Improve living standards for rural people

Today, the government is in pursuance of tasks for improving the living standards for rural people who constitute the majority of the nation's people and engage in agriculture.

Ongoing Plan for Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation covers over 60,000 villages in the countryside. It is applying varieties of approaches for boosting agricultural production and economic growth of rural areas. Tasks for poverty alleviation include development of agriculture and boosting production of meat and fish, increasing incomes of countrymen and relieving poverty.

It is needed to bring about a growing number of village-level health staff, workers, midwives and assistant midwives for development of human resources in the medical field in order to improve the socioeconomic status for rural residents.

The number of medical facilities is on the increase. For instance, the opening of the station hospital in Kanhtooma Model Village in Taze Township took place in conjunction with the upgrading of the basic education high school on 9 July.

Moreover, the opening of sub-rural health centre in Gwebindaw Village in Myinmu Township, and the handing over of Shweyaingdan school building in Tagaung Ward, Sagaing, took place recently. The facilities are designed to fulfill the requirements and improve the living conditions for rural people in the health and education sectors.

Now, tasks for rural development and poverty alleviation are in progress. Rural folks can enjoy better socio economic life if the people work hard in harness in the arenas of agriculture, cottage industry, cooperatives, health and education.

Two killed in bomb attack, rockets hit Baghdad Green Zone

BAGHDAD, 11 July—A police officer and his driver were killed in a sticky bomb attack in north of Baghdad on Monday, while a barrage of rockets struck Baghdad's Green Zone, the police said.

A sticky bomb attached to a police vehicle detonated in the morning in the city of Baiji, some 200 km north of Baghdad, killing Salam al-Jubouri, a police Lieutenant Colonel, and his driver, a local police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity. Another police officer in the car was also injured by the blast, the source said.

In Baghdad, three Katyusha rockets in the morning landed on the capital's Green Zone, which houses some of the Iraqi government offices and the US embassy, without causing casualties, an Interior Ministry source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The rockets were launched from the predominantly Shiite District of Zaafaranyah in southeastern Baghdad, the source said.—Xinhua

US soldier killed in Iraq

BAGHDAD, 11 July—A US soldier was killed in Iraq Sunday, the US military said.

The US military in a statement said the incident is currently under investigation and failed to give further details about how or where exactly the incident happened.

The deceased soldier's name was withheld pending notification of next of kin. The death brings to three the number of US service members killed in Iraq this month.

US Defence Secretary Leon Panetta arrived in Baghdad on a surprise visit on Sunday. Panetta is expected to meet with US military commanders in Iraq and will hold talks with top Iraqi officials about whether a part of US troops will remain in Iraq after the deadline of the end of 2011. Some 46,000 American troops are still in Iraq.

Three killed in Nigeria bomb blast

ABUJA, 11 July—Three persons were feared dead on Sunday afternoon, following a bomb explosion that occurred on Church Road, Suleja in outskirts of capital City of Abuja, the police said.

The bomb blast, the third of such incident in Suleja this year, occurred around 3 pm local time, causing extensive damage to some houses in the area.

State police spokesperson Richard Oguiche confirmed the incident and casualties to reporters in Minna, Niger State capital, saying several others sustained varying degrees of injury.

The bodies of those confirmed dead had been deposited in the mortuary, he added.

The first bomb blast in Suleja, which occurred at a political rally on 3 March, killed seven persons, while the second explosion, which occurred at the electoral commission's office on 8 April, killed 11 persons.

Meanwhile, state governor Babangida Aliyu condemned the bomb blast that occurred in Suleja on Sunday afternoon as a terrorist act, vowing that the perpetrators would not go unpunished.

The governor said the bombing was an act of terrorism, which was the third in the state this year.

Aliyu stressed that the attack was inhuman, wicked and an attempt to intimidate law-abiding citizens of the state.

He urged the people not to be intimidated by the act of these agents of darkness.

Aliyu gave the assurance that the state government, in collaboration with security agents, would ensure that those responsible for the act were apprehended and punished according to the laws of the land.

Potato genome is decoded in Scotland

DUNDEE, 11 July—Scientists in Scotland say they have decoded the entire DNA genome of the potato, which could bolster harvests of one of the world's most vital crops. Professor Iain Gordon, head of the James Hutton Institute in Dundee, told the BBC the breakthrough will help botanists develop new varieties, more nutritious, abundant and resistant to pests and diseases.

It can take more than a decade to breed an improved variety under current methods. Gordon said it will take several more years of study to apply the genome finding to crop production.—Internet

China aims high in space

BEIJING, 11 July—China is forging ahead with plans to put a man on the moon sometime after 2020. Some experts worry the US could slip behind China in human spaceflight. Former associate NASA administrator Scott Pace says that “a decline in space leadership will be seen as symbolic of a relative decline in US power and influence.”

An ongoing US space shuttle mission will be the last. NASA is ending the programme after 30 years. China is still far behind the US in space but has made steady progress in recent years.

It sent a probe to the moon in 2006 and carried out its first spacewalk in 2008.

This year it plans to launch a train-car size module into orbit as the first building block for a planned space station.—Internet

eRacks releases intel Xeon E7-4800 and E7-8800 series rackmount servers

WASHINGTON, 11 July—eRacks Open Source Systems adds two rackmount servers utilizing the latest Xeon Westmere-EX processors to their online catalog, the eRacks/NAS6X, and the eRacks/NAS16X, suitable for massive deployments and mission-critical applications. These two socket-1567 systems feature up to 4 and 8 CPUs, up to 10 cores per processor, and up to 30MB of cache.

eRacks announces its latest offering of both the 4 and the 8 CPU Westmere-EX processors in its NAS (Network Attached Storage) line of servers. Earlier this year, Intel released two new lines of Xeon processors, the E7-4800 series (for systems with up to four processors) and the E7-8800 series (for systems with up to 8 processors), both codenamed Westmere-EX. These CPUs sport a new socket (socket 1567), up to 10 cores per processor (for a total of 20 threads of execution) and up to 30MB of cache. The eRacks/NAS6X sports as many as 40 cores and 512GB of RAM, whereas the eRacks/NAS16X sports up to 80 cores and 1TB of RAM.

Both systems are therefore ideal for any applications that require massive parallelism and large quantities of memory. And, with Intel claiming 40% greater performance as compared to the Xeon 7500 series, the end user is assured more performance for less cost. Intel says that these processors “support massively scalable deployments and mission-critical workloads.”—Internet

Apple 'iPad HD' rumoured for fall release

NEW YORK, 11 July—The Apple rumour mill ramped up to full speed this week with reports that Apple has a new iPad model set for release this fall.

According to Joshua Topolsky at This Is My Next, Apple's newest tablet will be called the “iPad HD,” with the device expected to boast a screen with double the resolution (2048×1536) of the iPad 2 — a rumor we've heard before, but it hasn't been particularly believable until now.

Sources say that the device will be for the high-end “pro” market (meaning its price points will well exceed that of the iPad2), possibly for professional producers of video and photo content — though that doesn't mean anybody with a big enough bank roll can't enjoy the shiny new tablet. Apple is said to have an iPad-friendly version of either Final Cut Pro or Aperture to go along with the iPad HD. And the device “is specifically said to not be the iPad 3, rather a complimentary piece of the iPad 2 line,” writes Topolsky, similar to the MacBook-MacBook Pro relationship.

News of a new, high-end iPad is corroborated by FBR Capital analyst Craig Berger, who says that Apple likely has an “iPad 2 Plus” in store for the holiday season.

That device, says Berger, will have a pixel density of 250-300 ppi, which adds more weight to the double-resolution screen. Berger stipulates, however, that “we await more confirming data points from other supply chain contacts before fully believing a new iPad device is coming in 2011.”

Topolsky's report follows a big story from the Wall Street Journal that asserts Apple indeed has a thinner and lighter iPhone 5 in the works. While many have speculated that the next iPhone would look essentially the same as the iPhone 4, Topolsky says that we will in fact see an entirely redesigned next-gen iPhone.

The reason for the iPhone 4 look-a-like rumors is because Apple has been testing the iPhone 5 components in old iPhone 4 cases.

The reason Apple is ditching the iPhone 4 design so quickly is because high-level Apple executives are tired of it, and “are ready to move on to an entirely new product,” writes Topolsky.

First drug-resistant gonorrhea strain emerges

Photo illustration. For the first time, international researchers have identified a strain of gonorrhea that is resistant to treatment with antibiotics, scientists announced at a sex disease research conference Monday.—INTERNET

NEW YORK, 11 July— For the first time, international researchers have identified a strain of gonorrhea that is resistant to treatment with antibiotics, scientists announced at a sex disease research conference Monday.

The common bacterial infection, often called the “clap,” has until now been easily treatable with antibiotics but if left alone can cause infertility in women and painful urination and a pus-oozing infection in men.

“This is both an alarming and a predictable discovery,” said Magnus Unemo of the Swedish Reference Laboratory for Pathogenic Neisseria.

“Since antibiotics became the standard treatment for gonorrhea in the 1940s, this bacterium has shown a remarkable capacity to develop resistance mechanisms to all drugs introduced to control it.”

Details of the discovery were to be released by Unemo and colleagues at the 19th conference of the International Society for Sexually Transmitted Disease Research, on from 10 to 13 July in Quebec City, Canada. Since the finding is so new, scientists are unclear how widespread the resistant strain may be in the world population, but concerns are mounting that it could spread quickly.

“While it is still too early to assess if this new strain has become widespread, the history of newly emergent resistance in the bacterium suggests that it may spread rapidly unless new drugs and effective treatment programmes are developed,” Unemo said. As many as 700,000 people in the United States are believed to get gonorrhea annually, according to the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention.

Up to half of infected women experience no symptoms, while men usually see signs of infection within two to 30 days. “Anyone who has any type of sex can catch gonorrhea,” according to the US National Institutes of Health, which notes however that risks are higher among people with multiple partners and people who have unprotected sex.

“Gonorrhea is more common in large cities, inner-city areas, populations with lower overall levels of education and people with lower socioeconomic status,” added the NIH.

People who suspect they may be infected should see a doctor in order to obtain a prescription and should not attempt to treat the problem themselves, experts say.—Interent

Massage better than meds for back pain, research finds

NEW YORK, 11 July— Nagging back pain? New research reports that a weekly one-hour massage could be just the thing. A study shows that a 10-week massage treatment reduced pain more than medications and exercises, and the effects lasted for six months.

The research, published 5 July in the journal Annals of Internal Medicine, involved about 400 patients aged 20 to 65 with chronic low back pain.

Seattle-based researchers from the Group Health Research Institute examined the benefits of relaxation massage, such as Swedish-style massage, and more structural massage, a technique Provided by therapists with advanced training. The study found that both kinds of massage benefited the subjects.

At the end of the 10-week treatment, nearly 40 percent of patients in the massage groups said their pain was nearly or completely gone, compared to 4 percent in the usual care group, which included treatments such as taking pain medications or muscle relaxants, seeing doctors or physical therapists, or not doing anything.

A prior study from the National Institutes of Health found that massage therapy may have immediate benefits on pain and mood among patients with advanced cancer. The study appeared in a 2008 issue of the same journal.

“The board makes no recommendation in relation to the indicative proposal but will seek to engage with Peabody and ArcelorMittal in relation to the price and terms,” Macarthur said in a statement.

The proposal is subject to a number of conditions, including foreign investment review board requirements and the bid company achieving an interest in at least 50.01 percent of Macarthur shares.

The offer from Peabody, which previously offered Aus$15 and Aus$16 for Macarthur, and ArcelorMittal, the world's largest steel producer, comes a day after the Australian government announced the details of its carbon tax.

The tax, which would remain fixed for the first three years before moving to an emissions trading scheme in mid-2015, has angered the coal industry, which says it will cost jobs.

Oil falls to below $96 after weak US jobs report

SINGAPORE, 11 July—Oil prices fell to below $96 a barrel Monday in Asia amid signs the US economy is struggling.

Benchmark oil for August delivery was down 50 cents to $95.70 a barrel at midday Singapore time in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude gave up $2.47 to settle at $96.20 on Friday.

In London, Brent crude fell 63 cents to $117.70 per barrel on the ICE Futures exchange.

On Friday, the US Labour Department said that employers added the fewest jobs in nine months and the unemployment rate rose to 9.2 percent in June, undermining investor optimism that the world's biggest economy was improving.

“The report was negative from just about every angle of approach,” energy consultant The Schork Group said in a report.

“That's hardly what you would expect in the second year of an alleged economic recovery.”

Before the dismal jobs report, oil had rebounded from $90 two weeks ago on expectations global supplies will tighten and demand will improve during the next 18 months.

“Although the employment data delivered a significant body slam to energy markets, we're still reluctant to rule out one more run at the $100 area,” Ritterbusch and Associates said in a report. “The energy market absorbed the important monthly employment figures well enough to make another push within the next several sessions.”—Internet

Radioactive beef found in Japan

MINAMI-SOMA, 11 July—High levels of radioactive cesium have been found in cattle in Fukushima Prefecture, the site of Japan's nuclear power plant crisis, authorities say.

The metropolitan government reported having found levels of radioactive cesium 4.6 times the national standard in cows raised in Minami-Soma, The Asahi Shimbun reported. Friday's discovery was the first time national standards have been exceeded in beef.

The contaminated cattle were raised on a ranch located within the zone in which people are subject to evacuate during emergencies related to the earthquake-tsunami disaster at the Fukushima No 1 nuclear power plant, the newspaper said.

Government officials tested 10 cows after being processed at the Shibaura slaughterhouse, and all 10 had high levels of radioactive cesium. The Fukushima prefectural government asked the Minami-Soma local government to stop shipping or transporting cattle raised there.

All shipped cattle from Fukushima have their surfaces tested for radiation; the cattle in question were last tested June, and had shown no sign of 26 radioactive materials, government officials said.—Internet

Art scholar claims 'lost' Michelangelo find in Oxford University

LONDON, 11 July—A veteran Italian art scholar is claiming to have identified a previously unknown painting by Michelangelo at the University of Oxford.

Antonio Forcellino made international headlines last month when he backed a wealthy New York family's claim that a painting they had stored behind their sofa was by the Renaissance master.

Now he claims new research techniques applied to a piece owned by Campion Hall, an institution which allows religious scholars to study at Oxford, has revealed it to be an authentic Michelangelo.

'Crucifixion With The Madonna, St John And Two Mourning Angels' was believed to have been a work by Marcello Venusti, one of Michelangelo's contemporaries.

"You can immediately see the difference between this work and that of Venusti," Forcellino, who used infra-red techniques to study layers beneath the finished painting, told The Independent.

He writes in his new book 'The Lost Michelangelos' that "no one but Michelangelo could have painted such a masterpiece". The hall bought the painting at a Sotheby's auction in the 1930s.

Forcellino claimed London's National Gallery continued to attribute the work to Venusti 'out of embarrassment' that they had not identified it.

Smile 'the 1st thing men are attracted to in a woman, not cleavage or legs'

LONDON, 11 July—A new study has suggested that a woman's smile is the first thing that attracts men, not cleavage or legs.

According to a UK survey, 28 percent of men actually said that they found 'smile lines' attractive in women, reports the Daily Mail.

Interestingly 52

percent women are disinterested to have their pictures taken in fear of ugly smile.

Celebrity photographer Daniel Kennedy suggested women, who are worried about their smile, to say the words 'oats' or 'plum' to 'create a really sexy shape'.

According to him, a woman should keep the chin down and look up through the eyelashes 'for a face-slimming look' and also must put lip-glosses to highlight their smile.

LONDON, 11 July—Cows suffer from stress when they are separated from their "best friends" even for a short period of time, a scientist has found.

Krista McLennan, who made the discovery while working towards her PhD at Northampton University, believes her findings could help improve milk yields, reports the Daily Mail. She measured the heart rates and cortisol levels of cows to see how they cope when isolated.

Cattle were penned on their own, with their best friend or with another cow they did not know for 30 minutes and their heart rates were measured at 15-second intervals.

The research showed cows were very social animals, which often formed close bonds with friends in their herd. "When heifers have their preferred partner with them, their stress levels in terms of their heart rates are reduced compared with if they were with a random individual," McLennan said.—Internet

The visiting Laotian Prime Minister said it is a pleasure for him and the Laotian delegation to pay a goodwill visit to Myanmar. He thanked Myanmar for its warm welcome and hospitality. The Prime Minister said he honoured the President and the Union Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar for being able to form a new government after successfully holding the general elections in November 2010 in accord with the constitution. He added that he firmly believes the new government under the President's leadership will bring fruitful results to the Myanmar people and make greater contribution to the international and regional peace, stability and development cooperation. Lao PDR strongly supports Myanmar for its efforts to host the 4th GMS Summit at the end of 2011, XXVII SEA Games in 2013 and 24th and 25th ASEAN Summits in 2014. As Lao PDR will host Asia-Europe Summit in late November of 2012, the Prime Minister said he would like to invite the President to attend the summit. The existing friendly relations and close cooperation between the two countries not only bring about tangible results but also further strengthen the international and regional peace, stability and development cooperation.

Moreover, the President and the Laotian Prime Minister explained developments of both countries and exchanged views on bilateral relations, security cooperation along Mekong Basin, border region peace and stability, seeking ways to promote bilateral trade, bilateral cooperation in culture, tourism, religious affairs and education, mutual cooperation in international and regional issues and ways to promote the existing friendly relations.

They also exchanged views on the efforts of Lao PDR for the success of poverty alleviation and rural development in accord with 2015 UN Millennium Development Goals and transforming the nation into an industrialized one in 2020 and Myanmar's efforts for implementation of the eight tasks for rural development and poverty alleviation.

committee, prize winners and distinguished guests.

First, Union Minister for Immigration and Population U Khin Yi delivered an inaugural address. He said: The World Population Day is commemorated on 11 July every year. It is an annual event celebrated throughout the world to raise awareness on the importance of population and socio-economic development. Myanmar attaches great importance to the World Population Day commemorative ceremony and it has been holding this ceremony consecutively for 22 times, including this occasion to underline our commitment to the goals, objectives and activities of the United Nations, as a member of family of nations.

This year, world population day will kick off the campaign "The World at 7 Billion" as the world population will reach seven billion on 31 October 2011.

"Whether we can live together on a happy and healthy planet" will depend on the choices and decisions we make now. Thus, we need to make a good decision for the future of our planet. Investing in young people, especially adolescent girls, is one of the smartest investments a country can make. With health, education and opportunities, they will be equipped to contribute fully to society.

The 1994 International Conference on Population and Development held in Cairo called on all countries to take steps to meet the reproductive health needs of their populations and to provide, by 2015, universal access to a full range of safe and reliable methods. Goals and targets on reproductive health services such as reducing child mortality, to improving maternal health, combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases and developing a global partnership for development are also included in the United Nations Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

It is important to meet the needs of seven billion people while protecting the intricate balance of nature that sustain life. While more developed countries have higher proportions of older persons, less developed countries are ageing at a faster pace, with less time to prepare.

If older persons remain active in the workforce, they can contribute much to their families, communications and countries. This may require a rethinking of work, family and institutional arrangements.

National Level Workshop on Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation was conducted on 20 May 2011 aiming at improving the living conditions for rural people and alleviating poverty by creating economic opportunities for them. After extensive discussions at the workshop, the eight tasks were chosen to be implemented for rural development and poverty alleviation. In Myanmar, rural people who make up about 70 % of the population are the main work force, and the majority of them engaged in agriculture and livestock farming. Therefore, necessary arrangements were made to boost the production of goods and economic development of rural areas.

While endeavouring to promote its own nation-building development tasks, Myanmar will be enthusiastically cooperating with the nations of the world in promoting universal access to reproductive health. In the new State Constitution includes the rights of mothers, children and pregnant women and the right of every citizen to health care services in line with the National Health Policy.

In Myanmar, youths are regarded as the strength of the nation and a most valuable treasure. The government is therefore paying great attention to the all-round development of our young people. While a comprehensive health programme including health education programme for youth is promoted nation-wide, our education system is guiding our young people to the path of high moral standards as well as nurturing them to meet the challenges of life.

Like other countries, the rate of elderly has been increasing and is estimated to comprise about 9 % of the population by 2015. We will continue to make every effort to maintain the existing traditions of elderly care and to raise public awareness of the important role older persons play in the society. In addition, we will mobilize government and private agencies, NGOs and community to actively participate in caring for the older persons, and to promote health care services for the elderly. Let us all aspire with the noble aim to promote the quality of life of the individuals and families, thus creating a better, healthier and happier world at seven billion.

Wales' first solar park powers up in Pembrokeshire

LONDON, 11 July—The first solar park in Wales is expected to start converting sunlight into electricity later at the Rhosygilwen estate in Pembrokeshire. Almost 10,000 solar panels have been imported from the United States and are placed in 12 lines in a six-acre field. The £2.5m investment will be onstream three weeks before the UK government lowers the subsidy for large-scale solar energy investors. The site's owner Western Solar still hopes to double its size.

It is run by Dr Glen Peters who owns Rhosygilwen mansion and art centre with his family. He said: "There are 10,000 panels here. They are very cutting edge from the States. They are thin film, particularly suited to our climate here of largely cloudy skies." He has planning consent for a development twice the size but had to rethink his plans.—Internet

Drunken woman enters home, takes pug

Police in Alaska said a drunken woman broke into a 77-year-old woman's house and walked off with a pug when the homeowner confronted her.

Anchorage police said the homeowner told them she awoke at about 5:45 am Tuesday to find the woman standing in her bedroom, the Anchorage Daily News reported on Thursday. The woman told police the suspect, identified as Sherry Smith, 39, told her she was a friend of her daughter and the woman replied by saying she does not have a daughter.

Police said the homeowner guided the woman toward the door and the suspect grabbed one of the homeowner's two pugs while leaving. The homeowner followed the woman, who was on foot, in her Ford F-150 pickup truck and repeatedly asked the woman to give the dog back. She said the suspect finally shoved the pug through the window of her vehicle as officers were arriving. Smith, who police said appeared drunk, was arrested on charges of first-degree burglary and second-degree theft.

Frying pan ends Florida couple's argument

Florida officials say a domestic beef over razors in the shower ended with a woman's arrest for allegedly hitting her boyfriend on the head with a frying pan.

Mary Batson, 22, of North Naples, was arrested for battery after she allegedly conked her live-in boyfriend in the head during a noisy row that began over his refusal to let her borrow a razor.

The Naples Daily News said Sunday that

Batson denied striking the victim, although she admitted she slammed the pan down on the counter during the argument.

Arrest reports said the dispute Thursday escalated quickly from argument to slapstick. The victim claimed Batson scratched him on the chest and face before going for the cookware.

Canadian uses forklift to remove squad car

A Canadian man was charged with assault after he allegedly shoved a sheriff's car off his property with a forklift, police said.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police said Wilfred Doyle, 45, of St Andrews was charged with mischief and obstructing a police officer, as well as assault with a deadly weapon, after the run-in at his home last week.

The Mounties told the Canadian Broadcasting Corp the law enforcement officer went to Doyle's place on Prince Edward Island to serve him a court order.

Doyle turned the routine process into a confrontation when he fired up his tractor, which was equipped with a forklift, and pushed the car out of his yard.

Doyle was released after spending a night in jail.

Javier Bardem to play villian in 'James Bond 23'

WELLINGTON, 11 July —It's official. Javier Bardem, who is known for his roles in 'Eat Pray Love' and 'No Country For Old Men', has been cast as the central baddie in the upcoming movie 'James Bond 23'.

The Spanish actor will join Dame Judi Dench and Naomie Harris.

'Harry Potter' star Ralph Fiennes is also reportedly confirmed for a role in Bond 23, to be directed by British filmmaker Sam Mendes, reports Stuff.co.nz. Fiennes, who played evil wizard Lord Voldemort in the hit franchise, is said to be portraying a 'darkly complex' character.

Meanwhile, troubled star Amy Winehouse is said to be in the running to sing the new Bond theme tune.

Bond composer David Arnold originally wanted the singer to perform the theme song for 'Quantum of Solace', but Winehouse had to pull out due to her personal issues.

'James Bond 23' is scheduled to begin production later this year and is expected to hit cinemas in October 2012.—Internet

Isner wins Newport title after skipping wedding

NEW YORK, 11 July—Big-serving American John Isner captured his second career ATP title after skipping his brother's wedding to beat Belgium's Olivier Rochus 6-3 7-6 in the Hall of Fame Tennis Championship final on Sunday. The towering American blasted 22 aces past Rochus, 38 centimetres (1 foot 3 inches) shorter than his opponent, to become the first top seed to win the grasscourt tournament in Newport in 35 years. Isner took a late wildcard into the event and missed his brother's wedding on Saturday but he said it was worth it.

Montgomerie fails to qualify for British Open

INVERNESS, 11 July—The British Open will be without Colin Montgomerie next week for the first time since 1989 after the veteran Scot ran out of steam at mit to a breathalyzer test at a Rio de Janeiro roadblock, according to reports by news site G1. Quoting official sources, G1 said the former player refused to take the breathalyzer test during a traffic stop performed in the early hours of Sunday by local authorities. As a result, Romario will have to pay a fine of about $600 and cannot drive for five days.

Romario wrote on his Twitter account that it is "nothing new" that he does not drink alcohol and said: "Like any citizen, I have the right to refuse" to do the breathalyzer test. "I am 100% in favor of not drinking alcohol. Numbers and statistical research have found that greatly diminishes the number of accidents," continued the former footballer. Now a lawmaker, he added that at the time he was stopped he was returning from a party at his mother's home with his wife and children.

the Scottish Open on Sunday.

The former Europe Ryder Cup captain needed a top-five finish at Castle Stuart to stand a chance of making next week's tournament in Sandwich, and he briefly held a share of the lead following a birdie at the par-5 No 6.

However, a disastrous double-bogey on the short 11th—which came after he missed the green with his tee shot and then fluffed a short chip—not only cost him a shot at victory in the Highlands but also an opportunity to seal his Open place.

"It was going well and then I sort of ran out of puff," he said. "It was always too soon, too short. So there you go. A week off next week."—Internet

Falcao fires Colombians through to Copa last eight

SANTA FE, 11 July—Colombia marched into the quarter-finals of the Copa America on Sunday, becoming the first team to book their passage, after a 2-0 win over Bolivia. Porto hitman Radamel Falcao put the contest to bed in the first half hour with a crisp opener on 14 minutes and a penalty after 26 minutes as the Colombians hit the ground running.

The cafeteros had already seen off Costa Rica and had the better of a draw with hosts Argentina and completed an impressive first phase showing against a Boliv-

After Falcao's rip-roaring opening, Adrian Ramos, Freddy Guarin and Dayro Moreno all went close for the Colombians as they threatened to overwhelm their rivals before they took their foot off the accelerator after the break.

Tour rest day welcome after crash carnage

SAINT-FLOUR, 11 July—Riders sprawled over the course. One wound up in a ditch, another with a busted leg. Everyone, it seemed, needed ice: A rest day couldn't come soon enough. The bleeding and battered Tour de France field endured its worst day yet of crashes, a strange and dangerous ordeal in which even a car took out riders.

Kyle Busch wins inaugural Cup race at Kentucky

SPARTA, 11 July—Kyle Busch figured the best way to beat the traffic on Saturday night at Kentucky Speedway. He simply stayed out of it. Busch rolled to victory in the inaugural Sprint Cup race at the 1.5-mile oval, pulling away from Jimmie Johnson on a restart with three laps to go to collect his third victory of the season and jump into the points lead with two months to go before NASCAR's Chase for the championship begins. "This is cool man," Busch said. "This is right up there with the best of them." For now anyway. The way Busch is surging, better days almost certainly lay ahead.

Track officials hope they can say the same for their venue, which experienced some ugly growing pains during its first step into the spotlight. A massive traffic jam made the trip in a tortuous test of patience. Even the drivers weren't immune. Denny Hamlin nearly missed the driver's meeting while getting stuck in the snarl.—Internet

No fanfare as Germany's Prinz bows out

WOLFSBURG, 11 July—Germany's record goal-scorer Birgit Prinz admitted her women's World Cup exit was not the end to her career she had in mind as the hosts were stunned 1-0 by Japan in the quarter-finals.

The defending champions were floored when Japan substitute Karina Maruyama drilled in the winning goal in the 108th minute to break German hearts in extra time and silence the sell-out crowd of 26,067 on Saturday.

Having lifted the World Cup in China four years ago when Germany defended their title amidst jubilant celebrations, Prinz cut a forlorn figure on Germany's bench after losing her place in the group stages.—Internet

Unlikely champs par for course at British Open

SANDWICH, 11 July—As workers pieced together plastic tables and hammered the last tents into place Sunday, Aaron Baddeley got an idea of just how punishing a British Open course can be when you don't hit the ball straight. Coming to the final hole of a friendly practice game with fellow Aussie Geoff Ogilvy, Baddeley sprayed his tee shot far to the right, toward the sponsor suites that were still being spruced up before the crowds descend on Royal St George's.

Baddeley ignored the vacuum cleaner humming in the background and hopped over two metal barricades, hoping to locate the ball in the tall, thick grass. No chance. "This course rewards someone who's playing really well," Ogilvy said. "The guy who's playing the best is going to win."

England coach Powell slams penalty 'cowardice'

England's Faye White misses her penalty during the quarter-final against France on Saturday.

England women's coach Hope Powell has accused her players of "cowardice" after she struggled to find volunteers for the penalty shoot-out.—INTERNET

LONDON, 11 July—England women's coach Hope Powell has accused her players of "cowardice" after she struggled to find volunteers for the World Cup quarter-final penalty shoot-out against France.

The England women's team, mirroring the penalty failures of their male compatriots, lost the shoot-out in Leverkusen in what could be Powell's last match after 13 years in charge before she takes up a new position within the Football Association.

Claire Rafferty, a 22-year-old full-back who had come on after 80 minutes to make her World Cup debut, and Faye White missed the fourth and fifth penalties respectively to seal England's exit.

An angry Powell told the Guardian: "Three times I had to ask before anyone stepped forward. 'Where are you?' I was thinking, and then a young kid (Rafferty) is the first to put her hand up.

"And Kelly Smith was dying on her feet but she stepped up and took one. You've got to want to take a penalty, but other players should have come forward and they didn't. That's weak, it's cowardice."—Internet

President U Thein Sein welcomes visiting Laotian Prime Minister Mr. Thongsing Thammavong

President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar U Thein Sein and Prime Minister of Lao PDR Mr. Thongsing Thammavong inspect the Guards of Honour.—MNA

NAY PYI TAW, 11 July — A welcoming ceremony to Prime Minister of Lao People's Democratic Republic Mr. Thongsing Thammavong by President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar U Thein Sein took place at President Office here this evening.

President U Thein Sein extended welcome to the Laotian Prime Minister on PM's arrival at the President Office from Myat Taw Win Hotel in a motorcade.

After taking position on dais, the two leaders took the salute of the Guards of Honour while the State band played national anthems of both countries.

Laotian Prime Minister Mr. Thongsing Thammavong then inspected the Guards of Honour and then presented his entourage to President U Thein Sein.

President U Thein Sein presented Union Minister for Home Affairs Lt-Gen Ko Ko, Union Minister for Defence Maj-Gen Hla Min, Union Minister for Foreign Affairs U Wunna Maung Lwin, Union Minister at President Office U

Thein Nyunt, Union Minister for Construction U Khin Maung Myint, Union Minister for National Planning and Economic Development U Tin Naing Thein, Union Minister for Transport U Nyan Tun Aung and Union
