Prospecting for gold while travelling

Time is as precious as gold. A lost thing whatever priceless it is can be found back but elapsed time is of no recovery.

Everyone has 24 hours a day. We use this 24 hours for work, sleep, relaxation and odd jobs. Once I made a trip to Nay Pyi Taw from Yangon. I arrived at the express bus terminal at 8 pm, half an hour ahead of the departure time. So I killed the time sitting at a nearby teashop and others travelers were like me. The express bus actually departed at 10.30. It means I wasted two hours of time for which I felt regret.

How beneficial would have been it if I had read one or two articles while waiting, I thought. Reading can broaden one's horizon. And knowledge is power to reap benefits like gold. So, reading while travelling is indeed like prospecting for gold.

In today's developed nations, most travelers read while travelling. They are using airports, harbors and bus terminals as reading room. Travelling time can be precious in their hands.

Most of the people find it difficult to have specific time for reading as they join the work life after leaving the school. Amidst the various struggles and pleasures of life, we hardly ever read books for our intellectual nourishment.

So, reading while travelling is advantageous, making sure that you are not wasting the time. Those who cannot give specific time for reading can find self-improvement knowledge in the books while travelling. So, use your time and read while travelling.

Multiplier course on enhancing quality assurance opens

YANGON, 19 Jan—Under the arrangements of the ASEAN University Network-AUN, the Training on Enhancing Quality Assurance was conducted at Myanmar Maritime University from 22 to 25 August 2011.

The multiplier course of the training is being opened at Myanmar Maritime University from 18 to 20 January.

3rd Japan Cup Karatedo Championship commences

YANGON, 19 Jan—Jointly organized by Myanmar Karatedo Federation and Japanese Embassy to Myanmar, the 3rd Japan Cup Karatedo Championship, sponsored by Japanese Chamber of Commerce (Yangon) (JCCY), kicked off at Aung San Gymnasium, here, this morning.

Japanese Ambassador to Myanmar Mr Takashi Saito and President of MKF Dr U Win Zaw cordially greeted the Karate-do teams.

The federation president, the Japanese Ambassador and executive of JCCY Mr Shigeo Hana were presented with gifts and donations were made to the funds of Dagon Basic Education Middle School No. 2, Mingala Taungnyunt BEHS No. 4 and No 3.

Selected Myanmar Karate-do athletes demonstrated their skills. With the aim of promoting bilateral relations between Myanmar and Japan, Mr Fujikiyo Omura (7th Dan, JKAW/F Asia Oceania Director) and party who attended the Karatedo technical seminar course in Myanmar showed off their brilliant skills. Then, the matches went on for the first day.

Also present on the occasion were Patron of Myanmar Women's Sports Federation and General Secretary Daw L. Khun Yi and executives, officials of the Ministry of Sports and enthusiasts.—NLM

2nd BIMSTEC member countries adopt PPA

NAY PYI TAW, 19 Jan—The second BIMSTEC Ministerial Meeting on Poverty Alleviation was held in Kathmandu of Nepal on 16 January, attended by Myanmar delegation headed by Union Minister for National Planning and Economic Development U Tin Naing Thein.

The opening ceremony of the meeting was held at Soaldee Crowne Plaza Hotel in Kathmandu on 16 January, with an inaugural address by Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Affairs Minister of Nepal Mr Narayan Kaji Shrestha Prekash. On behalf of the delegation leaders of BIMSTEC countries, Union Minister U Tin Naing Thein delivered an address.

During the meeting, the minister endorsed Plan of Action on Poverty Alleviation and agreed to implement eight broad strategies including "accelerated, pro-poor and inclusive growth, social development, and implementation of targeted programmes for poor, increased coverage for social protection, increased preparedness to address adverse effects of climate change, disaster risk management, good governance and periodic progress review. Then the participating delegation issued Kathmandu Declaration.

The Union Minister together with leaders of BIMSTEC delegations paid a courtesy call on the Prime Minister of Nepal on 16 January afternoon. The BIMSTEC members agreed to hold the third ministerial meeting in Sri Lanka.

Seattle faces unusually strong snowfall

SEATTLE, 19 Jan—A Pacific storm blanketed Seattle in more than 4 inches of snow on Wednesday, forcing school closures and airline flight cancellations and snarling traffic throughout a city more accustomed to rain than severe winter weather.

But the storm, nicknamed "Snowmageddon" as it approached the Puget Sound Region, proved less extreme than originally forecast, with the National Weather Service lowering its outlook for possible snow accumulations from up to 10 inches to around 6 inches, meteorologist Dustin Guy said.

The storm, which arrived on Tuesday evening, bore down more forcefully on towns in the interior part of Washington State, where snowfall totals ranging from 10 inches to 20 inches were forecast, the Weather Service said. More than 38,000 customers had lost power late on Wednesday, as the state braced itself for icy, slick roads from falling temperatures and possible rain. In Pierce County, Tacoma Public Utilities reported about 24,000 without power in the Tacoma area and Puget Sound Energy, which services the Seattle metropolitan area, reported 14,000 without power, said Charles Tomala, a spokesman for the state's Emergency Operations Centre at 8 pm local time.

An additional 200 residences also lost power when a tree fell in Mason County, near the state capital of Olympia and on the Puget Sound's southwest edge.

Most of the state's schools, including those throughout Seattle, were scheduled to be closed on Thursday.

By midday Wednesday, 20 inches of snow already had fallen on the rural town of Rochester, just south of Olympia, said Rob Harper, a spokesman for the state Emergency Operations Centre.—Reuters

Havana building collapse kills three, injures eight

HAVANA, 19 Jan—At least three people were killed and eight injured when a residential building here collapsed Tuesday night, local media reported.

The old building, located in the Centro Habana neighbourhood, was home to about 30 people, several of whom were trapped in the rubble, official Radio Reloj reported.

Rescue workers, firefighters, medical staff and municipal authorities rushed to the site and rescuers were still searching for survivors on Wednesday. Some of the injured were hospitalized.

Building collapses are common in Cuba, particularly during the rainy season, due to a lack of maintenance spanning decades that has left many, especially in the capital's old neighbourhoods, in poor condition.

Authorities say more than 50 percent of Cuba's housing is in poor condition and the Cuban government has introduced a programme of subsidies for individuals to build and repair their homes.

Authorities expect private construction of at least 23,000 house in 2012.

Argentina rejects British PM's claim over territorial dispute

XINHUA

BUENOS AIRES, 19 Jan—Political leaders here Wednesday strongly rejected British Prime Minister David Cameron's claim Argentina was "colonizing" the Malvinas Islands, which Britain calls the Falkland Islands.

Earlier in the day, Cameron said the Argentine government had engaged in "colonialism" toward the islets, which are at the center of the decades-old feud between the two countries. Argentine Foreign Minister Hector Timerman said instead of calling its National Security Council to discuss the issue, Britain should call United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon and accept UN resolutions calling for dialogue to resolve the issue peacefully. Argentine Interior Minister Florencio Randazzo described Cameron's comment as "particularly offensive."

Britain should respect the UN resolution to "discuss the Malvinas' sovereignty", although for Argentina there won't be such discussions because "the Malvinas belongs to Argentina," Randazzo said. Brazilian Foreign Minister Antonio Patriota said Wednesday Latin America and the Caribbean back Argentina over the dispute.

Meeting with visiting British Foreign Secretary William Hague, Patriota said Hague knew "Brazil and Unasur (Union of South American Nations) support Argentinean sovereignty over the Malvinas." Brazil also supported UN resolutions calling for the two countries to discuss the issue, Patriota said.

Argentina was defeated by Britain in a 74-day war in 1982 over the sovereignty of the South Atlantic islets, which are close to Argentine coasts and far away from Britain. This year marks the 30th anniversary of the conflict.

Tensions over the islands escalated recently when the Mercosur South American trade bloc and Chile backed Argentina by banning Malvinas-flagged ships from docking at their ports.

More than 5 mln going hungry in Niger

More than five million people are going hungry in Niger, the impoverished west African country's premier said Wednesday. NAIROBI, 19 Jan—More than five million people are going hungry in Niger, the impoverished west African country's premier said Wednesday. A survey in December showed that "34.9 percent of Niger households, or over 5.456 million people, are in a situation of food and nutritional insecurity," Brigi Rafini told national radio. Among them "1.324 million people are affected by severe food insecurity," said the prime minister. "We must act right now," stressed Rafini during a visit to Tillaberi, a western Niger Region that has been hard hit by the food crisis. Niger is short of 519,639 tonnes of cereals—or 14 percent of what it needs to feed 15 million people in 2012, said the agriculture ministry. Poor harvests, drought and cricket attacks have been blamed.

European humanitarian aid commissioner Kristalina Georgieva, who is visiting Niger, warned of the situation plaguing the country and the Sahel Region.

Some 1.7 million children are in a "vulnerable situation," she said. Launching an appeal for international aid, Georgieva said the EU "has more than doubled its aid for the Sahel," contributing 105 million euros to help the region fight the food crisis.

US navy rescues Iranian fishermen from sinking boat

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—The US Navy announced it led a rescue operation to assist the crew of an Iranian fishing vessel in distress in the Gulf of Oman, the third in 10 days in an area marked by tension between Washington and Teheran. A Seahawk helicopter from the guided missile destroyer USS Dewey spotted an Iranian fishing boat sinking early Wednesday while two other vessels tried to tow it to safety, according to a Navy Press release.

One sailor remained on board the sinking boat, called the Al Mamsoor, while two other crew members took refuge on the vessels that came to help. The helicopter stayed overhead while the USS Dewey joined the rescue operation. "Once we talked with their captain, it was clear that they needed food and water," said Navy Lieutenant Jason Dawson, the leader of the rescue team. The Al Mamsoor crew had fought flooding for three days before abandoning their vessel, the Navy statement said. The rescue team gave the crew about 150 pounds of food, water and other supplies before returning to the Dewey. On 7 January, a Navy destroyer rescued 13 Iranian fishermen who

Breast milk courier helps Indonesian mums cope

JAKARTA, 19 Jan—Febby Kemala Dewi returned to work at a Jakarta accounting firm after three months of maternity leave but struggled, like many new mums, to balance her home and work lives — especially keeping her infant daughter fed.

Unwilling to stop breastfeeding, unable to pump enough for a whole day in the morning before work and leery of giving her baby anything but the freshest milk, she finally turned to a unique Jakarta service — a breast milk motorbike courier. “I have to work, but at the same time I can still feed my baby,” said Dewi, the wall by her desk plastered with pictures of her smiling daughter, eight-month-old Ashalina Putri. Now, the 29-year-old IT consultant pumps breast milk at her office in central Jakarta and a courier comes to pick up the bottles around lunchtime. Placing them in a padded cooler box whose strap he then slings over his shoulder, the courier rides 45 minutes to an hour on a motorbike through choked Jakarta streets to deliver the milk to Dewi’s mother, who cares for the baby.

Indonesia’s economy has the fastest growth rate in Asia outside China and India, with the number of working women estimated at 40 million in 2009 by the Ministry of Women’s Empowerment. This has since risen, as has the number of working mums. The service was launched in 2010 by Fikri Nauval, owner of a cargo and document shipping business, who said he was inspired by his wife’s using one of his motorcycle riders to send her breast milk home to their baby after she had to return to work. He charges 30,000 to 40,000 rupiah ($3.30 to $4.40) a trip, keeping track of traffic conditions and the best routes for drivers to take using a GPS map on a computer.

“I would like to help this nation build a better generation by helping working mothers deliver breast milk to their babies at home,” said the 40-year-old Nauval, who feels the nutrients in breast milk can’t be replicated by the powdered variety.—Reuters

Many women can skip frequent bone scans

US researchers say they have found new links between the timing of alcohol consumption during pregnancy and certain characteristics of fetal alcohol syndrome. INTERNET

No safe time to drink while pregnant

SAN DIEGO, 19 Jan—US researchers say they have found new links between the timing of alcohol consumption during pregnancy and certain characteristics of fetal alcohol syndrome.

Researchers at the California Teratogen Information Service Pregnancy Health Information Line — a state non-profit organization based at the University of California, San Diego — used data from its toll-free service offering information about alcohol exposure during pregnancy and breastfeeding.

The study involved 992 California women who contacted the information line from 1978 to 2005 with questions about a wide variety of exposures and, after being counseled, agreed to participate in a follow-up study of their pregnancy outcome.

The results, published online ahead of the April print edition of Alcoholism: Clinical & Experimental Research, found every pattern of higher prenatal alcohol consumption — no matter the timing in pregnancy — was associated with an increased risk of having an underweight infant or reduced birth length.

“For every one drink increase in the average number of drinks consumed daily, there was a 25 percent increased risk for smooth upper lip, a 22 percent increased risk for thin red portion of the upper lip border, a 12 percent increased risk for small head size,” said lead author Haruna Sawada Feldman, postdoctoral student at UCSD.

ATLANTA, 19 Jan—New research could mean millions of older women can skip frequent screening tests for osteoporosis: If an initial bone scan shows no big problems, many can safely wait 15 years to have another one, the study suggests.

Government advisers and leading doctor groups urge osteoporosis screening, but no one has known how often that should happen. The findings offer the best information to date on that question, experts said.

“This is landmark, in the sense that it could allow us to move on to more precise guidelines,” said Dr. Heidi Nelson, a researcher at the Oregon Health & Science University who is an expert on the topic. At issues are bone mineral density tests, which usually are done through X-rays and cost around $250. It takes about 10 minutes and involves less radiation than what’s emitted during a chest X-ray. Asia stocks up as Wall Street cheers housing data

BANGKOK, 19 Jan—Asian markets rose Thursday as investors grew more comfortable with riskier assets such as stocks after the release of surprisingly strong US housing figures and a pledge by the IMF to help stave off a financial crisis.

Benchmark oil rose above $101 per barrel while the dollar fell against the euro and the yen. Japan’s Nikkei 225 index jumped 1.2 percent to 8,651.14. South Korea’s Kospi rebounded 1 percent to 1,911.15 after a losing session Wednesday. Hong Kong’s Hang Seng rose 1.1 percent at 19,906.39.

Australia’s S&P ASX 200 gained 0.2 percent to 4,224.30. Benchmarks in Singapore and mainland China also rose. Markets in Taipei were closed for Chinese New Year. Analysts said investors were becoming more comfortable with taking on risk despite multiple headwinds — including a likely recession in Europe, a possible debt default by Greece and a warning from

US airline traffic down 1.5% in October

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—US airline system traffic lost its momentum in October that was seen in the previous month, according to the preliminary data released by US Transportation Department on Wednesday. US airlines carried 61.2 million scheduled domestic and international passengers in total in October, down 1.5 percent from the same period of 2010, said the department.

The fresh number of passengers was 4.1 percent above that of two years ago in October 2009. There were 1.3 percent fewer domestic passengers this October than in the same month of 2010. International passengers edged down 3.0 percent over the same period.

Delta Airlines carried more total passengers than any other US airlines in October, reaching 9.571 million. Southwest Airlines carried the most domestic passengers, reaching 9.522 million. American Airlines took the first place in terms of international passengers with as many as 1.636 million, according to the data. In the first 10 months of 2011, US airlines carried 613.0 million passengers, up 1.5 percent from the same period in 2010. It was also the best January-October performance since 2008.—Xinhua

Rio clear to take over Mongolia project after Ivanhoe relents

LONDON, 19 Jan—Global miner Rio Tinto is clear to take over Mongolia’s coveted Oyu Tolgoi project, which promises to be one of the world’s largest copper-gold mines, after project owner Ivanhoe Mines decided to scrap a controversial “poison pill”. Ivanhoe said on Wednesday it would ditch its shareholder rights plan, originally aimed at blocking Rio Tinto from raising its stake in the Canadian firm, as a separate agreement capping the global miner’s holding at 49 percent expired. Rio, which has built its stake in the miner as it has helped fund construction of Oyu Tolgoi, welcomed the decision.

“As the 49 percent cap on Rio Tinto’s ownership of Ivanhoe expires today, we are free to increase our shareholding as we see fit,” a Rio spokesman said. Ivanhoe said Rio had recently told Ivanhoe’s board that it intends to buy additional shares to raise its stake to more than 50 percent. Ivanhoe’s rights plan, backed by shareholders in 2010 and due to expire next year, was dealt a fatal blow in December when a court ruled it could not be used to dilute Rio’s stake.—Reuters

Captive rhino romance may be last hope for species

Captured in a Borneo forest on Christmas Day, she is the latest addition to Malaysia's Borneo Rhino Sanctuary — and experts say she may also be one of the last hopes for a species on the brink of extinction.

Veterinarians want to introduce Puntung to Tam, a 20-year-old male Sumatran rhinoceros in the enclosure next door, in the hopes that they will breed — although this cannot take place for a number of months yet, until Puntung is deemed ready.

Estimated to be 10 to 12 years old, she was airlifted to the sanctuary in the Tabin Forest Reserve after her capture, and has since been adjusting to her new home, eating more than 60 kg (132 lb) of leaves each day.

"She doesn't look stressed, she's eating well ... but the stress (of a new environment) is enough to offset her cycle, her normal cycle," said Zainal Zahari Zainuddin, a veterinarian with the Borneo Rhino Alliance.

"So she may not have a cycle now. That's why we're monitoring her."

Oslo voices concern over shrinking number of whalers

OSLO, 19 Jan—Norwegian authorities called Wednesday on the country's whaling industry to counter the dramatic drop over the past decade in the number of boats partaking in the annual whale hunts.

The number of Norwegian vessels actively hunting whales has shrunk from 33 in 2001 to just 19 last year, Norway's Directorate of Fisheries said in a statement.

"The authorities are therefore stressing the importance of the sector itself working to recruit new participants," it said.

Whales have been protected by a global moratorium on hunting since 1986, but Norway does not abide by the ban.

In a bid to sustain a small market, the government in Oslo has meanwhile gradually increased the annual whaling quotas in recent years.

In 2011, it authorised hunters to cull 1,286 Minke whales, up from 549 of the small whales hunters were allowed to take a decade earlier. But with the number of whalers in free-fall the industry has increasingly had trouble filling its swelling quota.

In the past couple of years, whalers have not been able to kill more than around half their quota, with just 41 percent of the permitted number taken in 2011. They blame overfilled processing plants, high fuel costs, hunting areas located too far from the coast and difficult weather conditions.—Internet

La Nina said bringing US drought

PASADENA, 19 Jan—The La Nina weather event, dubbed "the diva of drought," is peaking and increasing the odds the southwestern and southern United States will be dry, NASA says.

The space agency said sea surface height data from its Jason-1 and -2 satellites show the milder repeat of last year's strong La Nina has recently intensified.

This is the second consecutive year the satellites have measured lower-than-normal sea surface heights in the equatorial Pacific and unusually high sea surface heights in the western Pacific, a NASA release said Wednesday.

The height of the sea surface in a given area is an indicator of ocean temperature and other factors that influence climate, it said.

"Conditions are ripe for a stormy, wet winter in the Pacific Northwest and a dry, relatively rainless winter in Southern California, the Southwest and the southern tier of the United States," climatologist Bill Patzert of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif, said.

"This La Nina could deepen the drought in the already parched Southwest and could also worsen conditions that have fueled recent deadly wildfires," he said.—Internet

India to get first robotic training centre for doctors

NEW DELHI, 19 Jan—Promising a new dimension to the future of robotic surgery in the country, India will soon be getting its first training centre for the technique, a robotic surgery firm said here Saturday.

"India has immense scope for robotic surgery. What we need is skilled manpower for doctors who can conduct the surgery. Vattikuti Foundation will open the first such training centre in Chennai by the end of this year for doctors from all over India," said Mahendra Bhandari, CEO of the Vattikuti Foundation, at the ongoing global robotics conference here.

"It will be our first step to help overcome the shortage of high-quality training on robotic surgery in India. The centre will provide services of skilled surgeons at affordable costs. By 2016, we expect 30,000 surgeries to be done annually with the new technology," Bhandari added.

The foundation has collaborated with hospitals in Delhi, Mumbai, Kolkata and other cities to provide robot-assisted surgeries. Among the government hospitals, All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS) conducted the first such surgery in 2008. While the surgery is conducted by a four-armed robot, the movements of the robot are controlled by a trained doctor. An arm of the robot controls the camera and the other three hands manipulate the surgical instruments. The entire surgical process is observed via a high-definition 3D vision system known as the Da Vinci surgical robotic system.

According to experts, the surgery is expected to find more takers when the cost comes down in the times to come. "Till now, the robot is manufactured by California-based Intuitive Surgical. One particular company maintains monopoly in the market, competition could help us bring down the cost," said Gagan Gautam, senior consultant and head of urology at the Medanta Kidney and Urology Institute.—Internet

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—If a day without Wikipedia was a bother, think bigger.

In this plugged-in world, we would barely be able to cope if the entire Internet went down in a city, state or country for a day or a week.

Most of civilization went along until the 1990s without the Internet. But now we're so intertwined socially, financially and industrially that suddenly going back to the 1980s would hit the world as hard as a natural disaster, experts say.

No email, Twitter or Facebook. No buying online. No stock trades. No just-in-time industrial shipping. No real-time tracking of diseases. It's gotten so that not just the entire Internet but individual websites such as Google are considered critical infra-structure, experts said.

"Nobody would die, but there would be a major hassle," said computer security expert Mikko Hypponen, chief research officer at F-Secure in Helsinki, Finland.

If an Internet outage lasted more than a day or two, the financial hit would be huge, with mass unemployment, said Ken Mayland, a former chief bank economist and president of ClearView Economics.

Nintendo bringing free game demos to 3DS eShop

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—Launching nearly ten months after the Nintendo 3DS hit North American shores, Nintendo is rolling out support for demos that can be downloaded through the Nintendo eShop. As of 19 January, Nintendo 3DS owners can download a trial version of Capcom's Resident Evil: Revelations, a title that's launching in North America in approximately three weeks. During the following week, 3DS owners will be able to check out Sega's Mario & Sonic at the London 2012 Olympic Games. Other demos included on the docket are Konami's Metal Gear Solid: Snake Eater 3D and Ubisoft's Rayman Origins, however no date has been announced on the availability of either demo.

Nintendo of America's senior director Tony Elison stated "The demo programme allows Nintendo 3DS players to be among the first to test-drive select games. Players can try out new genres or series, often weeks before the full versions are available in stores." However, Nintendo has remained silent on the availability of any first party demos for previously released titles such as Super Mario 3D Land or Mario Kart 7. Nintendo fans are also likely interested in potential demos for upcoming Nintendo 3DS titles such as Kid Icarus: Uprising and Animal Crossing. With the launch of demo support, Nintendo could potentially branch out into older titles currently being sold on the eShop. For instance, Nintendo could provide short demos for some of the previous Legend of Zelda titles.—Internet

Death toll in Haiti truck crash climbs to 29

PORT-AU-PRINCE, 19 Jan—A truck's brakes failed and it crashed a small bus then careened onto the sidewalk of one Port-au-Prince's busiest streets, killing 29 people and injuring 67, a Haitian official said on Tuesday.

Nadia Lochard of Haiti's Civil Protection Office said the accident happened on Route Delmas in the capital when the driver lost control of his dump truck.

The Press office of President Michel Martelly issued a statement saying the leader went to the site of the crash, which was in front of the national television headquarters.

The sidewalk outside the news station is often crowded with street vendors who sell their goods and motorcycle cabbies awaiting customers. The incident happened before midnight Monday.

Tornadoes touch down in Indiana, Kentucky and Mississippi

JACKSON, 19 Jan—Tornadoes struck parts of Mississippi, Indiana and Kentucky on Tuesday, including one that hit a home in Mississippi and injured at least one person, meteorologists said. The Indiana and Kentucky twisters knocked out power lines, downed trees and caused property damage, while a Sheriff's Department dispatcher said the Mississippi tornado struck a home in south Marion County, and a person who was inside suffered a possible broken arm.

Tornadoes are unusual for this part of the year in Indiana and neighbouring Kentucky, although twisters occasionally hit Mississippi during the current season, said Dan Pydynowski, senior meteorologist at AccuWeather.com, whose company provides forecasting services.

A cold front combined with a warm and humid air mass contributed to the latest twisters, but those conditions were dissipating, he said.

"The threat's pretty much come to an end everywhere, so I don't think there's any more tornadic activity to worry about anywhere at this point," Pydynowski said.

In the area of Louisville, Kentucky, a twister knocked down trees and power lines along roadways, the National Weather Service said. To the north in Clark County, Indiana, a twister touched down in the parking lot of a Wal-Mart, the Weather Service added. When the twister moved, a vehicle was turned over on nearby Interstate 65, the agency said.

At Madison Municipal Airport in southeast Indiana, a twister also damaged a Beechcraft King Air when it moved the small plane and broke its nose gear, the Weather Service said.

US, Singapore hold 1st Strategic Partners Dialogue

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—The United States and Singapore held here Wednesday their first Strategic Partners Dialogue, seeking to expand cooperation in bilateral, regional and global matters of joint interest.

The one-day talks, co-chaired by US Assistant Secretary of State Kurt Campbell and Singapore's permanent secretary to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs Bilahari Kausikan, served to "enhance further" bilateral relations and marked a new development in the countries' strategic partnership, the two countries said in a joint statement.

"The co-chairs, in the spirit of equal partnership, mutual respect and desire to promote close cooperation, reviewed an already robust array of initiatives undertaken between the two countries and sought new areas to create and expand cooperation in bilateral, regional, and global matters of joint interest," it said.

In addition to a review of bilateral areas of engagement including security, defence, education, trade and environment, the co-chairs discussed recent developments in Southeast Asia, Northeast Asia and regional institutions such as the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), East Asia Summit, ASEAN Regional Forum, and Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC).

The pair reviewed regional initiatives as well, including the Trans-Pacific Partnership, where they renewed their commitment to complete "a high standard, 21st century agreement" with the other participating countries, said the joint statement.—Xinhua

Battle for control of Asia's seas goes underwater

YOKOSUKA, 19 Jan—It's getting a bit more crowded under the sea in Asia, where Andrew Peterson commands

one of the world's mightiest weapons: a $2 billion nuclear submarine with unrivaled stealth and missiles that can devastate targets hundreds of miles (kilometres) away.

Super high-tech submarines like Cmdr. Peterson's USS Oklahoma City have long been the envy of navies all over the globe—and a key component of US military strategy.

But America's submarine dominance in the Pacific is facing its biggest challenge since the Cold War.

Nearly every Asian country with a coastline is fortifying its submarine fleet amid territorial disputes stirred up by an increasingly assertive China and the promise of bountiful natural resources.—Internet

Avalanches kill 29 in northeastern Afghanistan

KABUL, 19 Jan—Avalanches have killed at least 29 people in Afghanistan's mountainous northeast as rescuers struggled to reach the worst-hit areas cut off by heavy snows, officials said.

The Afghan National Disaster Management Agency said Thursday that at least 40 more people have been injured in a series of avalanches since Monday in Badkhash Province.

Roads outside the provincial capital of Faizabad are blocked by at least 6 feet (2 metres) of snow, the agency said. Afghanistan's harsh winters and mountainous terrain in the north make avalanches a danger each year. In February 2010, an avalanche killed at least 171 people near the Salang Pass, a major route through the Hindu Kush mountains that connects the Capital of Kabul to the north of the country.

The NATO security force in Afghanistan said Thursday that one of its service members died after an explosion in southern Afghanistan on Wednesday. A coalition statement did not provide the nationality of the service member, nor any details of the attack. On Wednesday, dozens of civilians, coalition troops and Afghan security forces were killed and wounded when a suicide attacker blew himself up in a bazaar.

Daud Ahmadi, a provincial spokesman, said a bomber on a motorcycle killed 12 Afghans, including two policemen, and wounded at least 23 other people in Kajaki District of Helmand Province.

A statement released late Wednesday by NATO said the Kajaki explosion killed and wounded dozens of Afghan civilians, Afghan national security forces and coalition troops.—Internet

Bird flu kills two in Cambodia, Vietnam

PHNOM PENH, 19 Jan—Vietnam on Thursday reported its first human death from bird flu in nearly two years, as the virus also claimed the life of a toddler in Cambodia.

Concerns about avian influenza have risen in the region after China in late December reported its first fatality from the H5N1 virus in 18 months, but Vietnamese authorities said there was no need to be alarmed.

"The bird flu situation is still within our control," said Le Minh Hung, a doctor from the Health Department of Ho Chi Minh City. "Some healthcare teams have been sent to check on the situation in southern provinces."

The Vietnamese victim, who died on 11 January, was a duck farmer from the southern Mekong delta Province of Hau Giang, and experts were investigating whether the infection came from his flock.

It was Vietnam's first human death from the disease since April 2010.

In neighbouring Cambodia, a two-year-old boy from northwestern Banteay Meanchey Province, who is thought to have been exposed to sick poultry, died on January 18 from the virus, the World Health Organization (WHO) said.

The H5N1 strain of avian influenza has killed more than 340 people worldwide since 2003, according to WHO statistics.

Vietnam has recorded one of the highest numbers of fatalities from bird flu in southeast Asia, with 59 deaths since 2003, according to the WHO.—Internet

Witnesses say Aussie shark attack 'like Jaws'

An Australian surfer was recovering Thursday after being dragged under the water by a shark that sliced his leg open then circled him as he screamed for help in a scene witnesses said was "like Jaws".—INTERNET

SYDNEY, 19 Jan—An Australian surfer was recovering after being dragged under the water by a shark that sliced his leg open then circled him as he screamed for help in a scene witnesses said was "like Jaws".

Tattoo artist Glen Folkard, 44, was catching waves off Redhead Beach, near Newcastle, north of Sydney, when the two-metre (6.5 foot) shark attacked on Wednesday afternoon in front of dozens of stunned swimmers.

Witnesses said the shark took a large chunk out of Folkard's thigh as well as his board before dragging him under.

He managed to shake himself free and with the help of fellow surfers paddled back to shore trailing blood as the shark circled and was Thursday stable in hospital after surgery.

"It was kind of like Jaws, you know, the scene at the start... where everybody's pulled out of the water and it's a hot day and the water's inviting," a witness, named only as Peter, told the Sydney Morning Herald.

"My son actually said he saw the shark leap out of the water and grab a fish. The word is it was a bull shark.

"His (Folkard's) skin was really grey, he obviously lost quite a lot of blood."

Bull sharks are a medium-sized species known for their aggression and tendency to attack humans.

Around 500 people were on the popular family beach at the time, with about 100 in the water, reports said.

Another witness, Tony James, said: "It's just hit him and took him under for a bit.

"He's managed to get to the surface but I saw it start to follow him."

Rescue helicopters began air patrols after the attack and spotted several large groups of sharks nearby with beaches in the area closed.

But they reopened less than 24 hours later, although jet ski and helicopter patrols were continuing, as the schools of baitfish that are thought to have drawn the sharks close to shore moved further out to sea.—Internet

Five Europeans die in Ethiopia attack, two abducted

A wounded tourist from the group attacked in Ethiopia's Afar region arrives in Addis Ababa. The Erta Ale volcano is one of Africa's most spectacular and lies in the Afar depression — reputedly one of the least hospitable places on the planet — where local rebels have claimed attacks and kidnappings in the past.

INTERNET

ADDIS ABABA, 19 Jan—Gunmen killed five Europeans trekking near Ethiopia's famed Erta Ale volcano and kidnapped two others, officials said Wednesday, in the region's worst attack on tourists in years.

The volcano is one of Africa's most spectacular and lies in the Afar depression — reputedly one of the least hospitable places on the planet — where local rebels have claimed attacks and kidnappings in the past.

Ethiopia blamed Eritrea but Asmara denied involvement in the attack, which occurred before dawn on Tuesday and dealt another blow to regional tourism after recent kidnappings in Kenyan resorts and attacks on yachts by Somali pirates.

Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban's spokesman Peter Szijarto, in an emailed statement, provided the nationalities of all the tourists involved in Monday's incident, citing information he said was obtained from Interpol.

"Two Hungarians were killed in Ethiopia and another lightly wounded... In total, five people were killed: two Germans, two Hungarians and an Austrian," the spokesman said.

"Two Italians were able to escape, two Belgians were lightly wounded. Two Germans and two Ethiopians were abducted," he added.

Belgium said one of its nationals was wounded in the attack, as was a British friend she was travelling with.

Ethiopia's foreign ministry said that a total of 22 tourists were on the trip to the remote destination.—Internet

Indians return home after surviving Italian luxury liner disaster

NEW DELHI, 19 Jan—More than 200 Indians who were rescued from the Italian cruise ship, Costa Concordia which had hit a rock and sank off the coast of Italy last week, will return to India by Thursday, local media reported.

Help desks were set up at the airports in Delhi, Mumbai, Kolkata, Chennai and Hyderabad to help out relatives of those returning home, officials of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs were quoted as saying.

A total of 203 Indians were on board the ship, one passenger and 202 crew members. One of them, Robello Russel Terence, a 33-year-old waiter on the ship, remains missing. The government has stepped up efforts to search the missing Indian.

The Italian luxury liner was carrying more than 4,200 people when it ran aground on a reef off Giglio island in western Italy. Six people were killed and more than 60 injured in the accident.

200 flights delayed by heavy fog at Delhi airport

NEW DELHI, 19 Jan—Fog continued to haunt the Indian capital early Thursday morning, disrupting air and rail traffic, with over 200 flights delayed and 11 flights canceled at the Indira Gandhi International airport, said civil aviation officials.

Visibility plunged below 50 meters at the airport early Thursday when international departures were in full swing. Some aircraft waited for a few hours at the holding point on the taxiways and had to return to the parking bays due to low visibility. Massive congestion caused by runway closure further worsened the delay, which lasted from one to six hours.

Weather turns bad as back-home travel peaks

BEIJING, 19 Jan—This year's annual travel rush, which will go into full swing in the next three days, will encounter bad weather, and the road home could be a tough one for many heading to Spring Festival family reunions.

Heavy fog on Wednesday stranded more than 14,000 passengers at the Xi'an Xianyang International Airport in Northwest China's Shaanxi Province, where visibility was reduced to less than 100 metres.

Airport authorities said the dense fog grounded more than 200 flights since Wednesday morning. By 6 pm, 47 flights in and out of Xi'an had been canceled.

With air tickets sold out during the travel rush, many passengers whose flights were canceled found themselves in a predicament.

Xu Ning, a 30-year-old Xi'an native trapped in Shanghai Pudong International Airport since noon, said if he could not find a ticket to Xi'an, he would not be able to spend Spring Festival eve with his family.

"The airport staff told us that we could choose between endlessly waiting in the airport or rescheduling our flight for one of the next couple of days. But I just found out that tickets for flights to Xi'an later this week were all booked," he said.

Zhang Yao, 28, who arrived with her husband at Beijing Capital International Airport at 3 pm from Belgium, found the flight she planned to take to Xi'an had been canceled.

"We were told we could reschedule, but the earliest flight with available seats is on 23 Jan," she said.

That the airport did not make arrangements for stranded passengers, such as free accommodation, made her feel even more frustrated, she said.

Zhang and about 30 other passengers were still waiting for a solution at 6 pm.

Indonesia tries to deter train 'surfers' — again

JAKARTA, 19 Jan—Indonesia has gone to imaginative extremes to try to stop commuters from illegally riding the roofs of trains — hosing down the scofflaws with red paint, threatening them with dogs and appealing for help from religious leaders.

Now the authorities have an intimidating and possibly even deadly new tactic: Suspending rows of grapefruit-sized concrete balls to rake over the top of trains as they pull out of stations, or when they go through rail crossings.

Authorities hope the balls — which could deliver serious blows to the head — will be enough to deter defiant roof riders.

"We've tried just about everything, even putting rolls of barbed wire on the roof, but nothing seems to work," said Mateta Rizahulhaq, a spokesman for the state-owned railway company PT Kereta Api. "Maybe this will do it."

Trains that crisscross Indonesia on poorly maintained tracks left behind by Dutch colonizers six decades ago usually are packed with passengers, especially during the rush hour.

Hundreds seeking to escape the overcrowded carriages clamber to the top. Some ride high to avoid paying for a ticket. Others do so because — despite the dangers, with dozens killed or injured every year — "rail surfing" is fun.

The first dozen or so balls were installed Tuesday hundreds of yards (metres) from the entrance of a train station just outside the capital, Jakarta. Painted silver, the balls hung by chains from what looked like the frame of a giant soccer goal.

Armed conflict linked to low birth weight

DENVER, 19 Jan—Pregnant women exposed to armed conflict have a higher risk than others of giving birth to babies who are under weight, US researchers say. Hani Mansour and Daniel Rees of the University of Colorado Denver and Daniel Rees said the Second Intifada, which began in September 2000, claimed more than 4,000 Palestinians by 2005.

Mansour and Rees used data from the Palestinian Demographic and Health Survey, collected by the Palestinian Central Bureau of Statistics approximately four years after the start of the uprising. The data were matched with data on Palestinian fatalities in the West Bank collected by B'Tselem, an Israeli human rights organization.

The researchers examined a sample of 1,224 births to women living in the West Bank. Conflict exposure in utero was measured by the number of Palestinians killed by Israeli security forces in the district where the mother lived. The authors controlled for a variety of potentially confounding variables — including education of the mother and father, mother's age when she gave birth, father's occupation, birth order, gender of the baby, number of prenatal care visits, whether a curfew was in place and self-reported anemia.

Woman removed from plane after bringing gun aboard

FORT WORTH, 19 Jan—A 65-year-old lawyer was arrested Wednesday for carrying a loaded handgun aboard an American Airlines jet at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Judith Kenney was released later Wednesday on her own recognizance, said her attorney, Dallas lawyer David Finn.

Kenney carries a handgun for protection but had forgotten that it was in a computer bag she carried on board the plane, he said. She has no criminal history, he said.

Screeners at a security checkpoint had detected a gun in a woman's carry-on bag but she "picked up the bag and left the checkpoint before the screening process was over," said Greg Soule, a spokesman for the Transportation Security Administration, which operates the checkpoints. When TSA screeners spot a gun in a bag, they are supposed to seize the bag and notify police, he said.

Homelessness down but seen rising anew

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—US homelessness slipped 1 percent from 2009 to 2011, but the sluggish economy left more poor people struggling to pay for housing and just a step away from shelters, an advocacy group said in a new study on Wednesday.

The drop to 636,017 homeless people last year could prove short-lived, since it was likely due to $1.5 billion in federal aid that will run out this year, the National Alliance to End Homelessness said in its report.

"The fact that homelessness dropped in the middle of a downturn is counter-intuitive," Nan Roman, the Alliance's president and chief executive, told a news conference.

Steve "Pockets" gathers firewood to heat the inside of his tent, that is part of a homeless community near Lakewood, New Jersey on 9 January, 2012.—INTERNET

The federal aid, part of an economic stimulus package, "seems to have worked," she said.

The Alliance, which groups public, private and non-profit organizations, said the biggest decrease in homelessness was among veterans, with the number falling 11 percent to 67,495 in 2011.

The overall decline in homelessness, however small, may not last long. Current trends point to the number of homeless people rising about 5 percent through 2013, Peter Witte, a researcher who compiled the study, told reporters.

In one indicator of possible trouble, the number of poor households that spent more than half their incomes on rent — defined as "severely housing cost burdened" — rose 6 percent to 6.2 million, the report said.

The number of people living "doubled up" with friends, relatives or others jumped 13 percent to 6.8 million. "Doubling up" is the usual step before people move into shelters, Witte said.

Robert Rector, a senior researcher with the Heritage Foundation, called the slight decline in homelessness "pretty startling" in light of the worst US economic downturn since the Great Depression.

He said the federal aid, although worthwhile, had played only a small part in easing homelessness.

Keystone rejection no judgment on pipeline merit

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—President Barack Obama on Wednesday blamed his Republican opponents for imposing an "arbitrary" deadline on his review of TransCanada Corp's plan to build the Keystone XL Canada-to-Texas crude oil pipeline, which led to its rejection.

"This announcement is not a judgment on the merits of the pipeline, but the arbitrary nature of a deadline that prevented the State Department from gathering the information necessary to approve the project and protect the American people," Obama said in a statement. "I'm disappointed that Republicans in Congress forced this decision."

Russian tanker near finishing Nome fuel delivery

ANCHORAGE, 19 Jan—A Russian tanker was expected to finish offloading 1.3 million gallons of fuel in Nome as early as Wednesday night, officials said, easing an energy shortage in the ice-bound Alaskan port city.

The Renda, a 370-foot ice-class tanker sent to Nome from its home port in Vladivostok, has already pumped its gasoline cargo to shore and is now finishing the delivery of diesel, said Jason Evans, board chairman of the Sitnasuak Native Corp, the company that arranged for the unusual icebreaking mission.

The Renda, escorted by a US Coast Guard icebreaker, is making the first-ever winter marine delivery of fuel to northwestern Alaska.

Fuel is typically barged in to Nome, which lacks outside road access, during summer and fall. The last scheduled delivery was canceled after one of the worst storms to hit the region in decades swept the Bering Sea town of 3,600.

The missed barge shipment meant Nome could face sparse fuel supplies and, if fuel had to be flown into town, extremely high prices by late winter, Sitnasuak warned. Gasoline currently costs about $6 a gallon in Nome, Mayor Denise Michels said. Michels said caution was more important that speedy fuel flow from the Renda, which arrived in town on Friday and began sending fuel to onshore storage tanks late Monday.

"We're not pushing. We want to make sure this transfer is done safely. If it takes another 24 hours, so be it,"

Major oil refinery to close in US Virgin Islands

ST. CROIX, (US Virgin Islands), 19 Jan—One of the world's largest oil refineries will close next month, the company announced Wednesday, stunning nearly 2,000 workers and threatening to upend the reeling economy of the US Virgin Islands.

Industry analysts said the closure is unlikely to have a major effect on the global oil market, but Gov John de Jongh described the loss of the territory's largest private employer as "a complete body blow" for the US territory of about 108,000 people.

He said Hovensa generated a minimum of $60 million a year in revenue for the government, which recently laid off hundreds of public workers due to a budget crisis.

"Given what we're going through right now, this is the last bit of news that I wanted to hear," he said in a teleconference with reporters.

Losses at Hovensa, a joint venture of US based Hess Corp and Venezuela's state-owned oil company, have totaled $1.3 billion over the past three years and were projected to continue due to reduced demand caused by the global economic slowdown and increased refining capacity in emerging markets, said Brian K Lever, president and chief operating officer of Hovensa LLC.

"We deeply regret the closure of the Hovensa refinery and the impact on our dedicated people," Lever said in a statement. "We explored all available options to avoid this outcome, but severe financial losses left us with no other choice." IMF seeks up to $500 billion in new funds

BRUSSELS, 19 Jan—The International Monetary Fund said Wednesday that it's aiming to increase its financial firepower by around $500 billion so it can issue new loans to help ease a worsening financial crisis. Responding to speculation surrounding its funding requirements, the Washington-based institution said its staff estimates that countries around the world will need about $1 trillion in loans in the coming years. Most of the concerns center on the 17 nations that use the euro and their debt crisis.

Thanks to about $200 billion that European countries have promised the IMF, it's more than one-third of the way to its fund-raising goal. The IMF has put up about a third of the financing of the eurozone's bailouts over the past two years. But there are growing worries that non-European countries will also need more help because of the worsening economic outlook.

Earlier, its sister organization, the World Bank, urged emerging countries to be ready for a severe global downturn if the crisis in the 17-nation eurozone intensifies.

The eurozone, in particular, has been pushing countries around the globe to give more funds to the IMF. The idea is to build up a larger firewall to stop the continent's debt troubles from spreading to large economies like Spain, Italy or even France.—Internet

South African Airways launches flights to Burundi, Rwanda

BUJUMBURA, 19 Jan—South African Airways (SAA) on Tuesday night launched flights to the Burundian Capital Bujumbura and the Rwandan Capital Kigali, a press release from SAA said.

The flight will operate from South Africa's Johannesburg to Kigali and onwards to the Bujumbura, while the return flights will operate from Bujumbura to Kigali and onwards to Johannesburg.

"The flights will pick up passengers and freight on the Kigali-Bujumbura-Kigali sectors allowing for growth in the African Great Lakes of the central and eastern African and increase intra-regional connectivity," said the Press release. Unemployment in Britain hits 8.4 percent

LONDON, 19 Jan—The unemployment rate in Britain reached 8.4 percent from September to November with a record number of dissatisfied part-time workers, national data shows.

The unemployment rate climbed higher than the 8.3 percent predicted by economists as the number of unemployed persons rose by 118,000 in the three-month stretch, The Daily Telegraph reported on Wednesday.

The number of unemployed, 2.68 million, is a 17-year high. The number of workers listed as "underemployed," which means they are working part time because no full-time job is available, rose by 44,000 in September to November to 1.31 million, the highest figure since 1992.

The number of persons listed as working for themselves rose by 101,000 to 4.12 million. But analysts said a sudden interest in independence was not behind the rise. Rather, the surging number of entrepreneurs is a sign that some unemployed workers are attempting to avoid government welfare, the newspaper said.

"The government's welfare-to-work programmes are now clearly failing and the welfare bill is going through the roof," said Liam Byrne, the Labour Party's shadow work and pensions secretary.

"Unemployment has now soared to highest level for a generation and long-term youth unemployment has more than doubled since January last year.—Internet

Tales emerge of missing and dead in ship disaster

ROME, 19 Jan—A retired American couple treating themselves after putting four children through college. A Hungarian musician who helped crying children into lifejackets, then disappeared while trying to retrieve his beloved violin from his cabin. As details emerged Wednesday about the missing and the dead in the grounding of the Costa Concordia, the captain was quoted as saying he tripped and fell into the water from the listing vessel and never intended to abandon his passengers.

The search for the 21 people still unaccounted for in the disaster ground to a halt after the cruise liner shifted again on its rocky perch off the Tuscan island of Giglio, making it too dangerous for divers to continue. Rough seas were forecast for the next few days.

The bad weather also postponed the start of the weekslong operation to extract the half-million gallons of fuel on board the vessel, as Italy's environment minister warned Parliament of the ecological implications if the ship sinks.

Oprah Winfrey parties in Mumbai with Bollywood stars

Oprah Winfrey was driven to the party by the Bachchans.—INTERNET

MUMBAI, 19 Jan — US chat show queen Oprah Winfrey has kicked off her week-long visit to India by partying with Bollywood stars. Winfrey is on her first visit to the country to film a documentary and is expected to attend the literary festival in Jaipur City. She arrived in Mumbai on Monday and attended a party held in her honour.

She is expected to visit the city's slums on Tuesday and is also expected to have dinner with a traditional family of four generations. On Monday evening, Winfrey was seen wearing a red sari as she travelled in a car with Bollywood acting legend Amitabh Bachchan to a glitzy event, hosted by socialite Parmeshwar Godrej.

They were accompanied by actors Abhishek Bachchan and Aishwarya Rai, Mr Bachchan's son and daughter-in-law. Other actors who attended the party included Shah Rukh Khan, Hrithik Roshan, and Preity Zinta. Zinta tweeted from the event: "Tonight was dinner at the Godrej House with Oprah Winfrey. Nice to see her wearing a beautiful sari." Winfrey, who is one of America's most famous women, left one of India's biggest personalities star-struck.

Boa constrictor snakes sense prey's fading heartbeat

LONDON, 19 Jan — Scientists have now discovered that snakes sense exactly how long they need to squeeze; the predators can sense their victim's heartbeat, and let go only when it stops. The findings are reported in the Royal Society journal Biology Letters. They reveal how snakes evolved to take physical "cues" from their prey. This allows the animals to sense when they have successfully incapacitated their quarry. It is a crucial trick for a predator that has to balance its need for food with the energy it spends constricting its muscles tightly enough—and for long enough — to suffocate an animal.

The research team, led by Dr Scott Boback from Dickinson College in the US state of Pennsylvania, wanted to find out if the snakes were able to "measure" the amount of time they needed to keep squeezing. The scientists used rats to entice their captive Boa constrictor to attack. But the team did not subject the rodents to death by constriction, instead implanting dead rats with "simulated hearts" — water-filled bulbs connected to a pump, which replicated the blood-pumping action of a live rat's heart.—Internet

Rise in number of 'younger' knee replacements

LONDON, 19 Jan — Data suggests there has been a big rise in knee replacement operation rates, particularly for younger patients. Figures for the UK, US and Finland show an emerging trend of requests for arthritic 'baby boomers' in their 50s.

UK experts believe the nation's growing obesity problem is partly to blame for the rise, putting strain on the knees.

A report in Arthritis & Rheumatism says work is urgently needed to check that replacements in this age group is wise given the product's unknown shelf life. The durability of the replacement knee joints has only been assessed in patients in their 60s, 70s and 80s, not in their 50s.

Best estimates suggest the joints last for about 15 years in these "older" and often less physically active recipients. Surgeons say it is possible younger patients might wear out their replacements even faster than this.

Kraft to cut 1,600 jobs in split

NEW YORK, 19 Jan — Kraft Foods Inc said that splitting into two companies would lead it to cut about 1,600 jobs in North America this year and that its 2011 profit should be slightly higher than it had previously forecast. About 40 percent of the job cuts come from the company realigning its US sales division, Kraft said.

About 20 percent of the jobs being cut in the United States and Canada are currently open positions, the company said.

The planned job cuts do not include any cuts at manufacturing facilities. The 1,600 job cuts represent about 1.26 percent of the company's total workforce. Kraft has about 127,000 employees, including about 46,500 in North America. Kraft also said its 2011 net revenue would be up by about 10 percent, as it ended the year with strong momentum around the world despite a tough operating environment.

Public request for climate hedgehog study

LONDON, 19 Jan — UK wildlife charities are asking for people's help in examining if hedgehogs are being affected by climate change.

Retired hedgehog expert Dr Pat Morris performed a study 40 years ago showing that temperature affects when the animals emerge from hibernation. With the British Hedgehog Preservation Society and People's Trust for Endangered Species, he wants to see if warming since then has changed things.

Hedgehog numbers fell in the last 50 years, largely due to land use change. From an estimated 30 million in the 1950s, the UK population shrank to about 1.5 million in 1995, and has almost certainly fallen further since then.

The spread of urban landscapes and industrial farming are among the factors involved; but climate change could be having an impact as well.

As a researcher at Royal Holloway, University of London in the 1970s, Dr Morris conducted a survey trying to map hedgehog populations across the country.

"We took observations of hedgehogs that people had sent in for mapping," he told BBC News.

White-nose syndrome ravages North America bat numbers

NEW YORK, 19 Jan — At least 5.7 million bats across 16 US states and Canada have died from White-nose syndrome, scientists studying the fungal ailment say. The disease was first detected in a cave in New York State in 2006. Previously, the US Fish and Wildlife Service closed caves and mines in an effort to hamper the spread of the disease.

Officials say bats provide value to the US economy as natural pest control in farms. The nocturnal creatures also help to control insects that can spread disease to humans. Bats with White-nose syndrome exhibit odd behaviour during the winter months, including flying outside during the day. The rapid spread of the disease has also challenged officials' population estimates.

Woman ok after bite from zebra during Texas safari visit

A young woman named Megan is bitten by a zebra while on a visit to a Texas wildlife safari.

Obviously caught off guard, Megan screams and appears very upset over the attack. Thankfully, Megan doesn't appear seriously injured and can even be seen laughing during the final seconds of the video. Zebras are herbivores, so it appears that the zebra was going for Megan's potato chips, not Megan herself. Still it's a good reminder that you shouldn't leave your windows open while on a wildlife safari, particularly not when you're looking away from the window and eating food.

Though it hasn't been officially confirmed, the video appears to have been taken at the Natural Bridge Wildlife Ranch in San Antonio, Texas. Their homepage even features a zebra bearing its teeth with a park gift card wedged between its jaws.

Plane passengers accidentally told they are about to crash into ocean

Passengers aboard a trans-Atlantic British Airways flight were startled when a recorded message was accidentally triggered at 3am, telling them their flight was about to crash into the ocean.

"We were about three hours into the flight when an automated message came over saying, 'This is an emergency. We will shortly be making an emergency landing on water,'" flight passenger Duncan Farquharson told the Daily Mail.

The automated message, which began while the plane was at about 35,000 feet in the air during its voyage from Miami to London, apparently was triggered when one of the plane's pilots accidentally bumped it in the cockpit's tight quarters.

Farquharson says the passengers then braced for the worst, assuming they were all about to die. "We looked at each other and figured we were both about to die," Farquharson said.

"Families with children were distraught and people were in tears. It was very distressing."

British Airways has an "oops" moment.

Another passenger, Michelle Lord, told the Telegraph: "People were terrified, we all thought we were going to die. They said the pilot hit the wrong button because they were so close together."

Country music great Haggard hospitalized with pneumonia

NASHVILLE, 19 Jan—Country music great Merle Haggard has been admitted to a Georgia hospital suffering from pneumonia and postponed the rest of his concert dates in January, his spokeswoman said on Wednesday.

Haggard, 74, entered the Macon hospital on Tuesday night after he canceled a show in that Georgia City seven minutes before he was to take the stage because he was too ill to perform, said Frank Mull, his tour manager and close friend.

A member of the Country Music Hall of Fame, Haggard is best known for songs including "Mama Tried," "Okie from Muskogee" and "The Fightin' Side of Me."

Haggard had been scheduled to perform again on Wednesday night in Columbus, Georgia, but that show and the rest of the January slate will be rescheduled for April, according to Haggard's Los Angeles-based publicist Tresa Redburn.

Redburn said the singer was receiving fluids

MELBOURNE, 19 Jan—The delayed preparation is working well for Maria Sharapova so far at the Australian Open, where she has reached the third round after just two hours on court.

The 2008 Australian Open winner had a 6-0, 6-1 second-round win over US qualifier Jamie Hampton in 64 minutes on Thursday, two days after beating Argentina's Gisela Dulko by the same margin. Sharapova did not play in any warmup events and spent nearly two weeks in Melbourne ahead of the season's first major while she rested an injured left ankle.

There was no indication of any problems with the ankle on Thursday, but the 24-year-old Russian wasn't really tested by No. 144-ranked Hampton, who has only ever won one match at a Grand Slam. "It was more about getting my feet going ... worrying about myself," Sharapova said. "Yeah, started my preparations in the off-season a little late, took a bit of extra time in practice instead of rushing into a tournament." She'll meet either Stephanie Dubois of Canada or 30th-seeded Angelique Kerber of Germany in the next round.

Fourth-seeded Andy Murray, who lost to Djokovic in the final here last year, also advanced Thursday, beating Edouard Roger-Vasselin of France 6-1, 6-4, 6-4. Later, players who could give both Djokovic and Murray some competition in their half of the draw — former finalist Lleyton Hewitt and American Andy Roddick — had a night match at Rod Laver Arena.

Murray is playing his first Grand Slam tournament since hiring eight-time major champion Ivan Lendl as his coach. "It's been good, he's obviously one of the greatest players ever," Murray said.

Murray through to 3rd round at Australian Open

MELBOURNE, 19 Jan—Two-time finalist Andy Murray won the first five games on his way to a routine 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 win over Edouard Roger-Vasselin of France at the Australian Open on Thursday. Fourth-seeded Murray has lost one of his last 25 matches against French opponents. He will face another Frenchman, Michael Llodra, in the third round.

Roger-Vasselin was outclassed in the first set and though he put up stronger resistance in the next two, he missed the only break point opportunity he had.

Pato sinks Novara as Milan reach quarters

MILAN, 19 Jan—AC Milan rung the changes and made hard work of reaching the Italian Cup quarter-finals, beating Novara 2-1 after extra-time at the San Siro on Wednesday night.

Teenager Stephan El Shaarawy opened the scoring midway through the first half but Ivan Radovanovic equalised two minutes from time.

In the extra period Brazilian pair Robinho and Alexandre Pato combined for the latter to score the winner and secure a clash with Lazio in the next round.

Coach Massimiliano Allegri rested star performers such as Zlatan Ibrahimovic, Thiago Silva and Mark van Bommel while Kevin-Prince Boateng has been ruled out for a month with a hamstring injury. It meant veteran Filippo Inzaghi was given a starting berth alongside youngsters such as El Shaarawy and Alexander Merkel, while France centre-back Philippe Mexes was afforded a rare start. In fact Merkel was thrust straight into the team despite only re-joining the club from Genoa 24 hours earlier.

Allegri was relieved to have made it through. "We conceded a goal a minute from the end from a free-kick

we could have avoided," he moaned. "Then we had a chance to make it 3-1. We struggled but the important thing was to go through and we've done that."

Chances were few and far between with Inzaghi, 38, peeling off his marker at the back post to meet an inswinging cross from Luca Antonini, only to head wide.

Harrington, Els seek big improvements

WASHINGTON, 19 Jan—Padraig Harrington and Ernie Els will both set out in the Volvo Champions at The Links at Fancourt on Thursday on what they hope will be much improved golfing years. "Last year was well below average," said Harrington, who won back-to-back British Opens in 2007 and 2008, adding the US PGA Championship in 2008, but who has slipped to 89 in the world rankings.

"I'd like to get my sense of humour back," said three-time Major winner Els, acknowledging that his putting woes in recent years had taken the smile off his face as well as sending him plunging to a world ranking of 71. Harrington, 40, said a measure of how his golf had declined was that in his peak year of 2008 he had improved his position in every final round he had played. "In 2011 I went backwards every Sunday," he rued. Although it had been a poor year, Harrington said it had ended on a positive note. FIFA tells Brazil it must have beer at World Cup

RIO DE JANEIRO, 19 Jan—Beer will be sold at the 12 venues of the 2014 World Cup finals, FIFA general secretary Jerome Valcke said on Wednesday as he attempted to close all further discussion on a controversial issue in Brazil.

Voting on the bill for the World Cup Law has been held up over differences between the tournament hosts and world soccer's governing body, notably on the sale of alcoholic drinks at sports venues which is banned in Brazil.

The bill was scheduled to have been voted on by the chamber of deputies at the end of last year but it has been delayed by several issues including the sale of beer, with FIFA demanding protection of sponsors' trademarks.

"Alcoholic drinks are part of the FIFA World Cup, so we're going to have them. Excuse me if I sound a bit arrogant but that's something we won't negotiate," Valcke said. "The fact that we have the right to sell beer has to be a part of the Law," he told the foreign press corps in an interview in Rio de Janeiro, where on Thursday he will hold a meeting with

Abidal grabs Cup winner for Barca at Real

MADRID, 19 Jan—Eric Abidal netted a rare but superbly-taken goal to give Barcelona a 2-1 comeback win at holders Real Madrid in a King's Cup quarter-final first leg on Wednesday as Pep Guardiola's side tightened their stranglehold over their rivals.

The France fullback, who extended his contract with the Spanish and European champions on Monday, galloped on to a floated Lionel Messi pass 13 minutes from time and calmly slotted past Iker Casillas to give the 2011 runners-up the advantage for next week's second leg in Barcelona.

Real forward Cristiano Ronaldo had put the home side ahead with a breakaway goal in the 11th minute before Barca captain Carles Puyol flung himself at Xavi's corner to power a header past Spain team mate Casillas for a 49th-minute equaliser.

Beckham to re-join Galaxy on two-year deal

LOS ANGELES, 19 Jan—Former England captain David Beckham will be returning to the LA Galaxy on a fresh two-year contract, the Major League Soccer (MLS) team said on Wednesday.

Beckham's initial five-year deal ended after the Galaxy won the 2011 MLS

Cup and there had been speculation the former Manchester United and Real Madrid midfielder was considering offers from Paris St Germain and a number of English clubs.

However, Paris St Germain said earlier this month the Englishman would not be joining the big-spending Ligue 1 soccer club due to family reasons.

"This was an important decision for me," Beckham, 36, said in a statement. "I had many offers from clubs from around the world, however, I'm still passionate about playing in America and winning trophies with the Galaxy.—Reuters

Coyle's backing for Carroll

Misfiring Liverpool striker "is an outstanding young player"

LONDON, 19 Jan—Bolton manager Owen Coyle is convinced it is only a matter of time before Andy Carroll finds the sort of form that made him such a huge favourite at Newcastle.

Carroll has struggled to live up to his £35million price tag - which makes him the most expensive British footballer in history - in the 12 months since he left Tyneside to join Liverpool.

Far from leading the line, the 23-year-old could not even make the Reds' starting line-up for last weekend's draw at Stoke, even though Luis Suarez is in the middle of an eight-match suspension. Carroll is hoping to be recalled for Saturday's trip to Bolton but Coyle, for one, would not welcome that news as he believes the big number nine is a class act.

"I don't think there is any doubt he will reproduce that form," said Coyle.

"He is an outstanding young player.

"The thing is, when you get that kind of criticism you have to come through it with a smile on your face.

"It will serve him well. His quality is unquestioned. We have to make sure he doesn't show it against us."
