Love your Library

Literacy is a capability for human beings. All the people regardless of age are to relentlessly learn education and study knowledge.

Libraries have been established for all the literates to constantly read literature, raise reading habit and have easy access to publications. So far, over 50,000 libraries have been established across the nation. Concerted efforts are being made to open more libraries in some villages.

Nowadays, the literates have access to various books and publications at libraries and they promote reading habit. Their activities contribute to promotion of literature and knowledge. Strenuous efforts are to be made for sustainable development of libraries.

It is necessary to fulfill the requirements of library buildings, furniture and new publications. Priority is to be given to mobilizing the active participation of townships for sustainable development of libraries and achieving success in the tasks.

The Myanmar Library Foundation provides assistance for already-opened libraries and distributes books and publications free of charge. The funds of the foundation are to be spent on construction of library buildings, improving reading skills and providing publications on priority.

With collaborative efforts, the State and regional authorities, local people, wellwishers, entrepreneurs and organizations are to strive for ensuring durability of the Myanmar Library Foundation. In fact, only then will progress of the Myanmar Library Foundation contribute much to durability and development of libraries.

Three mortar rounds hit Baghdad Green Zone

BAGHDAD, 13 July— Three mortar rounds struck Baghdad's Green Zone on Tuesday afternoon and huge columns of black smoke were billowing from the scene, an Interior Ministry source said.

There were no immediate reports of casualties by the blasts in the zone, which houses some of the Iraqi government offices and the US embassy, an Interior Ministry source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

The barrage came a day after the new US defence Leon Panetta met with US military commanders in Iraq and held talks with top Iraqi officials about whether some US troops will remain in Iraq after the deadline of the end of 2011.

The heavily fortified Green Zone has been frequently targeted by militants' mortar and rocket attacks. The roughly 10 square km zone is located on the west bank of the Tigris River which bisects the Iraqi capital.

Israeli airplanes attack Gaza after rocket fire

GAZA, 13 July— Israeli airplanes carried out an airstrike in the Gaza Strip early Wednesday after militants fired missiles into Israel, witnesses and security sources said.

The airplanes fired two rockets at a car wash garage in northern Gaza Strip, causing severe damage in the place and smashing windows of nearby houses, the witnesses said.

A woman was slightly wounded in the leg by a flying piece of glass, said Adham Abu Selmia, an emergency official.

Russia's Soyuz sends six US satellites to orbit

WASHINGTON, 13 July—The death of a comet that plunged into the sun was captured on camera this month for the first time in history, scientists say.

The comet met its fiery demise on 6 July when it zoomed in from behind the sun and melted into oblivion as it crashed into the star. It was NASA's Solar Dynamics Observatory (SDO), a satellite orbiting Earth that studies the sun, which witnessed the comet's death-blow. One of the SDO spacecraft's high-definition imagers "actually spotted a sun-grazing comet as it disintegrated over about a 15 minute period (6 July, 2011), something never observed before," SDO officials said.

Comets have been spotted near the sun before, but last week's object was the first to be observed in real-time as it disappeared.

"Given the intense heat and radiation, the comet simply evaporated away completely," SDO officials said.

The comet was a type known to astronomers as a sun-grazing comet because its path brought it extremely close to the sun. The Solar and Heliospheric Observatory, a joint NASA-European Space Agency spacecraft, also spotted the comet's demise and recorded a video of the event. "This is one of the brightest sun-grazers SOHO has recorded, similar to the Christmas comet of 1996," SOHO project scientist Bernhard Fleck said in a statement.

SOHO officials said that, because of the angle of the comet's orbit, it passed across the front half of the sun and appeared to brighten as it struck hotter particles above the solar surface.

A budget-friendly Android smartphone to keep your wallet happy

NEW YORK, 13 July—After the release of its flagship Droid 3 Android smartphone, Motorola Mobility is now pushing a smartphone that caters to the opposite end of the market, the bright and budget-friendly XT316.

"With a fun, beautiful design and a great package of social media options, Motorola XT316 gives busy users the smartphone experience they crave at a price they can afford," said Fei Liu, senior vice president, Mass Market Consumer Products, Motorola Mobility.

"With the combination of the physical QWERTY keyboard, the touchscreen display and access to the entertaining apps and games, the Motorola XT316 outperforms other low cost mobile devices."

The BlackBerry-esque XT316 features a full QWERTY keyboard, a 2.8" QVGA touchscreen display, a 3MP camera, an FM radio with RDS support, WiFi, GPS and up to eight hours of talk time.

A study conducted by IDG and released on 11 July found that two out of three people worldwide use a smartphone for personal or business purposes.

With the arrival of low-cost smartphones such as the XT316, consumers no longer have to make the choice between a less capable feature phone or a restrictively expensive smartphone.

The XT316 is available now in China for 1,498 RMB (¥165).

Cricket partners with Sprint for 3G Modems

LONDON, 13 July—Cricket Wireless today announced nationwide 3G coverage for its USB modem and hotspot products, mostly using the Sprint network.

The modem deal is part of Cricket's nationwide roaming agreement with Sprint, which the two companies signed in August 2010. The agreement doesn't make Cricket a national carrier. The company still only sells service in about a third of the country, and will cut people off if they use too much data outside Cricket's home network.

Last year, Cricket said it would start selling its phones nationwide in Target, Wal-Mart, and Best Buy, using Sprint's network where Cricket's own network isn't available. But that hasn't happened yet.

In exchange for the new national coverage, Cricket's 3G modem rates are going up by $5 per month. That makes its plans $45 per month for 2.5GB, $55 for 5GB, or $65 for 7.5GB without a contract. That's slightly less expensive than Virgin Mobile, which offers 2.5GB for $50 without a contract. But it isn't as good a deal as Sprint partner Clear, which has a $55 no-contract plan with 5GB of 3G and also unlimited 4G WiMAX.

Sprint has the biggest wholesale business of the four major carriers, with many smaller carriers piggybacking on its network.

Cricket once offered USB modems for much less money monthly than other wireless carrier charged, advertising its service as an alternative home connection for folks without DSL or cable. But the company has backed away from that premise in recent years, as it's seen the heavy demands home users can make on a wireless network.

Cricket has offered 3G roaming on the Sprint network for owners of its smartphones since October 2010.

In our Fastest Mobile Networks tests, we found Cricket's and Sprint's speeds to be slower than other 3G and 4G systems, but still much faster than 2G. Cricket's native speeds averaged 600kbps down while Sprint's averaged 480kbps down nationwide.

Contact allergies associated with lower rates of some cancers

HELLERUP, 13 July—The immune systems of people with contact allergies may be primed to protect against certain types of cancer, including breast and brain cancers, new research suggests.

Contact allergies occur due to direct contact with chemicals and common metals such as nickel.

In the new study, researchers looked at almost 17,000 Danish adults who were tested for contact allergies between 1984 and 2008. About one-third (35 percent) tested positive for at least one contact allergy. Women were more likely than men to have a contact allergy — 41 percent versus 26 percent.

When the study authors examined cancer cases among the participants over the long term, they found that men and women with contact allergies had significantly lower rates of breast and non-melanoma skin cancer, and women with contact allergies also had lower rates of brain cancer compared to those without contact allergies.

But people with contact allergies had higher rates of bladder cancer, which may be due to higher levels of chemical metabolites accumulated in the blood, the researchers suggested.

The study, by Kaare Engkilde of the National Allergy Research Centre at Copenhagen University, Gentofte Hospital in Hellerup, Denmark, and colleagues, is published in the 12 July online edition of the journal BMJ Open. The findings did not allow the researchers to come to any conclusions about cause and effect, and more study is needed, they noted in a journal news release.

American men with cancer more likely to die than women

LOS ANGELES, 13 July—Men who are diagnosed with cancer are more likely to die from the disease than women, due to a higher initial risk and later detection, US government research showed.

The National Cancer Institute study looked at a database of 36 different types of cancer from 1977 to 2006.

It found the highest male-to-female mortality rate ratios for cancers like lip, where 5.5 men died for each woman patient, and esophageal, where 4 men died for each woman patient.

For lung cancer, which is the leading cause of cancer deaths for both men and women, the research found 2.3 male deaths for each female death.

The main reason for the difference is that men are more at risk of developing cancer to begin with, according to Michael Cook, an investigator in the division of cancer epidemiology and genetics at the NCI and the study's lead investigator.

The average lifetime chance that a man will develop lung cancer is about 1 in 13, compared to 1 in 16 for a woman, according to the American Cancer Society. American men are more likely than women to have advanced disease by the time their cancer is diagnosed, Cook said.

He said gender differences in exposure to carcinogens — including tobacco smoke and viral infections — play a role in the rate disparity. The study also cited "universal" mechanisms, such as sex chromosomes and hormones, that may contribute to observed sex differences in cancer incidence.—Reuters

Chinese pilot flying around the world stops in Xi'an

XI'AN, 13 July—The first-ever Chinese citizen to fly a private plane around the world stopped in Xi'an, capital of the northwestern Shaanxi Province Monday and received a warm welcome.

Chen Wei, a Chinese citizen living in the United States, landed at Neifu Airport, a general aviation airport at an industrial base in Yanliang in the suburbs of Xi'an Monday morning.

"I wish to share the joy and inspiration of the flight with my country-men," Chen told the crowd who welcomed him at the airport.

Chen, born in

Changsha, capital of the central Hunan Province in 1971, is founder and chief executive of Memphis-based Sun-shine Enterprise, an importer of Chinese scaffolding and hoists.

His dream for a round-the-world flight began two years ago, spurred by the facts that more than 100 individuals from 28 countries had taken the challenge but none was Chinese.

Chen's flight began in Memphis on 22 May and will cover more than 40 cities in 21 countries and regions. The planned 40,000 km voyage will take about 10 weeks.

Mexico's federal police capture 20 drug gang suspects

MEXICO CITY, 13 July—Mexican federal police captured 20 suspected members of the drug gang Knights Templar after the group sparked a wave of violence in the western part of the country, the public security ministry said on Tuesday.

The ministry said in a statement that the police arrested the alleged gang members as they were driving in a convoy to a meeting in the municipality of Apatzingan, 500 km west of Mexico City.

The Knights Templar stole and torched vehicles across the western state of Michoacan last week in retaliation to crackdown by federal police.

The ministry sent an additional 1,800 federal police officers to Michoacan on Friday to quell the violence and capture the Knights Templar leader Servando Gomez, also known as "La Tuta," who still remains at large.

The Knights Templar is a newly-founded drug gang which was originally part of the powerful cartel La Familia, whose leader Jose de Jesus Mendez Vargas was arrested by federal police last month.

Death toll in central China fire climbs to 14

WUHAN, 13 July — The death toll in Tuesday's fire that ripped through a two-story warehouse in central China's Wuhan City has climbed to 14, the local government said Wednesday.

Fire fighters retrieved two bodies from the charred building at 9:40 pm, said Ding Shisong, director of the city government's emergency response office.

The blaze, which is believed to have been triggered by a short circuit in an electrical outlet on the warehouse's first floor, began at around 9:25 am. About 170 firefighters spent two hours to put out the fire.—Xinhua

Work continues to clean up oil spill in US river

LOS ANGELES, 13 July—Work continued on Tuesday to clean up an oil spill in the Yellowstone River in the US state of Montana, but only one to five percent of the oil is expected to be recovered because much of the oil was swept away by the river, authorities said.

On 1 July, a break occurred in a 12-inch pipeline owned by Texas-based ExxonMobil company which resulted in release of crude oil into the Yellowstone River approximately 20 miles (36 kilometres) upstream of Billings, Montana.

The US Environmental Protection Agency reported an estimated 1,000 barrels of oil entered the river, which was in flood stage, before the pipeline was cut off. To assist the cleanup effort, California Governor Gerry Brown said his state has dispatched a team of experts to Montana.

The deployment of California Department of Fish and Game (DFG) staff was approved after the State of California received a request from the State of Montana for mutual aid assistance following a pipeline break, the governor said.—Xinhua

First UK footie rulebook to be auctioned for 1.2 m pounds

LONDON, 13 July—The first football rulebook is set to fetch £1.2million at auction this week - and it reveals a funny old game.

According to The Sun, the world's oldest club, Sheffield FC, which is now selling the 1858 laws to raise cash, laid down the rules. They bear little similarity to the modern game.

Matches then lasted for two hours. There 20 players a side. Handballs were allowed. It was also OK to catch the ball provided it had not touched the ground. And charging was considered fair.

The 11 laws—known as the Sheffield Rules—were an attempt to regulate a game that was still halfway between football and rugby.

They formed the basis for the FA's Laws of the Game in 1863—the blueprint for modern football.

Goal kicks arrived in 1869 and corners in 1871. Refs got whistles in 1878 and penalties followed in 1891.

Stoppage time was also introduced in 1891 after a bizarre match between Stoke and Aston Villa.—Internet

Tiny snails are able to survive digestion by birds

LONDON, 13 July—Some snails survive after being eaten by birds, Japanese researchers have found.

Researchers found that 15 percent of the snails eaten by Japanese white-eye or mejiro birds survived digestion and were found alive in the birds' droppings.

This evidence suggests that bird predation could be a key factor in how snail populations spread, reports the BBC.

While it has long been known that birds that eat fruit can spread a plant's seeds through their droppings, the study points to some invertebrates being spread the same way.

In the lab scientists fed the birds with the snails to find out whether any survived the digestive process.

"We were surprised that a high rate, about 15 percent, of snails were still alive after passing through the gut of [the] birds," explained researcher Shinichiro Wada.

"This is the first study showing that birds can indeed transport a substantial [number of] micro land snails in their gut alive."

The main factor allowing the snails to survive being eaten is their small size, according to the scientists.

At an average of 2.5mm the micro snails fared much better than larger species in previous studies whose shells were severely damaged when eaten by birds, they added.

Power failure delays 29 trains on China's high-speed railway

SHANGHAI, 13 July—A power failure has delayed 29 trains on China's newly built high-speed railway linking Beijing and Shanghai, shortly after a similar incident halted 11 of the railway's trains two days ago, sources with the Shanghai Railway Bureau confirmed Tuesday.

The railway's power was cut off at about 11 am near the City of Suzhou in east China's Anhui Province and was resumed two hours later after repairs were completed, the bureau said in a statement. The Ministry of Railways made an apology on its website to passengers who were affected by the delays.

The power failure was the second within three days after a similar incident delayed 11 trains on Sunday night. A Shanghai-bound bullet train broke down at 6:10 pm Sunday near east China's Shandong Province and resumed operation about an hour and a half later. Railway authorities said the power failure was caused by thunderstorms. The Beijing-Shanghai high-speed railway went into operation on 30 June. Chinese firm to gain world's focus through Bay Bridge project

SHANGHAI, 13 July—Chinese machinery firm Zhenhua Heavy Industry Co Ltd (ZPMC) wants to change nation's manufacturing landscape by taking up the challenging global infrastructure projects.

ZPMC has just finished manufacturing the final four pieces of fabricated steel for the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge project, which is due to open in 2013.

The 50,000 tons of steel, with a contract value exceeding 350 million dollars, are part of the 7.2 billion dollars Bay Bridge project.

The project includes reconstruction of the eastern span, which was damaged in the 1989 earthquake.

The new section would be able to resist quakes of up to magnitude 8 on the Richter scale.

The company beat strong rivals from Japan, South Korea and Western Europe to win the bid for the Bay Bridge project in 2006.

The Bay Bridge project has a global profile

"and it is also a milestone for Zhenhua in entering the world's major bridge construction" sector, ZPMC President Kang Xuezheng said.

"I am here to announce that we are qualified and confident of constructing more sophisticated steel bridges and building our presence in the world market," the China Daily quoted Kang, as saying.—Internet

LONDON, 13 July—A woman returned to her Cumbrian home to find a near perfect imprint of an owl on her window. The bird had apparently crashed into the window of Sally Arnold’s Kendal home, leaving the bizarre image — complete with eyes, beak and feathers. Bee-hauling truck crash creates a buzz

A semi-trailer truck tipped over along a highway in Idaho, spilling more than 14 million bees and a quantity of honey across the pavement, authorities say.

The truck, transporting honeybees to North Dakota from Bakersfield, Calif, crashed just north of Last Chance in Island Park, Idaho, about 4:30 pm Sunday, Idaho Falls' KPVI-TV reported.

The Fremont County Sheriff's office received many 911 calls alerting it to the accident, saying everyone at the scene was stung more than once, though none were seriously injured.

Firefighters sprayed fire foam on the bees and the truck before being able to access the wreckage.

Authorities put out a warning that there were still high numbers of bees in the area.

German police nab runaway elephants at bus stop

Two runaway circus elephants in Germany surprised passersby and police by showing up at a bus stop during a brief bid for freedom, officials in Hanover said Tuesday. Dunia, a 40-year-old Indian elephant, and her counterpart Daela, a 25-year-old African elephant, were apprehended by police near the western city of Hanover over the weekend nonchalantly munching on tree leaves and looking for all the world as if they were waiting for the bus.

"It was simply an unlucky situation for the circus," Hanover police spokesman Heiko Steiner said. "The two elephants were quite cooperative and peaceful. Everyone was amused." If the two were trying to make an escape, they were not going far, Steiner said. The police station is only a stone's throw from the bus stop, which is out of use during the summer school holiday.

James Franco wanted to be part of 'Twilight' for Yale project

WASHINGTON, 13 July—'127 Hours' star James Franco has revealed that he was desperate to get a role in Twilight sequel

'Breaking Dawn' because he thought it would be a great connection to a friend's arty film project.

Though the actor-director told his agent to get him 'anything' in the film, unfortunately he ended up in vain as the cast was full and there was no part for Franco.

"It was supposed to be part of a multimedia project at Yale (university)," Contactmusic quoted him as telling the Playboy Magazine. "I was working with a Yale undergraduate who had written an autobiographical play about putting on a theatrical production of Twilight, in which I was a character.

"So I was interested in Twilight because I was going to be part of that play. I thought what a great connection it would be if I were also involved with the real Twilight," he added.—Internet

Danielle Lloyd recreates a 'Demi Moore', mulls post-baby surgery for curves

LONDON, 13 July—Pregnant model Danielle Lloyd might have felt sexy while posing nude for a photoshoot and flaunting her baby bump like Demi Moore, but she has revealed her plans to undergo a surgery in order to get her perfect figure back after the birth of her second child. The 27-year-old brunette posed wearing nothing but her make-up and jewellery in the latest issue of Closer, just like Moore did in her iconic naked shoot for Vanity Fair magazine in 1991. However, the Scouse model insisted that she would be undergoing a surgery to regain her prebaby body after the birth in 10 weeks time. "I'll get a trainer and go to the gym at least three times a week once the baby arrives. I've basically been pregnant for the past two years, so I can't wait to get my body back," the Daily Mail quoted her as saying.

"I'd like to be 9st and a size 8 before my wedding. If worst comes to worst, I'll consider lipo!" she said. "My boobs get so big during pregnancy, I've got stretch marks and saggy skin. I want that removed and then a lift. I'd also like a chemical peel to even out my skin due to pregnancy pigmentation," she added. The Celebrity 'Big Brother' star is expecting the child with footballer fiance Jamie O'Hara, 24, in September.—Internet

2011 FIFA Women's World Cup: Semi-final

Japan beats Sweden 3-1 in semi-final; to face US in Sunday final FRANKFURT, 14 July—Captain Homare Sawa redeemed herself from a huge error by scoring the go-ahead goal in a 3-1 victory over Sweden which put Japan in the World Cup final against the United States.

On top of that, Nahomi Kawasumi rewarded her surprise call-up in the starting lineup with two goals which more than compensated for the early score of Sweden's Josefine Oqvist. In a battle of Japan's fine skills against the thrust and hustle of Sweden, the match totally turned in the second half when Kawasumi caught Hedvig Lindahl off her line and lobbed her from 35 meters for the third goal, one of the best in a tournament full of excellent strikes. Sweden, a perennial power in women's foot-ball, never gave up but it was the rising force of Asian football, Japan, which reached its first World Cup final.—Internet

MOENCHENGLADBACH, 13 July—The United States is in the World Cup final for the first time since it last won the title in 1999, and once again Abby Wambach came up big for these Americans, scoring in a 3-1 victory over France on Wednesday.

Wambach broke a tense tie with a monstrous header — what else? — off Lauren Cheney's corner kick in the 79th minute. Cheney delivered the ball perfectly to the far post, and Wambach jumped over the scrum and pushed the ball past French goalkeeper Berangere Sapowicz. It was Wambach's third goal of the tournament and 12th of her career, tying her with fellow American Michelle Akers for third on the all-time World Cup scoring list.

Alex Morgan added an insurance goal in the 82nd, the first for the World Cup rookie. The Americans will now play Japan in Sunday's final in Frankfurt.—Internet

Spain's Ferrer beats Fish to close out US

AUSTIN, 13 July—Everything was set up for Andy Roddick and the Americans to win.

A Davis Cup quarter-final against Spain set deep in the heart of Texas, a hard surface that was supposed to complement their big hitters and a rowdy crowd of 16,000 ready to cheer them on.

Spain was even missing superstar Rafael Nadal, who skipped the matches to rest after losing the Wimbledon final.

None of it mattered to the feisty, passionate and inspired Spaniards, who tore through the singles matches undefeated to build an insurmountable 3-1 lead, denying Roddick a chance to win it in front of his hometown fans.

Lefty develops a convenient case of Open amnesia

ANDWICH, 13 July—Let's all welcome a newcomer to the British Open ... Mr. Phil Mickelson of the United States.

Uh, come again?

Phil Mickelson of the US speaks during a press conference ahead of the British Open Golf Championship at Royal St George's golf course in Sandwich, England.—INTERNET

Lefty is hardly an Open rookie. When he tees off Thursday, it will be his 18th appearance in golf's oldest major, which makes him one of the more experienced players in the field.

But Mickelson has developed a convenient case of amnesia this week, preferring to ignore a record that includes only one top-10 finish and more time scuffling than actually contending for the claret jug.

"I'm entering this year kind of like a fresh start," he said on Tuesday.

LONDON, 13 July—Nigeria midfielder John Obi Mikel has welcomed the training regime of new Chelsea manager Andre Villas-Boas. The Portuguese, who at 33 will be the youngest boss in the Premier League, has been charged with wresting back the Premier League title from champions Manchester United after the Blues suffered a season without silverware under experienced Italian manager Carlo Ancelotti last term.

"The new manager has worked really hard on our sharpness and it is going very well," Mikel told Chelsea's website.

"The double sessions are hard but working with the ball makes it so much easier than running all the time, and it is enjoyable as well.—Internet

Witsel leaves Standard Liege to join Benfica

LONDON, 13 July—Belgian international midfielder Axel Witsel has left Standard Liege to join Benfica, the Belgian club announced on Wednesday.

The 22-year-old, who has scored five times in 19 international appearances, has signed a five-year deal with the Lisbon club.

Financial details of the move have not been released, although media reports suggest that Benfica paid a transfer fee of between 7 million and 8 million euros ($9.9m and $11.3m).

Witsel, who had also been linked with a possible move to Manchester United, had been with Standard Liege since he was 10 years old. He helped them to two Belgian championships in 2008 — when he was elected best player in Belgium — and 2009, as well as this year's Belgian Cup. With Eden Hazard (Lille) and Steven Defour (Standard), Witsel is considered one of the great hopes of Belgian football.—Internet
