Blaze of greed and anger

We always need to be aware of the danger of fire. Once started, it could cause boundless losses. All too often, fire is put out by hands. If not, it causes serious loss.

Everyone has a fear for fire. There are many other fires as dreadful as literal meaning of fire: the blaze of greed and the blaze of anger.

They share common nature—even more serious—with the fire. As fire ravages possessions, they destroy one's life and said to be more dreadful.

Irrationality and jealousy raise the temperature of one's mind, burning more and more inside. The fire anyone ignites burns himself. We need to put out these fires before it get blazed up.

There are many examples that insatiability and temper bring oneself to the tragic end. Trailing the greed, some go beyond the framework of law. Following the anger, some commit crimes.

There is no hideout for offenders. They must face legal actions. Penalties are disgraceful and dreadful. Being shameful, one may avoid breaching laws and committing crimes.

If with much greed, there will be no room for shame in mind. If with much anger, reasoning power will be lost.

We have to put out the fire of greed and of anger by satiation and patience.

Last year Artemio admitted the Shining Path had been defeated.—INTERNET

LIMA, 13 Feb — The leader of the remnants of Peru's once-powerful Shining Path rebel group has been captured, government officials have announced. The guerrilla leader known as "Comrade Artemio" was found badly wounded after a trafficking.

President Ollanta Humala said the capture of Artemio marked the defeat of the Shining Path in the Alto Huallaga valley - a centre of cocaine production. "In the name of the police and the army we can say to the country: mission accomplished," Mr Humala said during a visit to the units involved. Mr Humala added that he would now step up the fight against the other remaining band of Shining Path rebels in the Ene-Apurimac valley.

Initial reports said Artemio — whose real name is Florindo Eleuterio Flores — was dead. But Defence Minister Alberto Otarola said he had been found alive but badly wounded. "He has practically lost his right arm and he is being given medical attention," Mr Otarola said. Some Peruvian media reports suggested Artemio may have been betrayed or abandoned by his fellow guerrillas.

He has been flown to the capital Lima for questioning and further medical treatment. Last December Artemio admitted to reporters that the Shining Path had been defeated, and said the remaining rebels were ready to negotiate with the government.

Colombia seizes All cap rebels' explosives cache

BOGOTA, 13 Feb — The Colombian security forces have seized three tonnes of explosives and arms belonging to the country's biggest left-wing rebel group, the All cap. Officers found the explosives in an abandoned rebel camp in the jungle in the south of the country. They said they had been tipped off by rebels who had handed themselves in to the authorities.

The seizure comes 10 days after the Farc set off a bomb outside a police station in Tumaco, killing 11 people. Security officials said they had seized 3,200 sticks of explosives, as well as landmines and hundreds of grenades. Col Wilson Diaz said the camp on the shores of the river Yari was large enough to house around 100 rebels.

The colonel said the seizure had been one of the largest in that region for years. All cap rebels have stepped up their offensive against the security forces since their leader, Alfonso Cano, was killed in a military raid in November. Earlier on Saturday, three soldiers were killed in a rebel grenade attack in the mountains of Valle del Cauca Province.—Internet

Bali bombing suspect Umar Patek on trial in Indonesia

JAKARTA, 13 Feb — Umar Patek, an alleged mastermind of the 2002 Bali bombing that killed 202 people, was put on trial in Indonesia. The charges against him, some carrying the death penalty, were read out in a Jakarta court on Monday. He faces six counts including premeditated murder, bomb-making and illegal firearms possession.

Patek is believed to be a key member of Jemaah Islamiyah (JI), the militant Islamist group blamed for the attacks and linked to al-

Qaeda. He was arrested in January 2011 in Abbottabad, Pakistan, where Osama bin Laden was later killed. In August he was extradited to Indonesia in a move seen at the time as a significant coup for anti-terror agencies in the country.

The trial is expected to go on for months, says the BBC's Indonesia Correspondent, Karishma Vaswani. A verdict would likely be delivered at the end of May or in early June. Security analysts believed it was no coincidence that he was caught in the same town as where the former al-Qaeda leader was hiding, but officials could not confirm whether the two had met. Bin Laden was killed in a raid by United States forces in May 2011.—Internet

Iran's IRGC to stage new ground military drills

TEHRAN, 13 Feb — The Islamic Revolution Guards Corps (IRGC) Ground Force has planned to carry out new military exercises by the end of the current Iranian calendar year (starting March 20), the local satellite Press TV reported. Commander of the IRGC Ground Forces Brigadier General Mohammad Pakpour said Sunday that the IRGC is completely prepared to strike back at any act of aggression against the Islamic Republic, said the report.

According to Pakpour, the main purpose of IRGC military drills is to improve the combat preparedness of Iranian forces for any possible military attack. The report did not specify the location of the next IRGC military drills. Last week, IRGC Ground Forces wrapped up the "Hamiane Velayat" (supporters of Velayat) military drills in southern Iran. Pakpour said that all elements of a tactical commando raid and aerial combat were "successfully" practiced during the ground military drills.

The IRGC forces also launched air offensive and defensive operations, carried out helicopter and anti-helicopter maneuvers and ambushed the hypothetical enemies' armored and mechanized columns, and the forces exercised the aerial transportation of military equipment as well as overnight raids during the military maneuvers, Pakpour said. The drills were intended to convey a message of peace and friendship to the countries in the Middle East, while advising Iran's enemies to observe prudence in their behavior towards the Islamic Republic, he added.

Iran has said that its exercises in the southern waters and the nearby areas are aimed at maintaining readiness to confront threats in the Persian Gulf, the Sea of Oman and the Strait of Hormuz, an important passage for oil tankers. Teheran has also threatened to close the strait if it cannot sell its oil in the face of Western sanctions against the Islamic Republic.

US Navy: Iran prepares suicide bomb boats in Gulf

MANAMA, 13 Feb — Iran has built up its naval forces in the Gulf and prepared boats that could be used in suicide attacks, but the US Navy can prevent it from blocking the Strait of Hormuz, the commander of US naval forces in the region said on Sunday. Iran has made a series of threats in recent weeks to disrupt shipping in the Gulf or strike US forces in retaliation if its oil trade is shut down by sanctions, or if its disputed nuclear programme comes under attack.

"They have increased the number of submarines... they increased the number of fast attack craft," Vice Admiral Mark Fox told reporters.

"Some of the small boats have been outfitted with a large warhead that could be used as a suicide explosive device. The Iranians have a large mine inventory." "We have watched with interest their development of long range rockets and short, medium and long range ballistic missiles and of course... the development of their nuclear programme," Fox, who heads the US Fifth Fleet, said at a briefing on the fleet's base in the Gulf state of Bahrain. Iran now has 10 small submarines, he said.

Military experts say the US Navy's Fifth Fleet patrolling the Gulf, which always has at least one giant supercarrier accompanied by scores of jets and a fleet of frigates and destroyers, is overwhelmingly more powerful than Iran's navy. But ever since al-Qaeda suicide bombers in a small boat killed 17 sailors on board the destroyer USS Cole in a port in Yemen in 1996, Washington has been wary of the vulnerability of its huge battleships to bomb attacks by small enemy craft. Asked whether the US Navy was prepared for an attack or other trouble in the Gulf, Fox said: "We are very vigilant, we have built a wide range of options to give the president and we are ready... What if it happened tonight? We are ready today." — Reuters

Turkey 'bombs Iraq hideouts of Kurdish rebels PKK'

ISTANBUL, 13 Feb — Turkish warplanes have bombed suspected Kurdish rebel targets in northern Iraq, Turkey's military says. The jets hit caves and hideouts in the regions of Zap and Hakurk late on Saturday before returning to base, the military said in a statement. No further details were given.

The rebel Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) has been fighting for autonomy in Turkey's largely Kurdish south-east since 1984 in a conflict that has claimed tens of thousands of lives. Northern Iraq has long been used as a base by the PKK for attacks inside Turkey. Fighting between Turkish forces and the PKK has escalated in recent months.—Internet

Immune cells use 'starvation tactics' on HIV

LONDON, 13 Feb — Scientists have shown how some cells in the body can repel attacks from HIV by starving the virus of the building blocks of life. Viruses cannot replicate on their own; they must hijack other cells and turn them into virus production factories. A study, published in Nature Immunology, showed how some parts of the immune system destroy their own raw materials, stopping HIV.

It is uncertain whether this could be used in therapy, experts caution. HIV attacks the immune system and can weaken the body's defences to the point that everyday infections become fatal. However, not all parts of the immune system become subverted to the virus' cause. Macrophages and dendritic cells, which have important roles in orchestrating the immune response, seem to be more resistant.

Last year researchers identified the protein SAMHD1 as being a critical part of this resistance. Now scientists believe they know how it works. They have shown that SAMHD1 breaks down the building blocks of DNA. So if a cell needs to make a copy of itself it will have a pool of these building blocks - deoxynucleoside triphosphates or dNTPs — which make the new copies of the DNA. However, they can also be used by viruses.

The study, by an international team of researchers, showed that SAMHD1 lowered the levels of dNTPs below that needed to build viral DNA and prevented infection. When they removed SAMHD1 then those cells had higher levels of dNTPs and were infected by HIV. The report said: "By depleting the pool of available dNTPs, SAMHD1 effectively starves the virus of a building block that is central to its replication strategy." It is possible for macrophages and dendritic cells to produce SAMHD1 as they are "mature cells" which do not go on to produce new cells.—Internet

Red Bull off shelf over additive fears

SHANGHAI, 13 Feb — Supermarkets in major Chinese cities have taken Red Bull products off their shelves over fears that the energy drink may contain banned additives. The scare was triggered by recent media reports in Harbin that stated that some of the beverage's ingredients are not registered with the State Food and Drug Administration (SFDA) and are not approved for vitamin functional beverages. The ingredients include sodium benzoate, a preservative that, when combined with caffeine, may produce a substance considered an A-class drug for psychiatric treatment.

An overdose of the substance could cause headaches, stress, anxiety, tinnitus and addiction, said Dr Zhang Jing from the First Hospital affiliated with the Harbin University of Medical Science. Other additives found in Red Bull products, including sodium citrate, citric acid, carmine pigment and tartrazine, are also not registered with the SFDA, according to a list of Red Bull ingredients posted on the SFDA's website. The SFDA and its provincial bureaus have launched an investigation, but have not ordered removal of the drinks as of Saturday.—Xinhua

Overeating may double risk of memory loss

WASHINGTON, 13 Feb — Older people who eat too much are at risk for memory impairment, a new study contends. People 70 and older who eat between 2,100 and 6,000 calories a day may be at double the risk of these deficits in memory, which can be an early sign of Alzheimer's disease, the study authors said.

"Excessive daily caloric consumption may not be brain-health friendly," said lead researcher Dr Yonas Geda, an associate professor of neurology and psychiatry at the Mayo Clinic in Scottsdale, Ariz.

"It may sound like a cliché, but we need to be mindful of our daily caloric consumption," he said. "The bottom line is that eating in moderation, not in excess amount, may be good for your brain."

The results of the study are due to be presented in April at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Neurology, in New Orleans. The data and conclusions should be viewed as preliminary until published in a peer-reviewed journal.

For the study, investigators collected data on more than 1,200 people, aged 70 to 89, living in Olmsted County, Minn. Among these people, 163 had been diagnosed with the memory deficits known as "mild cognitive impairment." Each person told the researchers how much they ate. One-third ate between 600 and 1,525 calories a day, one-third between 1,526 and 2,142 calories a day, and one-third ate between 2,143 and 6,000 calories a day.

Among those who ate the most, the odds of being diagnosed with the impaired-memory disorder was more than twice that of those who ate the least, the researchers found. There was no significant increase in risk for memory problems among those in the middle group, the researchers added.

These findings remained the same after taking into account a history of stroke, diabetes, education and other risk factors for memory loss.

Boeing says it's frustrated with Dreamliner glitch

SINGAPORE, 13 Feb — Boeing Co, the world's second-largest plane maker, is frustrated with the latest 787 Dreamliner production glitch, but it shouldn't delay output goals, a top executive said on Sunday. Boeing has fixed a shimming problem discovered earlier this month on some 787 fuselages and plans to inspect other planes for the error, Boeing vice president of 787 development Mark Jenks said. Shims are used to close tiny gaps in joints.

"It's a pretty straightforward issue," Jenks told reporters in Singapore. "It shouldn't have any significant impact on our production ramp-up." Boeing still plans to boost production from a current two to three 787s per month to 10 of the planes per month by the end of next year, Jenks said. Boeing delivered its first Dreamliners last year to All Nippon Airways after a parts shortage, a labor strike and a fire on a test flight triggered several delays and pushed back delivery by three years.—Internet

Airlines seek United Nations deal on EU carbon scheme

WASHINGTON, 13 Feb — The International Air Transport Association (IATA) has called for the United Nations to broker a deal between airlines and the European Union (EU) on the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. It comes days after China banned its airlines from joining the scheme, which levies a charge on flights in EU airspace based on carbon emissions.

opposed the plan. IATA said if not resolved quickly, the issue could hurt all parties involved. "I very much hope of course that we are not seeing the beginning of a trade war on this issue and eventually wiser counsels will prevail," said Tony Tyler, Director General of IATA.

The United States tried to block the introduction of emissions charges late last year, in a case heard by the European Court of Justice. However, the court ruled that they were legal. Since then the US has called for the issue to be dealt with by an international aviation body. It, along with Canada, says the charges levied under the scheme violate climate change and aviation pacts.—Internet

Lab study raises questions over nano-particle impact

NEW YORK, 13 Feb — Tests involving chickens have raised questions about the impact on health from engineered nano-particles, the ultra-fine grains commonly used in drugs and processed foods, scientists said on Sunday. Chickens exposed to high oral doses of polystyrene particles 50 nanometres (50 billionths of a metre) across absorbed less iron in their diet, according to their study. K may also be affected by high exposure to nanoparticles, although further research is needed to investigate this, say the authors. The team, led by Michael Shuler of Cornell University in New York, tested the particles on chickens as a substitute for the human intestine and also used lab-dish cells from the lining of the human gut.

How to observe Gemini, the heavenly twin constellation

NEW YORK, 13 Feb — If you head outside around 10:30 pm local time this week and look straight up, you'll be looking directly at Gemini, the Twin Brothers. The heads of the Gemini twins are the bright stars Pollux (yellowish) and Castor (white; a bit dimmer than Pollux). According to Greek mythology, the twins were the sons of Zeus and Leda and brothers of Helen of Troy. Ancient mariners regarded Pollux and Castor as the patrons of seafarers, and in Elizabethan times they were also considered the protectors of all at sea. The expression "by Jiminy!" — an exclamation of surprise or awe — has been said to be a popular corruption of ancient swears by these patrons ("by Gemini!"). In addition, the twins were often billed as adventurers, warriors and famous navigators.

Most of the other stars that compose the constellation figures' arms and bodies are noticeably fainter than those in their heads and feet. A second-magnitude star known as Alhena marks one of Pollux's feet (on the astronomers' brightness scale of magnitudes, the lower the number, the brighter the star). — Internet

Video game sales fall ahead of PlayStation Vita launch

LONDON, 13 Feb — Video game sales slumped in the US — their biggest market — in January. NPD group said stores sold $1.14bn (£720m) worth of games over the month, down 34% on the previous year. It added that hardware sales were down 38%. The consumer data provider linked the drop to a lack of major new releases.

Other analysts also pointed to worries about the economy and said this might have an impact on the upcoming launch of Sony's PlayStation Vita console. NPD said that Activision Blizzard's Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 3 was the month's best-selling title. It was followed by Just Dance 3, Elder Scrolls V: Skyrim and NBA 2K12.

Microsoft's Xbox 360 held onto its title as the top selling hardware platform for the sixth month running. "While the lack of new launches was a major reason for software declines, games which launched in the last three months of 2011 also performed poorly in January 2012,

RUU leak and sources confirm quad-core HTC Endeavor to run Ice Cream Sandwich

NEW YORK, 13 Feb — The rate at which mobile is catching up to laptops and desktops is astounding. While most details surrounding the renamed HTC Endeavor (once known as the HTC Edge) were revealed in November, MoDaCo's sources and a leaked ROM Update Utility for the Endeavor have confirmed our suspicions.

Until now, two pieces to the puzzle remained out of place: Will the Endeavor would run on Honeycomb or Ice Cream Sandwich? And will it run Sense 4.0? MoDaCo's sources have revealed that the device will run on Android Ice Cream Sandwich 4.0.3, and will be one of the first devices to include HTC's latest user interface, Sense 4.0. But while expectant fans are waiting for the official reveal at this year's Mobile World Conference, the latest Apple injunction to ban the sales of Samsung's Galaxy Nexus may be a cause for concern.

The lawsuit filed against Samsung was revealed to be a direct attack on Google's latest OS, Ice Cream Sandwich. If HTC does run ICE on the Endeavor, Apple could, if felt threatened, decide to file a preliminary injunction against the Taiwanese smartphone maker to block sales of the device. If the courts favor Apple in their patent suit against Samsung, it is likely that they will turn their attention to HTC, who filed a patent suit against Apple back in September.

In the meantime, as the anticipation builds, you can download the unreleased test ROM Update Utility for the HTC Endeavor, leaked onto xda developers here: HTC Endeavor RUU.

To date, the following are the specs you should be expecting on the HTC Endeavor: Android 4.0.3 Ice Cream Sandwich Sense 4.01.5GHz quad-core Tegra 3 processor 1GB of RAM 32GB internal storage 4.7-inch 720p display 8MP rear-facing camera / 1.3MP front-facing camera WiFi 802.11 a/b/g/n Bluetooth 4.0 Quad-band HSPA+ radio.

Apple launches new legal attack on Samsung phones

NEW YORK, 13 Feb — Apple Inc has asked a federal court in California to block Samsung Electronics Co Ltd from selling its new Galaxy Nexus smartphones, alleging patent violations. In a suit filed last week in San Jose, Apple said the Galaxy Nexus infringes on patents underlying features customers expect from its products. Those include the ability to unlock phones by sliding an image and to search for information by voice. Samsung spokespersons did not immediately return requests for comment.

With the new suit, Apple is opening up another legal assault on the Korea-based company after taking Samsung to the same court in April of last year. In the earlier case, Apple alleges that Samsung illegally copied iPhone and iPad design features and the look of its screen icons. [N18125665] That case is still going on, though in December Apple lost a bid for a preliminary bar against Samsung for selling Galaxy phones and tablets.

Apple acknowledged the setback in the new action and said now it is suing over new products and different patents. In addition to the California cases, Apple and Samsung are waging more than 20 legal fights in at least 10 countries in their war for global leadership of smartphone and tablet markets. Premier Wen urges economic reforms

BEIJING, 13 Feb — Premier Wen Jiabao has pledged to use further reforms to solve problems with China's economic structure, unfair income distribution and corruption. The government should better handle issues related to people's livelihood and address public concerns on price levels, the affordability of housing, and incomes, Wen said.

The Premier made the remarks in five separate meetings over the past week to solicit opinions from representatives of different sectors of society on the draft of a government work report to be delivered at the annual session of the National People's Congress, China's top legislature, early next month. After hearing entrepreneurs' reports on the country's industries ranging from energy to automobiles to finance, Wen said the government is paying close attention to the economic situation in January and the first quarter of this year. "We have to make a proper judgement as early as possible when things happen and take quick action," Wen said, adding fine-tuning of macro policies should begin in the first quarter.

He said according to the macro prudent requirement, the government will maintain the continuity and flexibility of policies. Zhang Yuliang, chairman of Shanghai-based developer Greenland Group, suggested the government stabilize macro control over the housing market with improved policies concerning affordable housing and commercial real estate.

Brazil's Lula declared cancer-free after medical exam

RIO DE JANEIRO, 13 Feb — Brazil's former President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva has no sign of the throat cancer he was treated for, doctors on Sunday. Lula was admitted to the Syrian-Lebanese Hospital in Sao Paulo on Saturday after complaining of fatigue and loss of appetite, but after extensive medical exams doctors said there was no sign of the cancerous tumour he was diagnosed with late last year.

"We took advantage of the exams to evaluate the tumour, and from a tomographical point of view, the tumour can no longer be seen," one of Lula's doctors, oncologist Artur Katz, told local paper Folha de Sao Paulo. However, doctors will still have to conduct an endoscopy at the end of the current round of chemotherapy in about four to six weeks to determine whether the tumour is completely gone, he added. Lula was diagnosed with throat cancer in October and immediately underwent rigorous treatment. — Xinhua

Singapore Airshow rides on Asia-Pacific travel demand growth

SINGAPORE, 13 Feb — The biennial Singapore Airshow continued to grow this year, thanks to a strong growth in travel in the Asia-Pacific region, organizers said on Sunday.

The show, now in its third edition and one of the world's largest aerospace and defence exhibitions, will be held at the Changi Exhibition Centre from 14 Feb to 19 Feb.

Speaking at a press briefing ahead of the show, Jimmy Lau, managing director of the organizer Experia Events, said the response has been very positive, with the exhibition area growing despite uncertainties in the global economy. "This year the air show is occupying over 50,000 square metres of covered exhibition area. This is an increase from the last show in 2010 by at least 6.5 percent," he said.

There will be more than 900 exhibitors from 50 countries and regions and 266 delegations from some 80 countries. About 60 of the world's top 100 aerospace companies will be at the show, including Boeing, which has brought its "dreamliner" Boeing 787 as part of its third segment of its Dream Tour.

Over 65 of the latest military aircraft, passenger airliners and luxury business jets will be featured at the outdoor static display on a space of over 100,000 square metres.

There will also be 22 national and group pavilions, including Japan and Ukraine pavilions for the first time. Lau said the Asia-Pacific region continued to attract the attention of the industry thanks to its resilient growth.

S Korea to implement procedures for free trade deal with Vietnam

SEOUL, 13 Feb — South Korea planned to implement domestic procedures necessary for free trade deal with Vietnam as part of efforts to strengthen economic ties with the South East Asian country, the finance ministry said on Monday.

"Based on a joint study completed in October 2011, we will take domestic procedures necessary to launch a negotiation on the ROK-Vietnam free trade agreement (FTA)," the Ministry of Strategy and Finance said in a statement.

The ministry noted that the bilateral free trade talks will include goods, services and investment as well as intellectual property rights and other issues, saying that the economic cooperation between the two countries will expand into the energy and mineral resources sector.

Vietnam has recently emerged as a major export destination for South Korea due to the South East Asian economy's fast growth rate of over 6 percent, according to the ministry. Vietnam is the South Korea's eight-largest export destination, of which export volume surged to 13.6 billion US dollars in 2011 from 1.7 billion dollars a decade ago.

The ministry said that it will work out an export strategy tailored for Vietnam in the defence industry, adding that as for nuclear power plant export, South Korea will access the South East Asian nation from a long-term perspective.

Capriles wins right to challenge Venezuela's Hugo Chavez

CARACAS, 13 Feb — Venezuela's opposition has chosen Henrique Capriles Radonski to stand against President Hugo Chavez in October's election, say officials. The election of the Miranda State governor came after the opposition held its first ever primary. Voting was extended for a hour after what organizers said was a higher-than-expected turn-out.

President Chavez has said he is confident of winning reelection no matter who he ran against. The left-wing leader has governed Venezuela since 1999, winning repeated election victories. He had surgery for cancer last year but says he has recovered and is ready to campaign for another six-year term in office.

The primary, organized by the opposition Democratic Unity (MUD) coalition, was open to all Venezuelans of voting age, regardless of their political affiliation. "We are going to surpass all expectations of participation," Mr

Henrique Capriles said the real contest would start once the opposition candidate was selected. — INTERNET

Iran to fully launch Fordo nuclear enrichment facility "soon"

TEHRAN, 13 Feb — Informed sources in Iran's capital Tehran said that Fordo nuclear enrichment facility will become fully operational over the next few days, the local Mehr news agency reported on Sunday. Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said on Saturday that Iran will announce new "big" nuclear achievements in days.

"In the following days, the world will witness the inauguration of several big achievements in nuclear fields," he said addressing a large crowd of people gathered at Tehran's Azadi Square on the occasion of the 33rd anniversary of the Islamic revolution.

Early January, Iran's permanent representative to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Ali-Asghar Soltanieh said at the IAEA headquarters in Vienna that Iran had begun uranium enrichment at an underground bunker of the Fordo nuclear facility.

The Fordo nuclear plant has been built near the Iranian central Shi'ite holy city of Qom, which was used for producing up to 20 percent enriched uranium. The start of the nuke work at the Fordo site has increased international fear as the West suspects that Iran's uranium enrichment may be meant for moving closer to the ability to make nuclear weapons.

But Iran insists that its nuclear programme is only for the purpose of peaceful use. — Xinhua

By developing human resources through promoting education and health...

As far as the Education Sector is concerned, at the first regular session of Pyidaungsu Hluttaw which convened on March 30, 2011, President U Thein Sein gave guidance of 10 point education policy. Based on this new policy, a number of significant activities such as, initiation of free and compulsory primary education, promulgation of private school registration law, and preparation for provision of scholarships and stipends in the coming academic years.

By focusing on the basic education sector, 30 years, Long-Term Basic Education Development Plan, starting from (2011 to 2031), and Education for all National Action Plan from (2003 to 2015), they are ongoing national plans. In accord with the frame work of the rural development and poverty reduction, 13 education activities have been implemented in receptive regions and states.

In the basic education sector, the achievement can be seen by the following indicators, they are

- the intake rate of grade 1 of age 5 and over is 98.37%,
- the Primary Level Net Enrolment Rate, is 84.61 % and
- the Primary Level Completion Rate, is 82.20% respectively.

These indicators, show that retention in primary level is one of the major challenges in basic education, and retention in secondary level is also a high priority to emphasize. Moreover, other necessary tasks, such as improving teachers education quality, improving their socio-economic status, fulfilling necessary requirements for quality learning environment, establishment of quality control system, and making the national qualification framework to be in line with regional qualification framework too.

For the higher education sector, more students are offered for more opportunities for learning, by opening more new universities and degree colleges and other educational programmes are also expanded to promote greater diversity. In 1998, the National Centre for Human Resource Development (NCHRD) was established so that knowledge can be disseminated to the populace residing in the vicinity of universities and colleges by means of non-formal education, offering academic and skill upgrading courses for people willing to study, or willing to acquire an additional skill.

Various courses have been opened for learners, as diverse as those who have had studies interrupted, or for those willing to acquire additional skills. It has been possible to develop the knowledge and skills for learners, from students who have passed the matriculation examination to postgraduates at universities. But, the productively should be in line with the demand in the existing labour market, not only in quantity but also in quality. Therefore, expansion of accessibility as well as quality enhancement are necessary to strengthen, both in basic and higher education.

Regarding the technical and vocational sector, it is the main responsibility of Ministry of Science and Technology. Technical and vocational trainings are importance to keep abreast with the state of the art technology which is the deciding factor to increase the productivity. This education not only provides the qualifications needed in the business society, but also help young people to the practices of cooperation, coordination and collaboration. So that it is necessary to upgrade this technical and vocational education to keep their ready for the industrial labour force, especially in developing Special Economic Zones and in the process of future industrialization.

Moreover, Information and Communication Technology can provide rapid and low cost access to information to almost all areas of human activity, and the Internet is breaking barriers of geography, making markets more efficient, creating more opportunities for income generation and enabling everyone to adept modern technology. So that, it is necessary to strengthen ICT education for further development of knowledge which is another important factor in the growth of the economy.

The role of R&D development, which can create innovative and capable society is also increasingly important now a days. If there is a critical gap between research findings and outputs, and their development into commercial propositions, R&D will not be sustainable. By establishing Technology and Innovation Centres, it enables industry to exploit new and emerging technical know-how and close the gap through the provision of a business-focused capability.

For the health sector, emphasis has been placed, and a lot of inputs invested, for improving health care system since National Health Plan is an integral part of the national development plan. The Ministry of Health has laid down two objectives, to enable every citizen to attain full life expectancy while enjoying longevity and to ensure that every citizen is free from diseases.

To achieve these objective, many health activities have been implemented under three strategies, which are widespread dissemination of health information and health education to reach the rural areas, improving disease prevention activities, and providing effective treatment of prevailing diseases. Although most of the health related indicators show significant improvements in the past years, there are many areas still needed to be tackled energetically.

New health challenges are looming since climatic and environmental conditions are changing with some negative consequences. To face these new health challenges, existing partnership needs to be strengthened further. We will have to try to overcome these challenges by increasing our involvement in the collective efforts with the international community.

Health and education spending could be combined estimated 7.5 percent of government spending, up from 5.4 in FY 2011-12, for education at 4.7 and health at 2.8. As we all are aware that more investment in education and health sector will lead to more development of the nation. At present, the national budget on education and health sector is lower than that of the other countries.

Now many nations have changed the way they manage their economy from natural resource to human resource based. Natural resource will be exhausted with the passing time, the human resources are said to be non-exhaustible and it also has multiplier effect in stimulating the economy. Based on human resources alone, we have seen many countries achieving higher development without natural resources. That is one of the reasons, the countries with poor human resources are unable to ride out the current rapidly changing global waves.

And so, we will like to call upon all stakeholders, government officials, private organizations, civil societies, international organizations, local NGOs and INGOs to help promote human resource of this nation. It is always mention that, all helps are welcome, anytime, anywhere, in promoting these resources, for they are now accepted as important deciding factors in the nation-building.

I am confident that, this Conference will effectively help to develop the nation's National Human Resource Development Plan to gain national policy inputs.

In conclusion, I would like to express my sincere thanks to all distinguished guests, participants and all the stakeholders for their contributions.

Special Adviser to the UNSG Mr Vijay Nambiar, Union Minister for Industry U Soe Thein, UN Assistant Secretary-General & Chair of UN Development Group (UNDG) Asia-Pacific Dr Ajay Chhibber and UN Resident & Humanitarian Coordinator, Myanmar Dr Ashok Nigam delivered addresses on development policy options on education and health sectors.

After the ceremony, the Vice-President posed for documentary photo with those present.

Economic Adviser to the President U Myint acted as Moderator at the Conference, and scholars participated in the discussions on policies on development of human resources.

The conference will last up to 15 February, and the scholars will continue discussions on adoption on policies on development of education and health sectors.

Brazil jet makes forced stop after pilot attack

SAO PAULO, 13 Feb — A Brazilian airliner safely made a forced landing after a passenger had a “psychotic attack,” entered the cockpit and assaulted a pilot, crew members and passengers who tried to subdue him, witnesses said. The TAM Airlines jet was en route from Montevideo, Uruguay, to Sao Paulo when a man who some passengers said was wearing a TAM identification badge got into the cockpit because the door was open. Shortly after, the plane dove to the right, causing passengers to scream and the pilot to yell for help over the speaker system.

“All of a sudden shouts were heard from inside the cabin, and two stewardesses came out asking for help and grabbing a young man by his feet,” one unidentified passenger told Uruguay’s El Pais newspaper. “The people quickly jumped on top of him, the guy fought back furiously, biting and hurting a half dozen people. “In a kind of collective action they were able to immobilize him, tying him to a seat.” Uruguay’s Industry Minister Roberto Kreimerman was on board the Saturday afternoon flight, leading a trade delegation that was on its way to China. He told Uruguayan newspaper El Observador that when the plane veered sharply, passengers started screaming and fearing for their lives.

The jet safely landed at the Porto Alegre airport in southern Brazil about 20 minutes after the incident with the man subdued in the rear of the plane, a police spokesman said on Sunday. The suspect was arrested by federal police and taken to a mental care facility. TAM confirmed the incident in a brief emailed statement, but offered few details.

Flight 8047 “landed at the Porto Alegre airport because of an uproar on board. ... The incident is being investigated by authorities, with the collaboration of the company,” the statement read. An airline spokeswoman in Sao Paulo would not confirm if the cockpit was breached nor if the attacker was a TAM employee, as passengers told newspapers in Brazil and Uruguay. — Internet

Man in underwear crawls over frozen river to rescue dog

ESSEX, 13 Feb — A man who stripped down to his underwear and crawled across a frozen river to rescue his trapped dog has been condemned by firefighters. According to an eyewitness, the man fell into the River Stour, in Dedham, Essex, at about 10:00 GMT on Sunday but managed to climb out with the animal.

Fellow dog walker Paul Wenborne, 52, of Rayleigh, Essex, said he was amazed at the man’s actions. “I was with two friends and we couldn’t believe what we were seeing,” he said. “He stripped down to his pants and started crawling across the ice”. “About a yard or so from the dog, he fell in but managed to get hold of the dog and put it on the ice”. “He then had to swim two or three yards and then crawl back on the ice to dry land”.

“He put his clothes back on and carried on. It was a foolish act of bravery.” Essex Fire Service confirmed it was not called to the incident. Last week, Essex assistant divisional officer Stuart McMillan issued a warning about icy lakes and ponds.

Indonesia city to require tree planting before marriage

It is unclear how the proposed initiative of planting trees in Sumatra before marriage will be policed. — INTERNET

JAKARTA, 13 Feb — Couples in the western Indonesian city of Medan will have to plant two trees before they are granted a marriage permit, officials say. The “environmentally-friendly” initiative was announced by the religious affairs office in the Sumatran Capital on Wednesday. The policy will be rolled out in the city from March.

One official estimated that Medan will get at least 2,000 new trees each month as a result of the plan. Iwan Zulhami told the BBC that the couples will get two seedlings upon registration. “The policy has a noble purpose, and it is necessary to support the government’s tree-planting programme,” he said, explaining that the trees were to be planted at the couples’ home.

Aside from Medan, a number of districts on Sulawesi island will also be implementing the policy. It is unclear how the new initiative will be policed. In Indonesia, Muslim couples intending to marry must register with the Office of Religious Affairs. Non-Muslims register with their places of worship and the Civil Registry Office. A government tree-planting programme was launched last year.

Qantas says latest “A380” delay unrelated to wing cracks

SINGAPORE, 13 Feb — Qantas Airways played down a steering issue that forced an Airbus A380 to twice abandon departure before taking off from London’s Heathrow airport on Saturday, saying it was unrelated to wing cracks that have led Europe’s air safety officials to order global checks on the superjumbo.

Qantas said the plane, due to fly from London to Singapore, was travelling at a very slow speed when the decision was made to return to bay. “It was due to the steering issue. It has no relation to the cracks in the wing ribs at all,” Qantas spokeswoman Courtney Treak said. “Our engineers were able to fix the issue, so we don’t have any further concerns.”

A spokesman for manufacturer Airbus declined to comment, saying that only the airline could comment on operational matters. Dr Faye Smith, business development director at the Royal Aeronautical Society, said the A380 aircraft was on the runway when it twice abandoned take-off. “Technical issues with the nose gear meant the pilot had to abort take off and have us towed off the runway for repairs twice,” Smith told Reuters by email.

“On both failed occasions we were on the runway, started to build up speed for take-off and then suddenly felt deceleration and we stopped on the runway,” she added.

The five-hour delay for repairs meant Heathrow had to lift a curfew banning night flights at the airport which has tough noise restrictions.

Montenegro requests NATO assistance to deal with snow storm

BELGRADE, 13 Feb — Montenegro, which has been paralyzed by inclement winter weather, is seeking assistance from NATO in dealing with traffic and electrical supply problems, reported the Serbian news agency Tanjug on Sunday.

Prime Minister Igor Luksic said a letter would be sent to NATO headquarters in Brussels outlining specified items and equipment.

He said some NATO member states had already contacted Montenegro to inquire how they could help. Montenegro is a part of NATO’s Membership Action Plan (MAP) and is working toward full membership of the military alliance.

“I expect that in the next few days there will be a positive response for our request for assistance,” said Luksic. Accumulated snow levels have exceeded 230cm on Montenegro’s ski resort of Zabljak. Most urban centres in the country are struggling with one metre of snow, which are threatening many house roofs.

Part of the roof of the Clinic for Dermatology Clinical Centre in Podgorica collapsed under the weight of snow. No one was reported injured, although nine patients were evacuated from the clinic after the incident.

Most roads through the mountainous interior of the country remain closed, while transport in the capital of Podgorica has come to a stand-still.

Some of its suburbs are without electricity. On Sunday, a passenger died on a train, which had been stranded in the mountainous terrain near Kolasin due to a number of avalanches.

China to loan two pandas to Canada

CHONGQING, 13 Feb — China on Saturday agreed to loan two of the country's precious giant pandas to Canadian zoos for a 10-year research programme. The Chinese Association of Zoological Gardens (CAZG) Saturday signed the deal with two Canadian zoos in Chongqing, a municipality in southwest China. The panda pair, both around five years old, will stay in the Toronto and Calgary zoos for five years each after they arrive in Canada early next year, according to the agreement.

The male panda, named "Er Shun," is from a zoo in Chongqing and the female - "Ji Li" lives in the Chengdu Research Base of Giant Panda Breeding, home of over 100 pandas in the neighbouring Sichuan Province. Giant pandas are the world's most endangered species. About 300 of the animals have been bred in captivity and 1,596 others live in the wild, mostly in Sichuan. Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper witnessed Saturday's signing ceremony during his visit to Chongqing.

"They will be the first pair of pandas to visit Canada since the 1980s," said Harper. In his second visit to China, Harper came to Beijing on Tuesday for a five-day trip as a guest of Premier Wen Jiabao. Argentina accepts UN mediation over Malvinas islands dispute

BUENOS AIRES, 13 Feb — Argentina has accepted a UN offer to mediate with Britain over the long-disputed Malvinas Islands (Britain calls them the Falkland Islands), the foreign ministry has said.

According to a statement from the foreign ministry, Foreign Minister Hector Timerman on Friday briefed UN General Assembly President Nassir Abdulaziz Al-Nasser on the recent escalation of the dispute over the disputed islands.

Al-Nassar expressed hope that the two governments would use peaceful means under the framework of international law to resolve the issue and offered to mediate.

Argentina and Britain both have long claimed sovereignty over the disputed islands, some 460 km off of the Argentine coast. The spat led to a war in 1982, which ended with Argentina failing to occupy the islands but refusing to acknowledge British rule of the territory.

Argentina recently appealed to the United Nations to protest against an increased British military presence near the disputed islands as the 30-year anniversary of the war that killed more than 900 people approaches. Britain claimed that the warships it has sent to the region were part of a routine deployment. — Xinhua

Five employees of The Sun held in Britain

LONDON, 13 Feb — Five employees of British newspaper The Sun, a police officer, an employee of the defence ministry and a member of the armed forces were arrested on Saturday as part of an inquiry into illegal payments to police and officials, CNN reported.

The Metropolitan Police said offices of the News International group in east London as well as the homes of those arrested were searched. News International, which owns The Sun, is the British unit of media mogul Rupert Murdoch's News Corp.

The arrests were part of "Operation Elveden", a probe running parallel with a police inquiry into alleged phone hacking by News International employees. News Corp's management and standards committee said it provided the information to the investigation which led to Saturday's operation.

Five men aged between 45 and 68 were arrested in London, Kent and Essex on suspicion of corruption, aiding and abetting misconduct in a public office, and conspiracy in relation to both offences.

News Corp said it "remains committed to ensuring that unacceptable news gathering practices by individuals in the past will not be repeated". News Corp established its management and standards committee following the 2011 scandal over alleged hacking of voicemail that led to the closure of the News of the World tabloid.

The revelation that a murdered 13-year-old girl's phone was hacked by journalists in search of stories, and that many other crime and terror victims, politicians and celebrities had also been targeted, prompted widespread outrage in Britain.

Mexico mob kills three suspected kidnappers

MEXICO CITY, 13 Feb — Security officials in Mexico say three men have been killed by a mob for allegedly trying to kidnap a group of youths. Local residents in Chalco, near Mexico City, beat the men, doused them with petrol and set them alight. Police managed to save one of the three men from the mob, but he died later in hospital. Kidnappings are common in Mexico, where criminal gangs make money by abducting people for ransom.

Police described how locals came across the suspects as they allegedly tried to abduct a group of school children. According to State Prosecutor Alfredo Castillo, a group of six women incited the violence by shouting: "Justice, justice, they're kidnappers!"

The prosecutor described how residents rang the church bells and around 600 people gathered in the town's main square. A group armed with bars, clubs and bottles surrounded the three suspects and dragged them to the square, where they set fire to them. State officials said 23 people had been detained in connection with the lynching.

In a travel warning issued on Wednesday, the US State Department warned of the rising number of kidnappings and disappearances in Mexico. Analysts say accurate figures for the number of kidnappings are hard to come by, as many abductions only last for hours or a few days, until the ransom is paid. — Internet

Wisconsin fishermen on ice as sturgeon spear season opens

WINNECONNE, 13 Feb — Dan Loftus, on a mission to spear a sturgeon from the ice-choked waters of Wisconsin's Lake Winnebago, dropped a rubber chicken into the frigid emerald abyss and waited.

The 48-year-old chiropractor from Germantown sat on a lawn chair in the dark and leaned over, staring into the murky water through a hole carved into 10-inch-thick ice as his two buddies gregariously told stories and drank beer behind him. "It's the most boring thing ever."

It's really boring, just watching a hole," Loftus said of his quest. "But it's relaxing."

The trio, huddled in their shanty, were some of the thousands of fishermen to take part in the opening day on Saturday of Wisconsin's brief sturgeon spear season for a hunt that is part outdoor sport and part tradition.

When and if a sturgeon swam into their hole, one of the men was to drop a five-tined spear onto the prehistoric-looking fish. Once the sturgeon is speared, fishermen pull the fish - which could weigh 200 pounds - out of the hole in the ice.

Britain's oldest married couple to give advice on Twitter

LONDON, 13 Feb — A British couple who have been married for 76 years — the longest in the country — have now joined Twitter to speak about the secret of their remarkable romance. Lionel and Ellen Buxton from Dover, Kent, have invited users of the networking website to tweet them with their problems.

The couple said they have not spent more than one night apart in the past eight decades, the Daily Mail reported. Ellen, 100, said: "We have never been apart really and have never wanted anyone else. We have been married happily because we have been good friends as well as husband and wife. We have always made sure we have had nice evenings out together. Whether it is going for a romantic meal or out to play bingo." Lionel turns 100 in March.

The couple, who met in March 1930, grew up in London's East End and met while working at the Henley Cable factory in north Woolwich. Ellen would often ask for technical help from apprentice engineer Lionel.

"She was lovely. I always looked forward to when she needed help from me. We got on so well, went on a few dates together and became a couple. We ended up getting married. We would have done it sooner but could not afford it," Lionel said.

Anti-terrorist hotline launched by Metropolitan Police

LONDON, 13 Feb — The Metropolitan Police has launched a counter-terror campaign urging people to report suspicious behaviour by calling a dedicated hotline. The four-week campaign, It's Probably Nothing, But..., consists of adverts in local and ethnic minority Press. There is also a radio advert and leaflets are being delivered to 1.4 million homes in London. Deputy Assistant Commissioner Stuart Osborne said: "The terrorist threat to London and the UK... remains real."

He added: "We at the Metropolitan Police Service have a key role in countering this threat, whether it is from al Qaeda inspired groups or individuals, or Irish dissident republican groups—but we can only do this with the support of all our communities. "Terrorists live among us. We want you to tell us about anyone or anything you see which is out of place in your normal day-to-day lives."

"We know you may have concerns about speaking to the police, possibly because your friends or family may find out. But you may well have information which could save lives."

Fears over Leicestershire double deaths and ketamine link

LONDON, 13 Feb — The deaths of two people in Leicestershire may have been due to the drug ketamine purchased on the Internet, police have revealed. A 59-year-old woman was found at an address in Leicester on Saturday and a man of 32 in Melton Mowbray on Sunday. Detectives say the deaths are not suspicious, but have confirmed one line of inquiry is the use of ketamine. Anyone who has purchased the drug on the Internet is being urged not to take it.

Det Insp Rob Widdowson, of Leicestershire Police, said: "We are investigating the circumstances leading to the deaths of these two people in order to prepare files for the coroner. "One of our lines of inquiry is that prior to their deaths both people may have taken a form of the drug ketamine, known medically as methoxetamine, which may have been purchased over the Internet." —Internet

Yes there's pain, Big B tweets from hospital bed

MUMBAI, 13 Feb—Megastar Amitabh Bachchan, who underwent two abdominal surgeries on Saturday, tweeted fans about his condition as soon as he could from the hospital bed and thanked them for their wishes, which he feels never fails. Big B's scheduled abdominal surgery went off smoothly Saturday morning at the Seven Hills Hospital here. His abdominal pain was due to an injury he suffered during shooting of "Coolie" in 1982.

"Took long because 2 surgeries had to be done on either side...yes there is pain, but nothing good in life ever achieved without it!" Big B tweeted. "Back...!! Thank you for your prayers... your love and wishes never fail...indebted for life, one that I shall never be able to pay back," the 69-year-old wrote.

When son Abhishek saw his father's tweet, he reprimanded him and called him Auro, the character that Big B played in the film "Paa" where the father-son was in a role reversal. "It's past your bedtime Auro!! Stop tweeting and back to bed. :-)," tweeted Abhishek. On that Big replied good-humouredly, "OK...Paa!! Am already in bed...been on it the whole day."

PEBBLE BEACH, 13 Feb—Phil Mickelson rallied from six shots behind to win for the fourth time at Pebble Beach, a final round made even more memorable by the guy in a red shirt who was among the first to congratulate him Sunday on the 18th green.

Turns out that Tiger Woods was just along for the ride. Mickelson closed with an 8-under 64, beating Woods by 11 shots in a one-sided showdown at the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

"I just feel very inspired when I play with him," said Mickelson, who has posted the better score the past five times he has played alongside Woods in the final round.

"I love playing with him, and he brings out some of my best golf. I hope that he continues to play better, and better, and I hope that he and I have a chance to play together more in the final rounds." Woods, one shot out of the lead on the sixth hole after 54-hole leader Charlie Wi fell apart early, followed his first birdie of the final round with three straight bogeys, starting with a three-putt from 18 feet on the par-3 seventh.

It never got much better from there. He finished a miserable day with another three-putt on the 18th for a 75, the only consolation coming from belief that he's closer than ever to putting it all together.—Internet

Magnussen, dubbed 'The Missile', became a top favourite for the Olympic gold medal after he came from fifth at the turn to win the 100m sprint crown in 47.63 seconds at last year's Shanghai world championships. He became the first Australian man to win the title since the world championships were established in 1973 and broke the nation's 43-year drought over the distance following Mike Wenden's win at the 1968 Olympics.

While Magnussen won the 100m at the New South Wales Championships in Sydney last Friday in 49.02secs, he plans to be making waves in five weeks at the national Olympic trials in Adelaide. Zambia hold nerve to beat Ivory Coast, take title

LIBREVILLE, 13 Feb—Zambia conjured up a shock when they toppled star-studded Ivory Coast 8-7 in a penalty shoot-out to claim their first ever Africa Cup of Nations title on Sunday.

With the sides goalless after extra time Zambia's Stoppila Sunzu converted the magic spot kick after Arsenal striker Gervinho missed for the Elephants.

The result meant misery for hot favourites Ivory Coast, who failed to claim the title despite not conceding a goal throughout the entire competition until Sunday's shootout.

It also revived unhappy memories for Didier Drogba, who missed a penalty in the second half of normal time, and company of their 2006 penalty shoot-out final defeat to Egypt in Cairo.

MADRID, 13 Feb—Cristiano Ronaldo hit his sixth hat-trick of the season as Real Madrid took a huge step towards winning La Liga, coming from behind to beat Levante 4-2 and open a 10-point lead over Barcelona.

After Gustavo Cabral gave Levante a surprise early lead, Ronaldo got his first from the penalty spot following a handball by Vicente Iborra, who was also dismissed for his second yellow card.

Ronaldo headed home a Gonzalo Higuaín cross after 49 minutes and then completed his hat-trick with a wonderful 30-yard strike which flew into the roof of the net.

An Arouna Kone header briefly gave a glimmer of hope for Levante but Karim Benzema slotted in a fourth for Real after 65 minutes. While Barcelona, beaten 3-2 by Osasuna on Saturday, have stuttered on their travels, Real have been in ominous form winning 19 of 22 games and scoring 75 goals which has put them on course for their first league title since 2008.

No Djokovic, no problem as Serbia eye Spain's Davis Cup title

PARIS, 13 Feb—Serbia shrugged off the absence of Novak Djokovic to reach the Davis Cup last eight with the 2010 champions confidently setting their sights on dethroning Spain in November's final.

Janko Tipsarevic secured an unassailable 3-1 lead over Sweden in the World Group first round tie in Nis with a 6-2, 7-6 (7/5), 7-5 win over Michael Ryderstedt.

Victory gave Serbia a quarter-final tie in April against the Czech Republic, but captain Bogdan Obradovic believes that with world number one Djokovic back in the side for that clash, his country can start dreaming of a second title.

"It's never easy to play matches in which you are the odds-on favourite but the players dealt with the pressure really well against Sweden," Obradovic told www.daviscup.com.

"With a bit of luck, we will reach this year's final and hopefully take on Spain because we are confident that we can beat them on home soil."

Tipsarevic had beaten Filip Prpic in straight sets in Friday's opening rubber and had then played doubles on Saturday when Sweden had clawed their way back into the tie.

But despite those efforts, he had no problem in disposing of Ryderstedt.

Conference on Development Policy Options with Special Reference to Education and Health in Myanmar commences

Vice-President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Dr Sai Mauk Kham delivered an opening address at the Conference on Development Policy Options with Special Reference to Education and Health in Myanmar.

MNA

NAY PYI TAW, 13 Feb—Vice-President of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Dr Sai Mauk Kham delivered an opening address at the Conference on Development Policy Options with Special Reference to Education and Health in Myanmar at Myanmar International Convention Centre, here, at 9 am today.

Also present on the occasion were Union ministers, deputy ministers, region and state ministers for Social Affairs, departmental heads of ministries, resident representatives of UN agencies, officials of NGOs and INGOs, ambassadors of foreign missions and officials, representatives of private sector and guests.

The Vice-President delivered an address. He said:

First of all, I would like to extend my warmest welcome to the Conference on Development Policy Options in Myanmar, with Special Reference to Education and Health.

The objective of this Conference is to promote the policies towards human resources development area, especially in education and health sectors. I hope this Conference will produce good out-comes from the best practices of some countries, including Asian countries to be able to have policy inputs for the formulation and implementation of the development policies.

The national seminar on poverty reduction and rural development was conducted last year with the participation of all stakeholders. It is well aware that about 70% of the population is residing in rural areas, improving livelihood for rural populace is one of our main priorities. The Central Committee and Subcommittees on Rural Development and Poverty Reduction are set up and eight major tasks are being implemented in all states and regions, targeting to reduce the poverty rate from 26% at present to 16% by 2015. By developing human resources through promoting education and health sectors, we hope to realize our vision, which is "building modern, developed and democratic nation".

The concept of development can be conceived of in a multidimensional process. Since the challenge is to improve the quality of life, the needs must be fulfilled. It is necessary to focus on quality growth which can share the fruits of development among the people equitably. In his context, one of the economic policies is to achieve balanced and proportionate growth and to be inclusive as well.

It is observed that Human Development Index (HDI) of this country is low compared to other ASEAN countries, and it will be necessary to double the living status if we are to achieve the Millennium Development Goals by 2015.

To develop disciplined democracy in Myanmar, it is also necessary to nurture the people to be thoroughly acquainted with knowledge, rational thinking and behaviors. For instance, decentralization processes can be successful only when the capacity and capability are there, at the basic level. Good intelligence and knowledge are also needed to take responsibility, accountability and proper management. We believe that only in this way, the democratic principles which we value so much can be accomplished.
