Central committee meets for Mid-year Myanma Gems Emporium

NAY PYI TAW, 4 Dec—The first meeting of the central committee for organizing Mid-year Myanma Gems Emporium 2011 took place at Mani Yadana Jade Hall of Myanma Gems Museum here today.

The meeting was attended by members of panel of patrons of the central committee Union Ministers, vice-chairmen deputy ministers, committee members, Myanmar gems entrepreneurs and others.

Patron of the central committee Union Minister for Mines U Thein Htaik called for making efforts to ensure the successful holding of the mid-year gems emporium like the previous ones. Next, those present also took part in the round of discussion.

Later, the Union Minister gave a concluding remark confirming that the mid-year gems emporium will be held in the last week of December.

Strengthen bilateral friendship through economic cooperation

President U Thein Sein of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar met a goodwill delegation led by Prime Minister Dr. Mikhail V. Myasnikovich of the Republic of Belarus at the Credentials Hall of Presidential Residence on 2 December.

It was the first ever visit that the Belarusian Prime Minister paid to Myanmar, and matters related to bilateral cooperation and mutual interest were discussed. The Prime Minister revealed that although Belarus is geographically far away from Myanmar, it cannot affect the bilateral friendship. Belarus will cooperate with Myanmar in all sectors such as education and trade, he discussed.

President U Thein Sein on his part said Myanmar is making cooperative efforts by inviting investments from neighbouring countries. And now, China, Japan and Republic of Korea are planning to invest in deep-sea port and other businesses.

Seventy percent of the country's population live in rural areas. So, many more job opportunities are needed to reduce the poverty rate of the country and investments are welcomed in agro-based businesses and meat and fish sector, said the President.

As Belarus has a large number of geologists, cooperation can be made in geological projects in Myanmar. It is also hoped that Myanmar will cooperate with Belarus in auto industry, agricultural sector, tourism industry and education sector, noted the Belarusian Prime Minister.

All in all, bilateral discussions on inviting investments not only from the government ministries but also from private sector of Belarus, manufacturing commodities on a cooperative basis to export to the neighbouring countries and promoting bilateral trade will facilitate Myanmar's economic development and further enhance the mutual friendship.

Three NATO troops killed by bomb in Afghanistan

KABUL, 4 Dec—Three troops from the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) were killed by a roadside bomb in eastern Afghanistan Saturday, officials said.

ISAF did not say which country the dead troops were from or give further details of the incident, in line with policy.

There are around 140,000 international troops in Afghanistan fighting a Taliban-led militancy, 100,000 of them from the United States.

“Three International Security Assistance

Force members died following an improvised explosive device attack in eastern Afghanistan today,” a spokesman for the NATO-led ISAF said.

Many of the decade-long Afghan war’s worst fighting takes place in eastern Afghanistan, which is close to the border with Pakistan.

Pakistan closed its supply routes to NATO forces in Afghanistan after 24 Pakistani soldiers were killed by a NATO air strike last Saturday close to the mountainous, porous border, provoking a major diplomatic row between Islamabad and Washington. The latest incident takes to 542 the number of coalition troops killed in Afghanistan this year.

A total of 711 foreign troops were killed in Afghanistan last year, the highest annual total yet in the decade-long war triggered by a US-led invasion in 2001 which ousted the Taliban from power.—Internet

Three killed in building collapse in Indian capital

NEW DELHI, 4 Dec—At least three people were killed, one injured while a few others feared trapped when a four-story building collapsed in the western part of the Indian capital on Saturday, said police.

The incident happened at 11:30 am while some construction was going on in the basement of the building. Rescuers tried to bring out all those trapped inside the building.

Three people were declared brought dead after they were rushed to a nearby hospital.

“Three persons, including two women, were brought dead while a man is undergoing treatment,” Praveena Goel, Deputy Medical Superintendent of the hospital, told media.

Five killed in Iraq attacks

BAGHDAD, 4 Dec—Gun and bomb attacks in Iraq killed five people, including an army brigadier general, and wounded three others on Saturday, security officials said. Unknown gunmen shot dead army Brigadier General Fadhel al-Azul and his wife in the Urr neighbourhood in northern Baghdad, an interior ministry official said.

And a liquor shop near Camp Rashid in central Baghdad was bombed, wounding three people, the official said. Two people were killed when unknown gunmen stormed a house in the southern part of the north Iraq City of Mosul, a first lieutenant in the Mosul police said. And another person was shot dead by gunmen in a nearby area of Mosul, the officer said. Violence has declined in Iraq since its peak in 2006 and 2007, but attacks remain common. Texas drought leaves heartbreaking toll of abandoned horses

SAN ANTONIO, 4 Dec—The yearlong Texas drought is taking a heartbreaking toll on horses and donkeys, thousands of which have been abandoned by owners who can no longer afford the skyrocketing price of the hay needed to feed them.

“We get 20 to 40 calls a week that horses are alongside the road and left; nobody’s claimed them,” Richard Fincher of Safe Haven Equine Rescue in Gilmer, in east Texas, told Reuters. “Sheriffs are calling us all the time.” Before this year, he would get more like three or four calls a week, he said. The problem, according to Dennis Sigler, a horse specialist at Texas A&M University, is that the drought has dried up the hay fields, leaving horse owners having to pay double or triple the prices they are used to paying for hay, if they can find hay at all.

“The price of hay and feed today is at levels we have never experienced before because of the drought,” Sigler said. “In addition to that, pastures are short, and folks who have horses on pasture have no grass for their horses. There is just no market for horses this year.”—Reuters

First significant snow of winter to hit central US

AUSTIN (Tex), 4 Dec—Up to 12 inches of snow was expected to fall in parts of Colorado and New Mexico on Saturday as a storm system moved through the central US, bringing what forecasters said would be the first significant snow of the season to the region.

From New Mexico to the Great Lakes, the storm that brought damaging winds to Western states and several inches of snow to the Rockies on Friday is set to drop four to seven inches of snow in other states in the region, including Nebraska and Kansas, according to forecasters.

Sioux City, Iowa was expecting up to five inches of snow by the end of the day, and police were already reporting more than a dozen car crashes on Saturday afternoon due to the slick roads. In Omaha, Neb, the first significant snowfall of the season coincided with Saturday’s college soccer playoff game featuring the hometown Creighton University and a team from a place where it snows about once every two decades or so: the University of South Florida in Tampa.—Reuters

Abusive boss may harm workers' home life, too

NEW YORK, 4 Dec— Having an abusive boss can do more than ruin your workday, it can also harm your family life, new research suggests.

The study, published online and in the winter issue of the journal Personnel Psychology, included 280 full-time employees and their partners who completed online surveys.

The Baylor University researchers found that the stress and tension an abusive boss causes an employee also affects the worker's partner, their relationship and the rest of the family.

However, the longer the employee-partner relationship, the less effect the abusive boss had on the family. The researchers also found that having more children at home meant greater family satisfaction for the employee.

"These findings have important implications for organizations and their managers. The evidence highlights the need for organizations to send an unequivocal message to those in supervisory positions that these hostile and harmful behaviors will not be tolerated," study author Dawn Carlson, a professor of management and chair of organizational development at the Hankamer School of Business at Baylor, said in a university news release.

Abuse by a boss may include tantrums, rudeness, public criticism and inconsiderate action, the study authors pointed out.

"It may be that as supervisor abuse heightens tension in the relationship, the employee is less motivated or able to engage in positive interactions with the partner and other family members," study co-author Merideth Ferguson, an assistant professor of management and entrepreneurship, said in the news release.

Businesses and other organizations should encourage workers to use employee assistance programmes or other resources, such as counseling and stress management, to find ways to reduce the impact an abusive boss has on the family, the study authors said.—Internet

Epileptic seizures may worsen during menstrual cycle

Health

BALTIMORE, 4 Dec— Seizures among women of childbearing age with epilepsy may worsen during menstruation or ovulation, researchers have found. In the study, investigators at the Comprehensive Epilepsy Centre at the University of California, Irvine, examined the trend of seizures associated with menstrual cycles (called "catamenial" seizures) among a group of women aged 19 to 50.

The study participants responded to a questionnaire about the worsening of their seizures during their menstrual cycle, and the researchers used these responses as well as the women's monthly seizure calendars to identify those with catamenial seizures.

Among the women with catamenial seizures, the investigators examined the type of epilepsy they had, the frequency of their seizures, their response to medications as well as neuroimaging findings and seizures during pregnancy, according to a news release from the American Epilepsy Society.

Two-thirds of the women with catamenial epilepsy had a diagnosis of partial epilepsy. The rest had primary generalized epilepsy. Meanwhile, about 75 percent of the women with catamenial epilepsy had medically refractory seizures — which means they're resistant to treatment. The rate was twice that of their peers with epilepsy who did not have catamenial seizures.

SAP offers $3.4 billion for SuccessFactors

Shareholders arrive for the German software group SAP general shareholder assembly in Mannheim, 25 May, 2011.—INTERNET

BERLIN, 4 Dec— Germany's SAP announced a $3.4 billion cash deal to buy US web-based software company SuccessFactors, joining the scramble among technology firms to offer cloud-computing services to businesses.

SAP said on Saturday it would pay $40 per share for SuccessFactors, a premium of 52 percent over both its Friday closing price and the one-month volume-weighted average price, making it expensive for any rival bidder that might want to put in a counterbid.

Paul Hamerman, an analyst at technology research group Forrester, said SAP was paying a substantial premium to acquire SuccessFactors but its own cloud strategy had been lagging.

"By acquiring

SuccessFactors, SAP puts itself into a much stronger competitive position in human resources applications and reaffirms its commitment to software-as-a-service as a key business model," he said.

SAP has slowly begun to gain traction with its Business by Design software aimed at mid-sized companies. It reiterated on Saturday that it aims to have around 1,000 customers there by year-end.

"While our growth remains primarily organic, where we can innovate faster with acquisitions, we take action. In this case, to become a cloud powerhouse," SAP co-CEO Bill McDermott told a hastily arranged conference call with journalists and analysts.

The move means SAP can beat its target of generating 20 billion euros ($26.9 billion) in revenue by 2015 while maintaining its 35 percent margin goal, company officials said. The SuccessFactors deal is more about generating top-line growth than wringing out cost synergies, they said.—Internet

Aggressive labour stance threatens Pilbara expansion: Rio Tinto

Business

SYDNEY, 4 Dec— Rio Tinto chief executive Tom Albanese said an "aggressive" stance by unions, high labour costs and a potential downturn in world prices threaten plans for vast expansion of its key Australian iron ore operations.

"Our Pilbara business is designed to operate well and stay profitable in the 120 range," Albanese told Inside Business.

"Again, what we have to do is we have to control cost pressure. I think the one thing I'm concerned about is that our cost pressures in the Pilbara, our cost pressures in Australia are quite a bit higher than cost pressures anywhere else in the world."

Albanese said there were plans to expand production in the Pilbara and he would like to see it expand even beyond 450 million tons, but "all the other pieces have to be in place."

The Rio Tinto chief also said he would be lobbying the Canadian government and Saskatchewan provincial government to ensure Rio Tinto was the operator of the planned Roughrider uranium project following its C$654 million ($643 million) takeover of Hathor.

Survey: Most young adults go online for 'no particular reason' Tech

NEW YORK, 4 Dec—According to a recently released study conducted by the Pew Research Centre's Internet & American Life Project, young adults between the ages of 18 to 29 are the most likely to go online just to "have fun or pass the time". While 81 percent claim to have gone online to have fun on occasion, over half of these young adults claimed to have hopped online for that reason within 24 hours prior to the survey. According to further findings, people are less likely to access the Internet for fun as age increases. For instance, less than a fourth of people ages 65 and older use the Internet for entertainment purposes.

Across all ages, approximately 58 percent of respondents claim to use the Internet for "fun or pass the time" occasionally and 34 percent claim to have gotten online for that purpose during the previous day to the survey. The survey was conducted with 2,260 adults ages 18 and over between July 2011 and August 2011. Compared to the same questions in previous years, the amount of people going online for entertainment purposes is higher than 2009 numbers and significantly higher than figures recorded approximately six years ago. The wording of the questions didn't define any specific activity when on the Internet, only that the activity would have to be considered "fun".

While it's clear that the Internet has become a stronger competitor for the attention of Americans over the past decade, Pew Research believes that the line between Internet usage and getting online to consume traditional forms of media has become "fuzzy". For instance, anyone with a computer or tablet can access online television programs through services like Hulu Plus and Netflix, music through services like Pandora and books through services like Amazon. However, social networking is a large contributor to the growth in online use over the past five years.

Low-cost solar heating material found

CHITTOOR (India), 4 Dec—Researchers in India say they've come up with an inexpensive material that can store heat energy from the sun during the day and release it slowly overnight.

The material based on paraffin wax and stearic acid — a fat commonly used to make soap — could help provide warmth in homes in sunny parts of the world that get very cold at night, without the need to burn wood or fossil fuels, an article in the International Journal of Renewable Energy Technology said.

Researchers say a class of material known as phase change materials can store a large amount of heat in a small volume and then release it as they change phase from solid to liquid at certain temperatures.

Heated by the sun, the mixture of paraffin wax — which melts at about 98 degrees F — and stearic acid becomes entirely liquid.

However, as it solidifies when temperatures drop it slowly releases the stored heat.

The team has tested 1 1/2-inch spherical capsules containing a blend of paraffin and stearic acid that can be floated on the top of water in a tank.—INTERNET

Study sees climate change's impact on animals

GARDINER, 4 Dec—A study of gray wolves in Yellowstone National Park could yield a method to predict how animals will respond to climate change, US and British scientists say.

Researchers say data from the study could help determine which species are better able to cope with climate change and which might be at risk of extinction.

"We now have the tools to determine how wolves would react to climate change," study leader Tim Coulson, a professor of life sciences at Imperial College London, told The Guardian newspaper.

"With any luck, in the future we can apply the methods developed from the wolves down to small mites or to large herbivores." The study collected data on the wolves' responses to a changing environment, including population numbers, genetics, body size, and the timing of events in the animals' life cycle such as when they first have pups.

A new computer model developed in the study allows researchers to study how animals react to climate change both in terms of behavior and genetics, Coulson said.

It would have applications far beyond wolf populations, he said.

"In reality we can apply the methods we developed across a range of animals and behaviors."

Indonesia releases Australian drug teen

SYDNEY, 4 Dec—Indonesia on Sunday released a 14-year-old Australian boy convicted of drug possession on the resort island of Bali after two months in detention.

A high school student from a coastal area north of Sydney, the teen has been the focus of intense negotiations involving Canberra's Foreign Minister Kevin Rudd and other Australian officials lobbying for his release.

The boy admitted to carrying 6.9 grams (quarter of an ounce) of marijuana when he was arrested on 4 October in the tourist area of Kuta, where he was on holiday with his parents.

"Earlier, the process of taking fingerprints... processing release documentation, taking photographs was completed," Bali's Kerobokan prison chief Siswanto told reporters.

"He is now free and we have released him," he said, adding he had told the boy not to repeat his actions. A district court on 25 November handed the teenager a two-month jail sentence for marijuana possession, deducting the eight weeks he had already spent in detention.

The boy had been held at an immigration detention centre in

Philippines struggles with AIDS

MANILA, 4 Dec—The Philippines is struggling to deal with a worsening HIV-AIDS problem, with far too little money being spent on reversing a steady rise in infection rates, health experts warn.

The government will have to prioritise its funding to concentrate on helping the most at-risk communities as it faces a budget shortfall of up to $370 million over the next five years, health department assistant secretary Eric Tayag said.

"If we only have so much, we have to prioritise the scope of our programmes, choosing the target populations, choosing the specific areas," Tayag said.

"It is a race against time because the more cases there are, the more different kinds of financial support are needed in the long run."

The number of HIV/AIDS cases detected in the Philippines — which has a population of 94 million people — is still relatively small with only 7,884 cases recorded since 1984.

But the Philippines is one of only seven countries listed by UNAIDS (the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS) to have suffered rising infection rates in 2010.

And more than 1,800 cases have already been reported in the first 10 months of this year, exceeding the 1,591 cases reported for all of 2010, according to government data.

Tayag said the government estimated it needed 35 billion pesos ($810 million) to carry out HIV-prevention programmes from 2011 to 2016.

However the health department had only identified foreign and local sources for 19 billion pesos ($440 million), leaving a projected shortfall of 16 billion pesos ($370 million).

The funding crunch is expected to hit hardest when the current "round" of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB and Malaria runs out in November next year, said Maria Teresa Bagasao, country director of UNAIDS.

LOS ANGELES, 4 Dec—High winds returned to the Los Angeles area early on Saturday as over 100,000 homes and businesses lost power, due to fallen trees and other damage from an ongoing windstorm. Southern California Edison said that at mid-afternoon it still had 73,600 customers affected by the outages, which were mainly concentrated along the San Gabriel Valley foothills east

The area saw "near hurricane force winds" that caused flying debris to knock over powerpoles, said Edison spokesman Gil Alexander. Unusually powerful winds first began striking the Los Angeles region on Wednesday night, in a storm that has raised concern among local fire departments about potential wildfires igniting and spreading at lightning speed.

By mid-morning on Saturday, wind gusts of 73 miles per hour were clocked atop a mountain near Acton, 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles, according to automated weather stations. At other places of high elevation closer to the metropolis, wind speeds in the 35 mph to 45 mph range were more common.

Heavy rains flood Boon Keng Road

SINGAPORE, 4 Dec—Bad weather on Saturday caused some flooding at Boon Keng Road.

A tree also fell at the junction of Aljunied Road and MacPherson Road.

Workers were busy clearing the tree, which fell onto the pavement beside a bus lane.

The Singapore Civil Defence Force (SCDF) received a call about the incident on Saturday afternoon, and sent personnel to the area. SCDF said no one was injured. National Water Agency PUB said there were no other incidents of flash flooding on Saturday.—Internet

Ugandan works on space project from mother's backyard

KAMPALA, 4 Dec—Chris Nsamba says that at one time or another every successful scientist has been called a madman, and some think he is crazy about working to send the first Ugandan into space — from the backyard of his mother's home.

"People around here used to come and see and say he was mad, but they come back now and are impressed," Nsamba's mother, Sarah Lugwama, told AFP, waving towards a group of eight volunteers sanding the left wing of the hulking craft parked under a jackfruit tree in the garden.

The craft named the African Skyhawk, which looks like a bulky glider with a wingspan of 10 metres (33 feet), will reach into the earth's outer atmosphere, says Nsamba, the founder of the African Space Research Programme. After an intrepid pilot and a navigator have tested the craft sometime next year, Nsamba explains, the next step will be to look beyond the earth's atmosphere.

"Within five years we will have launched a probe into space and within a decade we will put a man in space," says

Nsamba, 26, an amateur aeronautical engineer, as he leans against the wing of the Skyhawk.

But for Nsamba, and his impoverished homeland, there is still a long way to go before they can think of reaching the cosmos.

Blast in bus parked near UK embassy in Bahrain

MANAMA, 4 Dec—A blast hit a bus Sunday near the British embassy in the Bahraini capital of Manama, the interior ministry said.

The blast happened early in the morning in a minibus parked near the embassy, with no casualty reported.

Hundreds of Shi'ites were taking part in a religious procession in the area when the blast occurred, sources told Xinhua.

The security authorities have cordoned off the area and are investigating the incident, the ministry said.

The blast came one day after reports by the British media that former Assistant Commissioner at London's Metropolitan Police John Yates was appointed by Bahrain to help its interior ministry's security forces.

On 17 March, 2010, unidentified men hurled Molotov Cocktails at the British embassy compound in Manama.

Chicken price, demand go down due to bird flu alert in Nepal

KATHMANDU, 3 Dec—Chicken prices took a beating in Nepali capital after institutions like schools and security agencies stayed away from chicken products following a new bird flu alert.

According to Saturday's Republica report, these institutions are major consumers of chicken in the capital of Kathmandu. The fall in price was within the range of 30 percent. Schools were the first to put a ban on chicken meat.

Private boarding schools in Kathmandu Valley have already suspended serving chicken items. These schools have also restricted their canteens from selling items made with chicken meat.

The Nepali Army has issued a circular directing its troops not to purchase chicken meat. The army usually includes mutton and chicken items in its menu.

However, Ramindra Chhetri, spokesperson of the Nepal Army, refuted the claim saying the circular was on "preventive measures that army personnel should adopt to avoid getting infected by the disease".

According to sources, Nepali Police has also alerted its personnel about bird flu virus even though it has not asked its staff to completely stop eating chicken meat.

"Consumers fear to eat chicken meat despite the fact that bird flu viruses are killed if cooked properly," said Junga Bahadur BC, chairman of Chicken Retailers Association. "This fear has brought down the demand of chicken in the cold stores by around 60 percent."

The latest strain of bird flu virus was detected in a slum along the Manahara river bank in Bhaktapur on Monday. To prevent the virus from spreading, all the poultry birds in the area were killed. However, consumers are still fearing that the disease may spread out.—Xinhua

Hsin Akari-3 brings all smiles to Mohnyin farmers' faces

Hsin Akari-3 quality paddy strain becomes one of the likes of farmers in Mohnyin Township as it thrives on the soil and under the atmosphere of Kachin State. Despite unfavourable and extreme weather in this year's monsoon paddy harvest, Hsin Akari-3 quality paddy fields remained unbeaten and continued to increase per-acre yield.

Farmer Ma Cho Myint of Nantpot village who sown Hsin Akari-3 paddy strains on her land shares her joy of "bumper harvest despite the irritation of hailstorm." Farmer U Win Maung of Mayangon village raises two thumbs up saying, "135 baskets were yielded per acre." He cultivated Hsin Akari-3 monsoon paddy in his farm scientifically. Farmer U Ba Khaing of Nantsawlaw village recalls, "Hsin Akari-3 paddy strains were bought from Agricultural Research Farm in Mohnyin Township." He goes on with numbers, "As a quality strain, it gave 85 per cent output on average. As it has increased from 60 per cent, my family enjoys an economic

An explosion from supposed sound mine occurred between transformer and brick fence in front of Muse 105-mile Trade Zone Mongyu Police Outpost at about 6.35 pm. Two police members were injured and the brick fence was slightly damaged. Authorities concerned are handling security affairs and the trade zone is operating regularly.

One mine explosion one foot from department-owned Van (white) parked in front of Myitkyina District Planning Office at the corner of Tatkon-Sanpya road and Duwa Road in Eden area of Tatkon ward in Myitkyina, destroying the engine of the car and tearing 14 windowpanes of the office. No one was injured in the blast.

KIA's destructive acts undermining the stability in Kachin State and targeted to spread panic in public concerned the local people who prefer peace.

Placards with the names of local people were stuck on 26 lampposts on Shwethalyaung Pagoda Theatre Road and BEHS-2 School Road (Bahtoo Road) in East ward of Mohnyin as a gesture of demonstrating the genuine desire of local people. The placards say: "Want eternal peace? Declare ceasefire and return to negotiation table", "Do not take advantage of generosity of the State. Local people will no more be patient (at all)", "Consider equality and stability of the entire races in Kachin State rather than the opportunity of only a single race."

"Open letter to KIO" with the names of innocent people was found on the road near Momaik Market. The letter says, "It was learnt that KIO released letter of condolence saying it offered its sympathy towards families of victims of 10 dead persons and 23 injured persons in the bomb blast in Myitkyina on 13 November. The people know the truth that KIA planned the blasts and a series of blasts starting from Myitsone bomb explosion and happened in downtowns and on railroads were carried out by KIA-trained terrorists. KIA's murderous policy including the killings of many people including innocent children is condemned. It is requested to take effective actions against KIA which is triggering explosions."

Web helps Bangkok's flood-hit pets find relief

BANGKOK, 4 Dec—When the floodwaters came up to her chin, Karuna Leuangleekpai knew she had to abandon her house on the outskirts of Bangkok. But she had no idea what to do with her seven dogs.

Through Facebook, she heard about a flood evacuation shelter for pets run by veterinary student volunteers in the capital, so she crammed her soaking wet dogs into her car and went to seek help.

"The water was above my head when we left the house — the dogs were swimming around. That was over a month ago and my house is still underwater," Karuna said.

"I'm glad to have found this shelter for them — I'm staying with a friend in her apartment but there's no way my dogs could have fitted in too."

Three months of unusually heavy monsoon rains have inundated large swathes of Thailand, killing more than 650 people and affecting the homes and livelihoods of millions.

But it is not just humans who have been suffering during the kingdom's worst floods in half a century — tens of thousands of pets and stray cats and dogs have also been stranded as water levels rise. Their plight has prompted an outpouring of sympathy from city residents, who have mobilised using Facebook and Twitter to set up animal shelters, organize "pet rescue" patrols and provide free medical care to flood-hit pets.

"We knew that the floods would make it hard for owners to care for their pets and we felt we had to help," said veterinary student Mataya Tawechart, adding that the animal shelter was set up and run by students and volunteers.

Old theory could help in noise protection

SYDNEY, 4 Dec—A relook at a 150-year-old theory could open the way to better noise protection. Andrew Bell from the Research School of Biology, Australian National University (ANU), says the long-discarded 'pressure theory' could be the answer to protecting people from damagingly loud sound levels. "Hearing loss used to be called 'blacksmith's disease'. In the modern age, it might come to be called MP3 disease," said Bell, the Journal of Hearing Science reports.

The middle ear consists of three tiny bones and two miniature muscles which tense up to protect the ear from loud sounds, according to an ANU statement.

Bell said these bones and muscles work together as a tiny pump, raising the pressure of the fluid in the inner ear - like pushing a cork into a bottle of water.

Ohio sets tentative date to test 6 exotic animals

This file photo was previously provided by the Columbus Zoo and Aquarium and shows one of three leopards that were captured by authorities last month, a day after their owner released dozens of wild animals and then killed himself near Zanesville, Ohio.

INTERNET

COLUMBUS (Ohio), 4 Dec—The Ohio Department of Agriculture tentatively plans to begin medical tests 15 Dec on three leopards, two primates and a young grizzly bear kept at a zoo since their owner released dozens of exotic animals at his farm and killed himself, a department spokeswoman said Friday.

The Columbus Zoo has cared for the animals since Terry Thompson released them at his farm near Zanesville in October and set off a hunt by authorities who fatally shot four dozen animals, including rare Bengal tigers, lions and bears.

The state ordered that the surviving animals be kept under quarantine amid officials' concerns about reports that may have been kept in unsanitary conditions and exposed to disease.

Zoo and state officials have been trying to determine whether the animals are healthy enough to be tested for diseases and whether they're strong enough to survive if they are anesthetized to have blood drawn for testing.

The animals have been eating well and their health has appeared to improve, so officials set the tentative date to begin testing, Department of Agriculture spokeswoman Erica Pitchford said. The animals may undergo physical exams, X-rays, blood sampling and other types of tests to evaluate their health, she said.

Thompson's widow has appealed the quarantine order that prevents the zoo from releasing the animals until it's clear they're free of dangerous diseases.

Lawyers on both sides have not yet set a date to present their arguments to a hearing officer. The officer, an attorney not employed by the department, would make a determination to be reviewed by the department's director.—Internet

Death toll from bridge collapse in Indonesia increases to 21

JAKARTA, 4 Dec—Death toll from bridge collapse in Indonesia's East Kalimantan Province has increased to 21, a Press statement from the National Agency of Disaster Mitigation (BNPB) said here on Saturday.

"On 08:45 Jakarta Time (0145 GMT), we found another victim of the collapsed bridge, making the total number of fatalities becomes 21," said Sutopo Purwo Nugroho, head of the Centre of Data, Information and Public Relation at BNPB in the statement. The country's largest news portal detik.com reported that 22 people have been scrutinized as witnesses in the accident. However, police have not pointed any suspect yet. The bridge collapsed last Saturday, at least 19 people are still missing.

Britain postpones high-speed rail decision

LONDON, 4 Dec—The government has postponed until January a decision on building a new 32 billion pound high-speed rail network so as to consider measures to reduce the impact on those living nearby and the environment, media reported on Saturday.

A decision had been expected by the end of the year, but the media reports said the decision had been delayed to consider the construction of a 500 million pound tunnel to reduce the proposed network's environmental impact.

"The important thing is to make the right decision, even if that means a delay of a few parliamentary days," a Department for Transport spokeswoman said.

She confirmed the tunnel proposal but dismissed as speculation reports of its cost.

The proposed 400 km per hour line connecting London with major cities to the north has run into angry opposition from people living near the route — many of them supporters of David Cameron's Conservative Party worried about the impact on their homes and the countryside.

The government's proposal is for a new Y-shaped high-speed rail network. The initial phase would connect London and Birmingham by 2026, reducing journey times to 49 minutes from 84. Lines to Manchester and Leeds would open by 2033.—Internet

China puts more money in renewable energy resources than other countries

NANNING, 4 Dec—China has become the world's biggest investor in renewable energy sources, said a senior environmental official on Saturday during a forum held in Nanning, the capital of Guangxi Zhuang autonomous region.

China invested over 300 billion yuan (47.31 billion US dollars) in renewable energy sources in 2010, outranking every other country, said Wang Yuqing, deputy director of the Committee of Population, Resources and Environment of the CPPCC National Committee.

The official of China's top advisory body estimated that more than 3,000 billion yuan (473.1 billion US dollars) would be poured into industries related to environmental protection from 2011 to 2015.

Issues relating to the environment and resources are becoming more urgent in China, as the world's second-largest economy is currently on its fast track to industrialization, said Wang, who is also the president of the Chinese Society For Environmental Sciences.

The Chinese's government is now fully aware that China must develop its economy in a green way, and is striving to nurture green industries, Wang added.—Xinhua

Women are the ultimate multitaskers

TEL AVIV, 4 Dec—Women are the ultimate multitaskers, Israeli and US researchers say, and the emotional experience of multitasking is very different for mothers and fathers. Lead author Shira Offer, an assistant professor at Bar-Ilan University in Israel, said not only are working mothers multitasking more frequently than working fathers, but their multitasking experience is more negative.

The study, published in the American Sociological Review, found working mothers spend about 10 more hours per week multitasking than do working fathers — 48.3 hours per week for moms compared to 38.9 for dads. "This suggests that working mothers are doing two activities at once more than two-fifths of the time they are awake, while working fathers are multitasking more than one-third of their waking hours," study co-author Barbara Schneider of Michigan State University, said in a statement. The study authors said an even bigger issue than the time discrepancy is the difference in the way multitasking makes working mothers and fathers feel.

More oil pollution expected from cargo ship grounded off New Zealand

WELLINGTON, 4 Dec—More oil from a cargo ship that has been grounded on a New Zealand reef for two months is expected to wash up on the country's beaches after the wreck was battered by recent strong swells, shipping authority officials said Sunday.

The oil had slowly leaked from the duct keel, a system of pipes running along the bottom of the ship, since the Liberian-flagged Rena grounded and had probably been exposed to sea water for some time, a Maritime New Zealand (MNZ) official told the Fairfax news organization.

MNZ national on scene commander Mick

Courtneil said salvors working on the Rena Saturday saw blobs of oil floating from the wreck, which has been stuck on the Astrolabe Reef, 12 nautical miles off the east of the North Island, since 5 Oct. "We followed this up with two observation flights and our team estimates a small amount — perhaps half a tonne—of weathered oil has been released, probably from the duct keel," he said.

Courtneil said oil spill response teams would be on standby on beaches in the Bay of Plenty region to clean it up over the coming days.

Strong winds were forecast again Sunday and the swell was predicted to reach up to three meters early Monday, but weather was set to ease in the area mid-week.—Xinhua

Indonesia cracks down on separatists in Papua

JAYAPURA, (Indonesia), 4 Dec—Security forces say they are hunting separatist rebels in Indonesia's restive Papua Province after two police were killed in an attack.

National police spokesman Maj Gen Saud Usman Nasution says hundreds of troops have been deployed in the separatist stronghold of Puncak Jaya since the attack Saturday on paramilitary police.

Last month, two suspected rebels grabbed a gun from a police chief at an airport in Puncak Jaya and shot him dead.

Papua, a former Dutch colony in the western part of New Guinea, was incorporated into Indonesia in 1969 after a UN-sponsored ballot. A small, poorly armed separatist group known as the Free Papua Movement has battled for independence since then.

'Lost' Rembrandt self-portrait revealed

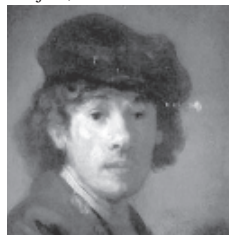

The self-portrait is hidden under this image of an old man, attributed to Rembrandt.

INTERNET

AMSTERDAM, 4 Dec — An unfinished self-portrait by the Dutch master Rembrandt has been discovered under another painting using advanced scientific techniques. No detail is visible in the face, but experts say it matches a reproductive print from 1633 that has an inscription saying it is by Rembrandt. X-ray scanning was used to detect the pigments in hidden layers of paint. A leading expert on Rembrandt said he was convinced of its authenticity based on similarities in painting style. The unfinished self-portrait was discovered under another panel said to be by the master - Old Man with a Beard. Art historian Ernst van de Wetering, head of the Rembrandt Research Project, said there were

Hong Kong wife wins $154 million divorce settlement

HONG KONG, 4 Dec — A Hong Kong judge ordered a wealthy real estate mogul to pay his former wife $154 million in one of the city's largest divorce settlements. The divorce award translates to HK $1.2 billion and dwarfs famous settlements in other countries. In comparison, Paul McCartney was ordered to pay Heather Mills almost $50 million three years ago. Court documents released Thursday detailed a breakdown of the ruling.

It includes a home in the city worth HK $250 million, a London residence valued at HK $30.5 million and HK $2.5 million to buy two cars. Samathur Li Kin-kan and his wife, Florence Tsang Chiu-wing, married in 2000 and separated in 2008, according to court documents. —Internet

Survey shows one in 10 US mobile phone users having an iPhone

SAN FRANCISCO, 4 Dec — About one in 10 mobile phone subscribers in the United States is now using an Apple iPhone, said a new survey released on Friday. Latest survey results from research firm comScore showed that for the three-month period ending in October, Apple remained the No. 4 handset maker in the US with its share of mobile subscribers rising to 10.8 percent from 9.5 percent in the previous three months.

Among the top five mobile phone brands in the US market, Apple is the only one that saw its market share increase in the quarter, according to the survey. Samsung was still the top handset manufacturer with 25.5 percent of US mobile subscribers, followed by LG and Motorola taking the second and third place with 20.6 percent and 13.6 percent of share respectively. Research in Motion (RIM), maker of BlackBerry, ranked No. 5 with a share of 6.6 percent. —Internet

WHO issues Europe measles warning

LONDON, 4 Dec — European countries need to act now to tackle measles outbreaks, the World Health Organization warns. The WHO report says there were over 26,000 measles cases in 36 European countries from January to October 2011. Western European countries reported 83% of those cases, with 14,000 in France alone. In England and Wales, there were just under 1,000 confirmed measles cases in that period — compared with just 374 in the whole of 2010.

Altogether, measles outbreaks in Europe have caused nine deaths, including six in France, and 7,288 hospitalisations. France has now launched a nationwide campaign to raise awareness about the need for MMR vaccination. Jean-Yves Grall, the Director-General for Health in France, said:

US returns smuggled dinosaur egg fossils to China

LOS ANGELES, 4 Dec — Twenty-two rare dinosaur egg fossils that were smuggled to the United States were turned over to China on Thursday. The 22 fossilized dinosaur eggs, each 65 million years old, are so well preserved that the remains of the dinosaur embryos are still visible inside 19 of them. This is the third time the US government has returned smuggled fossils to the Chinese government since 2009," said Qiu Shaofang, Consul General of China in Los Angeles.

The fossils had been unearthed in Nanping Basin, South China's Guangdong province, and the dinosaur is called Oviraptor dating from the Cretaceous period, Jia Yueming, curator of the Geological Museum of China told Xinhua. In 2007, agents of the US Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) seized the fossilized dinosaur eggs. —Xinhua

Drought traps ships on Danube

PRAGUE, 4 Dec — The waters on the Danube are so low that 100 loaded ships are stuck near the Hungarian border, blocked by sand bars.

The drought is highly unusual for this time of year.

For traffic to resume water levels would have to rise by at least 50cm, but no rain is forecast.

November was the driest in the Czech Republic since 1775 when records began.

Florida teen detained by TSA for design on her purse

Vanessa Gibbs holds her infamous "purse gun".

It's not unusual for 17-year-old to find themselves in hot water with the fashion police. But on a flight from Virginia to Florida, Vanessa Gibbs found herself detained by the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) over the appearance of her purse.

And just to be clear, it wasn't the content inside the purse that the TSA objected to. No, agency officials took exception with the design of a gun on Gibbs' handbag.

"It's my style, it's camouflage, it has an old western gun on it," Gibbs told News4Jax.com. Gibbs didn't run into any trouble while travelling north from Jacksonville International Airport. But on her way back home, TSA officials at Norfolk International Airport pulled her aside.

"She was like, 'This is a federal offense because it's in the shape of a gun,'" Gibbs said. "I'm like, 'But it's a design on a purse. How is it a federal offense?'"

After TSA agents figured out the gun was a fake, Gibbs said, they told her to check the bag or turn it over. By the time security wrapped up the inspection, the pregnant teen missed her flight, and Southwest Airlines sent her to Orlando instead.

Flying squirrels invade hospital emergency room for second time in two weeks

Most people spend their time in the hospital plotting their escape. It turns out that squirrels aren't all that different.

At around 10 pm on Tuesday night, a flying squirrel managed to trap itself inside the emergency room at New Jersey's Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital. Now an ordinary squirrel in this position might just hide in a corner and make a quick dash for the nearest exit. But this gifted flying rodent repeatedly launched itself from an 8-foot-high wall-mounted lamp, in order to avoid firefighters from the Rahway Fire Department.

"It would climb up on a light and would jump off and glide," said fire department spokesman Capt Ted Padavano.

World's largest insect discovered in New Zealand

The world's largest insect

This is not good news for entomophobia sufferers. A former park ranger traveling in New Zealand has stumbled across the world's largest insect, a Weta Bug, with a wing span of seven inches and the weight of three mice.

"Three of us walked the trails of this small island for two nights scanning the vegetation for a giant weta," said Mark Moffett, 55. "We spent many hours with no luck finding any at all, before we saw her up in a tree. The giant Weta is the largest insect in the world, and this is the biggest one ever found."

Most people would have recoiled at such a find—but Moffett held the giant insect in the palm of his hand and even fed it a carrot.

"She enjoyed the carrot so much she seemed to ignore the fact she was resting on our hands and carried on munching away," Moffett said. "She would have finished the carrot very quickly, but this is an extremely endangered species and we didn't want to risk indigestion."

Swift, Minaj get Billboard honour, talk Grammy nods

NEW YORK, 4 Dec—Taylor Swift doesn't think the Recording Academy is mean. Though she won the Grammy for album of the year in 2010, she's not sad her latest multiplatinum effort isn't up for the honour this time around.

"I got three nominations. I was just so excited," she said Friday, before she was honoured as Billboard's "Woman of the Year." Among the Swift achievements that led to her Billboard honour was the best-selling performance of her third album

There was some surprise when the critically acclaimed album wasn't among the overall best album nominees when the Grammy nominations were revealed Wednesday, but Swift says she's excited by her nominations, which include best country album and two for "Mean," in which she answers her critics and challenges bullies.

Gaga's new video has biographical flavour

LOS ANGELES, 4 Dec—Lady Gaga declares in her new video she aimed for the top because she had "nothing to lose."

"I'm gonna be a star," she vows in the opening minutes of the homage to her danceable new single now available on the Internet. "You know why?"

Because I have nothing to lose."

The video of "Marry the Night" runs a relatively epic 13 minutes and reflects the moment in Gaga's life a few years ago when she was dropped by her record label Island Def Jam.

Celebritology.com said "Marry the Night" features Gaga in scenes as a ballerina and as a French-speaking artist who reacts to a dire phone call from a "director" by trashing her apartment.

Streep, tipped for glory, says Oscars still matter

LONDON, 4 Dec—She has been nominated for an Academy Award 16 times, a record for any performer, and won twice, but to Meryl Streep, the golden statuette still matters.

The 62-year-old first attended the annual awards ceremony as a contender more than 30 years ago, when she was up for a supporting role honour in "The Deer Hunter". The following year she won that honour for "Kramer vs Kramer" and scooped the best actress prize with the 1982 Holocaust film "Sophie's Choice".

Since then Streep has been back as a nominee 12 times, each time leaving empty-handed. Now the "Devil Wears Prada" star is a frontrunner again for her portrayal of former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in "The Iron Lady".

Asked in an interview on Thursday if she still cared about the Oscars, she replied: "Sadly it still matters. 'It's so exciting, it really is. I remember the first time I went and (Laurence) Olivier was here and I was next to Gregory Peck and Bette Davis was behind me," Streep told BBC Radio.

Winehouse father finds posthumous new album painful

Mitch Winehouse, the father of deceased British singer Amy Winehouse, arrives at Golders Green Crematorium in London on 26 July, 2011. INTERNET

LONDON, 4 Dec—Amy Winehouse's posthumous new album "Lioness: Hidden Treasures" hits stores on Monday, but the one fan who will find it hardest to listen is her father.

Mitch Winehouse, who has set up a charity in his daughter's name after she died in July aged 27, heard the collection of 12 songs recorded from as early as 2002, a year before the release of her debut album "Frank." But he said the experience had been "difficult," with the memories of the late chart topper still raw.

"We were finding it difficult to listen to Amy's music, but we had to listen to it because if it wasn't up to scratch we wouldn't have allowed it to go out," Mitch told Reuters in a recent interview.

Jones secures Man Utd win at Villa

LONDON, 4 Dec — Champions Manchester United kept up the pressure on leaders Manchester City at the top of the Barclays Premier League by winning at Aston Villa.

In a first half that was overshadowed by injuries to United's Javier Hernandez and Villa keeper Shay Given, the visitors went in front when Phil Jones volleyed in Nani's left-wing cross, the teenager's first goal in senior football.

Villa improved in the second half and James Collins and Emile Heskey both went close, while Wayne Rooney fired over late on for United as Sir Alex Ferguson's side clung on to earn all three points.

Balotelli talented yet a little crazy, says youth coach

ROME, 4 Dec — Mario Balotelli is as talented as Lionel Messi and Cristiano Ronaldo, but he is a little crazy, the Manchester City striker's former Inter youth team coach said. "Balotelli is a particular character. He has a big football potential but he is not an easy guy," explained current non Goal.com. "When he was young, he had a lot of problem, family problems. Sometimes he is crazy, but he is also positive for play. He can do what he wants. There are some players during the training session, who are fantastic but during the official match, they are not good. Mario is the contrary.

"If you see him during training session, he doesn't want to work sometimes. But when he plays, he wants to play to always win. This is his capacity. I think he needs time and experience to complete his mind. Like I mentioned, he is one of the most important examples of talent in football.—Internet

Risk backfired, concedes Ranieri

ROME, 4 Dec — Inter head coach Claudio Ranieri conceded that his tactic risk backfired as his side lost to Udinese 1-0 at home on Saturday. "Obviously we wanted another result. We pushed and tried to put Udinese under pressure, but they are so good at letting you tire yourself out and hitting you on the counter. Compliments to Udinese, we have to roll our sleeves up and work harder," Ranieri was quoted by football-italia.net as saying. Inter have now gone six consecutive San Siro games without any of their strikers on target.

"A striker lives for a goal and not getting it does slowly become a weight, but these are moments that every forward goes through. We've got to let them stay calm and clear-headed. They fought hard and the ball didn't want to go in," the former Chelsea manager said. Ranieri had stated Inter could win the Scudetto this season, but concedes that's a dream too far now.

"It's certainly not the luckiest campaign in Inter's history! We won't get sucked into self-pity, though. It could've been the turning point of our campaign to give us the confidence we needed, but instead we have to work even harder. "Now we just have to keep quiet, work and let the other teams have their season while we have ours. If we drift away from the Scudetto race, then there are other very prestigious ones still up for grabs. I think positive," he said.—Xinhua

Williams sisters win doubles in Milan exhibition

MILAN, 4 Dec—Francesca Schiavone defeated both Venus and Serena Williams in singles on Saturday before they rallied to win the doubles in an exhibition in Milan. Schiavone defeated Venus 7-5, 7-3, then countered a strong comeback from Serena to defeat the younger sibling 7-3, 8-10, 8-6. Flavia Pennetta also beat Venus, whose strap broke on her dress before a sellout crowd of 11,000. Venus dashed off the court and returned in her third outfit of the event. She also brought popcorn to share with Pennetta, who won 7-6, 7-2.

Serena defeated Pennetta 6-8, 7-3,

7-3 before the Williams sisters won the doubles 3-7, 8-6, 8-6. The Italian pair delighted the crowd in the warmup by dancing to Michael Jackson's "Thriller."

Real Madrid claim 14th straight win

MADRID, 4 Dec—Real Madrid chalked up their 14th straight win in all competitions as they enjoyed a hard-fought but ultimately comfortable 3-0 victory against Sporting Gijon. The balance in a physical first half was tipped 10 minutes before the break when Angel de Maria robbed Sporting full back Damien Suarez before fooling keeper Juan Pablo on his near post. Juan Pablo was expecting a cross, but De Maria scored with a clever finish with the outside of his left foot.

Sporting tried to get back into the game in the second half, but although the home side worked hard they failed to create clear cut chances to draw level and they were punished again on 64 minutes when De Maria fed Cristiano Ronaldo. Ronaldo took the ball past Juan Pablo and rolled into an the empty net. Marcelo made it 3-0 with a left foot shot in injury time. If that result intimidated FC Barcelona, who kicked off straight afterwards, the Catalans didn't show it against Levante as they cruised to a 5-0 win.—Xinhua

Gorillas, tigers at risk due to climate change

DURBAN, 4 Dec- Several animals species including gorillas in Rwanda and tigers in Bangladesh could risk extinction if the impact of climate change and extreme weather on their habitats is not addressed, a UN report showed on Sunday.

Launched on the sidelines of global climate negotiations in Durban, the report by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization shows how higher temperatures, the rise in sea levels deforestation and excessive land use have damaged the habitats if certain species, especially in Africa. "Many ecosystem have already been stressed by increasing population, historical and recent deforestation, unsustainable management practices and even invasive species," Eduardo Rojas-Briales, assistant director general at the FAO's forestry department, said at the launch of the report.

The most affected areas include mountains, isolated islands and coastal areas, which limit the possibilities for animals to migrate elsewhere and create new habitats.

NAY PYI TAW, 4 Dec—A police member was killed and four civilians and two other police members injured in three explosions, one KIA-ignited burning, one killing of security force member in Kachin State and Shan State (North) yesterday.

A 30-member KIA group ordered two backhoes and one bulldozer of Yuzana Company stopped by the roadside at orange plantation on Ledo road between Myitkyina and Tanai nine miles from Namti village of Mogaung Township at about 3.30 am and burned down all three vehicles. The estimated amount of loss is K 360 million.

An explosion occurred when a passenger of a bus plying from Phakant to Mogaung hit the fuse of a mine planted by KIA while the bus was parked near Hoinwun bridge on Karmaing-Maubin Road in Phakant Township at 11 am. Four injured passengers were admitted to Karmaing Station Hospital and then referred to Myitkyina Hospital.

Two police members left Manhero Police Station by motorcycle at about 12.20 pm to buy chewing betel. Of them, Police Sergeant Myint Lwin stayed behind at the betel shop. According to tip off that a person was found dead under a motorcycle near Naunghsai and Teinkha villages at 3.15 pm, the commander of the police station and party rushed to the scene, only to find Police Sergeant Myint Lwin died with gunshot at forehead. One pistol bullet shell was found at a place eight-ft from the scene.
