MNA

NAY PYI TAW, 22 May—Chairman of Union Election Commission U Tin Aye met political parties which fielded candidates in 2012 by-elections at the commission office here this morning.

Chairman U Tin Aye, the secretary and members of the commission, chairmen and secretaries of central executive committees of political parties which participated in by-elections, independent candidates, UEC officials, local media and guests attended the meeting.

In his opening address, Chairman U Tin Aye guaranteed that UEC would try its best for ensuring next elections freer and fairer by reviewing weak and strong points of 2012 by-elections. He quoted international election monitors as saying that the by-elections was a free, fair and peaceful one. The commission chairman called for cooperation of the political parties with the UEC.

Officials of the political parties discussed weaknesses and strengths of the by-elections and made suggestions.

UEC Secretary U Win Ko made sector-wise clarifications.

The concluding remarks of the commission chairman brought the meeting to an end.—MNA

Knowledge-based industries

Apart from financial resources, human resources development plays an important role in the national democratization process as it calls for rapid progress of knowledge-based industries that ensures sustainable and robust national economic growth which in turn facilitates reforms the country is carrying out in various sectors.

Truly, we are seeking and harnessing various means effective in paving the way towards peace, progress and prosperity through accelerating our reform process a source of power we are relying on for our own brighter future.

In this context, we are picking up the pace of our reform process through the might of knowledge-based industries acting as one of its main driving forces to bring us all towards peace, progress and prosperity or in other words democracy as aspired by the people.

When it comes to knowledge-based industries it includes businesses from banking, insurance and tourism to high-tech and high-end industries that require a large number of highly-qualified human resources such as technicians, intellectuals and academics and the research and development programs in which people of these three given categories are also the main working force.

Accordingly, we need a constant source of highly-qualified human resources supply for the long-term growth of knowledge-based industries and a good education system in which teachers of both basic education and higher education sectors can concentrate their efforts totally on well-rounded progress of their students will be one of the best answers to start producing and recruiting professionals.

18 charred to death, 25 injured in major rail mishap in southern India

NEW DELHI, 22 May—At least 18 people were charred to death and more than 35 others sustained injuries in a major rail mishap in the southern Indian state of Andhra Pradesh just before dawn on Tuesday, a senior railway police official said.

"The mishap happened when a passenger train, the Hampi Express, rammed into a stationary freight train near Penukonda station in the state's Anantapur district at 3:15 am (local time). The train was going from the state's Hubli District to the neighbouring state of Karnataka's Capital Bangalore when the collision took place," the official said, on condition of anonymity. Such great was the impact of the collision that two coaches of the passenger train caught fire. As a result, 18 passengers were charred to death and those injured have been admitted to a local hospital where the condition of some are said to be serious, the official said, adding that preliminary probe has revealed that the driver of the passenger train may have overshot the signal.

The death toll is likely to go up later in the day as several passengers are still feared trapped inside three damaged coaches of Hampi Express, two of which derailed and caught fire after the collision, say railway officials. "The exact number of trapped people is not known yet, but efforts are on in full force to bring them out safely. Doctors are working hard to give relief to all the injured," Anil Saxena, Public Relations but sustained life-threatening injuries, Canadian police said.

The man, whose name has not been released, became only the third person known to have lived through a fall seeing the man climb over a retaining wall about 20 feet above the brink of the falls at mid-morning and deliberately jump into the swift waters.

He surfaced a few seconds later in the lower Niagara River Basin below, near an observation platform, police said.

He "was located by a Niagara Parks Police officer along the rocky shoreline as he collapsed in waters that were up to the subject's waist," police said in a statement.

In a rescue that lasted about 30 minutes, staff from several agencies extricated the man, thought to be about 40 years old.

He had sustained life-threatening injuries and was flown by an air ambulance to a hospital in Hamilton, Ontario, for treatment, the statement said. Police were investigating how and why he went over the falls.

The Horseshoe Falls, one of the world's most popular tourist attractions, sends about 675,000 gallons (2.6 million liters) of water over its edge per second. It is one of two massive waterfalls, along with the American Falls, that span the US-Canada border.

Decades ago, daredevils would tempt fate and go over the Horseshoe Falls in barrels or other protective devices - and were often killed. That is now an illegal stunt that can result in a fine or jail time.

WHO chief warns "two danger zones" for world health development

GENEVA, 22 May—World Health Organization (WHO) Director-General Margaret Chan warned on Monday that squeezed funds and rise of chronic non-communicable disease were "two danger zones" for the world public health development. "In these difficult financial times, I see an extremely dangerous tendency to measure how much health can be bought for a given amount of money," Chan made the remarks when addressing the 65th World Health Assembly, held from Monday to Saturday, adding this can be dangerous, especially for a disease like HIV/AIDS.

Chan said that the lack of funds might mean that the UN goal in fight against diseases like HIV/AIDS be missed. "We have good reason to believe that the UN target of having 15 million people on treatment by 2015 will not be met," she said. Chan also stressed that non-communicable diseases including cardiovascular disease and diabetes would cast "the longest dark shadow" over progress in global health.

Bruised Merkel returns home to more policy fights

BERLIN, 22 May—Angela Merkel returns from one of her most difficult foreign trips in recent memory on Tuesday to face more, severe tests of her long-standing command over the policy agenda in Germany and Europe.

The chancellor looked unusually isolated at a weekend G8 meeting in Camp David, where new French President Francois Hollande teamed up with host Barack Obama to push back against the bitter austerity medicine Merkel has prescribed for reeling euro zone members. That conflict will continue to haunt her this week at an informal summit of EU leaders on Wednesday and at a meeting with German opposition leaders the following day, where she must defuse an escalating row that could delay approval of her cherished "fiscal compact" on budget discipline.

The man that Merkel was relying on to push these new fiscal rules through parliament, her chief whip Peter Altmaier, was abruptly shifted to the post of environment minister last week and will now have his hands full getting Merkel's stalled energy transformation plan back on track.

All this comes against the backdrop of embarrassing conflicts within her centre-right coalition over childcare subsidies and data protection, that have left Merkel looking indecisive and her government inept before a federal election in September of next year. Some leading German commentators are likening Merkel's troubles to the last months of her predecessor Gerhard Schroeder's reign, although no one expects her to gamble on early elections as he did.

Instead, people close to the chancellor suggest, she may be forced into compromises she would not have considered in the past, when her political standing seemed unassailable.—Reuters

Six people killed, 15 injured in Iraq's violence

BAGHDAD, 22 May—Six people were killed and 15 others injured on Monday in separate bomb and gunfire attacks in Iraq, the police said.

The deadliest incident in the day occurred near Baghdad when gunmen using assault rifles attacked a police checkpoint near a government-owned facility in Taji area, some 20 km north of Baghdad, killing three policemen and wounding two others, an Interior ministry source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

In a separate incident, a roadside bomb exploded in Baghdad's western district of Ameriyah, injuring three civilians, the source said. Elsewhere, a sticky bomb attached to a government car went off at an Iraqi army checkpoint in Abu Ghraib area, some 20 km west of Baghdad, killing the driver and wounding a soldier and two civilians, a local police source anonymously told Xinhua.

Also in Abu Ghraib, another sticky bomb attached to a civilian car detonated at a parking lot of a government building, killing the driver and injuring a passer-by, the source said.—Xinhua

LA museum gets gift for shuttle home

LOS ANGELES, 22 May—The Los Angeles museum that will house space shuttle Endeavour has received an "extraordinary" financial gift to create the display facility, officials said. Lynda Oschin, wife of the late philanthropist Samuel Oschin, chairs the foundation that made the gift to the Air and Space Centre at the California Science Centre, the Los Angeles Times reported on Thursday.

At Oschin's request, museum officials did not disclose the amount of the gift but termed it "transformational" for the free state-run museum adjacent to the University of Southern California.

"It's a huge boost," Science Centre

President Jeffrey N Rudolph said.

"It gives us enough money to ensure we can complete the architecture and exhibit design."

The Science Centre has now raised nearly half the $200 million it needs to transport Endeavour from Florida, build a temporary hangar, and design and construct a permanent museum wing, to be called the Samuel Oschin Air and Space Centre.

Rhine river 5 million years older

TUBINGEN, 22 May — Evidence from fossils suggests the Rhine, one of Europe's major rivers, is 5 million years older than previously believed, German researchers say.

"Up to now it has been assumed that the Proto-Rhine is around 10 million years old," said Madelaine Bohme at the Senckenberg Centre for Human Evolution and Palaeoecology at the University of Tübingen.

"But based on our examination of fossils from a site near Sprendlingen we now believe that the river is at least 5 million years older," Bohme said in a release from the centre on Wednesday.

The age of the sands in the area, which contain numerous fossils, has often been the subject of scientific debate, she said.

"For this reason we examined a new sample with over 300 mammalian fossils, leaves and fossilized wood," she said. "In the process we found the teeth and bones of different deer species that lived in Central Europe at the beginning of the Middle Miocene—in other words, in the period between 14 and 16 million years ago."

Because the findings were made in the oldest known deposits of the Rhine, she said, the river must be at least 5 million years older. "The results of the examinations of fossil plant residues that were found above and below the mammalian sites reinforce our conclusions" about the river's age, she said.—Internet

New building material to absorb cesium developed

KYOTO, 22 May—A Japanese research group says they have succeeded in developing a building material that could filter most radioactive cesium from contaminated water.

A research group at Kinki University's Faculty of Engineering in Hiroshima Prefecture applied a method using plaster found in traditional Japanese architecture.

The traditional material called "Shikkui" usually mixes lime with sand, but the group used zeolite powder instead of sand.

The newly developed material is permeable.

Researchers say that during tests that filtered cesium dissolved in water, the material absorbed over 99 percent of the cesium.

The group says the material could be used to safely store debris and soil contaminated by radiation by preventing radioactive substances from seeping out.

Researcher Atsushi Taga says the result was unexpected. He says he hopes the material will be used to store contaminated debris from the accident at the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant.—NHK

1,000 years of Australasia climate studied

MELBOURNE, 22 May — Scientists say climate records from Australasia show there are no other warm periods in the last 1,000 years that match the warming experienced since 1950.

A study led by researchers at the University of Melbourne used a range of natural indicators including tree rings, corals and ice cores to study Australasian temperatures over the past millennium and compare them to climate model simulations.

"Our study revealed that recent warming in a 1000-year context is highly unusual and cannot be explained by natural factors alone, suggesting a strong influence of human-caused climate change in the Australasian region," researcher Joelle Gergis said on Wednesday in a release.

Using natural records such as tree rings, corals and ice cores is fundamental in evaluating regional and global climate variability over centuries before direct temperature records began to be kept in 1910, she said.

Ocean. Records provided by decades of work by more than 30 researchers from Australia, New Zealand and around the world were collated to provide data for the study. "Anonymous" affiliate claims hacked Chicago police site as NATO opens CHICAGO, 22 May—A group affiliated with the hacking activist group Anonymous said it made a "hacktivist" attack on the Chicago Police Department and related websites on Sunday as part of protests against the summit of the NATO military alliance.

The Chicago City Council web site (www.cityofchicago.org) was inoperable on Sunday morning for a period, as was the police department site, which is accessible via the council web portal.

"We are aware of the potential issue with the city's website and are working with the appropriate federal authorities to address the situation," city council spokesman Pete Scales said in a statement.

The group Anti-SecurityOPS, which said on Twitter that it does not represent Anonymous "as a whole" but was "one small piece to the puzzle," claimed responsibility for the attack and said there would be others.

"We are actively engaged in actions against the Chicago Police Department and encourage anyone to take up the cause and use the Anti-SecurityOPS Anonymous banner," the group said in a statement on www.cyberwarnews.info. "We are in your harbor Chicago, and you will not forget us."

An FBI agent with the joint information office set up for the NATO summit said the

Cellphone data extraction.—INTERNET

London police collecting cellphone data

LONDON, 22 May—London's Metropolitan Police have begun extracting cellphone data from suspects held in custody, a move critics say is a "possible breach of human rights law."

The data being recovered includes call history, texts and contacts, and will be retained whether or not any charges are brought against suspects, the BBC reported on Thursday. Using new technology created by forensic firm Radio Tactics, cellphone content can be extracted using purpose-built terminals in police stations to produce a printout of data from the phone as well as a digital records that can be saved.

The Metropolitan Police said data extraction would only be done if there is significant suspicion the cellphone was used in connection with criminal activity.

Campaign group Privacy International has criticized the move. "We are looking at a possible breach of human rights law," spokeswoman Emma Draper told the BBC.

"It is illegal to indefinitely retain the DNA profiles of individuals after they are acquitted or released without charge, and the communications, photos and location data contained in most people's smartphones is at least as valuable and as personal as DNA."

While the current system uses only fixed extraction terminals in police stations, portable versions of the technology exist, Draper said.

"Examining suspects' mobile phones after they are arrested is one thing, but if this technology was to be taken out onto the streets and used in stop-and-searches, that would be a significant and disturbing expansion of police powers."—Internet

China approves Google's Motorola deal

BEIJING, 22 May—China said on Sunday it had granted conditional approval to Google's plans to acquire Motorola Mobility Holdings (MMH), clearing the last regulatory obstacle to a deal that will help the search company's plans to develop its own smart phones.

The approval, which Google (GOOG) had announced on Saturday, comes nearly eight months after the application for the $12.5 billion purchase was submitted and requires that the No 1 search company keep its Android operating system free and open for at least five years.

"At the end of the five years, the Ministry of Commerce will continue to assess the state of the Chinese smart phone operating system market," said a statement posted on the ministry's website.

Google's Android software is the top operating system for Internet-enabled smart phones.

The company wants phone-maker Motorola for its 17,000 patents and 7,500 patent applications, as it looks to compete with rivals such as Apple Inc (AAPL) and defend itself and Android phone manufacturers in patent litigation.

US and European regulators approved the deal in February.

S Korea's industrial power sales slow in April

SEOUL, 22 May—South Korea's industrial electricity sales slowed last month compared with a month before due to less working days and slower export growth, a government report showed on Monday.

Sales of industrial electricity, a gauge of industrial activities, reached 21.22 billion kilowatt-hours in April, up 1.7% from the same month last year, according to the Ministry of Knowledge Economy. For the first four months of this year, industrial power sales grew 3.5% on-year to 85.89 kilowatt-hours.

The April growth was down from an on-year expansion of 4% tallied in the previous month, and a 9.1% increase a year earlier.

The slower growth was mainly attributed to less business days caused by the April general election. Slower export growth also contributed to weaker demand for industrial electricity. The Asia's No.4 economy logged a 4.8% on-year contraction in exports in April.

Meanwhile, electricity sales for educational facilities, households and general usage grew 2.8%, 3.2% and 2.5% respectively in April on an on-year basis.

Total power sales, including industrial and household sector, came in at 38.5 billion kilowatt-hours in April, up 2% from a year before.—Xinhua

Scientists discover way to 'starve' cancer cells

SINGAPORE, 22 May—Scientists from the National University of Singapore (NUS) have discovered a way to kill cancer cells — by 'starving' them of energy.

NUS said on Thursday that the discovery paves the way for more effective cancer treatment. The research revolves around a drug-led compound, BPTES.

The scientists, who are from the Department of Biological Sciences and Mechanobiology Institute, said the compound can deprive cancer cells of energy and stop them from growing into a tumour. The compound is undergoing pre-clinical trials as a potential drug.

NUS said this is the first time a research group has provided evidence showing how a drug-led compound suppresses tumour formation.

Building on the new findings, the NUS team also derived positive results for a dual-drug treatment regime involving BPTES.

The team found that it kills kidney and breast cancer cells more effectively.

NUS said the next step is to conduct more studies to determine whether a combination of drugs would be even more effective.

The research team will also look into how it can make BPTES more efficient, as well as ways to lower its side-effects.—Internet

UK to award contracts for work on nuclear subs

CHICAGO, 22 May—Britain is set to announce this week the award of 350 million pounds of contracts for design work on new nuclear-armed submarines, a government official said on Sunday, a move that may cause friction in the coalition government.

The decision signals that Prime Minister David Cameron's centre-right Conservatives remain committed to acquiring a costly new nuclear submarine fleet despite calls from their junior Liberal Democrat coalition partners to consider a cheaper alternative nuclear deterrent. The government will announce which companies have won the 350 million pounds of contracts for initial design work on the submarines this week, a British government official at the NATO summit in Chicago said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The official declined to say which companies had won the contracts but said they would go to British companies and safeguard or create 1,900 jobs in Britain's submarine-building industry, which is dominated by defence giant BAE Systems (BAES.L).

Britain currently has four Vanguard class submarines carrying Trident nuclear missiles but the vessels are due to go out of service in the 2020s.

The Conservatives want to build a new class of submarines to carry Britain's nuclear deterrent at a cost of around 25 billion pounds, even though spending on non-nuclear defence and other government departments is being slashed to rein in a big budget deficit.

The centre-left Lib Dems have argued for cheaper alternatives, such as putting nuclear missiles on existing Astute submarines.

In a gesture to the Lib Dems, whose support has plunged since the coalition was formed after the 2010 election, the government announced last year it would study the feasibility of alternatives.

The government's decision to award the contracts signals it is wedded to a like-for-like replacement for its existing nuclear deterrent regardless of what the study may conclude. British

Health Tip: Keep cloth grocery totes clean

Reusable grocery totes may be friendly for the environment, but they can also befriend harmful bacteria. The Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics suggests how to keep grocery totes clean:

- * Regularly wash grocery totes either by hand (use hot, soapy water) or in the washing machine.

- * Bag separately in plastic any fish, poultry or meat before placing them in a tote. Be sure to separate these products from prepared or packaged foods.

- * Carefully clean any kitchen areas (such as a counter) where you place totes while unpacking.

- * Don't leave totes in the trunk of your car; store them in a cool, dry place.—Internet

Juice may be acidic enough to hurt teeth

LONDON, 22 May—Many parents give children smoothies and juice every day, unaware their high-acid levels and sugar content can destroy young teeth, a British doctor says.

An investigation by The Sunday Telegraph reported the acid levels of popular juice drinks — including one more acidic than vinegar. Dr Kathy Harley, dean of the dental faculty at the Royal College of Surgeons, said 50 percent of 5-year-olds now have signs of damage to their tooth enamel caused by excess acid in their diet. Tooth enamel begins to be destroyed when acid levels in the mouth drop below 5.5 on the pH scale — 7 is neutral — while 1 is a strong acid.

Water has a pH of 7, and milk is just below at 6.8, but the investigation found "This Water," a product sold in Britain that contains lemons and limes that describes itself as a "juice drink blended with pure squeezed juices and pure spring water," had a level of 2.7 — more acidic than cider vinegar, which has a pH level of 2.9.

The other fruit drinks tested included: Tropicana orange juice, Coppella apple juice, Innocent smoothies, Capri Sun orange drink and Robinsons Fruit Shoot apple and blackcurrant low-sugar drink all had acid levels ranging from 3.3 to 3.8.

However, the most acidic beverage tested was Coca Cola, with a pH level of 2.5 and 12.5 teaspoons of sugar in a 17.5-ounce bottle, the Telegraph said.—Internet

Coordination meeting on passing of Intellectual Property Rights Law held

NAY PYI TAW, 22 May—A coordination meeting on passing of new Intellectual Property Rights Law, was held at the Ministry of Science and Technology here this noon, with an address by Union Minister for Science and Technology U Aye Myint.

In his speech, he said: there are four drafted bills—patent law, Industrial Design Law, Trademarks and Service Marks Laws and Copyright Law regarding new Intellectual Property Rights Law. Necessary amendments to the bill will be made in coordination with Union Attorney-General Office and World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO). Myanmar is in urgent need of Intellectual Property Rights Laws as the country sees a lot of foreign investments. Laws that protect Intellectual Property Rights should be in line with international standards as ASEAN Community will emerge in 2015. Intellectual Property Rights Laws can protect fundamental rights of citizens and generate country's economic development and a flow of foreign investments.

It was also attended by Deputy Minister for Information U Soe Win, Deputy Minister for Science and Technology Dr Ko Ko Oo, Deputy Attorney-General U Tun Tun Oo, departmental heads and officials from the ministries, officials from Region and State governments, the Republic of the Union of Myanmar Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Myanmar Engineering Society, Myanmar Motion Pictures Association and Myanmar Writers and Journalists Association and Myanmar Music Association.

Westfield gives a peak at World Trade Centre plans

LAS VEGAS, 22 May—The first shops could throw open their doors in the redeveloped World Trade Centre by March 2015, Australian mall operator Westfield said on Monday, 13-and-a-half years after the New York landmark was destroyed in the 11 September attacks. The redevelopment of the World Trade Centre is years behind schedule and billions of dollars over budget. After years of negotiation, Westfield last week signed a deal with the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey for a $1.25 billion joint venture to lease the retail space at the World Trade Centre.

Westfield, one of the world's biggest mall owners, said the first retailers for the redeveloped site could be announced by the first half of 2013, with an opening date set for March 2015.

Potential tenants of the rebuilt World Trade Centre got a peak at what the new shopping area may look like during a trade conference in Las Vegas on Monday.

Westfield Co-Chief Executive Peter Lowy said 352,000 sq feet of shopping would be spread over three above-ground levels and two below ground. Westfield is also entitled to operate another 90,000 sq feet of retail space among the 8.8 million sq feet of office space under construction.

Lowy said Westfield planned to be selective about possible tenants. "We're going to do something that no one can imagine," Lowy told Reuters during the International Council of Shopping Centres annual convention, or RECon. He declined to give further details.

The stores will cater not only to the people who will live and work at the World Trade Centre, but also to the masses of tourists who visit the National 11 September Memorial Park and Museum, as well as the proposed performing arts centre.

Five US inspections made so far over Russian missile forces

MOSCOW, 22 May—The United States has conducted five inspections of Russia's missile forces in the past six months, a Russian military official said on Monday.

As part of the new Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START), US inspectors have held five inspections since December in the sites of Russia's Strategic Missile Forces, Rocket Forces Commander Lt Gen Sergei Karakayev told local media.

Under the framework of the new treaty, Russia and the United States could conduct 18 annual inspections to verify each other's strategic offensive weapons, Karakayev said, adding that the two sides exchange information on their strategic offensive arms on 1 March and 1 Sept each year.

The new START treaty, which came into force last

February, obliges the two countries to hold limited numbers of deployed land-based and sea-based intercontinental ballistic missiles, heavy bombers, warheads and launchers.

The treaty's duration will be 10 years and it may be extended for no more than five years.

New Zealand to ban foreign-flagged fishing boats

WELLINGTON, 22 May—New Zealand is to ban the use of foreign-flagged fishing boats in its waters to improve working conditions for crews and monitoring of catches, the government said on Tuesday.

New Zealand has the fifth-largest exclusive economic zone in the world, extending from 12 to 200 nautical miles offshore, and the fishing industry relies heavily on foreign vessels. The zone produced NZ$1.5 billion ($1.1 billion) in exports last year.

The vessels, often low-cost ship operators based in Asia, are chartered by New Zealand fishing companies, but operate under the laws of their home countries or countries they are registered in.

An inquiry into conditions on the chartered vessels found examples of physical abuse of the crews, dangerous working conditions, underpayment of wages and illegal deductions.

"Reflagging will provide greater protection to the crew as they will be employed by a New Zealand-based party under a New Zealand employment agreement," Labour Minister Kate Wilkinson said in a statement.

Local fishing companies will have four years to change.

Last year, officers of the Korean-registered Oyang 75 were charged with breaking fishing rules, and most of the ship's largely Indonesian crew walked off the vessel because of the conditions onboard.—Reuters

Japan remains world's top creditor nation in 2011

TOKYO, 22 May—Japan remained the world's largest creditor nation in 2011 with a net 253 trillion yen (about 3.19 trillion US dollar) in foreign assets at the end of 2011, said Japanese government on Tuesday.

Bomb threat forces evacuation at Utah spy site, FBI says

SALT LAKE CITY, 22 May—A bomb threat forced the evacuation of a National Security Agency facility under construction in Utah on Monday but investigators found nothing suspicious and declared the site safe, an FBI spokeswoman said.

The spy agency facility is being built at Camp Williams, a military base just south of Salt Lake City. The Army Corps of Engineers is overseeing the $1.2 billion project. FBI spokeswoman Deborah Bertram declined to say how the threat was received but said it led to an evacuation at the site.

FBI agents spent several hours at the site after the threat was received. "We found nothing suspicious," Bertram said, later adding that the agency had "cleared the scene." The Army Corps of Engineers said in a statement that work on the site, called the Utah Data Centre, was to resume on Tuesday. US officials have released few details on the purpose of the centre.

The National Security Agency is in charge of collecting and analyzing foreign communications and protecting US government communications and information systems.

Singapore's wholesale trade rebounds in Q1, higher price matters

SINGAPORE, 22 May—Singapore's domestic wholesale trade in the first quarter of 2012 climbed 3.4 percent on year, mainly due to higher sales of food, beverages and tobacco products, the Department of Statistics said on Monday.

The petroleum and petroleum products, ship chandlers and bunkering sectors recorded growth of 8.5 percent and 11.5 percent respectively. However, their sales figures were much more related to the price issues, which respectively declined by 6.2 percent and 4.4 percent compared with the previous year after removing price effect.

Meanwhile, foreign wholesale trade soared 12.7 percent on a year-on-year basis in Q1, mainly due to a growth of 21.5 percent on year in telecommunications and computers sector. After adjusting for price changes, foreign wholesale trade increased 8.6 percent.

The government owed the sharp increase of foreign wholesale trade to higher prices compared to a year ago. Among all the sectors, petroleum and petroleum products surged 21.1 percent on year and ship chandlers and bunkering sectors increased 13.5 percent. After removing the price effect, foreign wholesale trade volume of the petroleum and petroleum products sector increased by a smaller 6.1 percent while that of the ship chandlers and bunkering sector declined marginally by 0.5 percent.

Earlier statistics released that Singapore's economy enjoyed a strong rebound in Q1 of 2012 with GDP growth of 10 percent compared with the previous quarter.

Samsung's mobile chief says has options to settle war with Apple

SEOUL, 22 May—Samsung Electronics' (005930.KS) mobile division chief JK Shin said on Sunday the South Korean technology giant was still seeking to resolve differences in its international patent war with Apple Inc APPL O.

"There is still a big gap in the patent war with Apple but we still have several negotiation options including cross-licensing," Shin told reporters at Seoul airport shortly before his departure for the United States. Asked about the prospects for Samsung's memory chip business, Shin said the 4G chip shortage was expected to continue until early in the fourth quarter of this year.

Shin was accompanying chief executive Choi Gee-sung, who was scheduled to meet his Apple counterpart Tim Cook in a US court on Monday to resolve patent lawsuits over smartphones and tablets.

Each firm claims its international patents have been infringed by the other.

Pakistan blocks Twitter over "blasphemous content"

ISLAMABAD, 22 May — Pakistan on Sunday blocked access to Twitter in response to "blasphemous" material posted by users on the microblogging and social networking website, a senior government official said.

"This has been done under the directions of the Ministry of Information Technology. It's because of blasphemous content," said Mohammed Yaseen, chairman of the Pakistan Telecommunication Authority (PTA).

"They (the ministry) have been discussing with them (Twitter) for some time now, requesting them to remove some particular content," he said.

Pakistan blocked access to Facebook, Twitter,

YouTube and about 1,000 other websites for nearly two weeks in May 2010 over blasphemous content.

Any representation of the Prophet Mohammad is deemed un-Islamic and blasphemous by many Muslims, who constitute the overwhelming majority in Pakistan.

PTA chairman Yaseen did not specify which users or messages had prompted the ban. The Internet Service Providers Association of Pakistan said its members have been asked to block Twitter indefinitely, but no reason has been provided by the government.

Yaseen said the ban would be lifted after ongoing discussions between the Pakistan government and Twitter about the allegedly blasphemous material are resolved. Officials from the Ministry of Information Technology and from Twitter were not immediately available for comment.

Twitter has become increasingly popular in Pakistan in recent years, its users including politicians and government officials.

NATO launches limited missile shield operation

TOKYO, 22 May—NATO leaders have formally agreed to implement a missile defence system for Europe with a mind toward intercepting missiles launched from Iran.

The agreement allows a partial activation of the European missile shield, limited to a US Aegis warship in the Mediterranean.

The agreement was reached by the leaders of the 28 member states of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Chicago on Sunday.

At a news conference, NATO Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen declared that the system has entered interim capability. He called it a first step toward protecting the people and the territory of the member nations.

The US says the system's current capability is limited to interceptor missiles on an Aegis-equipped warship in the Mediterranean and a radar system in Turkey. NATO plans to deploy US interceptor missiles in Spain, Turkey, Romania and Poland by 2018.

It is feared that the activation of the NATO missile defence system will fuel Russian concerns that the system is designed to counter its nuclear capability.

The NATO meeting is expected to wind up on Monday with discussions on the planned withdrawal of NATO-led forces from Afghanistan.—NHK

Woman to command British navy frigate

LONDON, 22 May—A 16-year veteran of the Royal Navy has achieved a significant first, becoming the first woman to command a British warship.

Commander Sarah West becomes captain of HMS Portland, a Type 23 frigate, on Tuesday, The Guardian reported. The vessel is currently based at Rosyth in Scotland and is expected to be sent to the Persian Gulf or to the South Atlantic after a refit.

West called the promotion "the highlight of my 16 years in the Navy so far." "It is a challenge I am fully trained for and ready to undertake," she said.

As the Portland's captain, West will be in charge of a crew of 185, most of them men. While women have been part of the Royal Navy since World War I and have made significant advances in the past two decades, the service is still about 90 percent male.

"The navy has had women commanders before, but none of them have made that leap up to the big warships," a defense official said. "It is a significant step up, but she definitely has the experience to do this."

West, 40, served in the Gulf on board HMS Sheffield and was involved in planning for the 2003 Iraq invasion.

Commander Sue Moore, 43, was recently put in charge of the First Patrol Boat Squadron, becoming the first woman to head a small boat group. Women have also skippered minesweepers and other small boats.—Internet

More than 200 bison escape ranch

Authorities in Iowa said there may be "a few stragglers" among the more than 200 escaped bison that were rounded up.

Osceola County sheriff's deputy Lt. Seth Hofman said the more than 200 bison escaped in the evening from the Frick and Joe Buffalo Ranch north of Ashton, and the animals quickly spread across five counties, including Nobles County in Minnesota, the Worthington (Minn.) Daily Globe reported.

"We had a lot of concerned citizens call in, because buffalo sightings are pretty unusual," he explained.

Hofman said searchers on horseback and 4-wheelers managed to round up most of the creatures, but some of the animals had to be put down for safety reasons. He said the sheriff's department received a few scattered calls about large animals roaming.

"There might be a few stragglers, but I think we've got them pretty well taken care of," Hofman said.

Tightrope walker practices for Niagara walk

A famous tightrope walker preparing to walk the high wire over Niagara Falls is practicing in New York by walking a tightrope near some local businesses.

Nik Wallenda, 33, a seventh-generation member of the legendary Flying

Wallendas circus performing family, is walking high wire this week over Niagara Falls, NY, parking lot with a TGI Friday's restaurant, a Starbucks, a Sheraton hotel and the Seneca Niagara Casino and Hotel serving as substitutes for the falls, which he plans to cross 15 June, The New York Times reported.

"This is about mind games," he said while crossing the high wire. "Right now, I'm putting myself at the top of the falls." Wallenda said his practice sessions have been drawing crowds of 100 to 200 people.

He said the keys to his performances are prayer and practicing.

"Wire-walking, it's about doing it," Wallenda said. "The more I do this, the more comfortable I get."

Burglar's disguise—underpants

Security footage at a Fruitland, Idaho, coffee shop caught two robbers making off with a safe—one of them wearing underwear on his head as a disguise.

Eight security cameras at the Big Star Coffee Shop caught the robbery on tape around 4:34 am on 18 May, The Idaho Statesman reported. Two men busted in, one with a bandana over his face, the other hiding behind a pair of undies.

"They kicked in the back door and went right for the safe," said owner Jason Wilson, who suspects one of the culprits to be a disgruntled former employee.

Their plan came up short when they found the big safe, weighing more than 200 pounds and bolted into cement, was impossible to steal. Instead they made off with a smaller safe containing less than $500.

"Who robs something with underwear on their head?" Wilson riddled. "I think the underwear shows they're not the smartest criminals—or the most well-prepared."

An employee discovered the robbery at 5:30 am, after the masterminds left considerable evidence at the scene. Police were investigating.

Woman charged in sea shell stabbing

Authorities in Florida said a woman is facing a felony charge after allegedly stabbing a man in the shoulder four times with a sea shell.

Port St Lucie police said the 41-year-old victim told officers he and Patricia Wehr, 40, "went out for drinks because she had to be in court tomorrow for a battery charge ... and she was stressed" and they argued upon returning home early 15 May, TCPalm.com reported.

The man said Wehr, who he described as intoxicated, scratched his face and bit his ear before following him into the kitchen and stabbing him in the shoulder four times with a "sea shell similar to a thin conch shell," the police report states.

Wehr, who told police she wanted the man out of her home, was arrested and charged with aggravated battery with a deadly weapon.

Slash proud of Guns N' Roses

LOS ANGELES, 22 May—Slash, former lead guitarist of Guns N' Roses, says he is very proud of his time with the band and insists he will always include the band's songs in his live shows.

"I'm very proud of what we did in that band, but it's nice to be recognised for something you've got going on right now," femalefirst.co.uk quoted Slash as saying.

Despite having success with his band Velvet Revolver as a solo artist, the guitarist admits nothing compares to the time when his first band made it big in 1987 with their debut album "Appetite For Destruction".

Every band I've ever been in, I tried to make it always just about the music, never about who was the star," he said.

Robin Gibb of Bee Gees fame dead at 62

LONDON, 22 May—Robin Gibb of the Bee Gees, whose "Saturday Night Fever" album helped disco dominate 1970s pop music, died Sunday in England, his family said. He was 62.

A statement posted on Gibb's Web site and attributed to his family said he died "following his long battle with cancer and intestinal surgery," CNN reported.

Gibb had been hospitalized in London for colorectal cancer and pneumonia and was in a coma before he awoke last month. His wife, Dwina Murphy-Gibb, told ITV News at the time the singer-songwriter was "really happy" and "just wants to get out" of The London Clinic and go home.

"They gave him an under 10 percent survival chance and he has beaten the odds,"

Gibb's son, Robin-John, said. "He really is something else."

With the death of Robin Gibb, Barry Gibb, 65, is the sole remaining member of the Bee Gees. Robin's twin brother, Maurice, died in 2003. A younger brother, singer Andy Gibb, died from a heart infection at age 30.

The Bee Gees scored pop hits with "I Started a Joke," "How Can You Mend a Broken Heart" and "Lonely Days" before turning to disco in the mid-'70s. Their music for the film "Saturday Night Fever" catapulted them to international superstardom with hits like "Stayin' Alive," "Night Fever" and "How Deep Is Your Love." The trio were inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1997.

Robin Gibb was born 22 Dec, 1949, in England. He and his brothers were raised in Manchester before the family moved to Australia, where they began performing on television shows. In addition to his wife, Robin Gibb is survived by his daughter, Melissa and sons Spencer and Robin-John.—Internet

Jessie J wants own perfume

LONDON, 22 May—Singer Jessie J says she has big plans for the future, including creating her own fragrance as well as designing her own range of clothes.

"I'd love to have my own TV show, my own clothing line, my own perfume. Everyone wants their own perfume, right?" contactmusic.com quoted the singer as saying.

"I want to start up charities. I want to earn money to give it away. I want to do campaigns," she added.

The 24-year-old is known for her eccentric dress sense, but she says she has taken a conscious decision to tone down her fashion choices.

"I have calmed down my look. Is it really necessary to wear all that jewellery and make-up at 7 am and look like a drag queen? When you're tired you start to over-compensate for it by wearing too much bling," she said.

"I love getting dressed up but I want to be remembered for singing. I am styling myself at the moment. Fashion is something that I love to do. But I am definitely not making everything about image," she added.

MADRID, 22 May—Barcelona defender Eric Abidal was released from hospital on Monday six weeks after having a liver transplant, the Spanish club said in a statement.

"Given the particular nature of this recovery process, Abidal will have to undergo regular hospital checkups," a medical note said on their official website.

The France international, 32, underwent a lengthy operation on 10 April with an organ donated by his cousin Gerard.

He had previously had surgery to remove a tumour from his liver in March last year and returned two months later to lift the Champions League trophy at Wembley.

Barcelona have one more game left this season, the King's Cup final against Athletic Bilbao at Madrid's Calderon on Friday.

It will be coach Pep Guardiola's last official game at the helm before he steps aside for his assistant Tito Vilanova to take charge for next season.

NEW YORK, 22 May—Cheyenne Woods, the 21-year-old niece of 14-time major winner Tiger Woods, has signed with her uncle's agent, Mark Steinberg, and is set to start playing in LPGA Tour events this year.

In a Monday statement posted on the Excel agency website, Cheyenne Woods said she plans to play in LPGA events this year on sponsor exemptions and seek a full-time spot on the women's golf tour through the qualifying tournament.

"I am really looking forward to pursuing my goals and dreams to compete on the highest level," Woods said. "As I begin my professional career, I am confident and excited about working with Excel as they help shape my future." Woods posted the lowest scoring average at Wake Forest University and has graduated with a communications degree.

The daughter of Tiger Woods' half-brother Earl Woods Jr missed the cut at the 2009 Wegmans LPGA while playing on a sponsor's exemption. Steinberg has represented Tiger Woods since 1998 and departed IMG to work at Excel a year ago.

"We are excited about the opportunity to represent Cheyenne," Steinberg said.

Schweini apologises for snubbing German president

MUNICH, 22 May—Bayern Munich midfielder Bastian Schweinsteiger on Monday apologised for not shaking the hand of German President Joachim Gauck after the German club's Champions League defeat to Chelsea in Munich at the weekend.

Drogba tells Chelsea team-mates he's off

PARIS, 22 May—Ivory Coast great Didier Drogba has told his Chelsea team-mates he is leaving the newly-crowned Champions League winners because he doesn't fancy spending time on the substitutes bench, France Football said on Monday.

The 34-year-old - who scored the late equaliser and then the decisive penalty in the shootout win over German side Bayern Munich on Saturday — is quoted by the magazine as saying he burst into tears when he told the rest of the squad during their open top bus parade with the trophy on Sunday.

"We (he and his team-mates) will not be together next season," the magazine cited Drogba as saying.

"As I have decided to leave, I wanted to tell them to their faces.

"Only that I couldn't do it. They made me break down. Even if it has been three years that I have said I wanted to leave, I found it hard to admit that it was finished with me and the club.

"Especially that I had no great desire for this end. But I don't envisage sitting on the bench watching others play at a time when the club is looking at putting together a new team.

"So there we go, I am readying myself for a great leap into the unknown.

"It will be another adventure," added Drogba, who is out of contract having been at the club since 2004 after joining from Marseille.

English media have linked the Ivorian target man - scorer of 55 goals in his 84 international appearances - with Chinese side Shanghai Shenhua, where his former Chelsea team-mate Nicolas Anelka is player-coach.

Balotelli must create right headlines: Prandelli

ROME, 22 May—Italy coach Cesare Prandelli said on Monday he wanted to see headlines only about what volatile Italian striker Mario Balotelli did on the pitch and not off it during next month's European Championship. The 21-year-old Manchester City star has been included in Prandelli's squad despite several moments of injudicious behaviour on and off the pitch last season.

However, Prandelli, who is desperately light of striking options, made it clear that Balotelli was on probation.

"In my opinion, he has to see it as an extraordinary occasion for him as it is for the national side," said Prandelli.

"It is a time for him to be written about for what he does on the pitch and not what he has done off it."

Prandelli added that in the bigger picture he did not see Italy winning the tournament - they last reached the final in 2000 - but certainly restoring some of the lustre lost when they became the first defending champions to go out in the World Cup finals group stages in 2010.

World's tallest tower, the Tokyo Skytree, opens

TOKYO, 22 May—The world's tallest tower and Japan's biggest new landmark, the Tokyo Skytree, opened to the public on Tuesday.

Nearly 8,000 visitors were expected to take high-speed elevators up to the observation decks of the 634-meter (2,080-foot) tower to mark its opening. Some reportedly waited in line more than a week to get the coveted tickets for a panoramic view, though Tuesday ended up being cloudy in Tokyo.

Skytree is recognized by Guinness World Records as the tallest tower, beating out the Canton Tower in China, which is 600 meters (1,968 1/2 feet).

The world's tallest structure is Dubai's Burj Khalifa, which stands 828 meters (2,717 feet). That's in a different category because it's a skyscraper, not a tower.

The Skytree will serve as a broadcast tower for television and radio, along with being a tourist attraction. It replaces the 333-metre-tall (1,092 1/2-foot-tall) Tokyo Tower—a symbol of Japan's capital since 1958—as the broadcast hub.

Youth joblessness near crisis peak: ILO

GENEVA, 22 May—Youth joblessness is almost back at its peak following the outbreak of the global economic crisis and is unlikely to ease until at least 2016, the International Labour Organization warned on Tuesday.

The ILO said nearly 75 million youths or 12.7 percent of people aged 15 to 24 will be out of work this year, up from 12.6 percent in 2011.

The jobless total is creeping towards the 75.4 million unemployed in 2009 when the financial crisis caused the number to soar.

The picture is more gloomy if the millions who have put off or given up looking for a job are included: this would put the 2011 figure at 13.6 percent. Youths opting to prolong their education will meanwhile enter the labour market in the coming years, putting continued pressure on the jobless rate.

"By 2016, the youth unemployment rate is projected to remain at the same high level," said the ILO.

FIFA prepares to pick anti-corruption officials

BUDAPEST, 22 May—Tackling corruption in soccer will again top FIFA's agenda when the 208 members meet this week for a congress that will also see the first woman appointed to the governing body's executive committee.

Continuing FIFA's efforts to restore its battered image after a series of corruption scandals, FIFA will announce Tuesday which independent officials will be brought in from outside the "football family" to spearhead new ethics and audit committees that are seen as key vehicles for genuine change.

However, President Sepp Blatter canceled a news conference scheduled for Tuesday after his executive committee wrapped up an expected two-day meeting in a single session Monday. "The youth unemployment crisis can be beaten but only if job creation for young people becomes a key priority in policy-making and private sector investment picks up significantly," said executive director of the ILO's employment sector, Jose Manuel Salazar-Xirinachs. More than a quarter (27.9 percent) of youths were unemployed in North Africa last year following the Arab spring uprisings, an increase of five percentage points on 2010.

The Middle East figure stood at 26.5 percent in the report's regional breakdown.

In central and south-eastern Europe the unemployment rate dropped slightly to 17.6 percent in 2011 and Latin America and the Caribbean also saw a small decrease to 14.3 percent.

In Sub-Saharan Africa, the rate stood at 11.5 percent compared to 13.5 percent in south-east Asia and the Pacific.—Internet

Shenhua seeking new football coach as Anelka simmers

SHANGHAI, 22 May—Shanghai Shenhua say they plan to name a new head coach, just weeks after the big-spending Chinese football club appointed mercurial French striker Nicolas Anelka as player-coach.

There was no immediate comment from Shenhua about British reports that Anelka's former team-mate Didier Drogba, fresh from his Champion's League triumph with Chelsea, is set to join them.

Former Argentina manager Sergio Daniel Batista has been tipped for the coach's job, and Shenhua's star player Anelka is said to be threatening to quit the club in response, according to reports.

"The club has actively sought a head coach candidate, and is looking for him to take up the post and assume command soon," the Chinese club said in a statement posted on its microblog late Monday.

The coming of a new head coach has sparked a public outburst by the striker, who told local media that he was considering leaving.

Anelka is serving dual roles for Shenhua, although the club also named former DR Congo national manager Jean-Florent Ikwangwe Ibenge as acting head coach after sacking Frenchman Jean Tigana last month.
