Maintain roads and bridges

Monsoon has set in. Rains have been scattered in Kachin and Kayin States, upper Sagaing Region, Mon and Rakhine States, and there will be heavy rains in some areas. Noteworthy amounts of rainfall were recorded in some towns.

Preventive measures are to be taken for damages on line of communication and housings due to overflow of rivers. Natural disaster preparedness works are to be carried out in real time. Plans must be completed to be able to provide assistance for transport and foods and medical treatments for the people.

As there have been heavy rains in many regions of the nation, continuous inspections are to be made for maintenance of roads and bridges. It is necessary to take care of the runs of vehicles and trains along their routes due to landslides.

Floods can cause inundation of bridges and mud slides at bridge approach roads. Maintenance is to be undertaken for betterment of bridges and connected roads.

Towns and villages where floods can occur in the rainy season are to check the increase of water levels above their datum. Water sentries are to be assigned along embankments of rivers.

Damages of communication routes in torrential rains and floods can cause difficulties to commodities and passenger transport. Officials of road and bridge sectors, local authorities, social organization members and local people are to place special emphasis on preventive measures against natural disasters in real time.

Suicide bombing rocks Mazar city in N Afghanistan, kills six, injures 12

MAZAR-E-SHARIF, 20 July—A suicide bombing rocked Wednesday Afghan northern city of Mazar-e-Sharif, the capital of Balkh province, 305 km north of capital city Kabul, leaving six people dead and injuring a dozen other, police said.

"The blast happened in Dasht-e-Shur area at around noon leaving six people including the bomber dead and injuring 12 others," police spokesman in Balkh province Shir Khan Durani told Xinhua.

"The terrorist planted explosive device in bicycle and detonated it in Dasht-e-Shor area killing himself and five others," Durani said, adding that all the victims are civilians.

He blamed the enemies of peace, a term used against Taliban militants by Afghan officials for organizing the attack, but the outfit fighting Afghan and NATO-led troops has yet to make comment.

Mazar-e-Sharif is one of the seven areas that Afghan government is going to take its security responsibility from NATO-led troops in near future.

Afghan government has already assumed security responsibility of central Bamyán province and eastern Meherlam city from NATO-led troops.

Al-Qaeda Iraq group claims recent deadly attacks

BAGHDAD, 20 July—An al-Qaeda-linked group has claimed responsibility for two recent attacks that killed 40 people and wounded scores.

The Islamic State of Iraq says in a statement posted on its website Tuesday that it was behind a 5 July double bombing at a local government building in Taji.

The group said it sent a car bomb and a suicide bomber to the building just north of Baghdad. But officials have blamed at least one of the blasts on a roadside bomb. Thirty-seven people were killed and 54 wounded in the Taji attack.

The terror group said it also masterminded a 26 June attack by a suicide bomber in a wheelchair who killed three and wounded 18 at a police station in Tarmiyah, 30 miles (50 kilometres) north of Baghdad.—Internet

Fossils are clues to ancient Canada seas

WINNEPEG, 20 July—Fossils of prehistoric sea creatures unearthed in Manitoba give clues to what Western Canada was like when dinosaurs lived, researchers said.

Scientists from the Canadian Fossil Discovery Centre have dug up two mosasaurs — a huge predatory reptile known as the “T Rex of the sea” — in the landlocked province at a dig site that also yielded a prehistoric squid and bird skeletons, as well as two other as yet unidentified fossils, the Waterloo Region Record in Ontario reported.

The discovery of the shore fossil fossils may suggest there was a lot more available land 80 million years ago when much of the Canada’s prairies were under salt water, researcher said.

“It was not just this big, wide, open sea,” fossil curator Anita Janzic said. “It’s giving us some new insight into what the seaway was like. That is changing how we are looking at the seaway and that, to me, makes this site very interesting.” Some of the country’s richest deposits of marine dinosaurs are found in the sand-like soil of Morden, about 60 miles southwest of Winnipeg, despite the site being about as from the ocean as you can get in Canada, researchers said.

Mosasaurs were huge oxygen-breathing lizards, as long as 50 feet, that moved through the water by swinging their tail from side to side.

“They were definitely on top of the food chain,” Janzic said. “They even preyed upon other mosasaurs.”

Greenhouse gas impact of dairies measured

KIMBERLY, 20 July—US agricultural scientists say they have produced the first detailed data on how large-scale dairy facilities contribute to the emission of greenhouse gases.

US Department of Agriculture researchers monitored the emissions of ammonia, carbon dioxide, methane and nitrous oxide from a commercial dairy with 10,000 milk cows in southern Idaho, a USDA release said Tuesday.

Agricultural Research Service scientists at the Northwest Irrigation and Soils Research Laboratory in Kimberly, Idaho, conducted the study at the facility that has 20 open-lot pens, two milking parlors, a hospital barn, a maternity barn, a manure solid separator, a 25-acre wastewater storage pond and a 25-acre compost yard.

The study found that, on average, the facility generated 3,575 pounds of ammonia, 33,092 pounds of methane and 409 pounds of nitrous oxide every day, with the open lot areas creating 78 percent of the facility’s ammonia, 57 percent of its nitrous oxide and 74 percent of the facility’s methane emissions.

The emission of ammonia and nitrous oxide from the open lots were lower during the late evening and early morning, and then increased throughout the day to peak late in the day, researchers said.—Internet

Lenovo launches three tablets to take on iPad

lenovo tablets

BEIJING, 20 July—It was rumoured back in April that Lenovo would be releasing a tablet or two around now, and today the Chinese manufacturer surprised us slightly by unveiling not one, not even two, but three new tablets.

The 10.1-inch devices will be sold globally, with prices to be set close to those of the popular iPad, its main rival.

So how do the three tablets line up? Well, for consumers Lenovo has come up with the IdeaPad Tablet K1. For business users there’s the ThinkPad Tablet. And for home and office use you have the IdeaPad Tablet P1.

Both the IdeaPad Tablet K1 and ThinkPad Tablet run Android 3.1, come equipped with Nvidia Tegra 2 dual-core processors, have full Flash support, 1280×800 displays, microSD/full-size SD/USB ports, and front and rear cameras. The ThinkPad Tablet also has an optional digitizer pen for note-taking. The IdeaPad Tablet K1 weighs less than 2 lb, while the the ThinkPad Tablet comes in at 1.65lb. The iPad, in comparison, tips the scales at 1.33 lb.

Both devices will be available in the US in August, and the rest of the world soon after.

The IdeaPad Tablet P1 runs Windows 7, has full Flash support, and incorporates microSD/USB ports and a front-mounted webcam. The P1 will be available some time in the fall. All devices will be Wi-Fi only, with 3G versions coming later.

As for pricing, the 32GB version of the IdeaPad Tablet K1 is going for $499, while the 16GB version of the ThinkPad Tablet comes in at $479. The price of the IdeaPad Tablet P1 hasn’t yet been set. Lenovo’s announcement follows hot on the heels of Apple’s news of record profits in its last quarter. This was due in part to strong sales of the company’s iPad (more than 9 million units) — a clear indication that the Chinese company has its work cut out if it’s going to make an impact in the tablet market.—Internet

Sony using 3D headset to experiment with Virtual Reality gaming

WASHINGTON, 20 July—Sony previously unveiled a 3D headset at the 2011 Consumer Electronic Show. Now, in a recent interview, Sony’s Mick Hocking is saying that the company may be experimenting with games that use the headset for virtual reality type experiences.

At CES the headset was part of Sony’s 3D themed press conference. Sony showed off many new glassless 3D TVs, as well as a portable 3D Blu-ray player but the headset was one of the more innovative products. The prototype headset’s visor had twin OLED displays, sported HD 3D video and 5.1 surround sound via headphones which would create a very immersive experience for gamers.

Apparently, Sony has plans to immerse gamers into the experience far deeper than passive viewing. In an interview with Develop, Sony London studio manager Mick Hocking discussed the PS Vita, PS3 3D gaming, whether 3D technology was a commercially viable format and then dropped a little more information about their headset project.

“The head-mounted display has twin-OLED screens; very high quality,” he said. “At the moment it’s just a head-mounted display; the head isn’t being tracked — but that’s something we’re doing R&D on... We’re working with a couple of games at Sony that are experimenting with virtual reality type experiences.—Internet

Tips for getting enough physical activity

NEW YORK, 20 July—It may sound daunting: The government says most adults should get 2½ hours a week of physical activity that revs their heart rates. But if you can't do that much, don't give up — every little bit helps, especially as people age. "The message should always be to take it slow by setting realistic but challenging goals," says Jack Rejeski, Wake Forest University professor of health and exercise science. He recommends a walk with friends "and before you know it, you're through."

Some tips:

- * The recommendation is for moderate-intensity physical activity, things like a brisk walk, water aerobics, cutting grass with a push mower, taking a dance class, doubles tennis.
- * Just doing 10 minutes at a time counts. A few 10-minute activities each day add up.
- * If you've been sedentary, build up gradually.
- * If you prefer more vigorous activity — like jogging or singles tennis or a fast bike ride — the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention says 75 minutes a week is sufficient. One minute of vigorous activity counts for two minutes of moderate activity.
- * The CDC says moderate-intensity means you're not breathing too hard to talk but you couldn't sing.
- * In addition to the aerobic activity, the CDC urges muscle-strengthening activities at least two days a week. That can range from digging in the garden and yoga to push-ups or lifting weights.—Internet

Half of Alzheimer's may be preventable

PARIS, 20 July—More than half of all Alzheimer's disease cases may be prevented through simple lifestyle changes and treatment of chronic conditions, US researchers say.

Study leader Deborah Barnes, a mental health researcher at the San Francisco VA Medical Centre and University of California, San Francisco and colleagues analyzed data from studies worldwide involving hundreds of thousands of participants.

The study, published in The Lancet Neurology and presented at the Alzheimer's Association International Conference on Alzheimer's Disease in Paris, found that worldwide, the biggest modifiable risk factors for Alzheimer's disease are, in descending order of magnitude: low education, smoking, physical inactivity, depression, mid-life hypertension, diabetes and mid-life obesity. Together, these risk factors are associated with as much as 51 percent of Alzheimer's cases worldwide and 54 percent of Alzheimer's cases in the United States — 2.9 million cases, Barnes says.

"What's exciting is that this suggests that some very simple lifestyle changes, such as increasing physical activity and quitting smoking, could have a tremendous impact on preventing Alzheimer's and other dementias in the United States and worldwide," Barnes says in a statement. Barnes cautions her conclusions are based on the assumption that there is a causal association between each risk factor and Alzheimer's disease.

"We are assuming that when you change the risk factor, then you change the risk," Barnes says. "What we need to do now is figure out whether that assumption is correct."—Internet

Baidu makes deal with world music giants

SHANGHAI, 20 July—Baidu Inc, the largest Chinese search engine based in Beijing, said Tuesday it closed a deal that allows the company to provide download services of music from Universal Music, Warner Music and Sony Music.

According to the deal signed between Baidu and One Stop China (OSC), a joint venture of the three music companies, Baidu will pay them on a per-play and per-download basis for all tracks delivered through its MP3 server, said a Press release provided by Baidu.

Users can have access to the authorized music free of charge, and Chinese songs, both in Mandarin and Cantonese, and some global content provided by the three music companies will be included in the catalogue.

Baidu also launched a social music platform called "Baidu ting!" through which users can obtain and share some music-related information and content.

Li Xinzhe, CFO of Baidu, described the deal as a "milestone" that can benefit not only Baidu and its partners but also music lovers and the privacy-stricken industry. Wang Bin, secretary general of Copyright Union of Internet Society of China, predicted that it would have a demonstrative effect on the Internet sector. Rok introduces its 1st indigenous private aircraft

SEOUL, 20 July—South Korea on Wednesday introduced its first home-built private aircraft after years of efforts aimed at developing commercial airplanes.

The Ministry of Land, Transport and Maritime Affairs said that a ceremony marking the first flight of the country's first indigenous non-military aircraft was held at Korea Aerospace Industries (KAI) in the southern city of Sacheon on Wednesday morning. The four-seat, single-engine propeller aircraft, named the Naraon, made South Korea the world's 28th nation to build and fly an indigenous non-military aircraft, according to the ministry.

With a top speed of 389 kilometres per hour and maximum flight distance of 1,850 kilometres, the aircraft can reach most major cities in Japan, China and some Southeast Asian countries, the ministry said. It is expected that the price of the aircraft will be set at around 600 million won ($68,000 US dollars). 1.5-metre high Buddha statue unearthed in Kyrgyzstan BISHKEK, 20 July—Archaeologists in Kyrgyzstan have unearthed a 1.5-metre high statue of Buddha in the hills outside the capital Bishkek. Archaeologists from the Kyrgyz Academy of Sciences, working with colleagues from the Russian Hermitage Museum in St Petersburg, were digging in a series of fields, which they believe cover the remains of a Buddhist monastery complex. "This sculpture is as high as two humans. If we could straighten it out and put it vertically, its height would be about four meters," said Valery Kolchenko, an archaeologist from the Kyrgyz National Academy of Sciences.

Archaeologists believe the statue dates back to a time between the 8th to 10th centuries, though further tests are needed to pinpoint its exact age, 3 News reports.

"The excavation of this sculpture is a very laborious task, that is why we cannot date this artefact to any particular time. First of all we need to excavate it and then we can say how old it is," said Asan Torgoyev from the Oriental Studies Department of the Hermitage.

Finding Buddhist remains of this kind is rare in the mountainous regions of Kyrgyzstan. Pre-Islamic Buddhist culture is well documented in Tajikistan, but very unusual in its northern neighbour, Kyrgyzstan.

Snakes also use venom for defence, not just to feed themselves

WASHINGTON, 20 July—A new research has thrown up interesting insights on how the 'predators factor' plays a key role in the rapid toxin evolution in venomous snakes.

Although some mammals have long been known to eat venomous snakes, this fact has not been factored into previous explanations for the rapid evolution of snake venom. Instead, snake venom is usually seen as a feeding, or trophic, adaptation. "Snake venom toxins evolve incredibly rapidly," says Robert Voss, curator in the Department of Mammalogy at the American Museum of Natural History.

"Most herpetologists interpret this as evidence that venom in snakes evolves because of interactions with their prey, but if that were true you would see equally rapid evolution in toxin-targeted molecules of prey species, which has not yet been seen. "What we've found is that a venom-targeted protein is evolving rapidly in mammals that eat snakes. That suggests that venom has a defensive as well as a trophic role," he added. The study was recently published in PLoS One.—Internet

Six killed, 45 wounded in Bangladesh in road accidents

DHAKA, 20 July—Six people were killed and 45 injured in two road accidents in Bangladesh's Bagerhat and Nilphamari Districts Tuesday, the Daily Star reported. In Bagerhat, a bus overturned on the Khulna-Mawa highway in Mollahat sub-district after hitting a pedestrian standing in front of a filling station around 12.25 am, said a police official. The unidentified pedestrian died on the spot. Besides, a firefighting unit recovered two bodies of Rabiul Islam, 32, and Sajib, 24, from inside the vehicle, said Moktar Hossain, a Mollahat sub-district officer. In Nilphamari, at least three people were killed and 30 injured when two buses collided in Dhalapir area Tuesday morning.

The accident took place when a Nilphamari-bound bus from Dhaka collided head-on with a Dhaka-bound bus of Maroon Enterprise at around 7.50 am. Salim Miya, a passenger of the Nilphamari-bound bus, said the driver was speeding dangerously to make up for a three-hour delay in Gazipur area.—Internet

Solar panels keep buildings cool, keep AC costs down

WASHINGTON, 20 July—Solar panels on your rooftop aren't just providing clean, inexpensive power, they are doing more - cooling your house and keeping expenses down on air conditioning.

Jan Kleissl, professor of environmental engineering at the University of California and his team have come up with the first ever measurements of the cooling benefits provided by solar photovoltaic panels.

As solar panels sprout on an increasing number of residential and commercial roofs, it becomes more important to consider their impact on buildings' total energy costs, Kleissl said in the journal Solar Energy.

His team determined that the amount saved on cooling the building amounted to getting a five percent discount on the solar panels' price, over the panels' lifetime, according to a California statement. Data for the study was gathered over three days on the roof of the Powell Structural Systems Lab at the Jacobs School of Engineering with a thermal infrared camera.

The building is equipped with tilted solar panels and solar panels that are flush with the roof. Some portions of the roof are not covered by panels. The panels essentially act as roof shades, said Anthony Dominguez, the graduate student involved in the project. Rather than the sun beating down onto the roof, which causes heat to be pushed through the roof and inside the ceiling of the building, photovoltaic panels take the solar beating.

Meet 22-yr-old Brazilian woman who has a full-sized nipple on her foot!

LONDON, 20 July—Brazilian researchers have reported a rare case of a woman with a full-sized extra nipple on the sole of her foot, possibly the first of its kind. "A 22-year-old woman sought medical care for a lesion in the plantar region of her left foot, a well-formed nipple surrounded by areola and hair," the Mirror quoted the researchers, as saying in a report.

"Microscopic examination of the dermis showed hair follicles, eccrine glands, and sebaceous glands. "Fat tissue was noted at the base of the lesion. Clinical and histopathologic findings were consistent with the diagnosis of supernumerary breast tissue, also known as pseudomamma.

"To our knowledge, this is the first report of supernumerary breast tissue on the foot," they added. The 22-year-old woman however admitted that despite having the unusual 2-inch wide growth all her life, she never felt any pain due to it. Generally extra nipples are found along the milk lines, which run from the genitals to the armpits, they have been discovered on the back, thigh or even the face. The case of the woman was first published in Dermatology Journal in 2006.—Internet

staff members were appointed for some villages of the township to collect news promptly if there was suspicious death of fowls and educate local breeders about farming animals; that they regularly took serums of suspicious ducks for diagnosis of diseases; that they vaccinated ducks against diarrhoea; and that

Duck eggs to be delivered to the market.

Thanatpin Township was named the winner of the award for outstanding duck breeding at the ceremony to mark the World Food Day (2004).

I also visited the duck farm of Secretary of Thanatpin Township Duck Breeding and Duck Eggs Trading Association Dr Khin Maung Myint near mile post No. 9/1 of Thanatpin-Kamase Road for an interview.

Q: Well, may I know about your farming ducks?

A: We get 28-day female ducks from the traditional duck hatchery in our township at the price of 500 kyats per head. They start to lay eggs at five months.

Q: How many ducks do you raise?

A: Thirty thousands in total.

Q: How often do you feed your ducks?

A: We feed them at 9.30 in the morning, at 11 o'clock in the morning, at 5.30 in the afternoon, and at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Q: How do you give them food and water?

A: A 100 ft x 60 ft run can hold about 3000 ducks. We have 30 troughs for food and 30 troughs for water, and we wash them twice a day.

Q: How much do you feed them a day?

A: We make duck food with shrimp, broken rice, bran, mollusc powder and Vitamin tablet powder and we feed them at the rate of about seven and a half ticals of dry food per head a day. We make 225 viss (about 800 lbs) of food for 3000 ducks a day.

Q: Do you give them light at night?

A: We give them light the whole night starting from around 6 o'clock in the evening.

Q: What about health care to the ducks?

A: Most duck farms in our township hardly use antibiotics, and we use organic farming methods. So, our products are safe.

Q: What is the laying term?

A: We raise ducks one year for eggs. Then we sell them for meat at the price of 2300 kyats per head.

Q: What is your trade of duck eggs?

A: We sell duck eggs 85 kyats a unit. A duck egg is sold for 90 kyat in the market. Thanatpin Township has 16 duck eggs purchasing centres. We collect five boxes of duck eggs a day. A box can hold 500 duck eggs. We deliver duck eggs to Bago, Yangon, Mawlamyine and Toungoo according to the demands.

He said that the capital for raising 1000 ducks for five months is about 4 million kyats in total. According to my firsthand experience, Thanatpin Township has become a land of duck farms.

Hacking hearing suspended shortly due to attempted attack on Murdoch

LONDON, 20 July—The hearing on the Murdochs over phone hacking at a select committee of British Parliament was resumed after suspending for around five minutes due to a sudden disturbance by a man.

Sky News identified the man as comedian Jonnie Marbles, who attempted to attack Rupert Murdoch with some "white substance" when the Murdochs had been questioned for about two hours and a half.

The hearing resumed only minutes after Rupert Murdoch took off his suit pelted with the white substance.

Rupert Murdoch and his son James Murdoch, chairman of News International, were attending the hearing held by the culture, media and sport committee of British Parliament.

The Murdochs initially refused to appear before the committee but changed their minds after they were issued with a summons to attend.—Xinhua

Psychotic mother kills her baby

LONDON, 20 July—A mother in Britain killed her two-year-old baby just hours after psychiatric nurses decided it was safe to leave the child with her, a court heard. Health visitors and nurses had visited Sonia Bellfield, who has a history of mental illness, and her daughter, Jasmine, barely two days before the tragedy, the Daily Mail reported Tuesday. Though alarmed by her mental state, they failed to find it as an 'emergency' requiring immediate intervention. The day after the second visit, however, they changed their minds.

But when a seven-strong crisis team of social workers, psychiatrists and police officers knocked on Bellfield's door, they found she had smothered her baby. She also tried to kill herself with a kitchen knife. Bellfield, 31, had been suffering from paranoid schizophrenia, attributed to cannabis, which she started using in childhood. Bellfield denied murder, but the Crown accepted a plea of guilty to manslaughter on the grounds of diminished responsibility at Leeds Crown Court Monday.

65 percent Himalayan glaciers melting

NEW DELHI, 20 July —In a startling comparison between the state of glaciers in the Himalayan ranges in the last 50 years, glaciologists say nearly 65 percent glaciers are melting due to global warming.

"Almost 65 percent of the glaciers are depleting in the Himalayan Region in a comparison between 1955 and 2007. There are many recently formed lakes in the region, resulting to changing weather pattern," said scientist Alton Byer, who is studying melting glaciers, in a documentary screened by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) here Tuesday.

The film examines the shrinking glaciers of the Himalayas and the effects they have on the lives and livelihood of people in Asia.

Glaciologists from the Mountain

Studies Institute and the International Centre for Integrated Mountain Development (ICIMOD) have stated the ice melting poses a huge risk of disasters in the regions surrounding the mountain range.

"There is a huge risk of avalanches and high magnitude earthquakes in the region. The meltdown poses threat to millions across Asia," said Byer in the documentary.

The UNDP also awarded Chhewang Norphel, popularly known as the 'Ice Man' of Leh, for preventing glacier melting in the Leh mountains.

Norphel, chief project officer of the Leh Nutrition Project, brought hope to thousands of farmers in the Ladakh region through his innovative idea of building artificial glaciers that store melting glacial water and help irrigate land in the region.—Internet

Forest fires hit western Turkey

ISTANBUL, 20 July— Fire-fighting teams were trying to extinguish two separate forest fires in western Turkey on Tuesday, local media reported.

Local news agency DHA reported that one fire broke out at an olive farm and spread to the nearby pine forests due to wind in the northwestern Province of Balikesir.

Two fire-fighting helicopters and other teams have been dispatched to the area.

The cause of the fire has yet to be determined. No information was immediately available on any physical or material damage.

Balikesir has a Mediterranean climate with long, hot and dry summers with cool and rainy winters.

Meanwhile, attempts were also being made to put out a blaze in the western Province of Canakkale.

Fire-fighting planes and around 50 forest workers are attempting to put out the blaze.

Record snowfalls leave over 5,000 people isolated in Chile

SANTIAGO, 20 July— At least 5,000 inhabitants in a southern Chilean Region have been isolated after parts of the area were cut off by the heaviest snowfalls in 16 years, authorities said Tuesday.

The country's National Emergency Office (ONEMI) said half of those affected live in Lonquimay, a region some 600 km south of Santiago.

Rescue efforts are underway as local authorities began clearing the roads that connect Lonquimay to the outside Monday, but many people remain out of reach, Fredy Rivas, ONEMI's regional director in Araucania, said.

The number of isolated people would fall as more roads are reopened, Rivas said, adding helicopters were deployed to transport food and other supplies to those affected areas.

Lonquimay had been hit by the worst snowfalls recorded in 16 years for 3 days.

Rivas said so far, 90 percent of Lonquimay's inhabitants have successfully been reconnected to the national electricity network.

Cancer cells and stem cells share same origin

LOS ANGELES, 20 July—US scientists have proven that oncogenes can change normal cells into stem-like cells, paving the way to a safer and more practical approach to treating diseases like multiple sclerosis and cancer with stem cell therapy.

In a collaborative study, researchers from the Keck School of Medicine of the University of Southern California (USC), and the Children's Hospital of Orange County (CHOC) in California and Good Samaritan Hospital Medical Center in New York have successfully converted human skin cells into brain cells by suppressing the expression of p53, a protein encoded by a widely studied oncogene. This suggests that p53 mutation helps determine cell fate — good or bad — rather than only the outcome of cancer.

Oncogenes are generally thought to be genes that, when mutated, change healthy cells into cancerous tumor cells.

HAIKOU, 21 July—The number of overseas tourists visiting south China's tropical island of Hainan grew 12 percent year-on-year to 383,800 from January to June, the Province's tourism commission said Wednesday.

Tourists from European countries and the United States grew 33.5 percent to 155,720 in the first half year-on-year, the commission said in the statement.

The number of Russian tourists visiting the island continued to grow 44.83 percent in the January-June period to 105,174, especially thanks to the opening of new airline routes this year to five Russian cities.

Hainan has long been a favorite destination for holiday makers from the Russian Far East region. However, the number of tourists from Asian countries only rose a moderate 3.16 percent to 85,321, the commission said.—Xinhua

US grandmother grows 14ft fingernails to gain international TV stardom

An American grandmother has spent 22 years to grow her fingernails to 14 foot in a bid to gain international TV stardom.

Jazz Ison Sinkfield has spent 22 years growing her amazing talons, and she spends eight hours and 155 pounds a week in her local nail salon having them preened and polished.

And she claims her claws hardly impose on her life at all, although some simple tasks, such as tying shoes and removing jewellery, are impossible. The 48-year-old, from Atlanta, Georgia, began growing her nails in her twenties with the hope to appear on the 'Oprah Winfrey Show' over her strange obsession.

But now that the US chat show is over, Sinkfield appeared on 'My Strange Addiction', a game show that helps contestants overcome their weird fixations. However, when it came to losing her beloved nails at the end of the show, she refused to get them cut.

"My nails are me and I love me and I love my nails," the Sun quoted her as saying.

"If a doctor told me that my nails were bad for my health I still wouldn't cut them," she added.

Two men locked selves inside police van

Police in Pennsylvania said they arrested two men who broke into a police van to take gag pictures and accidentally locked themselves inside the vehicle.

Radnor police said Marlton, NJ, residents Ryan Letchford, 21, and Jeffrey Olsen, 22, left a party early Saturday and entered Constable Mike Connor's van, which had been in the parking lot of the condominium where the party was located, the Philadelphia Daily News reported Monday.

Investigators said Letchford and Olsen, who are believed to have entered the van to take gag pictures of themselves being arrested, got locked in. Police said a friend found them in the van after they failed to return to the party and called 911 because he was unable to free them.

Police contacted Connor, who said he must have left a door unlocked because there was no sign of forced entry.

"I came down and unlocked the doors, and 'Dumb and Dumber' pranced out of the van," Connor said.

"They looked a little embarrassed." Connor said the men had been smoking cigarettes and spitting while inside the vehicle. Cigarette butts and "a large amount of saliva" were in the van, police said.

Letchford and Olsen were arrested and charged with attempted theft of a motor vehicle, public drunkenness and criminal mischief.

17-year-old girl tackles crook

A 17-year-old Swedish girl stopped a perfume thief, officials say. A 37-year-old man was trying to make off with a $2,150 bottle of perfume from a Lund, Sweden, store Friday when he was spotted by a store clerk and made a run for it, the Swedish news agency TT reported. Store employees and several passers-by chased the man out of the store, trying to stop him. It was a 17-year-old girl, however, who stopped him by tackling him into the outer wall of the Grand Hotel. She reportedly held him there with the help of others until police arrived. Police later searched the thief's car and allegedly found $4,675 worth of stolen items, including sunglasses, cosmetics and clothes. The man was charged with theft and handling stolen goods.

Emma Watson to return to Brown University

BEIJING, 20 July—British actress Emma Watson said she will return to Brown University to complete her study, according to news reports Tuesday.

The "Harry Potter" star left Brown earlier this year as she wanted to devote her time to the finale of "Harry Potter" series and other acting projects.

"I'm still a student at Brown," the 21-year-old star told the Virginian-Pilot.

"It's just that I'll spend my third year abroad — at Oxford. Then I'll return to Brown to complete my last year."

Harrison Ford wants to star in new 'Indiana Jones' movie

WASHINGTON, 20 July—Harrison Ford has expressed his desire to work in another 'Indiana Jones' movie.

The actor said that he would not mind to play the titular archaeologist for the fifth time as, in a follow up to 2008's 'Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull'.

"I wouldn't mind

Harrison Ford another shot at Indiana Jones," Contactmusic.com quoted Ford as telling E!

News. "I still think we have a chance of making a really good one," he stated.

"I feel like I dropped the ball on the legacy that people loved," he added.

Though initially 'Indiana Jones' received acknowledgement, 'Kingdom of the Crystal Skull' was less well received.

Harry Potter cast gets superimposed on covers of classic albums

LONDON, 20 July—Images of Daniel Radcliffe, Emma Watson and Rupert Grint have been used to design spoof covers of classic albums, like Michael Jackson's 'Bad' and David Bowie's 'Aladdin Sane'.

The trio along with Neville appeared on a spoof of U2's album 'The Joshua Tree', the Daily Mail reported. Using images of the actors from the most recent movie, 'Harry Potter And The Deathly Hallows: Part II', a website has transformed them into subjects including Pink Floyd, Elvis, The Rolling Stones, The Ramones and Queen.

While on one Harry Potter and Ron Weasley are shown as Bowie look-alike complete with the singer's signature lightning strike face paint, another cover shows Dobby the house elf as one of the four members of Queen.—Internet

Justin Bieber to perform private concert for Becks' kids in return for footie tips!

WASHINGTON, 20 July—Justin Bieber has agreed to give a private concert for the Beckham boys and their newborn sister Harper Seven, in exchange for some football lessons from David.

The teen sensation might even bring along girlfriend Selena Gomez to perform with him.

"I've agreed to give the boys a private concert at their house - if David gives me some private saying.

"David's an amazing dad, and he told me how happy it would make the boys, so I had to say yes."

"Maybe now they have a girl, Selena will have to come too, and dedicate a song to Harper."

"David tells me my records are always played in their household, and David and Victoria are both really cool, so I'm happy to oblige," he added.

Bayern suffer Hamburg friendly defeat

MAINZ, 20 July — Bayern Munich went down to a 2-1 defeat at the hands of Bundesliga rivals Hamburg in a pre-season tournament in Mainz on Tuesday evening.

Bayern's evening got off to a terrible start, with an error in judgement from goalkeeper Manuel Neuer allowing 19-year-old South Korean Son Heung-Min to put Hamburg in front inside the opening six minutes.

Bayern's goalkeeper Manuel Neuer

Neuer has had a difficult start to life in Bavaria, with a section of the club's support refusing to accept the signing of a player who is a self-confessed fan of Schalke 04.

The German international did redeem himself with a couple of impressive saves but Son went on to double Hamburg's lead from close-range just before half-time of a game played over two 30-minute periods.

Toni Kroos pulled a goal back for Jupp Heynckes' charges, but Hamburg held on to win and will play Borussia Dortmund in the final of the tournament being played at Mainz's new Coface Arena home on Wednesday. —Internet

Sao Paulo throw in towel on Tevez deal

LONDON, 20 July — Brazilian side Corinthians have admitted defeat in their attempt to sign Argentinian star Carlos Tevez from Manchester City.

City manager Roberto Mancini had said on Monday that the English Premier League club had agreed to a deal but the Brazilians contradicted him and then said Tuesday that time had run out with the transfer window in Brazil for players coming in from abroad closing Wednesday night.

The Brazilian side's initial offer for the 27-year-old striker was reportedly worth 40 million euros ($63.57m) but there has been much debate between the two clubs on how the fee would be structured.

In a statement on their website, Corinthians said the deal was off. "There is no more sufficient time for the transfer to go through," the statement said. However, the club added that "we hope to be able to count on Tevez in the near future."

Ferrero both fell at the first hurdle to German challengers at the ATP Hamburg tournament here on Tuesday.

Last weekend's Stuttgart winner Ferrero fell 6-3, 6-2 to German wild card Cedrik-Marcel Stebe while Golubev, a surprise winner here last year, crashed out 7-5, 6-3 in his first round match to Philipp Kohlschreiber.

If I were Batista, I'd quit, says Maradona

Diego Maradona

BUENOS AIRES, 20 July — Diego Maradona said that were he Argentina coach Sergio Batista he would quit following the side's early Copa America exit.

The Argentine Football Association says it will keep Batista on as coach despite their quarter-final loss on penalties to Uruguay - he only succeeded Maradona after last summer's World Cup quarters loss to Germany.

But Maradona says that decision is wrong-headed. "If I had only beaten Costa Rica, (Argentina's sole Copa success) I would have gone of my own accord," Maradona told Radio Belgrano on Tuesday.

"What is happening right now is not the fault of the players. Julio Grondona is doing just what he likes," Maradona asserted, in allusion to the AFA president, with whom he was in regular conflict during his ill-fated stint as coach.

Golf means never taking anything for granted

SANDWICH, 20 July — Dustin Johnson probably doesn't think he'll have to wait 15 years to win a major.

He already has won four times in his four years on the PGA Tour, and he has played in the final group at three of the last six majors. That doesn't happen by accident. To say Johnson is the most talented American golfer won't get much of an argument. Then again, a young Darren Clarke might have thought the same thing.

Clarke was among the new faces in European golf that helped inspire a slow revival in the late 1990s. He might not have had the raw skill of someone like Johnson, but a major figured to be in his future.

He played in the final group at Royal Troon in 1997. He took down Tiger Woods at the 2000 Match Play Championship when Woods was at the absolute top of his game.

Martin confirms quit desire

LYON, 20 July — Sochaux's French international midfielder Marvin Martin confirmed on Tuesday that he hopes to secure a transfer away from the Ligue 1 club.

"I would like to leave," Martin, who scored a double in a 4-1 win over

Sochaux's French international midfielder Marvin Martin

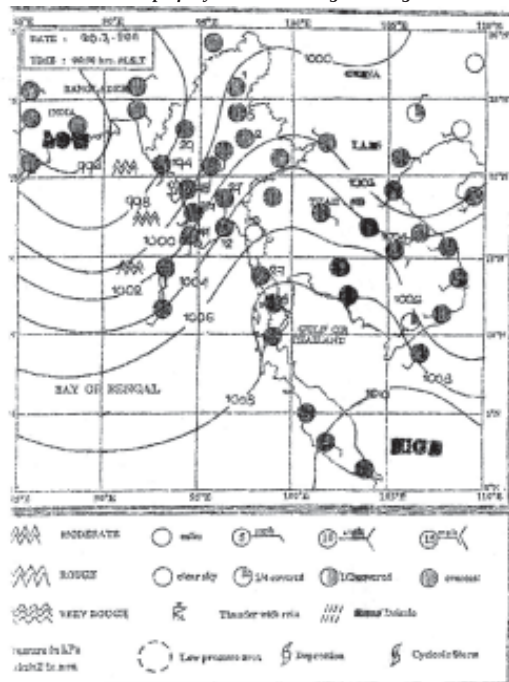

Ukraine on his international debut last month, told AFP.

Martin, 23, who is under contract with Sochaux until 2014, also said that he hopes the club's president Alexandre Lacombe will agree to let him go should he receive an acceptable offer.

Lacombe had previously said that Martin, who was the inspiration behind Sochaux's fine 2010/11 season, in which they finished fifth in the French top flight, was "not for sale at any price".

Leopard injures 11 people in India before dying

KOLKATA, 20 July—A leopard that mauled 11 people in a fierce showdown with Indian villagers has died of knife wounds after being captured.

The snarling adult, male leopard leapt at locals and forest officials as they tried to drive it into a wildlife sanctuary in West Bengal state.

Forest official Dharma Dev Rai says villagers used knives, stones and batons to beat back the cat. It injured six villagers, a policeman and four forest guards before being hit with a tranquilizer gun Tuesday.

The cat died within hours, and a post mortem is being conducted. It happened near Siliguri, about 373 miles (600 kilometres) from Kolkata.

The people are recovering from their injuries, mostly swipes from the cat's claws.

Leopards are protected in India though more are straying into villages for food.

13 killed, 86 injured in Uzbekistan by earthquake

TASHKENT, 20 July—Thirteen people were killed and 86 injured in Uzbekistan when an earthquake struck the Uzbek-Kyrgyz border area overnight Tuesday, the Uzbek Emergency Ministry said Wednesday.

Several old buildings were also destroyed in the Uzbek city of Fergana. The injured were provided with first aid, with 35 of them hospitalized, the ministry said.

The earthquake, measuring 6.2 on the Richter scale, occurred at about 1:35 am local time Wednesday (1935 GMT Tuesday), with the epicentre inside neighboring Kyrgyzstan but 42 km southwest of Fergana, the US Geological Survey said.

Currently, no report on the casualties in Kyrgyzstan is available.—Xinhua

Duck farming, a main source of income of Thanatpin

It was a sunny day on which I arrived in Thanatpin, Bago District, Bago Region, for the second time. The first time I was there, summer rice was at harvest and thriving yellowish rice paddies stretching as far as I could see were reflected in the sun. This time, I was there to visit duck farms in Thanatpin Township.

When I asked about duck farming in the region, Head of Thanatpin Township Livestock Breeding

By Peinzalok Thein Nyunt

and Veterinary Department Dr Tun Hla Sein said that their region was rich in water resources; that most of the duck farms in the township were along Bago-Sittoung Canal; that the region had about 300 duck farms raising close to 500,000 ducks; that 12 veterinary (See page 10)
