, matters related to designation of 15 June as ASEAN DHF Day, issuance of declaration on sharing of cultural characteristics that contributes to establishment of the ASEAN community and stances on the map of millennium development goals in the ASEAN region were discussed. Next, the meeting approved the report of ASEAN socio-cultural community council to be submitted to the 18th ASEAN Summit and holding of a meeting by forming the group of ASEAN sports ministers.

The meeting was attended by ministers, deputy ministers and high-ranking officials from ASEAN countries and the secretary-general of ASEAN.

Nivea cream marks 100th birthday, wrinkle-free

FRANKFURT, 1 May—With its distinctive smell, texture and iconic blue pot, Nivea cream turns 100 this year as a brand found in bathrooms in 200 countries that is nonetheless battling to keep up with copycat products.

In 1911, a German named Oscar Trolowitz, head of pharmaceutical firm Beiersdorf, pioneered the use of the oil-in-water emulsifier "Eucerit" that proved to be an instant hit because it did not go rancid like its competitors.

He then added extract of orange, bergamot, lavender, rose, lilac and a touch of lily and christened his new invention "Nivea", a name taken from the Latin word "niveus", meaning snow-white.

The new cosmetic proved popular among the well-to-do but quickly took hold with the masses as well, to the point where today it is sold in more than 200 countries, with the most blue pots bought in the United Arab Emirates.

Last year, Beiersdorf sold 100 million pots.

"Everyone has a blue pot at home," said Anne Zavan, marketing director at Beiersdorf in France.

Brasilia celebrates World Tai Chi Day

BRASILIA, 1 May — The World Tai Chi and Qigong Day was celebrated for the ninth time on Saturday in Brasilia, an event attended by about a hundred people, who practiced the 24 moves, the 19 form, the Tai Chi sword and the Tai Chi fan. About 70 countries and regions celebrated the date this year, which takes place on the last Saturday of April and is part of World Health Organization's calendar as one of the "healthy events" linked to the World Health Day.

The Chinese Zhou Jiazheng, who has been

Japan trims hair-cutting laws in quake zone

Japan has relaxed laws on haircutting to allow barbers and stylists in areas affected by the earthquake and tsunami to clip and style at evacuation shelters or makeshift shops, a report said.

The current law bans barbers and beauticians from cutting hair anywhere other than authorised shops, apart from for housebound customers or weddings.

The government has relaxed the regulations for a period of about two years starting this month, the Yomiuri

Many hairdressers' shops were damaged or destroyed in the 11 March quake and tsunami which wiped out whole towns along the northeast coast. The measure covers barbers and beauticians who cannot run their businesses as before or who are living in shelters due to the quake, the paper said. The paper said the law had been changed following requests from local people who were unable to travel to a proper barber shop or hairdressing salon.

Art exhibit offers breast-milk cheese

A New York artist presenting an exhibit is inviting visitors to the gallery to eat her artistic creations — shaped cheese made from human breast milk.

Miriam Simun, 26, a student at New York University's Interactive Telecommunications Programme, said she purchased breast milk from three women and turned it into cheese with the help of Chef Sarah Hymanson for the exhibit at the Michael Mut Gallery in the East Village neighbourhood, the New York Daily News reported.

The "Human Cheese" exhibit, which opened Thursday and closes Monday, invites visitors to sample the final product.

Lohan wants to end necklace theft case

LOS ANGELES, 1 May—Lindsay Lohan wants to enter a no contest plea to end a criminal case filed over a $2,500 necklace reported stolen, a source close to the actress said Saturday.

The source, who is familiar with Lohan's criminal case but was not authorized to comment publicly, said the actress wants to put the case behind her so she can focus on her career. No court date has been set for Lohan to enter the plea.

She is scheduled to return to a Los Angeles court for a pretrial hearing 11 May, but the actress is hoping to resolve the case before then, the source said.

By pleading no contest, Lohan would not be admitting guilt, and it was not immediately clear if she would face any additional penalties.

The actress already has been sentenced to four months in jail for a probation violation related to the theft case. She is free on bail.

Prosecutors in February charged Lohan with felony grand theft on allegations that she took the necklace from Kamofie & Co, a jewelry store near the actress's home in Los Angeles' Venice neighbourhood.

The charge was reduced last week by Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Stephanie Sautner.

Authorities allege the theft occurred roughly three weeks after Lohan, 24, was released from court-ordered rehab at the Betty Ford Centre.

Museum promotes 'Indiana Jones' archeology

MONTREAL, 1 May—A museum exhibit in this Canadian metropolis opened this week showcasing on-screen archeological discoveries of Hollywood's fictional adventurer Indiana Jones.

Presented by the National Geographic Society with the support of Lucasfilm, "Indiana Jones and the Adventure of Archaeology: The Exhibition" takes visitors on a virtual tour of sites depicted in the series of adventure movies.

It aims to shed light on such historical myths as the Ark of the Covenant and the Holy Grail, sought in the films by the title character played by American actor Harrison Ford.

Claude Monet's 1891 oil painting masterpiece "Les Peupliers," valued between 20 and 30 million dollars, is one of the main attractions at the Impressionist and Modern evening sale on 3 May.

The other star attractions will be the large Picasso "Femmes d'Alger," also valued at 20 to 30 million dollars, and the "La fenetre ouverte" by Matisse, estimated at 8-12 million.

Slightly more accessible — at a few million dollars less — are De Chirico's "Ettore e Andromaca" for five to seven million dollars, and Dali's "Chevaliers en Parade," expected to raise 1.2 to 1.8 million dollars.

Spur's Redknapp demands goal-line technology

LONDON, 1 May — Harry Redknapp has called for the introduction of goal-line technology following the controversy surrounding Chelsea's opening goal in the 2-1 defeat of Tottenham. Spurs manager Redknapp was left frustrated when Frank Lampard's shot was adjudged to have crossed the line after being spilled by keeper Heurelho Gomes.

Television replays showed the decision to award a goal was wrong and the manager now believes the case for change is clear, pointing out that Lampard was denied a clear goal in similar circumstances when playing for England against Germany in the 2010 World Cup finals. "The linesman's made a call, an honest judgement," Redknapp said. "He's guessed. He's had a guess. He's on the 18-yard line when the ball's on the goal-line. It's impossible to judge. No one can be sure. He's guessed wrong and he's made a mistake."

Arsenal 1 - 0 Man Utd

LONDON, 1 May—Arsenal beat a poor Manchester United to blow the title race open with the leaders now just three points ahead of Chelsea with three games left to play.

Referee Chris Foy failed to spot a clear handball from Nemanja Vidic in the first half, with Robin Van Persie poised to nod in Theo Walcott's cross. Though United went close with a Wayne Rooney free-kick, Arsenal's general dominance continued after the break.

And they were rewarded in the 56th minute when Aaron Ramsey slotted home. If defending champions Chelsea beat United at Old Trafford next Sunday, they will move to the top of the Premier League.—Internet

Liverpool 3 - 0 Newcastle

LIVERPOOL, 1 May—Goals continue to flow at Anfield under Kenny Dalglish as Liverpool strengthened their claim for European football next season with a 3-0 victory over Newcastle United.

The Reds, who have scored 14 in their last three home matches, moved above Tottenham Hotspur into fifth place having rarely been troubled by the Magpies.

Suarez (right) scores his third goal for Liverpool in Sunday's 3-0 win.

Barclays Premier League matches was sandwiched between another for Maxi Rodriguez, who hit a hat-trick in the 5-0 win over Birmingham City last week, and one for the impressive Luis Suarez.

Only a goal for Andy Carroll against his former club would have capped off the performance. The £35m striker came on for the final 20 minutes but made little impact. He was never going to be a major player in this match having missed last week's victory with a knee injury.

The man who was the main reason Newcastle's record of just two wins at Anfield in their last 39 visits was not improved was Suarez.

Carroll's fellow deadline-day signing has made a much greater impression and his inventiveness and workrate were a constant problem to the Magpies.

Birmingham 1 - 1 Wolverhampton

LONDON, 1 May—Wolves missed the opportunity to climb out of the bottom three after they were held to a draw by 10-man Birmingham.

Steven Fletcher put Wolves ahead with a penalty after Ben Foster fouled Stephen Ward early in the contest. Sebastian Larsson hit the crossbar and later struck the equaliser after a poor header from Michael Mancienne.

Craig Gardner picked up a second yellow before the break but a scrappy and goalless second half left Wolves 19th in the table, one point from safety.

Kyle Busch denies Hamlin weekend sweep at Richmond

RICHMOND, 1 May — If there's one thing Denny Hamlin could change, he maybe wouldn't have been so forthcoming about Richmond International Racing in all those Joe Gibbs Racing team meetings. But holding out information about his home track would make Hamlin a bad teammate, so he shared everything he knew. Then Kyle Busch used those tips to beat his teammate Saturday night at Richmond, denying Hamlin a weekend sweep at his home track.

"I learned from Denny last fall, and I'm not going to say what I learned," Busch said after stretching his final tank of gas 107 laps to pick up his second win of the Sprint Cup season. It was Busch's third consecutive win in Richmond's spring race. Hamlin has won the last two fall races, and the last non-JGR driver to win at Richmond was Jimmie Johnson in September, 2008. So it was no surprise to see Busch and Hamlin finish first and second for a JGR sweep Saturday night. Hamlin just wished it had been him out front.

Power wins pole for IndyCar's Sao Paulo 300

SAO PAULO, 1 May — Will Power of Australia improved to four for four in IndyCar poles this season after earning the 200th for Team Penske at the Sao Paulo 300 on Saturday. Power, winner of the inaugural Sao Paulo race last year, will start at the front in Sunday's race after clocking 1 minute, 21.896 seconds on the 2.5-mile, 11-tum Anhembi temporary street circuit. "Very good day with qualifying," Power said. "I think it's important to start up front, there is less chance of getting taken out on the start and maybe the first couple of restarts." —Internet

From democracy transition to emergence of modern, developed democratic nation, Myanmar is committed to working more steadfastly not only for ASEAN Socio-Cultural Community but also for single ASEAN Community

Union Minister for Information and for Culture U Kyaw Hsan attends 5th ASEAN Socio-Cultural Community (ASCC) Council Meeting.—MNA

NAY PYI TAW, 1 May—Union Minister for Information and for Culture U Kyaw Hsan of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar attended 5th ASEAN Socio-Cultural Community (ASCC) Council Meeting at Jakarta of Indonesia at 9 am on 29 April and discussed issues of environmental conservation (climate change, transboundary environmental pollution, environmental sustainable cities); education developmental and educational priority and modernization; health development and prevention against contagious diseases; encouraging participation of disabled persons in community and declaring statement on sharing cultural characteristics which will facilitate the establishment of ASEAN Community.

The minister said that the Republic of the Union of Myanmar is drafting national level projects for human resources development needed for ASEAN community; social welfare and security; social justice and rights; sustainable environmental conservation; building up the characteristics of ASEAN; and narrowing development gap and it is managing to harmoniously cooperate with national level projects of other ASEAN-members nations.

Regarding national level disaster risk management and rehabilitation, rehabilitation and promotion of socio-economic status measures had been taken in the regions devastated by cyclone Nargis in 2008 and long-term projects for prevention against future risk is being carried out.
