Restoring our heritage

Our ancient religious or cultural edifices in any Region or State around the country are the standing proof of our high civilization founded by our forefathers long long ago and preserved and safeguarded by our brethren throughout the successive years till now.

Unfortunately, not all the ancient buildings erected by our ancestors still stand today as many were lost, damaged or destroyed by the forces of mother nature including floods, earthquakes and storms throughout the long period despite ardent preservation and renovation work done by the past successive governments and the people out of their generosity and goodwill. In some places year-long exposure to the elements of nature has turned many of the ancient buildings into just mounds or piles of bricks or ruins or near-collapsed structures badly in need of repair and renovation.

As our people are altruistic enough to make large amounts of donations individually or in groups for any purpose whether it may be for religion, health, education or community welfare they are willing participants in the work of renovating or rebuilding ancient structures anywhere around the country.

Moreover our people understand the magnitude of merits they gain for building, rebuilding or repairing a pagoda. A person who donates a well gains constant merits as long as it provides water to the people and for building or repairing a pagoda or a monastery the flow of merits towards the donor never ends as long as it exists as a place for searching Dhamma.

Apart from their holiness these ancient pagodas or monasteries are also priceless from the cultural point of view. Besides, they are our heritage. So any individual or any group of people or any organization rebuilding or repairing or renovating any ancient religious building should not forget the importance of restoring our heritage into its original style and design.

Saudi King seeks successor as crown prince buried

RIYADH, 18 June — Saudi Arabia's elderly king led funeral prayers on Sunday for his heir, Crown Prince Nayef, whose death forces him to find a new successor capable of tackling domestic unemployment, bitter rivalry with Iran and turmoil in close Arab neighbours.

Mecca's Great Mosque, Islam's holiest place, was lined with members of the al-Saud ruling family and leaders of Arab states as an imam led the sunset prayer next to the body of Nayef, who died on Saturday. Among the mourners was the man most likely to be named as successor: Prince Salman, 76, who is seen as more likely to continue the 89-year-old King Abdullah's cautious economic and social reforms than the conservative Nayef. The world's top oil exporter is locked in regional rivalry with Shi'ite Iran, which it suspects of fomenting unrest among its Shi'ite Muslim minority and in allied Gulf Arab states.

Former Lebanese Prime Minister Saad al-Hariri was among those who met Nayef's body at Jeddah airport, representing the Sunni Muslim political alliance that Saudi Arabia cultivates against Iran. Saudi Arabia is also struggling with entrenched youth unemployment and wary of the threat posed by al-Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula, based in neighbouring Yemen, which has plotted attacks against the kingdom and sworn to topple the ruling al-Saud family.

IMF ready to lend economic support to Greece

WASHINGTON, 18 June — The Washington-based International Monetary Fund (IMF) said on Sunday that it was ready to continue lending support to Greece's economic growth and job creation efforts.

"We take note of the election results in Greece and stand ready to engage with the new government on the way forward to help Greece achieve its objective of restoring financial stability, economic growth and jobs," an IMF spokesperson on Sunday said in a short statement.

The parliamentary elections on Sunday, the second round in six weeks in Greece, were seen as a referendum on bailout deals and the debt-laden country's fate in the eurozone. Early results show that pro-bailout New Democracy came first in the elections, easing fears that Greece may exit the eurozone.

Unilateral sanctions on Iran to hurt Russia-US ties: Russian official

MOSCOW, 18 June — Potential US sanctions on Iran over its nuclear programme will "deal a blow" to Russian-US relations, a senior Russian official said on Sunday, presuming a hard-line stance before the long-awaited meeting of the two states. Russian presidential aide Yuri Ushakov told reporters that US sanctions on Iran would "run against international law and affect third countries."

Moscow could not accept if Russian firms and banks become potential victims of such unilateral actions from the US, Ushakov warned. Russian President Vladimir Putin and US President Barack Obama are to meet on the sidelines of the upcoming Group of 20 summit on Monday in the Mexican city of Los Cabos. The two leaders had agreed by phone in early May that they would meet for one and a half hours during the summit, Ushakov said, which would be the first since Putin returned to the top seat.

Putin's absence from the Group of Eight summit last month in the United States and Obama's no-show decision at an Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum meeting in Russia's Vladivostok in September augured a possible cool-down of the already soured Russia-US relations amidst Putin's tough words concerning the US-led missile defence system in Europe.—Xinhua

Chinese president urges bigger say for developing nations in global economic governance

LOS CABOS, 18 June — Chinese President Hu Jintao here on Sunday urged leaders of the Group of 20 (G20) members to give developing nations a bigger say in global economic governance. Hu made the remarks while meeting Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles Zenawi to discuss the expansion of all-round cooperation between China and Africa on the sidelines of the G20 Los Cabos summit, which is scheduled from Monday to Tuesday.

China hopes the summit could discuss the development gap between the North and the South, regard the developing nations' contribution to the world economy and their legitimate demands in an objective perspective, and take measures to ensure the development space for the developing world, said Hu.

The summit will focus on global growth and stability as the fragile world economic recovery is being threatened by the eurozone crisis and other problems.

Ethiopia and some other non-G20 members have been invited by host Mexico to attend the summit. The Chinese president also said it is an urgent task to promote development in Africa.

China has offered assistance to Africa to help improve its agriculture, infrastructure, and human resources through the Forum on China-Africa Cooperation (FOCAC), he said.

Noting that the fifth FOCAC ministerial meeting will be held in Beijing in July, Hu said China is ready to work with Africa to chart the course for their future cooperation and advance the new type of strategic partnership between the two sides.

Pakistan's hardline groups ask gov't to shoot down US drones

RAWALPINDI, 18 June — Leaders of an alliance of some religious and political parties in Pakistan on Sunday asked the government to shoot down US spy aircraft which routinely fire missiles into the country's tribal regions. The speakers at a convention in Islamabad also announced to approach the country's top court against the possible government's decision to restore the supply line for NATO forces in Afghanistan. Pakistan cut the NATO supply line last November to protest over the killing of its 24 soldiers in a US airstrike on its border posts.

Talks between Pakistan and the United States have not yet succeeded to end the stalemate and the Pentagon announced on Monday that the US has withdrawn negotiators from Islamabad. Hardline Pakistani groups have mounted pressure on the government not to reopen the NATO supply line. Leaders of the Defence of Pakistan Council (DPC) organized a convention on Sunday and its leaders urged the government not to allow the country's land routes to be used for NATO supplies. Chief of DPC Maulana Sami-ul-Haq told the gathering that the DPC will oppose any decision to reopen the NATO supply line, saying the alliance will also knock at the doors of the country's top court to stop the government from reopening of the routes for foreign troops.

"The US-led NATO is facing defeat in Afghanistan and Pakistan should avoid helping foreign troops by allowing NATO to use Pakistani land routes," he said. He demanded of the government to shoot down the US aircraft whenever they intrude into Pakistani airspace for strikes in the tribal regions. He said that no sovereign country allows other countries' aircraft to enter for attacks. Other speakers also support the country's closure of Pakistani land routes for NATO troops.

Former intelligence chief Hamid Gul told the convention that the US and its Western allies are at the verge of a defeat in Afghanistan and that is why Americans are now talking to the Taliban.—Xinhua

Israel may fit drones with sensor that pinpoints terror sites

JERUSALEM, 18 June — The Israel Air Force is testing a new sensor designed to enable its Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAVs) to spot underground tunnels and other well-concealed assets used by militant groups, The Jerusalem Post reported on Sunday. UAVs, better known as drones, routinely fly reconnaissance and surveillance missions over Lebanon and the Gaza Strip, where camouflaged tunnels are used for smuggling weapons and shielding militants from airstrikes.

Developed by Elbit Systems Ltd, Israel's largest publicly traded defence electronics company, the so-called hyper-spectral sensor uses patented imaging technology that shows the wavelengths of materials, enabling drone operators to identify the unique spectral signature of potential targets, according to the report. "It means that if a bush doesn't match the natural vegetation in an area, we will be able to detect it," an IAF officer told the Post.

Elbit said it has designed the sensor for installation on its Hermes 900, a medium-sized multi-payload drone which entered service with the IAF two years ago, as well as on the older Hermes 450. Both are fitted with sophisticated electro-optic and electronic warfare gear, but the latter is thought to also be armed with missiles, having been used on various occasions to strike targets in Gaza and elsewhere.—Xinhua

More than meets the eye in people's faces

BIRMINGHAM, 18 June—People make complex judgments about others from looking at their faces, based on a range of factors beyond simply race and gender, British researchers say.

The study, funded by Britain's Economic and Social Research Council, questions a long-held belief that people quickly put anyone they meet into a limited number of social categories such as female or male; Asian, Black, Latino or White; and young or old. Kimberly Quinn at the University of Birmingham found people "see" faces in multiple ways that factor in to whether and how people categorize others.

"How we perceive faces is not just a reflection of what's in those faces," Quinn said in an ESRC release on Friday. "We are not objective; we bring our current goals and past knowledge to every new encounter. And this happens really quickly — within a couple of hundred milliseconds of seeing the face."

Categorization depends on more than just the physical features of the face in front of us, she said, but includes other information as well — such as whether the other person is already known and whether the person is believed to share other important identities with us.

Although social categories are used to gather information on faces, these can be easily undermined, she said, so people will reject simple stereotypes when something about the situation alters them to the fact the stereotype does not tell the whole story.

Quinn's findings suggest facial perception focuses on "coarse" information that is easy to detect, but then immediately starts to include more fine-grained processing as time elapses. —Internet

Rock crystals reveal volcano magma clues

BRISTOL, 18 June — British researchers say new evidence has linked seismic activity such as earthquakes around volcanoes to rising magma that could signal impending eruptions.

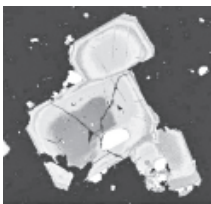

A team of volcanologists led by Kate Saunders of the University of Bristol in England said they've linked earthquake swarms at Mount St Helens in Washington with fresh magma pulses by studying rock crystals formed during the 1980-86 eruptions, ScienceNews.org reported.

These crystals of a mineral called orthopyroxene grow in zoned "rims," the researchers said, each one formed as fresh magma arrives from below the volcano and cools.

The calculated when the crystals grew and compared that with the timing of small earthquakes shaking the mountain, finding in many cases a link between the crystal rim growth and swarms of seismic activity.

Studying crystals ejected from other volcanoes could help scientists better understand how often new magma arrives, the researchers wrote in the journal Science. —Internet

Voyager space probe reaches edge of solar system

LONDON, 18 June—The Voyager 1 space probe has reached the edge of the solar system, extending its record for being the most distant man-made object in space.

According to a statement from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California, the spacecraft is sending back data to Earth showing a sharp increase in charged particles that originate from beyond the solar system.

"Voyager scientists looking at this rapid rise draw closer to an inevitable but historic conclusion — that humanity's first emissary to interstellar space is on the edge of our solar system," NASA said in the statement.

Voyager 1, along with its sister spacecraft Voyager 2, was launched in 1977 and is now about 18 billion kilometres from the Sun. It is moving at a speed of about 17 km per second and it currently takes 16 hours and 38 minutes for data to reach NASA's network on Earth. Voyager 2 is about 15 billion kilometres from the Sun.

Between them, the probes have explored all the giant planets of the solar system; Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune, as well as 48 of their moons.

They both carry a greeting for any extraterrestrial life they may bump into, a phonograph record and 12-inch gold-plated copper disk with sounds and images of life and culture on Earth selected by a group chaired by the famous space scientist Carl Sagan.

The charged particles hitting Voyager 1 originate from stars that have exploded elsewhere in the galaxy. They have been steadily rising as it approaches interstellar space but that trend has become sharper in recent months.

"From January 2009 to January 2012, there had been a gradual increase of about 25 percent in the amount of galactic cosmic rays Voyager was encountering," said Ed Stone, Voyager project scientist at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

"More recently, we have seen very rapid escalation in that part of the energy spectrum. Beginning on 7 May, the cosmic ray hits have increased five percent in a week and nine percent in a month."

The exact position of the edge of the solar system is unclear but another indicator that Voyager has entered interstellar space is expected to be a change in the direction of the magnetic fields around space, but we still do not know exactly when that someday will be," said Stone. "The latest data indicate that we are clearly in a new region where things are changing more quickly. It is very exciting. We are approaching the solar system's frontier."

the space craft. NASA scientists are looking at data from the craft to see if this predicted change has occurred.

SAN FRANCISCO, 18 June—Facebook Inc has agreed to pay $10 million to charity to settle a lawsuit that accused the site of violating users' rights to control the use of their own names, photographs and likenesses, according to court documents made public over the weekend.

The lawsuit, brought by five Facebook members, alleged the social networking site violated California law by publicizing users' "likes" of certain advertisers on its "Sponsored Stories" feature without paying them or giving them a way to opt out, the documents said.

A "Sponsored Story" is an advertisement that appears on a member's Facebook page and generally consists of another friend's name, profile picture and an assertion that the person "likes" the advertiser.

The settlement was reached last month but made public this weekend. Facebook declined to comment on Saturday.

The proposed class-action lawsuit, filed in federal court in San Jose, California, could have included nearly one of every three Americans, with billions of dollars in damages, according to previous court documents.

In the lawsuit, Facebook Chief Executive Mark Zuckerberg was quoted as saying that a trusted referral was the "Holy Grail" of advertising.

In addition, the lawsuit cited comments from Facebook chief operating officer Sheryl Sandberg, saying that the value of a "Sponsored Story" advertisement was at least twice and up to three times the value of a standard Facebook.com ad without a friend endorsement.

US District Judge Lucy

Koh said the plaintiffs had shown economic injury could occur through Facebook's use of their names, photographs and likenesses.

"California has long recognized a right to protect one's name and likeness against appropriation by others for their advantage," Koh wrote. The settlement arrangement is known as a cypres settlement, meaning the settlement funds can go to charity.

Motorola Solutions to buy computing pioneer Psion

LONDON, 18 June—Motorola Solutions Inc said on Friday it had agreed to buy Psion Plc, the British company that pioneered portable computing with its "Organiser" device in the 1980s, for $200 million to expand its business with industrial clients. The US maker of two-way radios and public safety equipment agreed to pay 88 pence in cash for each Psion share, a premium of 45.5 percent on Thursday's 60.5p closing price. Psion today makes rugged and vehicle mounted computers for industrial use after it withdrew from the consumer market more than 10 years ago.

But it remains best known for its personal digital assistants, a class of device it founded with the Organizer in 1984. The Organizer combined a clock with a database that could store information without the need for mains power. Later PDAs made by the company had clam-shell designs and they attracted the attention of many third-party software developers. Psion's Organizer pre-dated the more widely known Palm Pilot PDA, which was launched in the mid 1990s.

The personal organizer category has since been superseded by smartphones such as the BlackBerry from Research In Motion Ltd and the iPhone from Apple Inc, which incorporate much of the capabilities of organizers as well as support for email, web access and phone calls. Shares in Motorola Solutions were up 69 cents or 1.5 percent at 448.04 while Psion was up 45 percent at 87.5p. —Reuters

GE eyes German medium-sized acquisition by year-end

FRANKFURT, 18 June—General Electric Co (GE N) aims to buy a medium-sized business in Germany in the next six months to expand its technological footprint, German daily Sueddeutsche Zeitung reported, citing a manager at the US conglomerate. “We hope to have managed a takeover by the end of the year,” the paper cited Christoph Reimnitz, in charge of strategy and M&A in Germany and eastern Europe, assaying in an article published on Saturday.

He did not provide details on possible acquisition targets but said he preferred buying family-owned businesses to takeovers of stock-listed companies or assets put up for sale by private equity firms.

GE commonly spends about $5 billion to $6 billion a year on acquisitions. Reimnitz declined to say how much of that could go toward purchases in Germany this year but told the newspaper

Pumpkins, rutabagas lead to most injuries

LONDON, 18 June—The kitchen is where some of the most serious home accidents occur and cuts are among the most common types of injury, a British safety expert says.

Sheila Merrill, public health adviser at the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents in England, said tens of thousands of people are treated each year in British hospital emergency rooms for cuts that occur while cooking. The Daily Telegraph reported.

A survey of more than 2,000 customers of takeaway service Just-Eat — taken to coincide with National Food Safety Week — found root vegetables pumpkins, rutabagas and turnips topped the list of most dangerous produce.

Almost 25 percent said pumpkins were the toughest vegetable to skin and chop while one-fifth said rutabagas were the most dangerous.

Two-in-5 said they had injured themselves trying to imitate TV chefs when slicing vegetables, the survey said.

To prevent kitchen accidents make sure knives are sharp and in good condition, use a vegetable peeler where appropriate and do not rush chopping, Merrill advised. Keep knives away from children and always supervise children when they help in food preparation, she said.

Asian stocks rise after Greek vote

TOKYO, 18 June—Asian stock prices have soared following the victory of probailout parties in Greece’s Sunday elections.

In Tokyo, the Nikkei average of 225 selected issues rose by more than 2 percent on Monday morning. In Hong Kong, trading also began with a rally of more than 2 percent. Markets in South Korea and Singapore were up by one to 2 percent. Market sources say concerns over a Greek exit from the eurozone have weakened for now, but investors remain cautious over the chances of a coalition government. They are also waiting for more details on the modalities of bank bailouts in Spain.

On currency markets, investors are buying back the euro and Asian currencies they regarded as risky. The euro has climbed back above the 100-yen mark in Tokyo. —NHK

Work-related mental illness cases hit new record

TOKYO, 18 June—Japanese authorities have recognized a record number of workers as developing mental illnesses due to stress in their workplaces. The labour ministry says 325 people became eligible for workers’ compensation for depression and other mental conditions in the year through March. The figure is up 17 on the year. Sixty-six of them committed suicide or attempted to kill themselves.

Another 20 developed symptoms after experiencing the powerful earthquake and tsunami that hit northeastern Japan in March last year. By age, 112 of the sufferers were in their 30s while 69 were in their 20s.

The most common cause was excessive workloads or changes in assignments at 16 percent, followed by severe accidents or disasters at 15 percent, and bullying and harassment at 12 percent. Kansai University Professor Koji Morioka says companies are recruiting fewer workers, so junior employees get less training but are asked to do the same jobs as more experienced colleagues. He cites this situation as one of the possible reasons why young people develop mental illnesses. —NHK

Developing world needs euro crisis defence: Zoellick

LONDON, 18 June—Developing nations must be ready for a severe global financial crisis should the euro zone fail to cope with its current problems, outgoing World Bank chief Robert Zoellick said in an interview published online on Saturday.

Policymakers and investors are nervously awaiting the outcome of this weekend’s Greek election, which could empower radical leftists threatening to tear up the terms of a bailout deal and send shockwaves through financial markets.

Developing countries needed to “prepare for the uncertainty coming out of the euro zone and the wider financial markets”, Zoellick told Britain’s Observer newspaper. “It will be better if they can avoid piling up short-term debts that can come due in volatile periods and look to the fundamentals of future growth—infrastructure and human capital,” he said.

The World Bank had been increasing its lending to support Bulgaria’s banking system—one of the most exposed to Greece—and acting to prevent a credit crunch in southeast Europe, the paper reported Zoellick as saying.

The bank was also taking unspecified measures to protect countries in north Africa that were vulnerable to Europe’s debt crisis and trade finance facilities were being strengthened for francophone west Africa, the newspaper added. “Uncertainty in markets is now starting to increase costs for developing countries,” Zoellick said.

“The ripple effects are making everybody’s life harder.” In a reference to tensions in the euro zone over Greece’s future, Zoellick said:

although the country’s own calculations place it second to Nigeria.

Oil companies, including market leaders Rosneft, LUKOIL and TNK-BP, have been investing hundreds of millions of dollars to meet the government’s target of increasing associated gas utilization.

“I believe the companies will reach 95 percent in 2014,” the minister said, adding that so far only Russia’s fourth-largest crude producer Surgutneftegaz and mid-sized oil company Tatneft have managed to flare gas within the required volumes.

Russia oil firms face heavy fines for gas flaring

MOSCOW, 18 June—Russian oil companies are facing fines of hundreds of millions of dollars or more for polluting the atmosphere with excess amounts of flared gas, the newly appointed resources minister said on Saturday.

Russia, the world’s top energy producer, set a target for oil companies not to flare off more than 5 percent of the associated petroleum gas (APG) they produce as a byproduct of crude extraction by 2012.

Sticking to the previous government’s policy, Sergei

Donskoy told TV channel Russia 24 the threatened fines were in the “tens of billions of roubles” range. “It’s hard to do a (more detailed) assessment at the moment,” he told TV channel Russia 24.

Industry insiders and experts had expected the target to be eased given the absence of the infrastructure needed to recycle APG.

Donskoy was appointed minister for Natural Resources and Ecology last month following Vladimir Putin’s return to the Kremlin.

“We expect first estimates (of fines) after gathering data on the first quarter,” he said, adding that on average, Russian industry uses only 76 percent of APG it produces against the 95 percent target.

Russia flares around 20 billion cubic meters of associated petroleum gas every year, or approximately one-third of the total amount extracted at the country’s oilfields. Trapping this gas can result in vast emission cuts, as well as increased gas sales.

Some experts rank Russia as the world’s leading flarer,

India holds interest rates, despite slowing growth

MUMBAI, 18 June—India’s central bank kept its main interest rates unchanged on Monday, despite facing pressure for a cut to spur borrowing and investment in the face of a worrying economic slowdown. The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) said the benchmark repo rate, at which it lends to commercial banks, would remain at 8.0 percent, while the reverse repo rate, which it pays banks for deposits, would stay at 7.0 percent. The cash reserve ratio — the sum commercial banks keep on deposit — was also unchanged at 4.75 percent. The move went against most economists’ expectations of a further easing in rates by the RBI following its first reduction in three years in April, amid a host of economic problems for the once-booming Asian giant.

“While growth in 2011-12 has moderated significantly, headline inflation remains above levels... consistent with sustainable growth,” the RBI said in a statement. The bank has been under pressure to help revive growth after the economy grew just 5.3 percent in January to March, its slowest quarterly expansion in nine years. But hopes of an aggressive cut by the policy-makers in Mumbai were tempered by data last week showing a marginal rise in wholesale price inflation in May to 7.55 percent on an annual basis. India cut its main interest rates by a higher-than-expected 50 basis points in April in a bid to spur faltering growth, after keeping them on hold since late last year. Rates were previously hiked 13 times from March 2010 in one of the most aggressive monetary policy tightening drives of any major economy. —Internet

At least two killed in attack on Israel-Egypt border

JERUSALEM, 18 June — An Israeli citizen and at least one militant were killed in an attack on the Egyptian border on Monday, Israeli media and the military said.

"A terrorist squad opened gunfire and possibly also fired an anti-tank rocket at an area where (Israel) is constructing the border fence," Israeli military spokesman Yoav Mordechai told Army Radio. "Soldiers arrived on the scene and killed one terrorist," he said.

Army Radio said that an

Israeli workman was killed by the militants, but Mordechai would only say "there is a small number of fatalities."

He said the attack happened about 30 kilometres from the Gaza Strip on the Egyptian border.

It was not immediately clear if the gunmen crossed through from Egypt or from the southern Gaza Strip and no militant group claimed responsibility for the attack.

19 al-Qaeda militants killed by Yemeni army troops

ADEN, 18 June — As many as 19 militants of the al-Qaeda terror group were killed on Saturday during gunbattles with army troops in Yemen's southeastern Province of Shabwa, a security official said. The intensive gun fights took place around two major entrances of the al-Qaeda-controlled Azzan town in Shabwa Province, leaving at least 19 militants killed and several others injured, the local security official told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

"Hundreds of army troops are gearing up to begin an all-out offensive on al-Qaeda last bastion in Shabwa," the official said, adding "after retaking the terrorists lost two key bastions in neighbouring Abyan Province, scores of the al-Qaeda militants have fled to Azzan town in Shabwa." Army troops met stiff resistance from the al-Qaeda fighters in Azzan, which has been under militant control for more than a year, injuring at least eight soldiers, a military commander said.

"The al-Qaeda militants are still confronting the army. They won't lose their stronghold. Many families had fled since the early morning for fear of air strikes," the military commander told Xinhua anonymously. Last Tuesday, the Yemeni army backed by pro-government militiamen scored its first major victory against the al-Qaeda, retaking the towns of Jaar and Zinjibar in Abyan Province, which were captured by the terror group in mid-2011 amid a wave of unrest sweeping the country.

The Yemeni government troops have waged an intensive military campaign last month, with the support of the United States and Yemen's oil-rich neighbour Saudi Arabia, to uproot the al-Qaeda militants from the southern regions. The Yemen-based al-Qaeda wing, locally known as the Partisans of Sharia (Islamic Law), threatened to spread the fight and suicide attacks all over Yemen after it was forced to abandon its main strongholds in Abyan.—Xinhua

DENVER, 18 June — Additional crews were joining the fight on Saturday against a wildfire in northern Colorado that has scorched about 85 square miles and destroyed at least 181 homes, the most in state history. The High Park Fire burning 15 miles west of Fort Collins surpasses the Fourmile Canyon wildfire, which destroyed 169 homes represents an increase of more than 100 firefighters from a day earlier.

The lightning-caused blaze, which is believed to have killed a 62-year-old woman whose body was found in her cabin, was 20 percent contained. The fire's incident commander said full containment could be two to four weeks away. Fire information officer Brett Haberstick said hot and dry conditions were expected to continue, but crews have made progress in containing a 200-acre spot fire that erupted on Thursday afternoon north of the Cache La Poudre River, a critical line of defence against northward growth.

"Two 20-person hotshot crews worked throughout the day to secure lines around the perimeter of this spot fire," the officials said in a release. Firefighters have extinguished other incursions north of the river, but the most recent one appeared to be more serious. National Weather Service meteorologist Kyle Fredin said some rain was expected in the fire zone Saturday evening, but it will not be enough to put the fire out. "We need a rain that will really last all day," he said. "But it's better than dry wind at this point." But crews were bracing for difficult conditions Sunday with wind gusts expected to hit 50 mph along ridge tops and in Poudre Canyon and temperatures in the 90s. The fire was reported June 9 and has since raced through large swaths of private and US Forest Service land. It was 45 percent contained late Saturday.—Internet

Bronze Age necropolis unearthed in Serbia

BELGRADE, 18 June — A 4000-year old Bronze Age necropolis has been unearthed during a road construction work just outside the Serbia town of Vranje, 275 kilometres south of Belgrade, reported the Serbian news agency Tanjug on Saturday.

According to Aleksandar Bulatovic, coordinator of archeological research and preservation on the Corridor 10 auto route, the site contains the remains of deceased individuals who were burned in funeral pyres.

"The necropolis dates back to the early Bronze Age. Based on our initial assessments, it is between 2,000 and 1,800 BC, and it is significant because it is the only fully reserved necropolis from this period in the central Balkans," said Bulatovic.

The site also revealed a number of unusual ceramic objects, and containers whose use is yet unknown. "It is the most important discovery made to date on the Corridor 10 route," he added. Archeological findings uncovered during the road construction will be later displayed at the National Museum in Vranje.—Xinhua

Woman sentenced to death for infant trafficking

KUNMING, 18 June — A court in southwest China's Yunnan Province sentenced a woman to death for infant trafficking on Friday. Jiang Kaizhi, 51, the prime culprit of an infant trafficking ring, organized a group of people to abduct babies in Yunnan and sell them in central Henan province from late 2009 to August 2010, according to the verdict issued by the intermediate people's court in the city of Qujing.

Thirty-five other members of the group, aged between 20 and 65, on Friday received penalties ranging from life imprisonment to a three-year jail term for abducting, transporting and trafficking infants. Jiang could get about 30,000 yuan (4,711 US dollars) for selling a baby boy while the profit for trafficking a baby girl was more than 20,000 yuan, said the verdict. 15 missing after boat sinks in Indonesia

JAKARTA, 18 June — Fifteen people were missing after their small wooden boat sank early on Sunday in heavy seas off eastern Indonesia, an official said. The boat, which had 27 passengers and crew on board, went down after it was battered by waves up to five metres (16 feet) high in Maluku Province, provincial search-and-rescue team head Amin Bin Tongke told AFP. "Twelve of 27 people on board were rescued alive. We are still looking for around 15 missing," he said.

The boat, which was also carrying food and building materials, left Ambon City late Saturday but was lashed by towering waves and strong winds two hours into its journey, National Disaster Mitigation Agency spokesman Sutopo Purwo Nugroho said in a text message. "The boat's engine stalled and the boat broke up and sank," he added. Beijing-Shanghai high-speed train ticket prices cut

BEIJING, 18 June — Travellers will enjoy discounts when buying business-class tickets and premium seats on Beijing-Shanghai high-speed trains from 27 June, according to the Ministry of Railways. Business-class tickets for the 85 high-speed trains operating on the country's busiest railway line will be reduced by 10 to 20 percent, while tickets for premium seats will be cut by 10 percent, according to a statement posted on the website of the ministry.

After the price cut, business-class tickets will be lowered to between 1,400 yuan (222.22 US dollars) and 1,575 yuan from the current 1,750 yuan. Prices of premium seats will stand at 949 yuan, down from the current 1,055 yuan. The discounts will vary according to different trains, the time of ticket purchases and the day of departure, according to the statement.

The ministry's move aims to attract more passengers to business class, which has been suffering from low attendance. However, Zhao Jian, professor at the Beijing Jiaotong University, said the new policy may have little effect as the discounts are not big enough. He suggested that railway authorities instead adopt a floating pricing system like airline companies to maintain competitiveness. — Xinhua

Nepali police intensifies proactive measures to check drug trafficking

KATHMANDU, 18 June — Nepali police have intensified proactive measures to check drug trafficking in the capital Kathmandu Valley, local Press reported on Saturday.

Records at the Narcotic Drug Control Law Enforcement Unit (NDCLEU) showed the unit seized 2,877 kg of hashish from drug traffickers in 2012, against last year's haul of 1,271 kg.

According to statistics, narco police have seized 500 gm of opium and 4.216 kg of heroin so far this year, while they seized 7.857 kg drug in 2011.

Police have held 45 drug traffickers and dealers, including three foreigners, in separate operations in the Kathmandu Valley so far this year. They caught a total of 136 drug operatives, including 18 foreigners, last year.

Officials warned that Nepal is on the verge of becoming a transit for international drug trade.

Drug trafficking, especially hashish, to neighbouring and third countries continues unabated despite frequent busts of drug rackets. The demand for "Nepal-made hashish" is high in the international drug market, thanks to "its quality and potency".

Officials lament that people involved in drug smuggling seem to be ready to take the risk of arrests and jail as international rackets promise them hefty sums.

According to NDCLEU, quality arrests and seizures are doing little to control drug smuggling.

"Racketeers working on the top layer have been selling dreams to their agents in Nepal. Growing demand for drugs is also to blame," an official was quoted by Saturday's THT Online as saying.

He underscored the need to raise anti-drug awareness at local, regional, national and international levels. "If demand for drugs amongst the users decreases, it will automatically discourage the racketeers," he suggested.

Drug smugglers adopt a new modus operandi every time to push hashish into the capital from other parts of the country before shipping it abroad.

Official says illegal fishing increases in Fiji

SUVA, 18 June — Illegal, Unreported and Unregistered (IUU) fishing is rapidly increasing in Fiji, Fisheries Department Director Sanaila Naqali said on Saturday. Naqali revealed the situation as the Fijian government is ready to host the 3rd meeting of African, Caribbean and Pacific Group of States (ACP) ministers responsible for fisheries at the Sofitel Resort in the western tourist town of Nadi on 16-19 June.

Fiji government is aware of IUU fishing but they are facing difficulties in tracking these networks down, Naqali said, adding they have only destroyed 10 IUU networks to date. Fiji has been coming up with strategic plans to stop them, said the official. Inoke Wainiqolo, permanent secretary of Fiji's Ministry of Fisheries, echoed Naqali by saying that this has been a serious concern for global fisheries as it undermines efforts to conserve and manage fish stocks.

According to Fiji's Ministry of Information, the 3rd ACP meeting will be attended by ACP ministers responsible for fisheries, senior officials from its member states and international organizations such as Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), United Nations Development Fund and World Bank. — Xinhua

Four missing climbers presumed dead after avalanche

WASHINGTON, 18 June — An avalanche on Mount McKinley swept a Japanese climbing team off a hill as they tried to descend on a rope line, leaving four presumed dead. One climber survived after tumbling 60 feet into a crevasse. US National Park Service officials said on Saturday that five people were travelling as one rope team early Thursday morning as part of a Miyagi Workers Alpine Federation expedition on the Alaska mountain. Park Service spokeswoman Maureen McLaughlin said Hitoshi Ogi, 69, survived the fall. He was able to climb out.

The other four fell into the avalanche debris and haven't been seen since. The climbers are presumed dead by either snow burial or injuries suffered in falls. Snowfall and wind have impeded a search for the missing climbers. Ogi spoke to Park Service employees after the event. He said the climbers were descending the mountain together when the avalanche began, McLaughlin said. They sped up, trying to get down the mountain faster, but the rope connecting them broke when the avalanche struck.

Ogi was the lowest person on the rope team. He looked for the other four but couldn't find them. "He wasn't sure of all the events," McLaughlin said, adding that Ogi spoke through a translator and was exhausted. The four missing climbers include 64-year-old Yoshiaki Kato, 50-year-old Masako Suda, 56-year-old Michiko Suzuki, and 63-year-old Tamao Suzuki. There was new snow on the route, but the weather on Thursday was calm, McLaughlin said. — Reuters

Thirty injured as car crashes into crowd in US city

WASHINGTON, 18 June — Up to 30 people were injured on Friday night in Lima, the US state of Ohio when a woman drove her car into a crowded rally on the city's Town Square, local media reported on Saturday.

No fatalities were reported, though many of the victims suffered injuries to their legs, heads and necks. All but four of the victims have been discharged from hospital as of Saturday, while two remain in serious but stable condition, the reports said.

Local police launched an investigation, but so far have been unable to explain what caused the accident. Witnesses said the driver drove her car past a beer truck and hit the "Trinity" sculpture on the square at full speed.

Some rallygoers picked up the Oldsmobile sedan to free several victims pinned underneath, the reports added.

The crowd attending the Friday rally, sponsored by ArtSpace Lima, was larger than normal because of the nice weather and the presence of a popular band, The Earthquakers.

Public safety alert packed in 17 syllables

The Arizona Transportation Department is looking for a few good poets to alert the public about the dangers of driving in dust storms.

The department challenged its 14,000 Twitter followers to write a haiku about driving safe during the storms, sometimes called haboobs, The Arizona Republic in Phoenix reported.

The challenge to make public safety poetic has drawn three-line, 17-syllable haikus from hundreds of followers, the newspaper said on 14 June.

One entry: "Dust storms are deadly / Pull over, turn off lights, wait / A sear becomes sky."

The challenge is part of the department's "Pull Aside Stay Alive" campaign on safe driving during monsoon season, which officially began.

"We've never done anything like this before, so we weren't sure what to expect, and this is something different from the government," Timothy Tait, the department's assistant communication director, told the Republic. "It's taking a humorous, lighthearted approach for a serious topic."

Russell Brand slams TV presenter for 'making mum cry' with Katy Perry question

WASHINGTON, 18 June—Russell Brand has blasted Graham Norton for enquiring about his failed marriage to Katy Perry in front of his mother, which left her teary eyed. After the 49-year-old presenter made the query, Russell refuted the claim that the issue "just came up".

He said: "It did not come up, mate. You brought it up."

Brand asserted that

Norton should have warned him before filming, that he would mention his divorce that took place just after 14 months of marriage to Perry.

What I would have done mate is come up to me before the show and gone: 'Eh, listen. It's a bit odd that your ex-missus was on last week. I might mention it. Is that OK?' And I would have gone: 'Of course it is.'

"But in all of the chatting and the research, no-one mentioned it," he said.

However, Norton

Russell Brand

refuted the accusations and insisted that it would have been weird not to enquire about the comedian's marriage, as Perry made an appearance on the show last week. "If I had not asked anything it would have been weird because Katy was on the show last week. That's the only reason," he said. Internet

Kim Kardashian proud of self-made empire

WASHINGTON, 18 June—Kim Kardashian has claimed that despite being born wealthy, she has built her own empire and deserves every bit of the success she has achieved.

The 'Keeping Up With The Kardashians' star has encouraged her fans to believe in their own ideas.

"Yes I was born rich; it was a classic Californian lineage: lavishness and ostentation, luxury mansions with pools, private clubs, exclusive friendships, and luxury cars," Contactmusic quoted her as telling L'Uomo Vogue.

"Despite the affluence, at only 31 I've been able to build my own empire in the world of entertainment and, although looks and friendships are important, I want the new generation to understand that if you don't believe in yourself and in your own ideas, you go nowhere," she said.

The reality star who

helped her entire family shoot to fame, insists that she didn't have her own identity as a youngster.

"I've always been very shy, ever since I was a girl: I copied and did everything my sister Kourtney asked me to do, even when at school she would put me in embarrassing situations with boys. She was my idol," she added.—Internet

Kenneth Branagh knighted by queen

LONDON, 18 June—Actor Kenneth Branagh said he was thrilled at being knighted by Queen Elizabeth as part of the sovereign's annual birthday honors.

Branagh and fellow actor Kate Winslet were among the dozens of Britons up for various royal honours on Saturday.

Branagh, 51, star of such British films as "Henry V" and "Harry Potter," said that as a kid, he dreamed of playing soccer for Northern Ireland's national side. "I could only imagine how proud you might feel," he said. "My heart is fit to burst."

Winslet was named Commander of the British Empire, joining entertainers such as actor Jenny Agutter, Take That singer Gary Barlow and songwriter Richard Stilgoe who were bestowed the Order of the British Empire.

The conglomeration of commemorations also included nearly 300 "ordinary" Britons who received the British Empire Medal, which was revived for the queen's Diamond Jubilee after being discontinued in 1991. Internet

Portugal enters last eight and Netherlands leaves stage at Euro 2012

KHARKIV, (Ukraine), 18 June — Portugal beat the Netherlands 2-1 to enter the quarterfinals of the Euro 2012 Championship on Sunday night. Cristiano Ronaldo's goals from each half shattered the Dutch dream to become the first ever to qualify from a Euro section with three points after Rafael van der Vaart's left-footed opener. The tournament favourite, who are also the World Cup runner-up, stayed bottom of Group B without a single point after three defeats and left the Euro stage with huge regrets. It was the first time for the Netherlands failing to progress from the group stage since their triumph in 1988.

"It's a disappointing result. I'm responsible for it. The same team did very intense. I tried to make the team more fast and younger. But they did not work in the first game," said the Dutch coach Bert van Marwijk, blaming the 1-0 defeat to Denmark in their opening match as the turning point. While Portugal, with two victories in a row, booked their berth in the last-eight following Germany, who beat Denmark in the same time to top the so-called "Death Group" with three wins. "We are proud to play as a team. We played with a great united organization as we did in all these three games. That's why we won and why I feel proud of my team," commented Portugal head coach Paulo Bento. Portugal, who will meet the Czech in the next round, have so far kept an overwhelming record against the Netherlands in the two decades which now reads seven wins, three draws and only one defeat.

The Netherlands, who were the most prolific side in qualifying stage by scoring 37 goals in 10 games, failed to rediscover their scoring touch in the group battle by only scoring two. Facing the nearly impossible mission to beat Portugal by a two-goal margin and rely on Germany to beat Denmark, Van Marwijk fielded onto all his attacking talents including Wesley Sneijder, Robin van Persie, Arjen Robben and Klaas-Jan Huntelaar. The Netherlands made a dream start after 11 minutes when the attack midfielder curled a left-footed shot from the edge of the area after Arjen Robben cut in from the left to make a neat pass.

Portugal levelled the score in the 28th minute when Ronaldo found the space in the area due to a loose defence from the opponents to beat the keeper Maarten Stekelenburg with a cool finish. Ronaldo sealed the victory with 16 minutes left when the Real Madrid winger dribbled past one defender in the area and rounded the keeper to net with ease.

"It's great pleasure for me. But without the team's efforts, we won't win it. Next game against the Czech we will see what happens," said the Portugal's top star. —Xinhua

Melanie Oudin receives wild card into Wimbledon

LONDON, 18 June — American Melanie Oudin has received a wild card into Wimbledon. The 20-year-old was a quarterfinalist at the 2009 US Open but has struggled to regain that form. On Sunday, she reached the American Melanie Oudin final at the Aegon Classic.

Wimbledon officials announced on Sunday that Grega Zemlja of Slovenia had received the final men's wild-card spot in the tournament, which starts on 25 June. Players already announced included former champion Lleyton Hewitt and Tommy Haas, who beat Roger Federer in the Halle final on Sunday. Germany enter last eight with three straight victories

LVIV, (Ukraine), 18 June — Germany beat Denmark 2-1 on Sunday to score the full nine points from three games to advance to the quarterfinals as winners of Group B in the Euro 2012 tournament.

After a 1-1 first half tie, Denmark who lost to Portugal 3-2 earlier in the group, tried to import some urgency into their game, knowing a draw would still nullify their hope of advancing as Portugal then led 2-1 over the Netherlands. Thus, Germany punished them in ruthless fashion as young full-back Lars Bender slotted the winner past Stephan Andersen for his first international goal in the 80th minute.

"Apart from my goal it was a great day for me. It was my first appearance at Euro and I scored the winning goal to help us reach the quarterfinals. I will remember this day for a very long time," said defender Bender. Lukas Podolski gave Germany the lead on his 100th cap as he scored the opener in the 19th minute after Thomas Muller turned in the box and cut the ball back for the Arsenal striker who produced an emphatic finish from close range. Michael Krohn-Dehli found the equaliser for Denmark with a firm header from a corner five minutes later.

With the win, Germany qualify as group B winners and will face Greece in the quarterfinals on 22 June in Gdansk, while Portugal who eventually beat the Netherlands 2-1, progress as runners-up and will take on the Czech Republic in Warsaw on 21 June.

"Against Greece, it will be a completely different match," said Germany coach Joachim Low, "Nevertheless, they play a very similar game to the Danes. They are very dangerous in attack and strong in defence." —Xinhua

Cornet beats Wickmayer to win Gastein Ladies title

Alize Cornet of France

BAD GASTEIN, (Austria), 18 June — Alize Cornet of France defeated Yanina Wickmayer of Belgium 7-5, 7-6 (1) on Sunday to win the Gastein Ladies for her first title in four years. The seventh-seeded Cornet, ranked 73rd, earned her second career title after winning in Budapest, Hungary, in 2008.

She is 2-3 in WTA finals. She lost the final in Strasbourg last month. "This was the tournament I wanted to win this year," Cornet said. "I can't believe I didn't win a title for the last four years so now it's all happiness."

Walcott doubtful for Ukraine match

LONDON, 18 June — England were waiting anxiously on Sunday to see whether Theo Walcott, their star performer in the 3-2 win over Sweden on Friday, would be fit to play in their crucial final Euro 2012 Group D match with co-hosts Ukraine on Tuesday. The 23-year-old — who scored and then created Danny Welbeck's winner against the Swedes to put England second on goal difference to France in the group — suffered a recurrence of a hamstring injury in training on Sunday.

"Unfortunately he had a slight setback in training today," Hodgson told the BBC. "He felt the hamstring that kept him out for so long at the end of last season and that we were slightly concerned about when he came to us. But we have been lucky that nothing has occurred with that.

"In the little training session we had today we had to take the precaution of taking him from the field because he felt a slight tightness there." Walcott will now be assessed by England's medical staff before Hodgson makes a final decision. England just need a point from their match to guarantee a place in the quarter-finals while Ukraine realistically need to win to progress.

Simpson triumphs by one shot at US Open

Webb Simpson of the US receives the US Open Championship Trophy from the USGA President Glen D Nager during the final round of the 2012 US Open golf tournament on the Lake Course at the Olympic Club in San Francisco, California on 17 June, 2012.

SAN FRANCISCO, 18 June — American Webb Simpson clinched his first major title with a nerve-jangling one-shot victory at the 112th US Open on Sunday after overhauling overnight leaders Jim Furyk and Graeme McDowell.

The 26-year-old Simpson, who triumphed twice on the PGA Tour last year, charged into contention with four birdies in five holes around the turn on the way to a two-under-par 68.

On a foggy afternoon at the brutally difficult Olympic Club, Simpson coolly parred his last eight holes to finish at one-over 281 as the other main contenders faded over the closing stretch.

"It was pretty nerve wracking," Simpson told NBC television after earning the winner's cheque for $1.44 million in the year's second major. "I knew it was a tough golf course."

"I had to go out and do as well as I could. I probably prayed more the last three holes than I've ever done in my life. It helped me stay calm and get in with two under."

Simpson, who got up and down from greenside rough to save par at the last, became the ninth consecutive first-time winner of a major, and the 15th different player in succession to claim one of golf's blue ribbon events.

Northern Irishman McDowell, US Open champion at Pebble Beach two years ago, closed with a six-bogey 73 to finish joint second with little known American Michael Thompson (67).

Only 1 in 4 with mental illness treated

LONDON, 18 June—Three out of four people with mental illness in the UK are receiving no treatment, experts have said in a new report. The report, published by the London School of Economics (LSE), says the lack of treatment for people suffering from mental health problems is the most "glaring case of health inequality" in Britain.

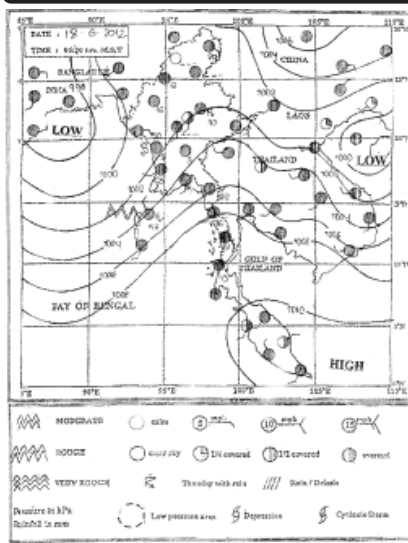

Among people under the age of 65, mental illness now accounts for nearly half of all ill health suffered by people in Britain and is generally more debilitating than most chronic physical diseases, the report published on Monday concluded. Effective psychological therapies exist but are not widely available and only a quarter of sufferers are receiving treatment, the report by the LSE's Mental Health Policy Group found.

It is thought that around two-fifths of patients suffering from anxiety or depression can recover if they are treated by methods such as cognitive behavioural therapy. The authors—a distinguished team of economists, psychologists, doctors and NHS managers—say that if such treatments were more widely available it would cost the NHS little or nothing overall because it would produce savings in other areas of healthcare.

They estimate that mental health problems which manifest themselves in physical symptoms cost the NHS at least ten billion pounds.—Internet

Police investigate 'assault' by tennis's Nalbandian

LONDON, 18 June—Police are investigating a complaint of alleged assault against Argentina's David Nalbandian after a line judge was injured when the tennis player kicked an advertising hoarding. The 30-year-old was defaulted from the Queen's Club final in west London on Sunday for angrily kicking an advertising board at line judge Andrew McDougall which left the official suffering a gashed and bloodied leg. Scotland Yard said on Monday: We are aware of an incident at the Aegon Championships on 17 June. A complaint has been made and the Metropolitan Police Service is now investigating.

"The allegation is of assault." Nalbandian, who had won on Sunday's first set 7-6 (7/3) against Croatia's Marin Cilic, had just lost his serve to fall 4-3 down in the second when he reacted with a frustrated kick at the board, which was just in front of McDougall.

A stunned and angry

McDougall then rolled up his trousers to reveal a bloody gash on his leg before remonstrating with Nalbandian.

Officials immediately disqualified Nalbandian "due to unsportsmanlike behaviour" and Cilic was declared the champion of the ATP grasscourt event, a warm-up for Wimbledon, now the only one of tennis's four 'Majors' played on grass, which starts next week.

Nalbandian was stripped of his runners-up cheque, worth 44,945 euros ($56,802), and 150 ATP ranking points he would have earned as a beaten finalist.

He could also be hit with a 10,000 euro ($12,638) fine, which will be decided by ATP chiefs at a later date.

But he could also face an eight-week ban having also been fined $8,000 for throwing water at an Australian Open tournament worker in January following a five-set defeat by America's John Isner.—Internet
