Gear up for improving English

No one can deny the importance of English in the present time as a global language. With the English language becoming more dominant around the world, some countries use it as their mother tongue while some use it as a second language in their offices or schools. This makes English more widespread.

Indeed, English is a language of communication between people from different countries with different cultures. Moreover, English is used in various fields such as economy, trade, medicine, aviation, space, transport, tourism. Another reason why English is still dominant across the globe is that it is used as a medium of instruction in education and research and on the Net. So, English has become an addendum to the mastery of every area. In other words, it is a crucial requirement in job prospects. When it comes to the dignity of a country, having a good command of English is important for its citizens in terms of international events.

Now that Myanmar is gearing up for hosting the XXVII SEA Games in 2013 and taking ASEAN Chairmanship in 2014, it is a must for our citizens to know English. Only when we can communicate and interact with peoples from ASEAN countries in English, will everything be smooth and easy in every event, thereby bringing dignity and honour to our country. Hence, we Myanmar citizens must be prepared for English language proficiency. Those who have known English to a certain degree need to try to improve more whilst those who are still weak in English should start learning from now on.

As it is never too late to learn, let's get prepared for learning English so that Myanmar can stand on her dignity in such international events through her people's English language competency.

UEC Member meets election sub commissions in Ayeyawady Region

NAY PYI TAW, 25 Feb—Member of the Union Election Commission (Ayeyawady Region In-charge) Dr Daw Myint Kyi met members of Ayeyawady Region Election Sub Commission, chairpersons and secretaries of election sub commissions from vacant constituencies in the region—Patheingyi, Hinthada, Maubin, Pyawbwe districts and Patheingyi, Yekyi, Myaungmya, Wakema, Myanaung, Maubin, Pyawbwe, Dedaye townships to discuss by-elections to be held on 1 April.

US Navy launches 3G communications satellite

WASHINGTON, 25 Feb—The US Navy on Friday sent a 3G communications satellite into orbit from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station. The MUOS-1, took off at 5:15 pm EST (2215 GMT), would be part of the Mobile User Objective System (MUOS) which provides communications for aircraft, ship, submarine and ground forces with a capacity over 10 times more than the Navy's current UHF Follow-On constellation.

The spacecraft would settle into a geostationary orbit above the Pacific Ocean, then undergo about six months of checkouts and tests before becoming operational.

The launch had been scheduled for last week and two previous attempts were called off on both 16 February and 17 February due to strong upperlevel winds.

"MUOS will greatly enhance the capabilities of the warfighter to communicate on the move," said Mark Pasquale, MUOS programme manager and a vice president at Lockheed Martin, which builds the MUOS satellites for the US military.

Multiple bomb explosions rock Nigerian northern city: sources, witnesses

GOMBE, 25 Feb—Security sources and witnesses said series of explosions have been heard in different part of Nigeria's northern city of Gombe on Friday night, with heavy casualties feared.

A Xinhua reporter in the state said more than 50 explosions were recorded at the Gombe police division near the palace of Emir of Gombe as well as other places.

There is no immediate claim of responsibility from any group. But security sources in the state who also confirmed the blasts, said it is believed to have been carried out by the Boko Haram sect.

State commissioner of police Orubebe Ebikeme confirmed the incidents to Xinhua on phone, saying the situation is still tensed.

Int'l community should help Myanmar as it reforms

UNITED NATIONS, 25 Feb—Vijay Nambiar, special advisor to the UN Secretary-General on Myanmar, said here on Friday that reforms in Myanmar have helped the country progress significantly, but support from the international community is necessary to allow reforms to fully succeed.

"Actively encouraging the current reform efforts by the government and other stakeholders, may be the best way to pre-empt and overcome the risks inherent in such a process," said Nambiar.

"The people of Myanmar expect the UN and the international community to step up to this opportunity and what I believe is also our responsibility. I welcome the government's recognition of the value of the partnership with the United Nations to help Myanmar meet the challenges and opportunities before it," he said.

Nambiar's statements came as he briefed the Press on his recent five-day visit to Myanmar.

"One year after the formation of the new government and the launch of the political and economic reforms under the leadership of the president, President U Thein Sein, the changes currently underway in Myanmar have attained what I characterized in my Press statement at the end of the visit as an unprecedented initiative," he said. "This has been recognized by a wide range of stakeholders across the political spectrum, inside and outside Myanmar."

Since taking office in March 2011, the government has freed political prisoners, eased restrictions on freedom of the Press, opened more dialogue with the opposition, and signed initial ceasefire agreements with several armed groups.

"In many ways what we have seen so far are important first steps to start addressing longstanding challenges," said Nambiar.

Afghan police kill 12 anti-gov't militants, capture six

KABUL, 25 Feb—Afghan police backed by NATO-led forces have eliminated a dozen anti-government insurgents and detained six others during operations in the southern Kandahar and Helmand provinces over the past 24 hours," a statement of Interior Ministry released here Saturday said.

"During the past 24 hours, Afghan National Police backed by national army and the Coalition Forces launched three joint operations in Kandahar and Helmand provinces during which 12 armed insurgents were killed and six others were captured by Afghan National Police," the statement added.

A number of arms and ammunitions including explosive materials were also seized by police during the operations, it further said.

However, it did not say if there were any casualties on the security forces. Taliban militants fighting Afghan and the NATO-troops have yet to make comment. —Xinhua

Al-Qaeda claims deadly attacks on Iraqi cities

BAGHDAD, 25 Feb—Iraq's al-Qaeda branch has claimed responsibility for the latest wave of bombings and other attacks that killed dozens in Baghdad and across the country, raising concerns over the government's ability to provide security after the US troop pullout.

The Islamic State of Iraq said in an Internet message late Thursday that it targeted security forces and government officials in "revenge for the elimination and torture campaigns that Sunni men and women face in the prisons of Baghdad and other cities."

Iraq's Shiite-led government has executed at least 68 prisoners so far this year, a rate that has alarmed human rights groups. Additionally, last fall Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, a Shiite, ordered detentions of hundreds of former Saddam Hussein loyalists, most of whom were believed to be Sunni.

Thursday's attacks killed a total of 55 people and wounded 225, increasing fears of a new surge in sectarian violence two months after the American military pulled out.

Blasts at railway tracks disrupt train service in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, 25 Feb—Train service was suspended in Pakistan after a series of blasts on Saturday blew up railway tracks near the port city of Karachi and several other cities of southern Sindh Province, said railway officials. No one was hurt in the blasts, they said.

A senior railway official

Zafarullah Kalur said that four blasts damaged nearly four-foot tracks in Sindh Province, of which Karachi is the capital.

Local TV channels reported 12 small blasts at different places early on Saturday in Sindh Province, including Karachi, Hyderabad, Sukkar, Nawabshah, Khairpur and Mirpur Mathilo. TV footage showed damaged parts of the tracks.

Kalur said that trains were stopped after information was received and teams were immediately sent to repair the damaged tracks.

No group claimed responsibility for the blasts.

Antipsychotics death risk charted in dementia patients

LONDON, 25 Feb — Some antipsychotic medication may increase the risk of death in patients with dementia more than others, according to US research. The drugs have a powerful sedative effect so are often used when dementia patients become aggressive or distressed.

A study, published on the BMJ website, argued that antipsychotics should not be used "in the absence of clear need". Experts said better alternatives were needed to antipsychotics.

A study in 2009, suggested 180,000 people with dementia were taking antipsychotic medication in the UK and said the drugs resulted in 1,800 additional deaths.

Researchers at Harvard Medical School followed 75,445 people in nursing homes who had dementia and were prescribed antipsychotics. The researchers said some drugs were associated with more than twice the risk of death than risperidone, another antipsychotic which was used as a benchmark to compare the other drugs.

The study concluded: "The data suggest that the risk of mortality with these drugs is generally increased with higher doses and seems to be highest for haloperidol and least for quetiapine."

However, the way the study was conducted meant it could not say definitively that certain drugs actually caused more deaths, merely that there was a link between the two. The Department of Health said antipsychotic use was "resulting in as many as 1,800 unnecessary deaths per year. This is simply unacceptable." — Internet

Bird flu cases more common than thought

NEW YORK, 25 Feb — Bird flu is believed to be a rare disease that kills more than half of the people it infects, but a US study out Thursday suggests it may be more common and less lethal than previously thought. The research could help soothe concerns about the potential for a deadly pandemic that may kill many millions of people, sparked by the recent lab creation of a mutant bird flu that can pass between mammals. Researchers at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York analyzed 20 previous international studies that tested the blood of nearly 13,000 participants worldwide, according to the study in the journal Science.

They found that between one and two percent of those tested showed evidence of a prior H5N1 avian flu infection, meaning millions of people may have been infected around the globe. The World Health Organization's figures currently show just 573 cases in 15 countries since 2003, with 58.6 percent of those resulting in death. The researchers said the WHO may be overlooking cases by focusing only on hospitalizations and severe illnesses, and recommended a new approach to calculating the true number of bird flu cases.

The findings could also mean that the death rate from bird flu is underestimated, largely because many of the people who get sick from it live in rural farming areas where medical care may be difficult to come by. "We suggest that further investigation, on a large scale and by a standardized approach, is warranted to better estimate the total number of H5N1 infections that have occurred in humans," the authors wrote. Researchers in the Netherlands and the United States have sparked international alarm with lab research that was successful in creating a mutant form of bird flu that was found to be transmissible among ferrets. — Internet

EU committee makes no decision on oil sands crude

File photo shows an aerial view of a tar sands mine facility near Fort McMurray, in Alberta, Canada. Alberta has the world's third-largest oil reserves after Saudi Arabia and Venezuela - more than 170 billion barrels. Daily production of 1.5 million barrels from the oil sands is expected to increase to 3.7 million in 2025, which the oil industry sees as a pressing reason to build the pipelines. — INTERNET

BRUSSELS, 25 Feb — A European Union committee failed Thursday to reach a definite decision on labeling oil derived from oil sands as worse for climate change than crude oil — a proposal vigorously opposed by officials in Canada, where such oil is produced. The proposal will now ultimately be decided by the environment ministers of EU's 27 member countries, said a spokesman for EU Commissioner for Climate Action Connie Hedegaard. The spokesman, Isaac Valero-Ladron, said a decision was expected by June. Canada had threatened to take the EU to the World Trade Organization if it singled out that type of oil as worse for the environment than others. But the European Commission, the EU's executive branch, contends that science justifies its proposal. Canadian Natural Resources Minister Joe

Oliver said Canada was pleased so many EU nations were opposed to what he called a discriminatory measure. "We remain strongly opposed to Canadian oil sands crude being unfairly discriminated against without scientific justification," Oliver said in a statement. "If the EU moves ahead in implementing these or any other unjustified, discriminatory measures, Canada will not hesitate to defend its interests."

The proposal would be a revision of the EU's Fuel Quality Directive, which sets a mandatory target for fuel producers and suppliers to reduce the carbon emitted by fuels by 6 percent from 2010 levels by the year 2020. The proposal, while it would not have banned oil from oil sands from being imported into the EU, would have assigned it a bigger carbon footprint than average crude oil. However, opponents of the proposal say that, in practice, that would amount to an import ban.

Honda to recall nearly 46,000 Odyssey minivans to fix rear doors

CHICAGO, 25 Feb — Automaker Honda is recalling 45,747 Odyssey minivans because the rear doors can fall on people unexpectedly, according to the US National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) on Wednesday.

The NHTSA said on its website that the gas filled struts that help to raise and support the lift gate of vehicles equipped with a power lift gate system may be prone to early life failure due to a manufacturing flaw. The flaw can result in a leak of the pressurized gas, leading to reduced strut performance. As a result, the doors could close unexpectedly, increasing the risk of injuries, according to NHTSA. The problem affects minivans from the 2008 and 2009 model years that have power lift gates. Honda reportedly said the problem has caused two minor injuries. Dealers will replace both power lift gate gas struts for free. — Xinhua

Europe's banks bleed from Greek debt crisis

LONDON/PARIS, 25 Feb — Greece's debt problems drove a slew of heavy losses across the European banking sector on Thursday, and bosses warned the euro zone crisis would continue to threaten earnings. From France to Germany, Britain to Belgium, some of the region's biggest banks lined up to reveal billions of euros lost through writedowns on Greek loans. "We are in the worst economic crisis since 1929," Credit Agricole chief executive Jean-Paul Chifflet said.

Credit Agricole reported a record quarterly net loss of 3.07 billion euros ($4.06 billion), performing worse than expected from the cost of shrinking its balance sheet and after a 220 million euro charge on its Greek debt. "We think 2012 is going to still be a tense period," Chifflet said, adding: "We're hoping that our results will be largely better than in 2011. Europe's banks have already written down billions of euros from losses on Greek government bonds and loans, and a deal agreed this week with its creditors will inflict losses of 74 percent on bondholders. — Internet

Hitches emerge as culprit in ‘faster-than-light’ particle

GENEVA, 25 Feb — Scientists who last year found particles that appeared to break the Universe’s speed limit are looking at two technical issues that could have skewed the controversial finding, CERN said on Thursday. The European Centre for Nuclear Research (CERN) confirmed a report by the US journal Science on Wednesday that the team were verifying a cable connection that may have caused a flawed result.

“It may have caused a slight discrepancy, and they are checking to see if this is the case,” CERN Press officer Arnaud Marsollier told AFP by phone. They are also verifying a timing instrument called an oscillator, he said. “This is a complicated experiment with a multitude of cables and equipment,” said Marsollier. “The physicists have checked things out, are continuing to make checks and will check again. It (a technical flaw) is always possible, but they have been saying this from the very beginning.”

The fuss began in September when CERN’s so-called OPERA team cautiously announced that sub-atomic particles called neutrinos had travelled some six kilometres (3.75 miles) per second faster than the velocity of light. The neutrinos were timed at their departure from CERN’s giant underground lab near Geneva and again, after travelling 732 km (454 miles) through the Earth’s crust, at their arrival at the Gran Sasso Laboratory in Italy.

Cat-sized horses were the norm in a hotter past

WASHINGTON, 25 Feb — More than 50 million years ago, the Earth was a hotter place than it is today and horses the size of pet cats roamed the forests of North America, US scientists said on Thursday. These earliest known horses, known as Sifrhippus, actually grew smaller over tens of thousands of years in order to adapt to the higher temperatures of a period when methane emissions spiked, possibly due to major volcanic eruptions.

The research could have implications for how the planet’s modern animals may adapt to a warming planet due to climate change and higher carbon emissions, scientists said. Researchers made the discovery after analyzing horse tooth fossils uncovered in the western US state of Wyoming that showed the older ones were larger, and that the species had shrunk over time. Many animals became extinct during this 175,000-year period, known as the Paleocene-Eocene Thermal Maximum, some 56 million years ago. Others got smaller in order to survive with limited resources.

“Because it’s over a long enough time, you can argue very strongly that what you’re looking at is natural selection and evolution — that it’s actually corresponding to the shift in temperature and driving the evolution of these horses,” said co-author Jonathan Bloch of the Florida Museum of Natural History.

Average global temperatures rose by about 10 degrees Fahrenheit during that span due to massive increase in carbon that was unleashed into the air and oceans. Surface sea temperature in the Arctic was about 23 Celsius (73 Fahrenheit), much like the temperatures of contemporary subtropical waters today.—Internet

New moth species invades Italy’s vineyards

The moth is common in North America and was first spotted in Italy in 2006.—INTERNET

ROME, 25 Feb — A moth with a taste for Chardonnay leaves, which has infested vineyards across northern Italy, is a new species of leafminer, scientists say. The pest was first discovered by Italian scientists in 2006, but they were unable to identify it. Now, by examining a snippet of the moth’s genetic code, researchers have confirmed that it is a previously unnamed species. The team published their findings in the journal ZooKeys. The Italian team enlisted the help of insect expert Erik van Nieukerken from the Netherlands Centre for Biodiversity in Leiden. “We first turned to the [scientific] literature to find out what was already known, which was appallingly little for this group [of moths],” Dr van Nieukerken told BBC Nature. He and his colleagues used a method known as DNA barcoding to examine a section of the insect’s genetic code.

4G TV interference: Up to a million homes ‘need filters’

LONDON, 25 Feb — Almost a million UK homes will need to have filters installed to prevent TV interference from 4G mobile signals—at a cost of £108m. A smaller number of homes—about 10,000—will need to switch to satellite or cable TV services in order to avoid degraded picture quality. Homes that cannot receive these alternative platforms will receive up to £10,000 each to “find a solution”. Costs will be met by the winner of a spectrum auction later this year.

Consultations are currently being held into how spectrum—part of which is used by analogue television—will be offered to mobile operators once airwaves are freed up by the switch to digital. These airwaves are crucial to mobile operators to create next-generation mobile services. The winning bidder, or bidders, will be required to pay for the costs of making sure viewers of digital terrestrial television (DTT) will not be affected by the changes.

In a consultation document released in August last year, media regulator Ofcom estimated that about 760,000 homes could be affected. However, the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) told the BBC that further research had suggested that number was likely to be closer to 900,000. Homes falling within a certain range of transmitter towers will automatically have a filter issued, while a helpline will be set up to deal with interference cases outside of the predicted areas. The filter, which is fitted to a digital TV box, blocks out unwanted noise from the 4G signal.

the help of an engineer—but over-75s and disabled people will be given assistance if needed. The DCMS said that in a very small number of homes, the filters would not be sufficient. A platform change—to satellite or cable—will be required, the cost of which will also be covered by the mobile operator. It is estimated that about 10,000 homes may need to take this measure. It is also predicted that about 500 homes affected by interference will be unable to receive satellite or cable services.—Internet

Design team creates electric skateboard controlled by brain waves

NEW YORK, 25 Feb — Built by the same development group that created the Kinect-controlled Board of Awesomeness, the research division of Chaotic Moon Studios has announced the Board of Imagination. While wearing a wireless neuro-headset designed by Emotiv, the rider on the electric skateboard simply visualizes a point off in the distance and think about how fast they want to travel in order to reach that point. The signal from the brain is “translated” by the headset and communicated to a Samsung, Windows 8-enabled tablet via a USB connector. The software on the tablet interacts with the all-terrain skateboard and sends the rider flying down the road up to 32 miles per hour. In order to stop the board, the rider thinks about the upcoming point of arrival.

Identical to the design of the Kinect-powered skateboard, the board is powered by a 800-watt electric motor that can run up to 10 miles at full speed before requiring a recharge.

However, the rider has to continue to focus on directing the skateboard and cannot allow the mind to wander during a trip. In addition, the headset has to be adjusted on the head so all contacts are positioned correctly; something that may become difficult to control under windy conditions. It’s unlikely that the electronics would be safe during inclement weather conditions such as heavy rain or snow without some form of all-weather protection.

Dish Network shutting down a third of all remaining Blockbuster stores

NEW YORK, 25 Feb — As reported initially during January, Dish Network has finally decided on the amount of Blockbuster retail locations to close. Mentioned within Dish Network’s announcement regarding fourth quarter profits earlier today, the satellite service provider will be closing 500 Blockbuster stores across the United States during the first half of 2012. This will reduce the amount of remaining Blockbuster stores by roughly 33 percent, dropping from 1,500 locations down to just 1,000 storefronts. Store closures were made for a number of reasons, but the most prominent was a downturn in store-level financial performance due to competition from Redbox and Netflix.

When Dish Network purchased Blockbuster during April 2011, the company stated that it would keep 90 percent of the 1,700 retail locations open to the public. After announcing the closure of 200 stores during July 2011, the additional 500 stores brings the total number of retail locations left at just 59 percent of the original figure. With the closure of these additional 500 stores, Dish Network plans to let go approximately 4,000 to 5,000 employees working in retail locations. Prior to the bankruptcy procedure and subsequent Dish Network buyout, Blockbuster had over 4,000 retail locations and employed over 60,000 employees at the company’s peak of profitability.

While the Blockbuster segment of Dish Network is currently operating at a break even point, Dish Network officials are looking to the Blockbuster Movie Pass and Blockbuster@Home streaming video to make up for losses at retail locations as well as losses in the total number of Dish Network subscribers.

Sittoung River Crossing Bridge (Shwegyin-Madauk) that brings about better transport and regional development

- * The bridge was constructed to link Shwegyin and Madauk crossing Sittoung River.
- * With the opening of the bridge, one can be assessable to Shwegyin in short time via Nyaunglebin-Madauk Road from Yangon-Mandalay Highway.
- * In the past, those from Shwegyin had to cross Sittoung River with the use of motorboats and manual boats spending a lot of times and energy. At present, such a kind of trouble has been overcome.
- * Now, thanks to the bridge, one can make a day-trip which is about 100 miles from Yangon to Shwegyin at any time.
- * Due to poor transport in the past, transport charges were high, triggering unstable commodity prices. And the bridge has now contributed much to swift and smooth commodity flow and regional development.

Salient points of the bridge

1. The upper structure of the bridge is of opened concrete and reinforced concrete and the lower structure of the bridge is of reinforced concrete.
2. Piers of the bridge are of reinforced concrete.
3. The total length of the bridge is 1500 feet. It is complete with 28 feet wide motorway flanked by two four feet wide pedestrian lanes.
4. Its water clearance is 80 feet wide and 12 feet long.
5. It can withstand 60 tons of loads.
6. The construction of the bridge started on 5-12-2000, and it was put into commission on 11-2-2003.

Indonesia needs $40.7b for infrastructure projects in 2012

JAKARTA, 25 Feb—The Indonesian Government requires 368.6 trillion rupiah (about 40.7 bln US dollars) of funds to finance 110 infrastructure projects under its acceleration and expansion development master plan (MP3EI) programme, a minister said here on Friday.

National Development Planning Minister Armida Alisjahbana said that the funds would be gathered from the central government's coffers plus allocation from regional governments and investors. She said that infrastructure projects this year would be focused on projects that are being constructed at the moment and new projects in eastern region.

"Besides that government intends to speed up projects that give major impacts to the public this year, like double railway tracks in Java," she told a Press conference. According to the minister, her ministry has allocated 71.3 trillion rupiah to finance 34 infrastructure projects in Sumatra and 216.5 trillion rupiah for 31 projects in Java this year.

Meanwhile, the ministry also allocated 5.9 trillion rupiah and 3.8 trillion rupiah for 10 and 9 infrastructure projects in Kalimantan and Sulawesi respectively. For Bali and Nusa Tenggara provinces, the ministry has allocated 15 trillion rupiah to finance 8 projects.

In Papua and Maluku provinces, government has allocated 56 trillion rupiah to finance 18 projects, she said.—MNA/Xinhua

Ex-footie star jailed for tipping off burglars about empty properties

LONDON, 25 Feb—A former footballer turned postman has been jailed for tipping off burglars about house owners on holiday. Former Bristol City defender Andrew Llewellyn, 45, leaked private information from Royal Mail files.

A gang then ransacked 18 houses, stealing 100,000-pound worth of goods. Judge Julian Lambert at Bristol crown court told Llewellyn that he had been part of a "wicked conspiracy".

"I struggle to see how you took leave of your senses," the Mirror quoted the judge as saying.

Llewellyn, who was jailed for three years after admitting conspiracy to theft, enjoyed a 12-year career as a right-back with City from 1982 to 1994. But he turned to crime after 10 years as a postman in nearby Weston-super-Mare, Somerset.

The court heard he passed the addresses from Royal Mail's scheme to withhold post for people away to criminal Adam Holmes, 47, also from Weston-super-Mare.

certain development but without satisfactory economic growth. Hsipaw has population of about 130,000 and produces such agricultural produces as orange, damson, pineapple, watermelon. Once, teaks and hardwoods grew in abundance in Hsipaw Township but now teaks can be seen only besides the roads. Due to the changing era, system and situations, Lashio has become the town opening state level government departments and accessible by plane. Muse has also seen rapid economic growth. Meanwhile, the growth of Kyaukme and Muse is slow as there was about 17 billion dollars; Republic of Korea's, 50 billion dollars and China's, 175 billion dollars. So, this wide disparity makes Myanmar's economy far different from others'.

Like Thailand and Indonesia, in the Philippines, the money its citizens working abroad are sending back to their country amounts to about 1.5 billion US dollars per month. Bangladesh that has experienced more natural disasters than Myanmar has about a billion dollars a month sent back by its citizens working in foreign countries, said the Vice-President.

continued that he and his entourage came there to render assistance for Kyaukme and Hsipaw townships to be able to produce value-added items rather than producing traditional tea and raw fruits and vegetables and to know and address any barriers and difficulties. The neighbouring countries on their part are shifting from agro-based economy to industry- and service-based economy. So, assistance would be provided to develop those two sectors, he said.

Another point is the rural development and poverty alleviation scheme being carried out by the government. The majority of the people live in rural areas and they are living under poverty line. There are also needy people living in urban areas. The scheme has eight tasks. Kyaukme Township is engaging in the businesses of preserved dried damson, Khawbok (steamed and pounded glutinous rice) and tea. For rural electrification, power lines can be connected only regional peace and stability prevails. So, the local people are to cooperate in ensuing regional peace and stability, said the Vice-President.

He then stressed the need for Kyaukme Township to launch a service for tourism development in the region. Now, it is not difficult to get visas and plans are under way to issue on-arrival visas. Due to the development of tourism called smokeless industry, Laos has received about 2 million tourists and Thailand about 20 million. Andorra which has 80000 population only and a land-locked country relies mainly on tourism.

Kyaukme can boast its tea plantations where tea is grown traditionally, plantations where tea is grown with modern technology and tea harvesting time. Guphteik Bridge, which attracts the British, has been in old age but it looks serviceable.

He also urged them to consider the tourist attractions including Bawkyo Pagoda in Hsipaw Township, historic places related to Sawbwas and Mogok and Momeik.

He also urged them to make arrangements for teaching and learning literatures of the national races within the framework of the constitution as the State was planning to help teaching and learning of literatures of the national races.

The Vice-President called for participation of the people in implementing poverty alleviation tasks and more investment in businesses in the industrial and service providing sectors which were suitable to the development of regions concerned.

(See page 10)

proposed axis for construction of Lashio bypass near Mehan Village and gave necessary instructions.

In his speech to the district and township level departmental personnel, members of social organizations, ward and village-tract administrators, senior citizens and locals on his tour of Kyaukme and Hsipaw, the Vice-President said he and the members of Union and Shan State governments came there to learn social and economic status of Kyaukme and Hsipaw and to fulfill the requirements as much as possible.

Kyaukme around 30 or 40 years ago was a boom town in Northern Shan State on a par with Lashio. It was even more popular than Lashio for it was closer to Mandalay as it had smooth motor road while motor roads in Lashio were in critical condition that time, it can be easily accessible both by car and rail, it has very popular products like Kyaukme dried tea leaf, world-famous Guphteik Bridge, picturesque Kyaukme-Gupdwun motor road, and it lies closely to Mogkok, land of ruby and Momeik, land of sapphire.

Likewise, Hsipaw was witnessing no expansion of business in them.

The Vice-President said while meeting with businessmen from Shan State (North), he also met with businessmen from Kyaukme. He said he asked the difficulties and requirements of them and fulfilled the requirements and held discussion in detail. He said he invited businessmen from Kyaukme and Hsipaw townships to participate in industrial zone or special economic zone project near the border town Muse.

He said although the businessmen from Myaukme District reported to him that there is only tea industry in the district and no other businesses, he would like them to take part in the proposed industrial zone or special economic zone project. Social works cannot be carried out so long as the economy is sluggish. The economic growth can be seen clearly by looking to the export volume of the nation.

The nation's export amount of 2010-2011 fiscal year is worth only US$ 8.8 billion. But, neighbouring Thailand earned US$ 17 billion from its exports only in November, 2011. Similarly, Indonesia's monthly export earnings amounted to

This is why the government is taking measures for amending profit tax laws and easing procedures. In the past, 10% income tax was levied and now only 2% is being levied. In addition, monetary procedures are being relaxed in order that remittance can be carried out legally.

Only if there are changes and reforms in all aspects, will the nation be able to catch up with others. As the whole country still relies on agro-based economy, Kyaukme Township and Hsipaw Township still have to depend on cultivation of tea and greens respectively.

The Vice-President added that although agriculture business is enough for human basic needs, the nation must transform itself into an industrialized one if it really wants to see development. Today, there are two types of economy – economy based on natural resources and economy based on human resources. Countries with the technological strength and rich human resources like Singapore, Malaysia, ROK and Japan have become really developed, industrialized nations.

It is therefore necessary to manufacture value-added products. The Vice-President

15 killed in north China bus plunge

TAIYUAN, 25 Feb—Fifteen people have been confirmed dead after a tourist bus plunged into a ravine on Saturday morning in north China's Shanxi Province, said local authorities.

The accident happened at 9:25 am at a section of the State Highway 207 in the county-level city of Gaoping, administered by Jincheng City, according to the provincial traffic police authorities.

The 35-seat bus, carrying 33 people, was en route to Jiyuan City in central Henan Province from Jincheng, said the authorities. The bus is operated by the Transportation Corporation of Sanmenxia City in Henan. Rescue efforts are underway. The cause of the accident is under investigation.—Xinhua

Nearly half UK pilots admit to dozing off while flying

MELBOURNE, 25 Feb — Almost half the pilots in Britain have admitted to falling asleep while flying, a survey has revealed.

The situation is more alarming as a third of those who confessed to dozing off have woken up to find their co-pilot also sleeping, according to the Daily Mail.

The survey by the British Airline Pilot's Association (BALPA) found that 43 per cent of those questioned have fallen asleep while flying at some point in their career.

The findings come after pilots voiced concerns over EU proposals to relax British flying rules, allowing pilots and crew to take on more frequent and longer shifts, News.com.au reported.

The European Aviation Safety Agency has proposed to standardise safety rules across Europe, despite BALPA's claims that they fall short of British aviation practice.

Pilots say passengers' lives will be at risk if regulations allowing them to land a plane after up to 22 hours without sleep are approved.

BALPA general secretary Jim McAuslan said the planned changes are "contrary to scientific advice" and would let pilots work seven consecutive early-start shifts.

He said such conditions are "desperately fatiguing".

Chair of the House of Commons transport committee Louise Ellman said the Government had noted the pilots' protests and was looking at it from a public safety point of view.

Hitler's silver tray given to him on his 50th b'day expected to fetch GBP 1K at auction

LONDON, 25 Feb—A silver tray presented to Hitler on his 50th birthday is set to go under the hammer next month, and the auctioneer expects it to fetch over 1,000 pounds.

The tray, given by Hitler's chief architect Albert Speer, is embossed with the Nazi leader's personal German eagle crest and his 'AH' initials, the Daily Mail reported.

The tray was part of 3,000 items, which were divided into six sets, and distributed at Hitler's various bases including the Reich Chancellery in Berlin, the Nazi Party HQ in Munich, Hitler's Berghof and Eagle's Nest mountain homes in Bavaria, the Gasthaus at Obersalzberg and his Prinzregentenplatz apartment in Munich.

It is due to go under the hammer at leading auctioneer Dreweatt's militaria sale in Bristol on 6 March.

20 April, 1939 was a high-point in Hitler's rise to power, and was just six months before the devastating war that would keep the world in crisis for the next five years.

The German leader has been driven at the head of a motorcade of 50 white limousines, as 50,000 troops paraded Nazi Germany's military might in Berlin.

The tray was then presented by Speer, who later became the Fuhrer's Minister of Armaments, with the 3,000 separate items sent to Hitler's various bases for use when entertaining.

"The tray is part of the six 50th birthday silver presentation dinner services which were commissioned for Hitler and was made by Bruckmann, Germany's finest manufacturer of silver tableware," said auctioneer Malcolm Claridge.

"After the fall of Nazi Germany the Reich Chancellery and Hitler's homes were ransacked and many of the 3,000 silver pieces were looted and have subsequently found their way on to the market.

"The tray bears Hitler's personal German eagle device astride a wreath encircling a swastika and his initials AH.

"We have put a conservative estimate of 600 pounds to 800 pounds on the tray, but it could easily sell for more than 1,000 pounds," Claridge stated.—Internet

US Senator Lieberman's office victim of mail attack

WASHINGTON, 25 Feb—US Senator Joe Lieberman's office in his home state Connecticut was targeted by suspicious mail, the latest in a string of similar incidents, US media reported on Friday.

The Hill newspaper, which specializes in reporting Congressional affairs, quoted Lieberman's spokeswoman Whitney Phillips as saying on Thursday afternoon, that staff at Lieberman's district office in Hartford, Connecticut, received a suspicious package. The package had specific address information matching a warning given to Congressional offices earlier this week.

According to an email sent to Congressional offices by Senate Sergeant at Arms Terry Gainer on Wednesday, letters postmarked from Portland, Oregon, or with a specific return address containing The MIB, LLC, may contain "a suspicious powdery substance". The warning was prompted by threatening mail that contained the substance received on Tuesday by a Senate State office and a House District office.

"Yesterday when our staff in our state office was sorting the mail — around the lunchtime hour — they came across a package with the same return address," Phillips was quoted as saying. She said the staff secluded the package, closed off the room, and notified local authorities and the FBI. Authorities then evacuated the office, and initial tests of the envelope's contents came back negative for harmful material. Phillips said Lieberman himself was out of the office, but in the state, at the time of the evacuation on Thursday.

George Clooney's wax statue gets pre-Oscar Hawaiian makeover

George Clooney

LONDON, 25 Feb—Just like George Clooney will want to look his best for Sunday's Oscar awards ceremony, Madame Tussauds is making sure his wax figure also looks good.

The 50-year-old actor has been nominated for Best Actor for his role in 'The Descendants' and hopes to add the statuette to his Best Supporting Actor Oscar for 'Syriana'.

It could be third time lucky for Clooney who was previously nominated for the best actor prize for roles in 'Michael Clayton' and 'Up in the Air'.

Clooney's waxwork

double at the London attraction will be swapping its usual dark suit for a black and white Hawaiian shirt in homage to his Honolulu-based character Matt King.

Hair stylist Gemma Sim and colourist Gemma Fee also gave the figure a makeover to bring it up to date.

Clooney's figure first appeared in 2004 when his hair was much darker, so it has been updated to reflect his current "silver fox" look.

Gerard Butler discharged from rehab

RANCHO MIRAGE, 25 Feb—Gerard Butler's manager says the Scottish actor was discharged on Friday from the Betty Ford Centre in California.

Butler underwent three weeks of treatment at the Rancho Mirage facility for prescription drug abuse, TMZ reported.

"Gerard left Betty Ford early this morning and he's healthy," the actor's manager Alan Siegel told the celebrity news Web site on Friday.

Butler's problems initially began during his physically demanding 2006 action picture "300," observers said. The actor had since been struggling with pain management, but the problem became worse when he was hurt in a surfing accident in December while filming "Of Men and Mavericks."

TMZ cited unnamed sources close to Butler as

David Morrissey joins 'Walking Dead' cast

ATLANTA, 25 Feb— British actor David Morrissey will join the cast of "The Walking Dead" for the zombie drama's third season, AMC said on Friday.

Morrissey is to play The Governor, a character from the Robert Kirkman graphic novel on which the series is based. He is the leader of Woodbury, a small settlement of survivors, and will become the chief antagonist for Rick Grimes, played by Andrew Lincoln, and his group, the cable network said.

The 16-episode third season is to begin production this spring in Atlanta.

A BAFTA Award nominee, Morrissey has appeared in many acclaimed British series, including "State of Play," "Meadowlands," "The Deal" and "Blackpool." He is also known for his leading roles in feature films such as "The Reaping," "The Other Boleyn Girl," "Centurion," "The Water Horse," "Nowhere Boy" and "Blitz." Defending champion Wozniacki beaten in Dubai semis

Caroline Wozniacki from Denmark returns the ball to Julia Goerges from Germany during their semifinal match at Dubai Duty Free Tennis Championships in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, on 24 Feb, 2012.— INTERNET

DUBAI, 25 Feb —Defending champion Caroline Wozniacki lost in the semifinals of the Dubai Tennis Championships on Friday, her game undone by mistakes in a 7-6 (3), 7-5 defeat to Julia Goerges. Goerges will play for the title on Saturday against Poland's Agnieszka Radwanska, who beat Serbia's Jelena Jankovic 6-2, 2-6, 6-0 in the first semifinal. Wozniacki led 4-2 in the second set before Goerges regained control to close the match. "Made way too many unforced errors, and Julia took advantage of that," Wozniacki said.

Wozniacki, a Dane once ranked No 1 and seeded third, struggled with her serve while Goerges never let her find her rhythm. "I felt I had all the opportunities in the world today and didn't take advantage of them. If you don't take your chances, there is no way to win," Wozniacki said. "It's easy to say I should have done this and could have done that. But, you know, as well for Julia she took her chances. If I came with a weak shot she was there straight away and she punished me." Goerges, an unseeded German, now has a 3-2 head-to-head record against Wozniacki. "It's never easy playing her," Goerges said. "It's always a lot of balls, a lot of rallies. We played over two hours for two sets." Goerges downed Svetlana Kuznetsova of Russia, Casey Dellacqua of Australia and Daniela Hantuchova of Slovakia in the previous rounds. Dellacqua replaced top-ranked Victoria Azarenka, who pulled out of the tournament with an ankle injury on Wednesday before she was to open against Goerges.— Internet

Top seed Isner upset at Memphis tennis

MEMPHIS, 25 Feb — Top seeded American John Isner was sent crashing out of the ATP and WTA Memphis Open after losing to Austrian Jurgen Melzer 6-3, 7-6 (8/6) in a quarter-final match. Isner, who hammered 48 aces in his first two matches in Memphis, fired 11 aces against Melzer in the 81 minute match at the $1.1 million indoor hardcourt tournament at The Racquet Club of Memphis. Isner also had two double faults and won just 67 percent of his first-serve points.

Melzer won 80 percent of his first-serve points, had seven aces and saved both of his break point chances. Third seeded Czech Radek Stepanek also cruised into the semis surviving a first-set tie break then dominating the second set to beat Sam Querrey 7-6 (7/5), 6-0. Stepanek, who finished second here

LONDON, 25 Feb — Rejuvenated striker Craig Bellamy has credited a mind-management guru with helping him keep his volatile temper under control as the Welshman looks to claim a League Cup winner's medal. Bellamy, who hopes to lead Liverpool to silverware against his hometown club Cardiff in Sunday's showpiece at Wembley, revealed that he has worked hard both on and off the field.

The results have been there for all to see. Fernando Torres left out of Spain squad for Venezuela game

MADRID, 25 Feb — Chelsea striker Fernando Torres has been left out of a Spain squad for the first time in five years. Spain coach Vicente del Bosque dropped Torres for their friendly against Venezuela in Malaga this Wednesday.

But Del Bosque said it did not mean Torres would be omitted from the squad for this summer's European Championship in Ukraine and Poland.

"Torres is not in good form and we believed in this case it was better if he didn't come," Del Bosque said. "He is a lad we appreciate a lot and it pains me to leave him out but I wanted to be fair."

"But this doesn't mean anything. This is not a definitive list for Euro [2012]" The Spain boss had said in December that Torres needed to turn his season around to ensure selection for Euro 2012. The 27-year-old has scored four goals in 29 Chelsea appearances this season. — Internet

Ferguson takes blame as United scrape past Ajax

Manchester United manager Alex Ferguson leaves the pitch after his team's Europa League round of 32 second leg match defeat against Ajax at Old Trafford in Manchester, north-west England, on 23 February.

INTERNET

LONDON, 25 Feb — Manchester United manager Alex Ferguson took full responsibility for his team's unconvincing passage into the last 16 of the Europa League and a potential meeting in the later stages with Manchester City. The veteran manager saw his team beaten 2-1 at Old Trafford by Ajax but a 2-0 first leg lead carried United through in nervous fashion although it took a magnificent late save from David de Gea from a Christian Eriksen header to ensure his side did not exit on away goals.

United now face Spanish side Athletic Bilbao in the next phase with neighbours, and Premier League title rivals, City also still in strong contention. "It would be a fascinating prospect if we got to the final," said Ferguson. "But it doesn't matter how you get to a final or who you play there. The important thing for us is to try and get to the final."

United have never won the Europa League, in any of its various forms, and there appeared the very real danger of that record continuing as Ajax turned in a magnificent second half display. Aras Obiliz equalized an early goal from United's Javier Hernandez before a late header from Toby Alderweireld secured a 2-1 win on the night for the Dutch side. United paid for fielding an inexperienced line-up that featured four defenders and a goalkeeper with an average age of just 21. "I've got to accept the responsibility tonight myself," said Ferguson.— Internet

Better relationship

A man walked into a therapist's office looking very depressed. "Doc, you've got to help me. I can't go on like this."

"What's the problem?" the doctor inquired.

"Well, I'm 35 years old and I still have no luck with the ladies. No matter how hard I try, I just seem to scare them away."

"My friend, this is not a serious problem. You just need to work on your self-esteem. Each morning, I want you to get up and run to the bathroom mirror. Tell yourself that you are a good person, a fun person, and an attractive person. But say it with real conviction. Within a week you'll have women buzzing all around you."

The man seemed content with this advice and walked out of the office a bit excited. Three weeks later he returned with the same downtrodden expression on his face. "Did my advice not work?" asked the doctor. "It worked alright. For the past several weeks I've enjoyed some of the best moments in my life with the most fabulous looking women." "So, what's your problem?" "I don't have a problem," the man replied. "My wife does."—Internet

The first then confessed, "I have an uncontrollable desire to kill my patients." The second psychiatrist said, "I love expensive things and so I find ways to cheat my patients out of their money whenever I can so I can buy the things I want."

The third followed with, "I'm involved with selling drugs and often get my patients to sell them for me."

Tottenham boss Harry Redknapp wants to be top London club

LONDON, 25 Feb — Tottenham manager Harry Redknapp says his priority for the season is to finish above north London rivals Arsenal. The sides meet at Emirates Stadium on Sunday with 13 Premier League games remaining and Spurs 10 points ahead. "That's the most important thing for me this year to be honest, to be the top London club," said Redknapp. Spurs, who won the reverse fixture 2-1 in October, last finished above Arsenal 17 years ago in the 1994-95 season.

Arsenal boss Arsene Wenger has bettered the league finish of his various Spurs counterparts in his 15 previous seasons at the club and has refused to give up hope of doing so again. "You can only see at the end of the season. The only thing you can say is in the last 15 years Spurs have finished behind Arsenal," he said. The last time Tottenham trumped Arsenal in the league, George Graham was sacked as Gunners boss in February 1995 as he failed to keep pace with a Spurs side that came seventh on the back of Jurgen Klinsmann's 21 goals.

The current Arsenal team have failed to score in their last two matches, losing 2-0 to Sunderland in the FA Cup after a 4-0 trashing by AC Milan in the Champions League, and former defender Lee Dixon has described Sunday's match as the most important of Wenger's reign. Redknapp hopes his side can make the most of Arsenal's current troubles and cement third spot ahead of the Gunners and fellow Londoners Chelsea, who are also 10 points behind them.

Patrick wins pole for Nationwide race at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, 25 Feb—In about 24 hours, Danica Patrick went from her biggest crash to her biggest moment in a stock car. The former IndyCar star won the pole Friday for the season-opening Nationwide Series race at Daytona, becoming the first woman to secure the top qualifying spot in NASCAR's second-tier series since Shawna Robinson at Atlanta on 12 March, 1994. It came a day after she wrecked on the final lap of a qualifying race for the Daytona 500.

"It's a good turn of events," she said. It also set off a flurry of Twitter traffic that included words such as "Dansanity," "Danimosity," "Danimite," and "Dantastic."

"I really don't think about it from a girl perspective," she said with her proud parents standing a few yards away. "I've been taught from a young age to want to be the best driver. ... It was about being the best driver and not the best girl."

Patrick won just once in 115 IndyCar starts. She had seven podium finishes, and two of them came when she began dabbling in NASCAR two seasons ago. She moved to NASCAR full time this season, and is scheduled to drive 10 Sprint Cup races for Stewart-

Haas Racing and run every Nationwide race for JR Motorsports. She will make her Sprint Cup debut in the Daytona 500 on Sunday.— Internet

Relief for Villas-Boas as Chelsea down Bolton

LONDON, 25 Feb—Chelsea eased the pressure on beleaguered manager Andre Villas-Boas on Saturday with a 3-0 victory over Bolton to get the club's Premier League campaign back on track.

Second-half goals from David Luiz, Didier Drogba and Frank Lampard gave Villas-Boas something to smile about after a difficult week which saw the Blues pushed to the brink of elimination from the Champions League. The victory — Chelsea's first in five league matches — saw Villas-Boas's side move back into the Champions League qualification places, three points ahead of fifth-placed Arsenal, who face Tottenham on Sunday.

After a poor first-half display, Chelsea's nerves were settled moments after half-time when much-maligned Luiz shot the Blues ahead. The Brazilian international picked up a loose ball and took his time before rifling into the bottom corner past Adam Bogdan. Chelsea made the game safe on 61 minutes when Drogba headed in Lampard's corner for 2-0.—Internet
