Upgrade development of human resources

At present, building an education-centred human society can modernize the nation and keep it abreast of other nations. In consequence, the nation will be peaceful while people can be united with sound foundations in the changing situations.

All the citizens are to abide by Our Three Main National Causes as national duty. To be able to successfully uphold the objectives: Our Three Main National Causes, the nation needs political, economic and defence might. In fact, continuously turning out highly-qualified human resources plays a pivotal role in strengthening of above might.

As a matter of fact, the government is striving for development of human resources across the nation including new generation youths. As a main task, the education sector is to focus not only on improvement of modern science and technology but also on harmonious development of arts.

Basic education is a key role in education sector. It is necessary to nurture the youths with literature for firmly adoring the genuine patriotism and the Union Spirit. Emergence of intellectuals and intelligentsia can educate the people to be rational. As such, they would have strengthened mental power with consideration.

High IQ people can build a law-abiding human society. Moreover, they will have firm patriotism and capabilities of preserving national culture.

Nowadays, a new nation is being built through a new system. Therefore, all the teachers in education sector are to uplift human resources for promotion of education standard while discharging their duties in the basic education sector.

Twin explosions rock British compound in Kabul

KABUL, 19 Aug—Two suicide bombers attacked a British compound in the Afghan Capital on Friday, killing at least twelve people and wounding two, police and eyewitnesses said. An official from the British Embassy, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to discuss the incident, confirmed that there had been an attack against the British Council building on the west side of Kabul. He said the British Embassy was in contact with Afghan authorities at the scene.

A spokesman for the Taliban, Zabiullah Mujahid, claimed responsibility for the attack. The two blasts occurred in the early hours of Afghan Independence Day, marking Afghanistan's full independence from Britain in 1919. It was unclear whether the attack was related to the anniversary.

Kabul police official Farooq Asas said a suicide bomber detonated a car laden with explosives outside the compound. At least one militant attacked the compound on foot, Asas said.

Common childhood virus kills 81 Vietnamese kids

HANOI, 19 Aug—Vietnam's Prime Minister has put the country on alert as hand, foot and mouth disease continues to surge, killing 81 children and sickening more than 32,000 nationwide so far this year.

A government website said Friday that Prime Minister Nguyen Tan Dung has called for stepped-up efforts to prevent and control the spread of the common childhood illness. It is raging hardest in the country's south, where nearly 80 percent of cases have been reported.

The disease is typically mild, with its telltale symptoms of rash, mouth sores and blisters covering hands and feet. However, the World Health Organization's acting country representative for Vietnam says a more severe strain has been identified in about a third of the cases.

Billowing dust storm engulfs downtown Phoenix

PHOENIX, 19 Aug—A billowing wall of dust engulfed downtown Phoenix on Thursday, cutting visibility to a few hundred yards and delaying flights at the international airport, authorities and news reports said.

Driving rains and winds gusting at nearly 60 miles per hour also buffeted San Tan Valley, southeast of Phoenix in the early evening, according to the National Weather Service.

Roaring gusts downed trees and power lines in Pinal County, trapping drivers in their cars and preventing commuters from reaching their homes south of the state capital.

"This storm hit during a very busy time for traffic, bringing down power lines over several miles on top of cars with visibility near zero," Pinal County Sheriff's Office spokesman Elias Johnson said in a statement.

Deputies "will keep residents out until we can determine their safety is no longer at risk," he added.

The dust storm prevented planes from taking off or landing at Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport for about 40 minutes, The Arizona Republic newspaper reported. A call to the airport seeking confirmation of the delays was not immediately returned on Thursday.—Reuters

Rising hunger in south Ethiopia despite lush green

SHEBEDINO, 19 Aug—Malnourished children are flocking into feeding centres in this forested corner of southern Ethiopia after a drought in East Africa extended into this normally fertile region.

While the famine in southern Somalia has grabbed headlines, southern Ethiopia is teetering on the brink of a food crisis. The Ethiopian government says 250,000 people need food aid amid what the UN says is the worst drought in 60 years. An aid organization and agricultural officials say the number of people who need emergency food aid in Ethiopia is bigger, around 700,000. The rains never came as they usually do late February to the end of May. If they fail again in August, there won't be a harvest in September. People without food aid will "definitely be in trouble," World Food Programme officer Yohannes Desta said. "Do these people have enough resilience to survive? I don't think so."

About 1.3 million southerners received aid earlier this year from a government safety net programme that ended in June, Yohannes said. Most of those people, whom he calls the "poorest of the poor," still require emergency relief, but instead must scrape by on the few crops they have left or through the goodwill of more fortunate family members or neighbours.

Afghan official: 21 people killed by roadside bomb

KABUL, 19 Aug—A roadside bomb killed at least 21 passengers travelling on a minibus Thursday in western Afghanistan, another example of civilians being caught in the crossfire of fighting between Taliban militants and the US-led coalition.

In the country's east, a suicide car bomber attacked a coalition base Thursday, killing two Afghan security guards, officials said, and the Taliban claimed responsibility for the attack. The minibus ran over a roadside bomb in Obe District in Herat Province, setting off a blast that killed 21 passengers, said Gen Zaiuddin Mamoodi, an Afghan National Police commander for four Provinces of western Afghanistan. Twelve of the victims were children under the age of 5, three were women and six were men, he said.

Mosquito resistance to bednets fuels malaria worries

LONDON, 19 Aug—Mosquitoes can quickly develop resistance to insecticide-treated nets, a study from Senegal shows, raising fears that a leading method of preventing the disease may be less effective than previously thought.

Researchers who studied malaria infections in a village in the West African country found that growing resistance to a common type of insecticide by Anopheles gambiae mosquitoes — the species responsible for transmitting malaria to humans in Africa — is causing the disease to rebound.

"These findings are of great concern," the researchers, led by Jean-Francois Trape from the Development Research Institute in Dakar, wrote in a study in The Lancet Infectious Diseases journal on Thursday.

Despite decades of efforts to beat it with insecticides, indoor spraying, bednets and combination drugs, malaria still kills nearly 800,000 people a year, most of them babies and young children in sub-Saharan Africa.

Trape pointed to studies from Africa and South America which have suggested resistance to common insecticides is on the rise, and said this could have serious implications for malaria control strategies, particularly since there are few alternative insecticides that are effective, cheap and safe for humans.

BofA cutting 3,500 jobs this quarter

SINGAPORE, 19 Aug—Bank of America is cutting 3,500 jobs this quarter according to an internal memo, as the biggest US bank grapples with its $1 trillion problem-loan portfolio and growing economic concerns. The job cuts at Bank of America, expected to be completed by the end of September, are the latest in a series of lay-offs across the global finance industry. "The third quarter reductions in force are not part of the New BAC Project, through which employees and managers are working to transform policies, practices and organizations to better align to the company's customer-driven strategy," an internal communications seen by Reuters said. Bank of America was not immediately available for comment outside regular US business hours. Executives at the bank are still discussing the possible range of cuts, but one person familiar with the situation said at least 10,000 jobs are likely to be eliminated as part of a wider review, the Wall Street Journal said in a report. Bank of America had around 280,000 employees at the start of 2011, according to its annual report. Investors believe Bank of America may also need to raise money by offering new shares to help absorb billions in legal and credit costs stemming from its 2008 purchase of Countrywide Financial Corp.

Eager to shed assets and rebuild its battered capital base, Bank of America said on Monday it plans to sell its $8.6 billion Canadian credit card portfolio to TD Bank Group.

Milk better than H₂O for child dehydration

HAMILTON, 19 Aug—Milk is a more effective way of countering dehydration in children than a sports drink or water, researchers at McMaster University in Ontario say.

Principal investigator Brian Timmons, research director of the Child Health and Exercise Medicine Programme at McMaster University, says milk replaces sodium lost in sweat and helps the body retain fluid better. In addition, milk provides protein — not found in other drinks — that children need for muscle development and growth, Timmons says.

"Children become dehydrated during exercise, and it's important they get enough fluids, particularly before going into a second round of a game," Timmons says in a statement.

"Milk is better than either a sports drink or water because it is a source of high quality protein, carbohydrates, calcium and electrolytes."—Internet

Manufacturing gauge drops to 2-1/2 year low

WASHINGTON, 19 Aug—Factory activity in the US Mid-Atlantic region slumped to a nearly 2-1/2 year low in August and home resales unexpectedly dropped last month, dampening hopes for a quick revival in economic growth.

Other data on Thursday also pointed to a bit of inflation in the economy, which could make the Federal Reserve hesitant to ease monetary policy further to stimulate the economy.

Global stocks tumbled on the extremely weak regional manufacturing data that investors viewed as a sign the recovery was on the rocks. But economists cautioned against reading too much into the survey, which was conducted during a period of exceptional turmoil in financial markets.

The Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank's business activity index plummeted to minus 30.7 in August, the lowest level since March 2009 when the economy was in recession, from 3.2 in July. A reading below zero indicates a contraction in the region's manufacturing.

Only 1 in 5 medical malpractice cases pay

HEALTH

ATLANTA, 19 Aug—Only 1 in 5 malpractice claims against doctors leads to a settlement or other payout, according to the most comprehensive study of these claims in two decades.

But while doctors and their insurers may be winning most of these challenges, that's still a lot of fighting. Each year about 1 in 14 doctors is the target of a claim, and most physicians and virtually every surgeon will face at least one in their careers, the study found.

Malpractice cases carry a significant emotional cost for doctors, said study co-author Amitabh Chandra, an economist and professor of public policy at the Harvard Kennedy School of Government.

"They hate having their name dragged through the local newspaper and having to go to court," he said.

The study might seem to support a common opinion among doctors that most malpractice lawsuits are baseless, but the authors said the truth is more complicated than that.

They noted influential earlier research in New York State concluding that just a tiny fraction of the patients harmed by medical mistakes actually file claims.

Trial lawyers say cost is a barrier to bringing a claim to court. There are very high up-front costs for hiring expert witnesses and preparing a case. Doctors, hospitals and their insurers often have significant money and legal firepower. Some states also have caps on malpractice awards. So, usually, only very strong cases with high expected payouts are pursued.—Internet

Russia loses newly launched telecom satellite

Moscow, 19 Aug—Russia lost contact with a communications satellite shortly after its launch Thursday, the government space agency said, the latest in a series of failures that has dogged the nation's space programme.

The Express-AM4 satellite, described by officials as Russia's most powerful telecommunications satellite, was launched atop a Proton-M booster rocket from the Russia-leased Baikonur cosmodrome in Kazakhstan.

The Federal Space Agency said in a statement the booster itself worked fine, but a subsequent failure of the additional upper stage, the Briz-M, resulted in the loss of communications with the satellite. It said efforts were being made to re-establish contact with the 5.8-ton (6.38-ton) craft.

The satellite has been insured for 7.5 billion rubles (about $260 million or euro180 million) with Russian Ingosstrakh insurance company.

The satellite was to be put into a geostationary orbit to provide digital TV broadcasting for Russia's far eastern regions. Broadcasters said that the failure would likely delay the planned transfer to digital TV.

The Briz-M upper stage has experienced several failures, most recently in February when its malfunction led to the loss of a Russian military satellite.

In December 2010, another technical glitch led to the loss of three GLONASS-M navigation satellites, which were to be part of Russia's satellite navigation system

Critters moving away from global warming faster

WASHINGTON, 19 Aug—Animals across the world are fleeing global warming by heading north much faster than they were less than a decade ago, a new study says.

About 2,000 species examined are moving away from the equator at an average rate of more than 15 feet per day, about a mile per year, according to new research published Thursday in the journal Science which analyzed previous studies. Species are also moving up mountains to escape the heat, but more slowly, averaging about 4 feet a year.

The species — mostly from the Northern Hemisphere and including plants — moved in fits and starts, but over several decades it averages to about 8 inches an hour away from the equator.

"The speed is an important issue," said study main author Chris Thomas of the University of York. "It is faster than we thought."

Included in the analysis was a 2003 study that found species moving north at a rate of just more than a third of a mile per year and up at a rate of 2 feet a year. Camille Parmesan of the University of Texas, who conducted that study, said the new research makes sense because her data ended around the late 1990s and the 2000s were far hotter.

Federal weather data show the last decade was the hottest on record, and 2010 tied with 2005 for the hottest year on record. Gases from the burning of fossil fuel, especially carbon dioxide, are trapping heat in the atmosphere, warming the Earth and changing the climate in several ways, according to the overwhelming majority of scientists and the world's top scientific organizations.

As the temperatures soared in the 2000s, the species studied moved faster to cooler places, Parmesan said.—Internet

Map shows all ice movement in Antarctica

Science

PASADENA, 19 Aug—Researchers conducting a NASA-funded study say they have used radar data to create the first complete map of the speed and direction of ice flow in Antarctica.

Created using radar observations from a large number of international satellites, the map shows glaciers flowing thousands of miles from the continent's deep interior to its coast — and will be critical for tracking future sea-level increases from climate change, a release from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif, said Thursday. "This is like seeing a map of all the oceans' currents for the first time.

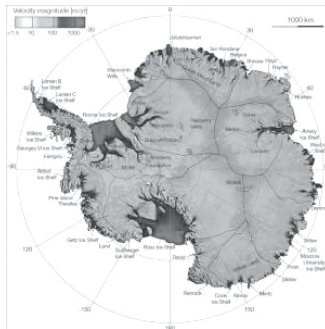

It's a game changer for glaciology," said Eric Rignot of JPL and the University of California, Irvine. "We are seeing amazing flows from the heart of the continent that had never been described before."

Rignot and Irvine colleagues Jeremie Mouginot and Bernd Scheuchl used massive amounts of data captured by European, Japanese and Canadian satellites to remove out cloud cover, solar glare and land features masking the glaciers.

Using NASA technology, the team patiently pieced together the shape and velocity of glacial formations.

The map revealed glacial formations moving as much as 800 feet per year across immense plains sloping toward the Antarctic Ocean.—Internet

Software said to improve GPS accuracy

COLUMBUS, 19 Aug—US researchers working on the accuracy of GPS location say they have set their sights on the third dimension with software to improve altitude measurements. While most people are generally concerned with pinpointing their own location in two dimensions on Earth's surface, the third dimension of altitude has always been available through GPS — but the accuracy has always been lower than that of the horizontal coordinates, researchers at Ohio State University said.

They're working on software that in initial tests provided vertical accuracy to centimeter-scales — a matter of inches, a university release said Wednesday. As the level of GPS precision increases, the researchers say, so do potential applications of the technology for scientific research, said Dorota Grejner-Brzezinska, OSU professor of civil and environmental engineering.

For example, extremely accurate measurements in the vertical dimension could identify changes in hazardous regions at high altitudes, recognizing small shifts in soft, loose land that may be prone to landslides, researchers said. The software could be used to measure how quickly glaciers at high altitudes are melting, they said.—Internet

As result of implementing economic objectives with...

In order to improve the whole economic infrastructure of the nation, we have to review basically the monetary policy, fiscal policy, trade policy and investment policy to amend the laws, rules and procedures as necessary in the interest of the nation and the people. Therefore, we are holding talks with economic experts, departmental officials and related associations and organizations. In that case, the government and the people have to keep working together till the resolutions of the workshop are accomplished.

Distinguished guests,

When it comes to the world's economy, it is common knowledge that the global financial crisis, climate changes, food security and energy shortage have become challenges of the world countries and people. We have to conserve the environment in all seriousness and take account of the possible impact of climate changes. The impact of climate changes on the macroeconomy is external variable. So, it is hard to overcome the efforts on the macroeconomy. Such natural disasters as cyclone "Nargis" and cyclone "Giri" had strong impact on Myanmar's economy, but the nation made quick recovery from the catastrophes due to the cooperation of the government, the Tatmadaw, the people, international and regional organizations and international non-governmental organizations.

Our country has made economic reforms since 1988. In the time of the Tatmadaw government, macroeconomic reforms were made systematically. Therefore, our country did not suffer much in the 1997 Asian financial crisis and the 2008 global financial crisis. The reforms protected the nation's economy from the crises to some extent, so the impact on the national economy was not strong. That is one of the external variables.

From 1988 onwards, there was a gradual fall in foreign countries' Official Development Assistance (ODA) to Myanmar. Some years later, western countries imposed economic sanctions against our country. So, there have been many external influences on the macroeconomy. We had to address so many issues amid the external influences on the self-reliant basis for national development.

As a result of implementing economic objectives with a variety of strategies for economic development, the nation's economy is now on the track to development. We can achieve greater success if we approach the present fiscal and monetary policies, banking services, and macroeconomic policies for industrial development in combination with such supporting policies as infrastructure development policies and institutional framework policies in order to speed up the economic growth momentum and conform to the objective conditions of the world. It is notable that those points make considerable contributions towards the Myanmar's macroeconomy.

One of Myanmar's economic objectives "Development of agriculture as the base and all-round development of other sectors of the economy as well" has been replaced with "Building of modern industrialized nation through the agricultural development, and all-round development of other sectors of the economy".

The economic objective "Proper evolution of the market-oriented economic system" has remained unchanged. For economic growth of the nation, we have not only to boost domestic productivity for proper evolution of the market-oriented economic system and to widen the local market alone but also to gain greater shares in the international market. Our country can enjoy economic development only if all the goods can be delivered to both local and international markets, in other words we can deal with both domestic and international markets independently. There was a slowdown in the national economy in recent years. External support for proper evolution of the market-oriented economic system was low despite earnest efforts to boost local productivity and achieve the goal. Some local products were banned from the international market, and that caused effects on the economy of farmers. Therefore, our country had to make all-out efforts to achieve the New Millennium Goals.

Distinguished guests,

Economic development of a country somewhat means improvement of the macroeconomic infrastructure. So, in general, economic development of a country is measured based on its Gross Domestic Products (GDP) and changes, job opportunities for people, and changes in values of exports. In order for improvement of the macroeconomic infrastructure, every country has to enhance macroeconomic performance to achieve the goals of boosting production, creating more job opportunities, free trade and stability of price, and ensuring smooth foreign trade. In its bid to implement the four macroeconomic goals, the government persuades local organizations to practise the fiscal policy, monetary policy, foreign economic policy and income policy. Such reforms help boost national competitiveness.

In making macroeconomic reforms, management and procedures must be transparent. To ensure that economic enterprises will not be diverted away from their courses, and to set up an enabling business environment, we should use all possible ways and means as well as cut the bureaucratic red-tapism. Only then will it be possible to improve the socioeconomic status of the people through more investments from national and foreign entrepreneurs and commercial growth.

Therefore, we need to lure more Foreign Direct Investment (FDI), create enough economic atmospheres and infrastructural buildings and grant certain economic freedom to beef up the improvement of the macroeconomic infrastructure. More FDI will flow into the nation only if foreign investors have gained knowledge of the sources and opportunities for investments in respective sectors.

Distinguished guests,

According to the globalization process, cooperation among regional countries is more effective than doing business individually in pursuing the goal of economic growth. Therefore, our country is working in cooperation with the ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA), and a common goal has been set up to create ASEAN Economic Community (AEC) by 2015. In that regard, we are taking necessary measures such as reducing the rates of customs duties, getting rid of non-customs trade barriers, standardizing and loosening trade and customs rules and regulations, programmes and procedures, granting skilled workers freedom of occupation, working in cooperation with international and regional organizations, boosting cooperation between private sectors and between economic sectors of member countries, and transferring technologies. I would remind that the private sector know those measures and prepare itself for opportunities.

Distinguished guests,

We should avoid quantity drive without bearing quality in mind. We should view everything in multi-dimensional aspects for sustainable development. A country can enjoy quality growth only if the gap between poor and rich is low and everyone has access to the fruits of the development tasks. That is why the government has given the top priority to rural and regional development. Every country has to keep equity and efficiency proportionately for balanced growth. In addition, our government is taking steps for ensuring good governance and clean government in making macroeconomic reforms for stabilizing the macro economy. It is therefore needed to combat partiality and enforce rules and regulations.

Not only governmental departments, and officials at all levels but also economic organizations, NGOs, social organizations, profit organizations, non-profit organizations and shareholders are all responsible for ensuring good governance. All those responsible must have good conducts and behaviours for ensuring good governance.

Distinguished guests,

Self Governance is of vital importance in societal governance. If only each individual can practise freedom, responsibility and discipline harmoniously and correctly, can democratic practices thrive among stakeholders in the whole society, leading to emergence of a society contributing to good governance. If only there is good governance, can there be good society and vice versa.

The first five-year period is the most important period in building modern, developed democratic nation. If only we can take firm, right steps in this five-year period, can we see the promising future of the nation. To ensure there is no government failure, we need to promote quality of management in putting macroeconomic policies into practice and distributing resources, and have to avoid coordination failure, top down and corruption. It is every one's knowledge that we are diminishing the role of government but highlighting the role of private sector to stress the market economy. Although we are decreasing the role of the government, the governmental departments, need to have increased efficiency and effectiveness. In building the nation, people and private sector play sector-wise roles, calling for cooperation, discussion and coordination, and so on. We cannot hope that the national economy can keep pace with other economies just with the government's efforts to be good governance, but we have to specially rebuild the spirit, qualifications, efforts and coordination of the private sector, the key player of the national economy, to create good business environment. I would like to urge you to strive for this.

In nations, human and institutional ability has become crucially important. As for the role of the institution, they must be the ones that understand the policies, vision and missions of their own country and have the ability to accomplish them. They should not be superficial organizations but must have certain objectives and act with efficiency and effectiveness.

Distinguished guests,

As a part of good governance, we can achieve proper, fair and promising environment in the market only if the economic structure is ethical, accountable and proper and disciplinary environment. We need to have flexibly operative and moderately competitive market economic system to create innovative, modern and systematic private sector. Only then, there will emerge jobs among people, providing property and income. Only then, we can utilize resources in right places.

Only mutual trust between the government and the people can smooth the path to public-private relationship and run the administrative mechanism, contributing to development of the society.

In the reform of macroeconomic policies, there might be situations of sacrifices so as to achieve better results for the people and that we need to prepare in our mind for it. Scholars and officials concerned are also to focus on flexibility and correct ratio of policy reforms in pursuing mixture of macroeconomic policies.

In conclusion, we have invited not only Union Ministries, but chief ministers of Regions and States, bankers, businessmen, representatives of institutions, who will implement the works at grass-root levels, to this workshop. And also, we have invited economists and representatives from other worthwhile fields. I would like you to make suggestions and also assess and coordinate the strength and weakness, and advantages and disadvantages of the results of discussion.

As the macroeconomics has a wide field, there can emerge suggestions from different aspects. Each person's point of view may prove his own case, but I would like to urge you to make coordination for better status at policy-making level. Then we can adopt work programmes through such discussions and assessment. To conclude my speech, I would like to urge the government and the entire nation, people from all walks of life, to give a hand in promoting macroeconomic policy as a national duty to ensure further social and economic development.

Chinese herbal medicine effective in treatment of H1N1 Influenza

BEIJING, 19 Aug—A controlled trial has found that Chinese herbal medicine decoction maxingshigan-yinqiaosan has a similar efficacy to oseltamivir in reducing time to fever resolution in people suffering mild H1N1 influenza virus infections.

Carried out by a group of Chinese researchers, headed by Prof Wang Chen with Beijing Chao-Yang Hospital under the Capital Medical University, the study was published by the famous internal medicine journal Ann Intern Med on Tuesday.

Participants of the trial were 410 young adults aged 15 to 59 years with laboratory-confirmed H1N1 influenza.

The researchers concluded that both active intervention, alone and in combination, were effective in reducing time to fever resolution in young adults with H1N1 flu, and therefore suggest that maxingshigan-yinqiaosan may be an alternative to oseltamivir.

Indonesia holds expo to support mother, children health

JAKARTA, 19 Aug—An expo to support mother and children health opened on Friday in Indonesia and a minister said that it could help the government's efforts to achieve targets in the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs).

Minister for Women's Empowerment and Children Protection Linda Amalia Sari Gumelar in her welcoming remarks said that she was happy as private sector also moves to provide information to the public about the importance of healthy growth and protection for children.

"Hopefully, this would help the government achieve targets in the MDGs, especially points number four, five and six, which are reaching gender equality, reducing infant and maternal mortality rate, increasing mother's health as well as reducing spread of HIV/AIDS and other contagious diseases," said Gumelar at "Mom's Babies and Kids Expo" on 19-21 August.

She said that based on Data of Demographic Survey 2007 released by the Central Bureau of Statistics every five years, Maternal Mortality Rate due to pregnancy, giving birth and after giving birth was still at 228/100,000 of live birth.

Meanwhile, she added, Infant Mortality Rate was still at 34/1,000 of live birth.

Beau: Dog who knows math

Beau is an extraordinary Labrador for his intelligence and math ability.

According to media reports, Beau, a black Lab from Montana, United States, can add and subtract, even calculate square roots.

He can also answer questions about the number of people, golf and football scores through barking.

For instance, when there was a group of people standing, his owner, David Madsen, asked him how many people there were. There were two and Beau barked twice, "Woof, woof." Beau's answer was correct about 85 percent of the time.

At first, some suspected that Madsen might be secretly signaling the dog, but Beau could calculate accurately in the absence of his owner.

Beau had auditioned on the CBS "Late Show with David Letterman", a late-night talk show. The clips of his performance were shown in a local station and became well-known then.

Sugarland tour resumes in NM after stage tragedy

ALBUQUERQUE, 19 Aug—Sugarland returned to the stage on Thursday for their first performance since a stage collapse at the Indiana State Fair killed five people. The Grammy-winning country duo asked its Albuquerque audience for a moment of silence in honor of those who were wounded "and the beautiful lives that were lost."

Sugarland members Jennifer Nettles and Kristian Bush were minutes from performing at the fair in Indianapolis last Saturday when 60 to 70 mph winds gusts knocked the massive stage onto the audience. Four were killed instantly, another person died later. About four dozen others were hurt.

On Thursday, the duo was joined on stage by their entire crew as Nettles sang "Love," from their 2008 "Love on the Inside" album. Then they took a break and promised to return for a professional show that would begin the healing through "the power of music." Because the band's elaborate set and instruments were destroyed in the stage collapse,

Brad Pitt shoots zombie movie in Glasgow

LONDON, 19 Aug—A smiling Brad Pitt has been seen waving to fans in the Scottish City of Glasgow as he left the set of his latest movie "World War Z."

The US actor was in town this week to shoot the zombie horror movie, which is based on a book by Max Brooks. Paramount film studio has made every effort to keep the movie under wraps. The set is closed to all media and no production details have been released.

The centre of Glasgow has been transformed to depict Philadelphia in the aftermath of a war between humans and zombies. Shooting is expected to last two weeks. The Glasgow Film Office says the movie involves almost 1,200 people and will pour over 2 million pounds ($3.3 million) into the local economy.—Internet

Chelsea capture Lukaku

LONDON, 19 Aug—Romelu Lukaku declared it was a dream come true after completing his move to Chelsea from Anderlecht. The London club have confirmed on their website that the deal has been finalised after the two clubs agreed a fee, thought to be between £15m and £20m, for the highly-rated 18-year-old earlier this month. The striker underwent a medical at the Blues' training ground in Cobham last week and will now be available for Saturday's Barclays Premier League match against West Bromwich Albion.

"Amazing. It's a dream come true," the Belgium international told the club's official website. MASON, OHIO, 19 Aug—World number two Rafa Nadal scraped into the quarter-final's of the Cincinnati open after beating fellow Spaniard Fernando Verdasco 7-6 6-7 7-6 in a fierce battle on Thursday but his rivals all had comfortable paths into the last eight.

Seven of the top eight seeds have reached the quarter-finals with world number one Novak Djokovic and rivals Roger Federer and Andy Murray having little trouble.

Nadal will face Mardy Fish in the quarter-finals after the American beat France's Richard Gasquet 7-5 7-5.

World number one Djokovic took his season record to 55-1 with a straight forward 6-3 6-3 win over Czech Radek stepanek.

Djokovic showed some signs of weariness and conceded that it was a game he needed to push himself through.

Britain's Andy Murray had a relatively comfortable 6-2 7-5 win over American qualifier Alex Bogomolov.

The win gave Murry revenge for his poor defeat to Bogomolov in Miami earlier this year. Murry will now play Frenchman Gilles Simon, who produced the only real surprise of the day when he beat fifth-seed Spaniard David Ferrer 6-4 6-7 6-4.

Switzerland's Federer, looking relaxed and composed, took just 55 minutes to defeat American James Blake 6-4 6-1 and he will now meet Czech Tomas Berdych who easily dealt with Spain's Nicolas Almagro 6-2 6-2.

Nadal needs 3-tiebreaker match to advance

MASON, 19 Aug—Rafael Nadal wanted to play a lot of tennis at the Western & Southern Open, though maybe not all in one day. Nadal survived a three-set, three-tiebreaker match against fellow Spaniard Fernando Verdasco on Thursday, advancing to the quarterfinals with a 7-6 (5), 6-7 (4), 7-6 (9) victory that kept him on court for 3 hours, 38 minutes. Then, he played a doubles match that went an hour and 10 minutes, followed by interviews. How'd he feel? "Fantastic," he said, smiling broadly. Feeling good, back in the quarterfinals, along with Novak Djokovic and Roger Federer.

The top three players in the men's bracket advanced on Thursday. Djokovic beat qualifier Radek Stepanek 6-3, 6-3 in a ragged match, improving to 31-0 on hard courts this year and 55-1 overall.

Walcott backs Wenger to strengthen

LONDON, 19 Aug—Arsenal winger Theo Walcott is "sure" manager Arsene Wenger is on the verge of strengthening his squad. Wenger had come under pressure from fans to add to his ranks this summer, even before the sale of captain Cesc Fabregas to Barcelona earlier this week. And now, after an opening-day draw at Newcastle United and a hard-fought home win over Udinese in their Champions League play-off and with injuries mounting ahead of a crunch period that involves matches against Liverpool and Manchester United, Walcott has joined the calls for new recruits.

"This team has always been known for being young. But we can't use that as an excuse any more. We have to win something this season," he said. "It is important to have a mixture of experience and young players - but the boss knows what he is doing. He has picked up great players before. Only time will tell what he is going to do."

Cech out for up to a month

LONDON, 19 Aug—Chelsea goalkeeper Petr Cech has been ruled out for three to four weeks after suffering a knee injury in training. The 29-year-old Czech Republic international fell awkwardly at the end of training yesterday and will now miss Saturday's Barclays Premier League match with West Bromwich Albion and the following weekend's visit of Norwich City. Manager Andre Villas-Boas will pick Hilario or Ross Turnbull inbetween the posts as new signing Thibault Courtois is on loan at Atletico Madrid.

He said: "Petr Cech yesterday suffered a medial ligament injury and will be out for three to four weeks. "It was the end of training, a normal training incident. "He fell awkwardly with his weight on top of him. We expected much worse when we saw the incident."

Sao Paulo draw 1-1 with America-MG

RIO DE JANEIRO, 19 Aug—Favorite against the struggling America-MG in the 17th round of the 2011 Brazilian Championship, Sao Paulo meandered to a frustrating 1-1 draw on Thursday.

Sao Paulo scored the game's first goal in the closing minutes of the match. In the 85th minute Marlos picked up on a deflected ball and angled it past the defense and in to the America-MG net.

However, the home team responded quickly and scored the equalizer in the 87th minute when Kempes scored an amazing goal, connecting a bicycle kick that drove the ball into the upper left corner of the Sao Paulo goal, catching veteran keeper Rogerio Ceni off guard.

Although disappointing, the result propelled Sao Paulo into third place with 33 points. The team missed the opportunity to land in second place due to second place Flamengo's loss.

In the next round of play the team will receive Palmeiras in a cross-town showdown on August 21.

America-MG remain in twentieth and last place of the tournament with 12 points. In the next round of play the team will travel to play Atletico-PR on August 21.

As result of implementing economic objectives with variety of strategies, national economy is now on track to development

Cooperation among regional countries more effective than doing business individually in pursuit of economic growth

NAY PYI TAW, 19 Aug—The following is a translation of the full text of the speech delivered by President U Thein Sein at the National Workshop on Reforms for National Economic Development held today.

President U Thein Sein delivers an address at National Workshop on Reforms for National Economic Development.

MNA

Union Ministers, deputy ministers, ministers of Region and State governments, departmental officials, economic experts, entrepreneurs, representatives from associations and other attendees, first, I would like to extend my warmest greetings to you.

The workshop aims to make macroeconomic policy reforms to scale up economic development. In order to put this objective into reality, we will seek pragmatic approaches to the reforms to be made with the advice and suggestions from the economic experts, representatives from governmental departments and banking associations, entrepreneurs, and officials from other associations and organizations.

Distinguished guests,

The National Workshop on Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation was held last May. Now, the Central Committee, Work Committee, subcommittees, and State and Region subcommittees for Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation are implementing the eight tasks under the Action Plan for the convenience of rural people in their livelihoods. Only now can experts and ministries organize the national workshop on promotion of the macroeconomic policy due to its broad sphere.

All countries have made macroeconomic reforms in a period or another for economic and social development. A country has different location, natural resources, population, objective conditions, international relations and historical ground from country. So, they have different levels of economic strength. However, the same point is that successive governments and the people of every country tried to keep abreast of other countries in development.

Our new government is in pursuit of the goal of building a modern and developed nation in order to catch up with other countries. Economic growth lies at the centre of that drive.

National Workshop on Reforms for National Economic Development held

NAY PYI TAW, 19 Aug—Economic experts, governmental departments, banking associations, entrepreneurs, and officials from other related associations and organizations have to seek pragmatic approaches to the reforms, bringing into account their advice and suggestions for making and achieving the macroeconomic policy for economic growth of the nation, said President U Thein Sein at National Workshop on Reforms for National Economic Development at the International Convention Centre in Zabuthiri Township, Nay Pyi Taw Council Area, this afternoon.

The workshop aimed to accelerate Myanmar's economic growth focused on talks about macroeconomic management, workforce and job opportunities, trade and investment, fiscal and monetary policy.

It was also attended by Vice-President Dr Sai Mauk Kham, Union Ministers, deputy ministers, Region and State ministers for Planning and Economic, Hluttaw members, departmental heads, representatives from political parties, economic experts, resource persons, officials from NGOs, journalists and distinguished guests.

After addressing the opening ceremony, the President cordially greeted the attendees.

(The address of the President is reported separately.)

The first-day agenda of the workshop were held at 3 pm.

Adviser to the President Office Dr U Myint presided over Session (1) of the workshop: Macroeconomic Environment Management. Chairman of the Industrial Development Committee Union Minister for Industry 1 and for Industry 2 U Soe Thein read the paper "Industrial Development and Economic Policy"; U San Thein, the paper
