Gear up construction of roads and bridges in Ayeyawady Region

Southern part of the delta in Ayeyawady Region is teeming with plenty of rivers, creeks and lakes. The area blessed with fertile soil and abundant natural resources is producing paddy, beans and pulses, meat, fish, salt and various kinds of marine products.

At present, emphasis is being placed on infrastructures in transport sector of the region, thereby building over 9000 more miles in length of asphalt roads, gravel roads, hard roads and earthen roads than that of the past. Roads have been constructed as a network among 25 townships of 26. Likewise, new bridges have been commissioned into service.

Auknat Creek Bridge on Bogale-Sethsan-Htawpaing-Ahmar Road was inaugurated in Bogale Township of Pyapon District on 25 June. The bridge in length of over 400 feet can withstand 13 tons of vehicle plus commodity for individual vehicle. In the past, those wishing to go to Ahmar from Bogale used Pyapon-Kyonkadun-Daw Nyein-Ahmar Road. The new road is 32 miles shorter than the old one.

Thanks to Auknat Creek Bridge, local people have easy access to other areas through land route at any time. If natural disasters fell, they could be evacuated to safe places in a short time using the bridge. Local people can travel to various regions through the bridge that links completed road networks.

As a result of building new roads and bridges with momentum in the region, rice, paddy and marine products can be transported to regions and states for ensuring swift flow of commodities.

Ayeyawady Region is now facilitated with not only better water courses but also motor roads and railroads. The eastern bank of Ayeyawady River is in a scene of oneness with the western bank. Consequently, Ayeyawady Region is taking the position of most economic development region due to smooth trading of paddy, rice, meat and fish products while building new roads and bridges.

Obama says drawdown from Afghanistan to be done in responsible way

President Barack Obama

WASHINGTON, 30 June—US President Barack Obama said on Wednesday that the drawdown of US military forces from Afghanistan will be done “in a responsible way.”

The troop withdrawal will be conducted in a manner “that will allow Afghanistan to defend itself and will give us the operational capacity to continue to put pressure on al-Qaeda,” Obama said at a White House Press Conference.

The president also said the United States is being successful in the Afghan mission, and has severely crippled al-Qaeda’s capacities.

Obama’s remarks come as American troops are starting to leave Afghanistan next month under the president’s newly unveiled withdrawal plan. According to the plan, 10,000 troops will be pulled out from the country by yearend, and a total of 33,000 troops will be out by next summer, fully recovering the surge troops the president announced in late 2009.

Costs of US war on terror up to 4.4 trillion US dollars

WASHINGTON, 30 June—The United States could end up spending as much as 4.4 trillion dollars on wars in Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan, a new research report estimates.

Nearly 10 years after a US declaration of a war on terror, wars in Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan have cost the US between 2.3 trillion dollars to 2.7 trillion dollars, according to the report from Brown University’s Watson Institute for International Studies.

The report not only covered direct costs of post-9/11 wars, but also included costs of caring for current and future war veterans and projected war spending from 2012 to 2020.

The final price tag for the wars will range from 3.7 trillion dollars to 4.4 trillion dollars, the report estimated.

The wars in Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan have killed at least 225,000 people, including men and women in uniform, contractors, and civilians, the report said.

Among the victims were 137,000 civilians killed by all parties to these conflicts. In addition, the wars have created more than 7.8 million refugees among Iraqis, Afghans, and Pakistanis.

Germany arrests teenager suspect linked with “terrorist bodies”

BERLIN, 30 June— German prosecutors said Wednesday they had arrested a teenager on suspicion that he helped “terrorist organizations” recruit suicide bombers through Internet.

Harry M, alias Isa al Khattab, was arrested on Tuesday in the northern German City of Neumuenster, prosecutors said.

He was accused of supporting the Islamic State of Iraq, the al-Qaeda front group in Iraq, and the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan which hopes to create an Islamic State across central Asia.

Prosecutors said he had operated the “Islamic-Hacker-Union’s” Internet operations since December 2010 and posted 70 text and video messages advocating violent Jihad from February to April 2011 alone.

On the same day, the German coalition government agreed to extend the anti-terror law with some changes for another four years, considering “the anti-terror situation is generally more difficult than 10 years ago.”—Xinhua

6 civilians killed in roadside bomb blast in S Afghanistan

LASHKAR GAH, 30 June—Six civilians were killed on Thursday morning when their car hit a roadside bomb in Marja District of southern Helmand Province, a statement issued by local government here said.

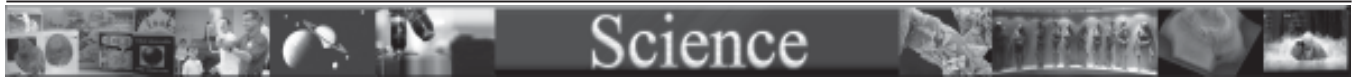

“Six civilians, all members of the same family, including a woman, a man and four children, were killed as their vehicle touched off a roadside bomb on Thursday morning in Shin Ghzak area of Marja District,” said the statement.

The statement blamed the enemies of Afghanistan, a term used referring for Taliban militants, for planting the bomb on the road and responsible for the attack in the province, some 555 km south of capital of Kabul.

However, the militants group has yet to make comments. The Taliban-led militancy has been rampant since the militant group announced to launch spring offensive from 1 May against Afghan and NATO-led troops stationed in Afghanistan.

A total of 368 civilians were killed in conflicts and Taliban-led militancy in May this year, the deadliest month for Afghan civilians since 2007, the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) said in a statement earlier this month.—Xinhua

Fossil eyes reveal predator's sharp vision

WASHINGTON, 30 June—Ancient animals saw the world through multifaceted compound eyes, a new fossil discovery reveals. The ancient eyes, which date back half a billion years, probably belonged to a predator, likely a giant shrimp-like creature.

Like a modern fly, the ancient creature relied on compound eyes consisting of thousands of separate lenses to see the world. Each lens provides a pixel of vision. The more lenses, the better the creature could see. The mysterious ancient shrimp saw better than any other animal yet discovered from its era: Its eyes contained 3,000 lenses.

The fossil eyes were found by Australian researchers on Kangaroo Island, South Australia. They're 515 million years old, meaning the animal lived just after the "Cambrian Explosion," a sudden burst of life and diversity that began 540 million years ago.

"The new fossils reveal that some of the earliest arthropods had already acquired visual systems similar to those of living forms, underscoring the speed and magnitude of the evolutionary innovation that occurred during the Cambrian Explosion," the authors wrote in the Nature article.

Because the eyes were found isolated, researchers can't say with certainty what sort of animal carried them. But the fossils were found in the same rock as an array of ancient marine animals, suggesting a creature something like what the world would have looked like to the ancient animal.—Internet

Scientists discover brightest, earliest quasar

LOS ANGELES, 30 June—A team of European astronomers, glimpsing back in time to when the universe was just a youngster, says it has detected the most distant and earliest quasar yet.

Light from this brilliant, starlike object took nearly 13 billion years to reach Earth, meaning the quasar existed when the universe was only 770 million years old — a kid by cosmic standards. The discovery ranks as the brightest object ever found.

To scientists' surprise, the black hole powering this quasar was 2 billion times more massive than the sun. How it grew so bulky so early in the universe's history is a mystery. Black holes are known to feed on stars, gas and other matter, but their growth was always thought to be slow.

The discovery was reported in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

Since quasars are so luminous, they guide astronomers studying the conditions of the cosmos following the Big Bang, the explosion believed to have created the universe 13.7 billion years ago. Researchers are constantly trying to outdo one another in their quest to see the universe as an infant. The deeper they peer into space, the further back in time they are looking.

The previous record holder was a quasar that dated to when the universe was 870 million years old.

The new quasar — with the tongue-twisting name ULAS J1120+0641 — was identified in images from a sky survey taken by the United Kingdom Infrared Telescope perched near the summit of Mauna Kea, Hawaii. The discovery was confirmed by other telescopes.

"It's like sifting for gold. You're looking for something shiny," said lead researcher Daniel Mortlock, an astrophysicist at Imperial College in London.

In an editorial accompanying the research, Chris Willott of the Canadian Astronomy Data Centre called the quasar a "monster" that could upend current theories about the growth of black holes.

"The existence of this quasar will be giving some theorists sleepless nights," said Willott, who was not part of the discovery team.—Internet

World of Warcraft now free to play up until level 20

NEW YORK, 30 June—The most popular MMORPG of all time, World of Warcraft, will be free to play — at least until your in-game character reaches level 20 — Blizzard has announced.

Blizzard has considered the option for years, and it dabbled with a number of free trial programmes, all of which were time-limited.

Now, under the new programme called World of Warcraft Starter Edition, new players can play at their own pace without having to worry that the free trial will expire. When they reach level 20, they can continue playing, but will stop earning experience, making it impossible to level up. To play past level 20, new players will need to upgrade to the full version of the game, which can be done online here.

Although there's no time limit for trial players, there's a great deal of other restrictions besides the 20-level limit: Trial players can have a maximum of 100 gold; their trade skills are capped at 100 ranks; they are unable to trade in the Auction House or join guilds; their chat options are limited; they cannot invite other players into a party and so on. —Internet

Programme shrinks time-to-treatment for heart attack

NEW YORK, 30 June—The time it takes to transfer heart attack patients to hospitals that provide emergency coronary angioplasty was greatly reduced when a statewide transfer programme was launched in North Carolina, a new study finds. It included 436 patients with ST-elevation myocardial infarction (STEMI), the most lethal form of heart attack that occurs when a large area of the heart is deprived of blood supply. These patients generally need coronary angioplasty to open blocked coronary arteries within 90 minutes of first being assessed by emergency medical personnel.

However, only 25 percent of hospitals in the United States can perform emergency coronary angioplasty, in which a balloon-tipped tube is threaded through an artery in the heart. The balloon is then inflated to open the artery and restore blood flow. In this study of 55 North Carolina hospitals, the researchers looked at how long it took to transfer patients from hospitals unable to perform emergency coronary angioplasty to hospitals that can do the procedure, before and one year after creation of the new patient transfer system. They found that the median door-in-door-out time decreased from 97 minutes to 58 minutes.

The study is published 28 June in the journal Circulation: Cardiovascular Quality and Outcomes.

Researchers analyze gene changes in ovarian cancer

LOS ANGELES, 30 June—Researchers analyzing the genetic makeup of ovarian cancer tumours have found a gene mutation that is surprisingly frequent, suggesting it plays a key role in driving the cancer.

The finding, appearing in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature, may eventually lead to tests for earlier diagnosis of the disease and to better treatment. Ovarian cancer kills nearly 14,000 women in the United States each year. It's usually not spotted until at an advanced stage.

The gene sequencing was carried out by The Cancer Genome Atlas, a federally funded network of medical centres that analyzed 316 ovarian tumours.

Scientists found that 96 percent of the tumours had mutated TP53 genes. The mutations were not present in normal tissue from the patients, showing they arose within the tumours. Normally, the gene directs the cell how to make a protein that acts as a tumour suppressor, keeping cells from growing and dividing uncontrollably.

Alterations in nine other genes also played a role in ovarian cancer, though to a much lesser extent, the researchers reported. Among them were the BRCA1 and BRCA2 genes, which increase the risk of breast and ovarian cancer.

"In other cancers, there are usually several genes that are involved" on almost equal footing, said one of the study authors, Dr David Wheeler of Baylor College of Medicine. "This is an unusual pattern." The new work "is producing impressive insights into the biology" of ovarian cancer, Dr Francis Collins, who heads the National Institutes of Health, said in a statement.

New CEO targets leaner Lloyds with 15,000 job cuts

LONDON, 30 June—Lloyds is to cut 15,000 jobs and halve its international presence under a radical overhaul by its new chief executive aimed at returning the part-nationalized British bank back to health.

Lloyds said on Thursday it will deliver 1.5 billion pounds ($2.4 billion) of annual savings by 2014, which would allow it to invest an extra 2 billion pounds in its core retail banking activities.

The cost of the programme will be 2.3 billion pounds.

The bank aims to cut its international presence to under 15 countries by 2014 from 30 now.

New Chief Executive Antonio Horta-

Osorio, whom Lloyds poached from rival Santander UK, said his plan will create a more agile organization by cutting through middle management, centralizing control functions, and creating a simpler legal structure.

"We will unlock the potential in this franchise over time by creating a simpler, more agile and responsive organization, and by making substantial investments in better-value products and services for our customers, to deliver strong, stable and sustainable returns for our shareholders," Horta-Osorio said in a statement.

Lloyds, 41 percent owned by the UK government after needing to be bailed out during the financial crisis and with 30 million customers, said it will "revitalize" the bank, including the Halifax brand it inherited after its troubled 2008 takeover of HBOS.

Bancassurance will remain a core part of the group and it said it plans to restart a progressive dividend payments once it is allowed to do so.

Lloyds and Royal Bank of Scotland were bailed out and part-nationalized by the British government during the credit crisis.

Britain ended up with a 40.6 percent stake in Lloyds and around 83 percent of RBS.

Lloyds shares closed up 1.1 percent at 44.66 pence on Wednesday.

S Korea lower economic growth outlook to 4.5% for this year

SEOUL, 30 June—South Korea revised down its economic growth outlook for 2011 to 4.5 percent in a bid to focus on stabilizing consumer prices, the nation's finance minister said Thursday.

"Outlook for this year's economic growth was cut to 4.5 percent from the previous 5 percent, and outlook for consumer prices rise was raised to 4 percent from the prior 3 percent," Finance Minister Bahk Jae-wan told reporters in a joint Press Conference.

The prediction for economic growth was lower than the 5 percent expansion announced last December when the finance ministry unveiled its annual economic management plan.

Bahk said price stability will be the top priority for economic management in the second half of this year, promising the government will make all-out efforts to stabilize consumer prices.

The outlook for this year's consumer prices was almost the same as the 3.9 percent rise predicted by the Bank of Korea (BOK).—Xinhua

Japan says Fukushima disaster not to hamper nuke deal with India

NEW DELHI, 30 June — Japanese Ambassador to India Akitaka Saiki Wednesday said that the Fukushima disaster will not hamper the ongoing negotiations for a civil nuclear pact between the two countries.

"It is not that because of the Tsunami, we are going to cancel the talks or postpone it," Saiki said, adding that both India and Japan will go back to talks to firm up the proposed pact.

"I think the review process both in India and Japan will take some time. We need to allay concerns of our residents and we need to go through the process of persuading our residents living in neighbourhood of nuclear power stations," he added.

Japan and India had started talks for a civil nuclear cooperation pact last year aimed at allowing Japanese firms to export nuclear power technology and equipment to India.

But there were apprehension that these negotiations could receive a set back following the radiation scare in Fukushima nuclear power plant after the tsunami struck the country in March this year. —Internet

China to purchase 88 planes from Airbus

TIANJIN, 30 June— China has signed an agreement with the European plane maker Airbus to buy 88 aircraft in the A320 family, a Chinese buyer said on Wednesday.

According to the agreement signed on Tuesday in Berlin, China Aviation Supplies Holding Company (CAS) will buy 46 out of the total 88 aircraft, and the rest 42 will be delivered to the ICBC Financial Leasing Co, a subsidiary of the Industrial and Commerce Bank of China, said a CAS official on Wednesday.

The purchase will lift the leasing company's plane number to 110 from the current 68. The single-aisle A320 family is made up of the A318, A319, A320 and A321.

Airbus has secured more than 7,000 orders for the A320 family worldwide, and more than 4,700 planes have already been delivered to over 330 clients worldwide.

Altogether 575 A320 aircraft are operated in China by 13 airline companies.—Xinhua

Snacking clue to obesity epidemic

NEW YORK, 30 June — Snacking and super sizing are two of the dieter's worst enemies, research suggests. The average daily calorie intake in the US has increased by almost a third in 30 years, reaching 2,374 kilocalories. The influence of bigger portion sizes and excessive snacking outweighs the shift towards high-calorie foods, say experts.

Focusing on reducing how much and how often people eat could help tackle obesity, they report in PLoS Medicine. Obesity levels have risen sharply in many Western countries since the 1970s. In the US, where the study was carried out, a third of all adults — more than 72 million people — are now categorised as obese. A team from the University of North Carolina analysed data from food surveys carried out in the seventies, eighties, nineties and the last decade. The surveys record all food and drink a person consumes over a 24-hour period.—Internet

US Air Force pilot still missing in F-16 crash in Nevada

LAS VEGAS, 30 June— The US Air Force on Wednesday said search and rescue efforts were still being conducted for the missing pilot of an F-16 aircraft that crashed Tuesday evening in the state of Nevada. The F-16 Fighting Falcon aircraft took off from Nellis Air Force Base, which is located around 7.1 miles northeast of Las Vegas, Nevada and was conducting air-to-air combat exercises about 150 miles north of the city. At around 5:30 pm local time, the aircraft crashed in an area some 20 miles west of Caliente in Nevada's Lincoln County, the Las Vegas Review-Journal reported.

With the US Air Force deploying another helicopter in search of the missing pilot on Wednesday morning, there have now been three choppers working on search and rescue missions. The incident occurred within the 12,000-square-mile military airspace that surrounds the 3-million-acre range, including 5,000 square miles over public land, Nellis Air Force Base spokesman Chuck Ramey told the media outlet.

However, according to Brigadier General TJ O'Shaughnessy, commander of the 57th Wing at Nellis Air Force Base, search and rescue teams were trying to spot the parachute and pilot in the suspected crash site, which sits beyond the Nevada Test and Training Range.

Council's Pledge decision sparks criticism

Officials in Eugene, Ore., said the City Council's decision to recite the Pledge of Allegiance four times a year yielded complaints from out of state. The officials said Tuesday's decision led to a flurry of calls and e-mails, nearly all of which came from out of state, from people saying they would steer clear of the city due to the decision, The (Eugene) Register-Guard reported Wednesday.

"Thank you," Loren Pierce of Reno, Nev., wrote in an e-mail. "You have made our decision easy for us. We have decided to move our 120-member family reunion away from Eugene, you communist bastards." Jan Bohman, a spokeswoman for the city, said 90 percent of the complaining e-mails and 99 percent of the phone calls came from outside of Oregon.
