Hsin Village getting good harvest of cabbage

By De Dai

Thriving cabbage plantation seen in Hsin village, Kalay Township.

Cabbage is a vegetable Myanmar people often consume as a dish or use as an ingredient of a dish or a salad. It has a good taste and is available everywhere at affordable prices. I would like to present successful cabbage farming in Hsin Village, Kalay Township. In an interview, a local farmer said, "Our village does not have any other main source of income. I have grown vegetables for about a couple of decades. About 50 families have about 350 acres of farmlands. In the crop season of about seven months, we grow cabbage and cauliflower three with the triple crop rotation system. In a cabbage harvest, our village sells hundreds of thousands of cabbages. We grow cabbage till the vegetable weighs as heavy as a viss (3.6 lbs), and then we sell it. We don't let a cabbage grow heavier than a viss. If a cabbage is heavier than a viss, we don't make as much profit as we should do because in purchase of cabbages, every cabbage is considered to weigh a viss. Even if a cabbage weighs heavier than a viss, merchants pay the same price. The cabbage price fluctuates a little from month to month and from year to year. Now, the wholesale price of a viss of cabbage is 200 to 250 kyats. And a viss of cauliflower is sold for 500 to 650 kyats.

Farmers can make handsome profits in a short time if they grow vegetables. Therefore, I would like to urge farmers to grow vegetables on a wider scale.

Use scientific methods for good rice harvests

Today, many countries are trying hard for food security with biological methods and nano technology. Myanmar is making systematic methods popular among farmers to keep abreast of other countries in agriculture, get greater shares in the international market and ensure food security.

Now, agriculturists, departmental staff and farmers are working closely to encourage systematic methods and advanced methods of sowing seeds and nurturing saplings on earthworks for boosting production of monsoon rice for 2011-2012 seasons.

In addition, they are giving agricultural talks and conducting demonstrations of using hybrid strains, advanced methods, and proportionate combination of agricultural inputs including organic and inorganic fertilizers and pesticides.

Agricultural experts and companies have set up model farms for farmers' knowledge of gaining better benefits from 14 scientific methods.

At a time when experts and staff of the Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation are rendering all-round assistance for boosting production of monsoon rice for 2011-2012 season, farmers on their part should take their advice and use the methods to achieve the targets.

Afghan security situation worsen?

BEIJING, 19 July — Three members of the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force have been killed by a roadside bomb in eastern Afghanistan. Earlier a close advisor to Afghan President Hamid Karzai, and a member of parliament were killed in different incidents in Kabul.

Two men wearing suicide bomb vests and armed with guns attacked his home in the western Kabul District of Karti Char. One of the attackers was killed before he could detonate his explosives, leaving the other gunman barricaded inside the home. The commander of Kabul's 111 military Corps says both attackers were killed. Taliban spokesman Zabiullah Mujahid has claimed responsibility for the attack on behalf of the militant group.

Two bomb blasts hit Bulgarian opposition parties offices

SOFIA, 19 July— Two explosions occurred in front of the offices of two Bulgarian opposition parties in Sofia during the early hours of Tuesday, the press office of Interior Ministry announced.

The blasts targeted the headquarters of the conservative Order, Law and Justice (OLJ) party and an office of the Democrats for Strong Bulgaria (DSB), party of former Prime Minister Ivan Kostov.

The first explosion was reported at 3:55 am local time (GMT 0155), and the other at 4:20 am (GMT 0220). No casualties have been reported. The police are now searching the sites for possible evidence.

The blasts come just a day after

Bulgaria's centrist and leftist opposition launched in parliament a no-confidence motion against the cabinet of Boyko Borisov, which has hardly any chances of being passed.

The attacks are "an act of helplessness and despair," said the OLJ leadership in a statement.

According to the party, the bomb was planted by the same hand that detonated a bomb outside the office of the Galeria weekly several months earlier.

The OLJ said that the explosions took place on the eve of a European Commission report on Bulgaria and a vote of no-confidence in the government.

NASA's Dawn spacecraft sends back first image of asteroid Vesta

NASA's Dawn spacecraft obtained this image with its framing camera on July 17, 2011.—INTERNET

LOS ANGELES, 19 July— The spacecraft Dawn of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has returned the first close-up image of the giant asteroid Vesta after entering its orbit for the first time last week, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) announced on Monday.

The image taken for navigation purposes shows Vesta in greater detail than ever before, said JPL in Pasadena, California.

On 15 July, Dawn became the first probe to enter orbit around an object in the main asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter.

When Vesta captured Dawn into its orbit, there were approximately 9,900 miles (about 16,000 kilometres) between the spacecraft and the asteroid.

Vesta is 330 miles (about 530 kilometres) in diameter and the second most massive object in the asteroid belt.

Ground- and space-based telescopes have obtained images of Vesta for about two centuries, but they have not been able to see much detail on its surface.

Vesta is thought to be the source of a large number of meteorites that fall to Earth. Vesta and its new NASA neighbour, Dawn, are currently approximately 117 million miles (about 188 million kilometres) away from Earth. The Dawn team will begin gathering science data in August.

Observations will provide unprecedented data to help scientists understand the earliest chapter of the solar system and pave the way for future human space missions, according to JPL.

Cayman iguana said on road to recovery

NEW YORK, 19 July— Conservationists say efforts to save the threatened Grand Cayman blue iguana represent a rarity in conservation: a chance for complete species recovery. The Blue Iguana recovery programme has successfully released more than 500 captive-bred reptiles since the programme's beginning in 2002, when the wild population of iguanas numbered less than two dozen, a release from the Wildlife Conservation Society said Monday.

"For the past several years, we've succeeded in adding hundreds of animals to the wild population, all of which receive a health screening before release," Paul Calle, director of zoological health for the society's Bronx Zoo, said.

The blue iguana is the largest native species on Grand Cayman, growing to more than 5 feet in length and sometimes weighing more than 25 pounds.

"We expect to reach our goal of 1,000 iguanas in managed protected areas in the wild in a few years," Fred Burton, director of the recovery programme, said.

"After that, we will monitor the iguanas to make sure they are reproducing in the numbers needed to maintain the wild population. If we get positive results, we will have succeeded."

Amazon launches Kindle textbook rental service

BEIJING, 19 July— Amazon on Monday launched its Kindle textbook rental service, which allows students to rent "tens of thousands of textbooks", according to Los Angeles Times.

The e-book textbook rental service will help students save as much as 80 percent on some titles.

Amazon said that students can now rent textbooks from 30 to 360 days and can either rent them again or purchase them once the rental period is up.

"Students tell us that they enjoy the low prices we offer on new and used print textbooks. Now we're excited to offer students an option to rent Kindle textbooks and only pay for the time they need—with savings up to 80 percent off the print list price on a 30-day rental," Dave Limp, vice president of Amazon Kindle said, according to PC Magazine.

Rentals can be read on Amazon's Kindle eReaders, and Kindle apps for PCs, as well as smartphones and tablet computers running Apple's iOS, Microsoft Windows Phone 7 and Google's Android operating system.

Rentals also have a clear advantage over physical copies that students' notes and highlighted content will be stored in the Amazon Cloud, and can be accessed if students rent the books again or buy at a later time.

Nepal begins measuring Mt Qomolangma

KATHMANDU, 19 July— Nepal has begun measuring the world's highest mountain, Mt Sagarmatha or Everest (also called Qomolangma).

This is the first time that Nepal is carrying out the measurement of the world's highest peak on its own.

The measurement work will begin taking the Kolkata port of India as the sea level for the measurement and is expected to be completed within two years, according to the Ministry of Land Reform and Management.

Milk, soy proteins may help lower your BP

WASHINGTON, 19 July—Want to lower your blood pressure? Add more soy or low-fat dairy to your diet.

Partly replacing refined carbohydrates with foods or drinks high in soy or milk protein may help prevent and treat high blood pressure, according to a new study.

Study participants who took a milk protein supplement had 2.3 millimetres of mercury (mmHg) lower systolic blood pressure, compared to when they took a refined carbohydrate supplement. Participants who took a soy protein supplement had a 2.0 mmHg lower systolic blood pressure when compared to the refined carbohydrate supplement.

The 352 adults in the study were at increased risk of high blood pressure or had mild cases of the condition. "The systolic blood pressure differences we found are small for the individual, but they are important at the population level," said Jiang He, MD, PhD, lead researcher of the study.

Exposure to second hand smoke may 'lead to hearing loss in adolescents'

WASHINGTON, 19 July—Researchers, led by an Indian origin scientist, have indicated that exposure to second hand smoke (SHS) is associated with increased risk of hearing loss among adolescents.

Studies have associated exposure to second hand smoke prenatally or during childhood with various health conditions, from low birth weight and respiratory infections to behavioural problems and otitis media. Children exposed to SHS are more likely to develop recurrent otitis media, the authors said. "Second hand smoke may also have the potential to have an impact on auditory development, leading to sensorineural hearing loss (SNHL)," they added.

Anil K Lalwani, MD, and colleagues from NYU Langone Medical Centre in New York City examined the risk factors for SNHL, including SHS, among adolescents, stratified by demographic groups.

Ompared with teens who had no SHS exposure, those who were exposed to secondhand smoke exhibited higher rates of low- and high-frequency hearing loss. The rate of hearing loss appeared to be cumulative, increasing with the level of cotinine detected by blood tests. The results also demonstrated that more than 80 percent of participants with hearing loss did not realize they had the impairment.

The study has been published in the Archives of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery.—Xinhua

'Good' cholesterol drug may help diabetics

SYDNEY, 19 July—A drug designed to improve levels of "good" cholesterol may also help control blood sugar in diabetics who are on cholesterol-lowering drugs.

Researchers stumbled on this finding while analysing data from a clinical trial on the drug torcetrapib. The development of this drug was halted five years ago.

Torcetrapib is a cholesterol ester transfer protein (CETP) inhibitor, a type of drug that increases levels of high-density lipoproteins (HDLs, or "good" cholesterol), Journal of the American Heart Association.

The study found that 6,661 people with type 2 diabetes - also known as "adult-onset" diabetes - showed improved blood sugar control when taking torcetrapib along with a statin medication that reduces low-density lipoproteins (LDLs or "bad" cholesterol).

Subjects who took a statin and a placebo did not see such improvements, according to a University of Sydney statement.

Wall Street drops on fear, uncertainty

NEW YORK, 19 July—US stocks declined on Monday as concerns over European and US debt problems weighed heavily on the market.

In the United States, the talks between two parties on the debt ceiling seemed to stall. Ratings agency Moody's suggested Monday Washington should eliminate its statutory limit on government debt to reduce uncertainty among bond holders. The US debt limit should be raised by 2 Aug or the US government will risk defaulting on its debt.

As for euro zone crisis, the result of European banking stress tests on Friday showed that eight banks failed the test with a combined capital shortfall of 2.5 billion euros. Some investors doubted the test might not be tough enough because it excluded the possibility of Greek debt default.

Concerns about the euro zone debt crisis lingered in the market and investors fled to seek refuge. The dollar was lifted by risk-aversion investments as the dollar index gained 0.46 percent to 75.47 in late trading session on Monday.

Gold jumps above 1,600-dollar mark on US, European debt concerns

CHICAGO, 19 July—Gold futures on the COMEX Division of the New York Mercantile Exchange extended its winning streak into a 10th session on Monday, settling above 1,600 dollars per ounce, as concerns about the eurozone debt crisis and the lack of agreement on raising the US debt ceiling prompted investors to flock to the precious metal as a safe haven.

The most active gold contract for August delivery rallied 12.3 dollars, or 0.8 percent, to 1,602.4 dollars per ounce.

Analysts mentioned that there are growing concerns among investors that Europe's debt crisis will spread to Italy and Spain, ahead of an emergency meeting of EU leaders later this week, amid continuing uncertainty over the ability of European officials to agree on a second aid programme for Greece and stop Greece's trouble from spreading to other debt-plagued eurozone nations. Submarine building is strategic RIO DE JANEIRO, 19 July—Building of submarines in Brazil is a strategic issue and a guarantee of sovereignty, said Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff in a weekly radio talk Monday.

Brazil has started building four diesel-powered submarines under an agreement with France which entails technological transfers.

President Dilma Rousseff attended the commencement ceremony last week at the shipyard where four submarines will be built. The first vessel is expected to be ready for delivery by 2016.

"Brazil is becoming part of a small group of countries which have the knowledge and technology to build submarines. The capacity to produce submarines is a strategy for both defense and economic growth," said the president. Ukraine sold 1 bn dollars worth of weapons in 2010

Moscow, 19 July—Ukraine's arms exports in 2010 reached almost $1 billion with the bulk of weapons sold to African countries, a newspaper said.

"The portfolio of contracts signed by state-run arms exporter Ukrspetsexport increased in value from $799.5 in 2009 to $956.7 billion (in 2010)," the Kommersant-Ukraine newspaper reported citing data from the State Service for Export Control.

The leading buyers of Ukrainian weapons were Sudan and the Democratic Republic of Congo. Ukraine sold a total of 250 T-55 and T-72 tanks to both countries.

Sudan also bought Grad multiple rocket launchers, 122-mm 2S1 Gvozdika self-propelled howitzers, 152-mm 1S3 Akatsia self-propelled howitzers, D-30 howitzers, 82-mm mortars and a variety of small arms, including 10,000 Kalashnikov assault rifles.

Cuba records 695 forest fires in drought season

HAVANA, 19 July — The Forest Rangers Corps said Monday Cuba registered a record high of 695 forest fires as over 20,000 hectares were blackened by forest fires from January to May, Cuba's drought season. The drought has been worsened by the lack of rain, which also caused the surge in forest fires this year.

The Rangers Corps also said more than 90 percent of these blazes were caused by human negligence. An estimated 55 percent of the these fires occurred in western Pinar del Rio and eastern Camaguey and Holguin Provinces, as well as the Isle of Youth, a municipality off the south coast of mainland Cuba. The Rangers Corps urged the public to be aware of the fires' impact on the environment and human health.—Xinhua

Tropical storm forms off S Mexico

MEXICO CITY, 19 July— The National Meteorological Service issued a storm warning Monday for the southern Mexican coastal states of Chiapas and Oaxaca.

It said a tropical depression over the Pacific Ocean was forecast to become a hurricane Monday and would bring more rain to the Region.

Forty-two cities and towns in the region have been placed under a state of emergency.

The meteorological service said record rains hit regions along the Gulf of Tehuantepec, with as much rainfall in two days as it normally expects to get in a month.

Large parts of Mexico have been hit by torrential rains since the beginning of July as the arrival of this year's hurricane season coincided with Mexico's rainy season.—Xinhua

Toddler to be discharged from ICU 16 days after high-rise fall

HANGZHOU, 19 July—A toddler who survived a fall from her 10th-floor home in east Zhejiang Province is expected to be discharged from the intensive care unit (ICU) soon, according to her doctor.

Doctors have turned off two drainage tubes from her stomach, and if her condition is good, the final tube will be plugged and she will be transferred from the ICU to the general ward, said Zhang Chenmei, director of Zhejiang Children's Hospital Pediatrics ICU Centre.

"She is now fully conscious and her intestines and stomach are regaining functions," Zhang said.

The two-year-old girl, nicknamed Niu Niu, became unconscious after she fell out of a window at her home near Hangzhou on 2 July.

Wu Juping, a mother of a seven-month-old boy, saw the girl dangling from the window and raced to catch her, preventing the girl from hitting the ground at full force and winning applause from the whole country.

Zhang said that further treatment on Niu Niu would be focused on the sensory disturbance of the left side of her body, bone fractures and injuries in the internal organs.

Zhang is optimistic about her full recovery. "Children's regeneration capacity is more powerful than adults, and she can grow like another healthy kid when she restores her strength," he said.—Xinhua

Now, 10-year-old boy 'racially abused' during junior football match in Australia

CANBERRA, 19 July—Racial vilification has rocked Australian football again with another case surfacing, where a junior footballer is set to face a tribunal over accusations that he racially abused a boy during a football match.

The ten-year-old boy was allegedly called Ronen Jafari, also 10, the 'n-word' while the two were playing under-12s football in Geelong earlier this month.

News.com.au quoted Jafari's stepmother Lucy, as saying that her son was crying and traumatized when she picked him up after the game.

"He was crying, he was red in the face. You know how little kids cry, they breathe in and out (quickly), they can't speak," she said.

His father, Ben, who is of Iranian descent, said the family were was so upset by the matter that they decided to approach the tribunal.

Football and Netball Geelong operations manager Michael Limb said clubs tried to deal with the incident through mediation, but the victim's family were unhappy with the outcome.

Limb said if the child was found guilty, he could face suspension.

This is not the only case of racial vilification hitting Australian football.

Last month, an Aboriginal player from North Bendigo under 15s was racially abused by a spectator during a game against Kangaroo Flat.

The incident sparked off an on-field brawl in the third quarter, and the spectator was banned from games.—Internet

Somali pirates hijack UAE-owned ship

NAIROBI, 19 July—Somali pirates have hijacked United Arab Emirates-owned oil tanker with 16 crew members in the northern Indian Ocean, European Union anti-piracy taskforce said on Monday. EU Naval Force Spokesman Paddy O'Kennedy said the laden UAE-flagged tanker, MV Jubba XX was seized on 16 July on her regular route from the United Arab Emirates to the port of Berbera, Somalia.

"On the morning of 17 July, the vessel was located by a Maritime Patrol aircraft 100 nautical miles north-west of Socotra Island, heading to the northern Somali coast," O'Kennedy said.

He said little information is available at present but it is reported that nine suspected Somali pirates are on board MV Jubba XX. The MV Jubba XX has deadweight of 4,831 tonnes, with a crew of 16 (one Sri Lankan, five Indian, three Bangladeshi, one Sudanese, one Myanmar, one Kenyan and four Somali).

According to the Somalia Report, Maritime Editor, Andrew Mwangura, the vessel is managed and owned by the Sharjah of UAE based Jubba General Trading Company. "She is currently heading towards Somali coast under control of the gun men but a military chopper is monitoring the situation," Mwangura told Xinhua in Mombasa. The vessel, according to the official, is a regular caller to Berbera sea port and operates between UAE and Berbera.

There is no information on the condition of the crew and the vessel was not registered with Maritime Security Centre for Horn of Africa (MSCHOA) at the time of the pirating.

Greek oil tanker seized by pirates off Nigeria

ATHENS, 19 July—A Greek oil tanker with 20 crew members on board had been seized by pirates off Nigeria, Greek authorities said on Monday.

According to a Press release issued by the Greek Citizen Protection Ministry, the Liberian-flagged "Aegean Star" of Greek shipping company "Endeavour Marine Agency," came under attack by some 10 armed men on the weekend as it was sailing some 30 nautical miles off Nigeria's coasts.

Greek authorities said the vessel was transporting oil from Ghana to Benin. Based on earlier information, all crew members, among them the Greek captain and two Greek mechanics, are in good health.

Piracy is an increasing problem in the area, as well as the eastern coasts of Africa over the past three years. Despite the deployment of international anti-piracy task forces off the coast of Somalia and the Gulf of Aden to safeguard the sea routes of merchant ships, pirates hold dozens of ships and hundreds of hostages. In many cases shipping companies have opted to pay millions of US dollars in ransoms to secure the release of the crews and the vessels.—Xinhua

Flying car to soar in UK skies in just five years time!

LONDON, 19 July—The flying car concept has been around for decades, but has never really seemed to get off the ground. But soon, it may become a reality.

Aviation experts have now said that a flying car could be in regular use in the UK within five years after the US authorities formally approved a model.

The 250,000 dollars (L155,000) Terrafugia Transition is a two-seater aircraft which has a top speed of 115mph, a range of 500 miles on a tank of fuel and requires just 20 hours training to fly. At the touch of a button it takes just 15 seconds for the wings to fold up automatically and the power to be re-routed from the propeller to the rear wheels.

It can then be driven at up to 65mph and will comfortably fit in a standard size garage. "It's like a little Transformer," the Daily Mail quoted Terrafugia founder Carl Dietrich, referring to the children's toys that were turned into a blockbuster movie franchise, as saying.

The US's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration paved the way for the flying car to be rolled out after recently announcing exemptions to allow it on American roads.

Three WWII soldiers' remains ID'd

WASHINGTON, 19 July—The remains of three American soldiers killed in World War II have been identified, the US Defence Department said Monday.

The remains of Army Pfc. Lawrence N. Harris of Elkins, WV, Cpl. Judge C. Hellums of Paris, Miss, and Pvt Donald D. Owens of Cleveland were being returned to their families for burial with full military honors, the department's POW/Missing Personnel Office said in a release.

The three soldiers' remains will be buried in a single casket Wednesday in Arlington National Cemetery.

The men, members of the 773rd Tank Battalion, were believed to have been killed on 9 Oct, 1944, while fighting

German forces in the Parroy Forest near Luneville, France. Hellums, Harris, Owens and two other soldiers were in an M-10 Tank Destroyer that was hit by enemy fire.

The other two men survived with serious injuries.

Remains were found in November 1946 and buried as unknowns in a US cemetery in Belgium.

In 2003, a Frenchman exploring the battle scene found human remains and an identification bracelet with Hellums' name. He eventually gave the items to US authorities, and more remains, personal effects and an identification tag for Owens were found in 2006.

Wife weighing less than hubby is key to happy marriage!

LONDON, 19 July—Researchers have revealed the secret of a happy marriage—wives weighing less than their hubbies.

A four-year study has suggested that in the short and long term, both partners are more contented if the woman has a lower Body Mass Index.

The researchers concluded that initially men stay in the relationship because they find their thinner partners attractive.

Further down the line, women feel confident and loved because they know their man still wants them.

The study from the University of Tennessee, which selected 169 married couples aged under 35, discovered that men who had a higher BMI, which is calculated from height and weight, were happier at the start of their marriage and stayed that way.

The same effect was true for the women – by the end of year four wives with a lower BMI than their husbands were significantly happier than those who weighed the same or more.

"The great message from our study is that women of any size can be happy in their relationships with the right partner," the Daily Mail quoted lead author Andrea Meltzer, as saying.

"It's relative weight that matters, not absolute weight. It's not that they have to be small," added Meltzer.—Internet

Scientists find 'better way' to grow adult stem cells

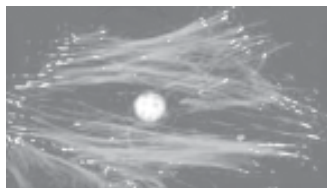

LONDON, 19 July — A new plastic surface which overcomes the difficulties associated with growing adult stem cells has been developed, according to scientists. Standard surfaces have proved limited for growing large amounts and retaining the stem cells' useful characteristics. It is hoped the discovery could lead to the creation of stem cell therapies for re-growing bone and tissue, and also for conditions such as arthritis. The study was carried out by Glasgow and Southampton universities.

The new "nano-patterned" surface was created using a manufacturing process similar to that used to make Blu-ray discs. The surface is covered with tiny pits, which the researchers said made it more effective in allowing stem cells to grow and spread into useful cells for therapy.

Currently, when adult stem cells are harvested from a patient, they are then cultured in a laboratory to increase the quantities of cells and create a batch of sufficient volume to kick-start the process of cellular regeneration. At this point they can be reintroduced back into the patient.

The process of culturing is made difficult because stem cells grown on standard plastic tissue culture surfaces do not always expand to create new stem cells but instead create other cells which are of no use in therapy. Stem cell expansion can be boosted by immersing the cells in chemical solutions, but the scientists said these methods were limited in their effectiveness. —Internet others, Winnipeg police said on Sunday. Lulonda Lynn Flett, 40, of Winnipeg, who was arrested at a bar, was named in four counts of second-degree murder and four counts of attempted murder, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp reported.

Police said a witness saw someone use a flammable substance to ignite the rooming house fire early Saturday, the CBC said. Authorities said the fire likely started near the front entrance, possibly on the veranda, blocking an escape route.

Woman sells kids on eBay as joke

A Geelong, Australia, woman could lose custody of her children after she tried to sell them on eBay, official say.

The woman, who is in her 30s, put photos of her son and daughter, both under 10 years old, last week, apparently as a joke, the Geelong Advertiser reported Monday. The listing was online for one day last week, and was taken down after police contacted eBay.

The police believed the woman's excuse that the listing was a joke and did not press criminal charges, however, the Department of Human Services is still investigating her actions.

85-year-old receives degree after 66 years

An 85-year-old Welsh man received his diploma after a 66-year hiatus from college, officials say.

Harold Jones formally received his Cardiff University diploma Monday after having missed his 1945 graduation due to World War II, the BBC reported.

Jones, now living in Madrid, was called to complete Royal Navy training in 1945 and was never able to collect his diploma. He went on to have a successful career in engineering, though, working in Wales, the Middle East, London, the Netherlands and South Africa.

The new graduate began his studies at Cardiff in 1942, where his mother enrolled him in engineering classes.

"Some people did it to avoid getting called up, so that might have been my mother's motivation," he told the BBC.

"People on the course had an added incentive to make sure they passed their exams, because if you didn't you were handed a rifle and told, 'Right, go and get some Germans.'"

He added that while at the university, he had to complete weekly fire-watching and Home Guard duties.

Pigeon rides ferry every day for three years

Crew members of a New York Waterway ferry said the same feral pigeon has ridden the vessel every day for the past three years.

The crew members of the Thomas Jefferson ferry from Manhattan to Weehawken, NJ1, said the pigeon, nicknamed Tony, boards the vessel every day during the rush hour commute and rides the ferry back and forth for about two hours, the New York Daily News reported Monday.

The crew said the bird returns for another two-hour shift during the evening commute.

"I've been working this job for 23 years and I've never seen anything like this," said senior deckhand George Schumpp, 52. "Three years ago, this pigeon shows up and starts going through the cabin and eating crumbs. Next thing you know, he's here every day at the exact same time. And he does more work cleaning than my partner."

Women's World Cup final breaks Twitter record

LONDON, 19 July — The Women's World Cup final between Japan and the United States set the record for tweets per second, eclipsing the wedding of Prince William and Kate and the death of Osama bin Laden. Japan rallied twice to tie the United States 2-2 after extra time before winning a penalty shootout on Sunday in Frankfurt, Germany. The US was aiming for its third World Cup victory, while Japan lifted the World Cup trophy for the first time after going 0-25 against the Americans over the years.

The exciting climax drew 7,196 tweets per second, according to Twitter. Paraguay's penalty shootout win over Brazil in a Copa America quarterfinal later the same day came close to beating it with 7,166. The previous record of 6,939 was set just after midnight in Japan on New Year's Day. Other spikes include bin Laden's death (5,106 per second) and the Super Bowl in February (4,064).

World Cup gives Japan joyful respite from disaster

TOKYO, 19 July—After months of grief and gloom, Japan found a reason to unite in celebration. Japanese who have shared in mourning for months boisterously cheered a Women's World Cup victory that briefly put aside the long and uncertain recovery from the earthquake, tsunami and nuclear disaster.

Fans decked out in the national team's dark blue uniforms hugged and sang in Tokyo as they watched their team lift the winner's trophy on live broadcasts from Frankfurt, Germany. "This is a chance to forget the nuclear disaster and everything else, to just to unite and celebrate," said 22-year-old Toru Komatsu. Prime Minister Naoto Kan called the victory the "greatest gift" to the nation, especially to the residents of the northeast coast most devastated by the 11 March disaster.

The earthquake and tsunami left nearly 23,000 people dead or missing and caused partial meltdowns at a nuclear power plant. "(The team) gave courage for everyone by showing a diehard match even when they were on the back foot," Kan said in the statement carried by Kyodo news agency. Japan became the first Asian nation to win the Women's World Cup, beating the United States 3-1 in a penalty shootout Sunday after a 2-2 draw.

The team, tiny in stature compared to the Americans, fell behind twice but battled back to equalize both times, their final goal coming with just three minutes left in extra time. —Internet

Corinthians yet to agree deal for Man City's Carlos Tevez

But a Corinthians statement said: "We would like to clarify to the public that City did not accept our offer."

"City sent a counter-proposal in the early hours... and this will be analysed by Corinthians."

Tevez scored 20 league goals for Manchester City last season.

Inter to keep 2006 Italian League title

ROME, 19 July—The Italian Football Federation (FIGC) announced on Monday that Inter Milan will be allowed to keep the 2006 Serie A title, attributed to them in the wake of that year's Calciopoli scandal. A motion by the FIGC's federal council declaring that there was "no judicial basis for the revocation" of the 2006 Scudetto was passed by 22 votes to one at a meeting in Rome, with two abstentions.

The Calciopoli scandal led to Juventus being stripped of the league titles they had won in 2005 and 2006 after it was discovered that they had been trying to influence referees. Juve were also relegated to Serie B and deducted nine points, although they did win immediate promotion back to the elite.

The scandal also led to Fiorentina being deducted 15 points, Milan losing eight, and Lazio three points. It was as a result of these punishments that Inter were retrospectively awarded the title.

Given joins Villa on five-year contract

LONDON, 19 July—Aston Villa on Monday announced the signing of experienced Irish goalkeeper Shay Given on a five-year contract from Premier League rivals Manchester City. The 35-year-old, who arrived for an undisclosed fee, is Villa coach Alex McLeish's first signing since he succeeded Gerard Houllier at the end of last season. "Aston Villa is a huge club and I'm really excited to be joining," Given told the Villa website. "It's a new challenge and I'm eager to embrace it."

Schalke fail with improved Roux bid

PARIS, 19 July—Schalke 04 have had an improved bid for Bre'st's French striker Nolan Roux rejected, the German side's sporting director Horst Heldt revealed on Monday. "Our new, improved offer has been refused," Heldt said during Schalke's pre-season training camp in Austria, according to AFP subsidiary SID.

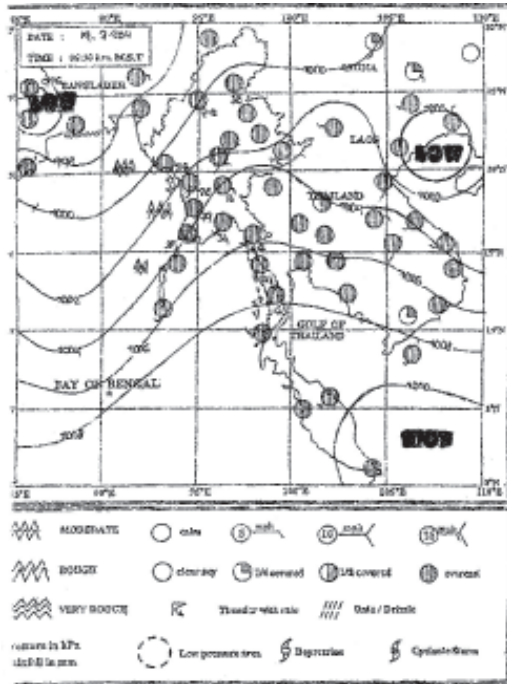

If France Under-21 international Roux's chances of moving to Gelsenkirchen now appear slim, Schalke are still seeking to re-jig the attacking department of their squad. Romanian striker Ciprian Marica, released by Stuttgart last week, could join the club, although his failure to impose himself at the Swabians means "the risk has to be evaluated," according to Heldt.

A decision on whether or not to sign Marica is expected to be made before the end of the week. Schalke's Brazilian striker Edu, meanwhile, could leave the club for Asia. A Japanese club are believed to be preparing a bid for the 29-year-old, who arrived from Korean outfit Suwon Bluewings in January 2010. Should Edu leave, Heldt said "it is possible that two forwards would be recruited".
