Pressure mounts on Big Phil after Palmeiras lose again

RIO DE JANEIRO, 13 Sept— Pressure mounted on Palmeiras coach Luiz Felipe Scolari after his team lost 3-1 at Vasco da Gama on Wednesday, leaving them seven points adrift of safety in the Brazilian championship relegation zone.

The club's football director Cesar Sampaio said a meeting would take place on Thursday to discuss the future of former Brazil, Portugal and Chelsea coach Scolari, who won the 2002 World Cup with his country.

"We're all very sad and worried about the situation," Sampaio told reporters after the game.

Scolari, usually known as Felipao (Big Phil) said he had not contemplated losing his job.

"The idea of quitting has not crossed my mind," he said. "We have to sit down, chew it over and see what we can do differently."

Luan headed in Tiago's cross to give Palmeiras the lead in 23rd minute, only for Carlos Tenorio to pull Vasco level with a close-range effort six minutes later.

The first-half ended with jeers from a sparse Vasco crowd who also protested against club president Roberto Dinamite. Vasco, under interim coach Gauchao after Cristovao Borges was sacked earlier this week, went ahead six minutes after the break with a Nilson header.—Reuters

Obama vows justice after US envoy killed in Libya

US

WASHINGTON, 13 Sept — President Barack Obama vowed on Wednesday to bring to justice the killers of the US ambassador and three other diplomats in Libya as he sought to avoid election-year fallout from an attack that cast a spotlight on his administration's handling of "Arab Spring" unrest.

Standing in the White House Rose Garden, Obama condemned the attack in Benghazi as "outrageous and shocking" but insisted it would not harm relations with Libya's new elected government, which took power in July after rebel forces backed by NATO air power overthrew Muammar Gaddafi last year. The targeting of American diplomats — in militant violence sparked by a US-made anti-Islamic film — quickly reverberated in the US presidential campaign and could have implications for public attitudes toward revolutions across the Arab world.

In an unusually harsh exchange so soon after a national tragedy, Republican candidate Mitt Romney slammed the White House's response to violent attacks in Libya and Egypt, and the president retorted that his campaign rival had a tendency to "shoot first and aim later." Obama, apparently seeking to seize the initiative in the midst of a close-fought race for re-election in November, pledged in his Rose Garden appearance to work with the Libyan government to "see that justice is done for this terrible act."

"And make no mistake: justice will be done," Obama said, with Secretary of State Hillary Clinton at his side. He ordered increased security at US embassies around the world, and a Marine anti-terrorist team was dispatched to boost security for US personnel in Libya. Also, during a regularly scheduled call with Hamid Karzai, president of Afghanistan, Obama discussed ensuring "that the circumstances that led to the violence in Libya and Egypt do not pose a threat to US forces or Afghans," according to the White House.

Libya attack may have been planned and organized, US officials say

WASHINGTON, 13 Sept — The attack that killed the US ambassador and three other American diplomats in Benghazi, Libya, may have been planned and organized in advance, US government officials said on Wednesday. The officials said there were indications that members of a militant faction calling itself Ansar al Sharia — which translates as Supporters of Islamic Law — may have been involved in organizing the attack on the US Consulate in Libya's second-largest city.

They also said some reporting from the region suggested that members of al-Qaeda's north Africa-based affiliate, known as al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb, may have been involved. "It bears the hallmarks of an organized attack" and appeared to be preplanned, one US official said. The officials asked for anonymity when discussing sensitive information. More specific details about the possible role of militant groups or cells in the attack were not immediately available. Later Wednesday, a US official told Reuters that the US military is moving two destroyers toward the Libyan coast, giving the Obama administration flexibility for any future action against Libyan targets.

The USS Laboon, which had been making a port call in Crete, could be in position within hours. The other destroyer, the USS McFaul, was a couple of days away, said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity. Both ships were armed with Tomahawk missiles, which were used extensively by NATO against fallen Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi's air defences last year. On the attack in Benghazi, one US official noted that in the wake of the collapse of the government of the late Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi last year, Libyan government arsenals were looted, making small arms and more sophisticated weapons available both to potential militants and black marketeers.

Some US officials

cautioned against assuming that the Benghazi attack, or a similarly timed violent protest at the US Embassy in Cairo, were deliberately organized to coincide with the anniversary of the 11 Sept, 2001, attacks carried out by al-Qaeda in Washington and New York. US and European officials said that in contrast to the Benghazi attack, which some investigators say may have been calculated and organized, the attack on the US Embassy in Cairo appeared more likely to have been a spontaneous eruption by a mob.

China condemns US diplomatic compound attack

BEIJING, 13 Sept — Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Hong Lei on Wednesday evening expressed the country's shock at attacks on a US consulate in Libya and voiced strong condemnation of the violent deeds.

"We are shocked at attacks on the US consulate in Benghazi that caused the death and injury of a number of people, including the US ambassador. And we strongly condemn the violent deeds," a Press release quoted Hong as saying.

China believes the reigning regime of Libya bears the responsibility and obligation to adopt all necessary measures to protect the life and property integrity of foreign institutions and their staff stationed in the country according to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations. Attacks on the US consulate in Benghazi on Tuesday evening killed the the US ambassador to Libya and several others and wounded more.

MEXICO CITY, 13 Sept — Countries across Latin America on Wednesday condemned the fatal attack on the US consulate in Benghazi, Libya, which killed US Ambassador Christopher Stevens and three other Americans.

Hundreds of protesters, angered by an alleged US-made movie that insults Prophet Mohammed, stormed and set ablaze the US consulate building in Benghazi on Tuesday night. Libyan authorities confirmed on Wednesday

Dutch PM Rutte wins election as pro-euro parties sweep

DUTCH

AMSTERDAM, 13 Sept — Dutch Prime Minister Mark Rutte won a closely contested election as voters handed pro-European parties a sweeping victory, shunning the radical fringes and dispelling concerns that eurosceptics could gain sway in a core euro zone country. With 96 percent of votes counted, Rutte's centre-right Liberals won 41 seats in the 150-member lower house, a slender two-seat lead over the centre-left Labour Party on 39 seats, based on results early on Thursday morning.

"We won our greatest victory in history and for the second time became the largest party in the Netherlands," Rutte told supporters after Labour leader Diederik Samsom telephoned him to concede defeat. "We fought this election house by house, street by street, city by city, and I'm proud. Tomorrow I will take the first steps leading to the formation of a cabinet." Rutte declined to say which parties he would approach as coalition partners. The Liberals and Labour have played down talk of forming a coalition together. But parliamentary arithmetic suggests that is the most probable outcome given the highly fragmented political landscape.

"They are condemned to work with each other. It shows the Dutch people want a stable government," said Andre Krouwel, a political scientist at Amsterdam's VU University. The hard-left Socialists, who oppose austerity and euro zone bailouts, finished a distant third and gained no ground, while the far-right anti-immigration Freedom Party (PVV) of Geert Wilders, who campaigned to leave the euro and the European Union, slumped and was set to lose nearly its seats. The two radical parties dominated early stages of the campaign, raising the prospect of a massive protest vote that might paralyze government and make Dutch support for further euro zone bailouts impossible.

The unexpectedly clear result removed a potential obstacle to efforts to stabilize Europe's single currency after Germany's constitutional court gave the green light for the euro zone's permanent bailout fund to go ahead.

Apple Inc CEO Tim Cook takes the stage after the introduction of the iPhone 5 during Apple Inc's iPhone media event in San Francisco, California on 12 Sept, 2012.— Reuters

SAN FRANCISCO, 13 Sept — Apple Inc's new iPhone goes on sale on Friday with a bigger screen and 4G wireless technology, as the company seeks to safeguard its edge over rivals like Samsung Electronics Co Ltd and Google Inc. The iPhone 5 fulfilled many of the expectations laid out by gadget geeks and technology analysts ahead of its Wednesday unveiling but offered few surprises to give Apple shares — already near record highs — another major kick.

"There is not a wow factor because everything you saw today is evolutionary. I do think they did enough to satisfy," said important holiday quarter. They still have time," said Channing Smith, co-manager of the Capital Advisors Growth Fund. "As soon as we see that, we will have more conviction about the stock heading into the final quarter."

Apple's iPhone 5 bigger, faster but lacks "wow"

Apple shares ended the day up 1.4 percent at $669.79. The latest iPhone comes as Apple faces competition beyond current key competitors Samsung and Google. Late entrant Microsoft Corp is now trying to push its Windows Phone 8 operating system as an alternative to Apple and Android, the most-used smartphone operating system in the world.

Analysts have forecast sales of 10 million to 12 million of the new iPhones in this month alone. Apple Chief Executive Tim Cook kicked off the event in San Francisco's Yerba Buena Center but it was marketing chief Phil Schiller who introduced the iPhone 5 and took the audience through the new phone's features. The iPhone 5 sports a 4-inch "retina" display, can surf a high-speed 4G LTE wireless network, and is 20 percent lighter than the previous iPhone 4S.

Russian mammoth remains give glimmer of hope for cloning Science

Moscow, 13 Sept — Scientists who found well preserved woolly mammoth remains in a remote part of Russia hope they might contain the necessary material to clone the long extinct beast. The Russian-led international team found the remains, including fur and bone marrow, with some cell nuclei intact, in the Ust-Yansk area of the Yakutia region on Russia's Arctic coast. The next step will be to search for living cells among the material which was preserved in the Siberian permafrost, said the Russian scientist who led the expedition with members from the United States, Canada, South Korea, Sweden and Great Britain.

"All we need for cloning is one living cell, which means it can reproduce autonomously. Then it will be no problem for us to multiply them to tens of thousands cells," said Semyon Grigoryev, a professor at North-East Federal University (NEFU). However, media reports that the scientists were close to making a "Jurassic Park"-style breakthrough by bringing the giant mammal back to life after thousands of years of extinction, were exaggerated."We are counting on our region's permafrost to have kept some cells alive. But it is unlikely," said Grigoryev, pointing out that the remains would need to have been at a stable temperature between -4 and -20 Celsius (between 28 and -4 Fahrenheit) for any cells to remain alive.

Some media had reported that living cells had been discovered, but Grigoryev said that had been due to a translation error as the word "intact" had been translated from English into Russian as "living". "What we have found are intact cells, with a whole nucleus," he said, adding that living cells, if found, would provide the necessary samples to make a living clone. The Yana 2012 expedition found the remains last week at the depth of 5-6 metres (16-20 feet) in a tunnel dug by locals searching for rare and valuable mammoth bone.

A previous find, discovered in the same region two years ago, yielded the remains of a 40,000-year-old female baby woolly mammoth, named Yuka by scientists, as well as those of an ancient bison and horse. Those finds lacked living cells.—Reuters

Environmental group sues for federal protection of ice seals

ANCHORAGE, 13 Sept — Environmentalists sued the Obama administration on Wednesday seeking federal safeguards for seals that rely on vanishing Arctic sea ice and accusing the government of dragging its feet in listing the marine mammals under the Endangered Species Act. The Centre for Biological Diversity filed the lawsuit in US District Court in Anchorage, saying the National Marine Fisheries Service has illegally delayed listings for the ringed seal and the bearded seal. Both dwell in coastal waters off northern Alaska.

In December 2010, the agency proposed listing both seal species as threatened, a move that would make them the first creatures besides polar bears granted Endangered Species Act protections due to climate change in the Arctic. But the National Marine Fisheries Service, which oversees marine mammals, missed the statutory deadline to formally list the seals, so the court should compel the agency to grant the seals threatened status, the lawsuit argues. Scientists have attributed the shrinking Arctic ice shelf to a warming trend brought on by elevated levels of heat-trapping "greenhouse" gases such as carbon dioxide emitted into Earth's atmosphere from the burning of fossil fuels and other human activities.

The bearded and ringed seal, like the polar bear, listed as threatened in 2008, depend on Arctic ice floes to hunt for prey, as well as to rest, give birth and nurse their young. Summer sea-ice coverage in the Arctic Ocean is at the lowest recorded levels." Global warming will impact ringed and bearded seals directly by degrading and eliminating critical sea-ice habitat, which will have devastating consequences by reducing adult reproductive success and the survival of pups and impairing their ability to molt," the lawsuit says. Ringed seals also use snow caves to protect their young, so the thinning Arctic snow pack puts "seal pups at higher risk of death from freezing and predation," the lawsuit says.— Reuters

Deaf gerbils hear again with human stem cells

LONDON, 13 Sept — Scientists have restored hearing to deaf gerbils using human embryonic stem cells in an advance that could eventually help people with an intractable form of deafness caused by nerve damage. The procedure needs further animal research to assess safety and long-term effectiveness but researchers said on Wednesday the experiment was an important proof of concept, marking a further advance in the growing field of regenerative medicine. Marcelo Rivolta from Britain's University of Sheffield, who led the research, said the first patients could receive cell therapy for hearing loss in clinical trials in "a few years".

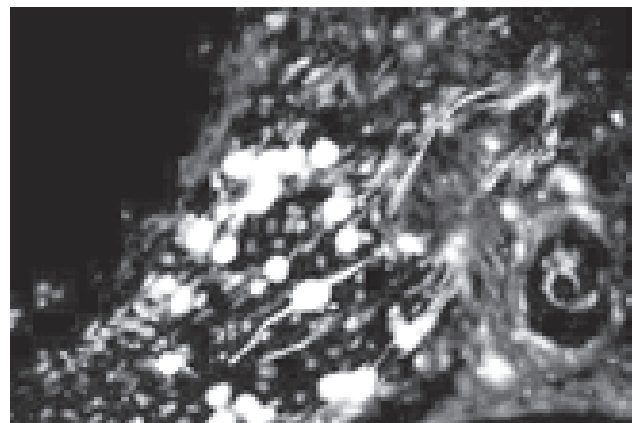

After treating 18 gerbils with complete deafness in one ear, his team reported in the journal Nature that stem cells produced an average 46 percent recovery in hearing function, as measured by electrical signals in the animals' brains. "If this was a human patient, it would mean going from being so deaf as to be unable to hear a lorry or truck on the street to being able to maintain a conversation," Rivolta told reporters. "What we have shown here is functional recovery using human stem cells, which is unique." Gerbils were selected for the test because their hearing range is similar to that of humans, while mice — the usual choice for laboratory tests — hear at higher frequencies.

The animals were deafened using a drug to destroy their auditory nerves before receiving an injection of around 50,000 human embryonic stem cells, which had previously been treated with growth factors to coax them into becoming ear cells. The response among the gerbils varied, depending on how well the new cells were integrated into the cochlea, the spiral-shaped cavity in the inner ear. Deafness is caused primarily by loss of sensory hair cells in the ear and auditory nerves. Since these cells are created only in the womb, there is no way to repair them once they have been damaged, resulting in permanent hearing loss.

Cochlear implants offer a partial solution to loss of hair cells but there is no treatment for nerve loss, or auditory neuropathy, which accounts for 10-15 percent of cases of profound deafness.

Rivolta said stem-cell treatment would initially address nerve damage, although it could also be used in a wider range of patients if it was used in combination with implants. Significant uncertainties remain. In particular, the ability of embryonic stem cells to morph into any of the other cell types in the body means they can cause tumors — something that was not seen in the 10-week gerbil study but which Rivolta said needed longer study. Another danger is that transplanted cells may be rejected by the recipient's immune system.

The research on deafness parallels more advanced work on the eye, where stem cells have already been shown to improve vision in small-scale human tests. Doctors hope one day to use stem cells to treat a wide range of diseases such as Parkinson's, diabetes and cancer. But localized approaches in the eye or ear may be a promising first step, since fewer cells are involved. Ralph Holme of the charity Action on Hearing Loss, which helped fund the Sheffield research, said the work was "tremendously encouraging" and gave hope of a fix to some types of hearing loss in the future.

US McDonald's to put calorie counts in lights

NEW YORK, 13 Sept — A Big Mac and large fries? They'll cost you 1,050 calories, and beginning next week, McDonald's will tell its customers that in bright lights on its fast-food menus. The world's No 1 hamburger chain said on Wednesday it is going to start listing calorie information on menus in some 14,000 US restaurants and drive-throughs — ahead of a national rule that will require larger restaurant chains to make such disclosures.

McDonald's Corp is a trend setter for restaurants and its move in this arena — while prompted by regulations and pressure from public health activists — is likely to force other restaurant operators to follow quickly. The state of California and cities like New York already require that calories be clearly listed on menus. Under the new US healthcare law, restaurants across the country must soon put calorie counts and other nutrition details on menus.

The national rules target restaurants with 20 or more locations, as well as other retail food outlets. Most major chains have resisted posting such information, without legislation and the threat of fines. The date for national compliance has been delayed and is not expected to be set until after the US presidential election. McDonald's was slow to warm to calorie labeling. When labelling proposals were gaining steam several years ago, McDonald's representatives publicly opposed them.

A common complaint was that rules from one jurisdiction to another were inconsistent. Some officials also said calorie disclosures would violate customer privacy. Cindy Goody, senior director of nutrition for McDonald's USA, described

Apple redesigns iPod touch, updates iPod nano Business

SAN FRANCISCO, 13 Sept — Apple on Wednesday gave an overhaul to its iPod portable music players. At a media event in San Francisco, Apple debuted the new iPod touch featuring a larger 4-inch Retina display with a 16:9 aspect ratio, the same display used in the latest iPhone 5 smartphone. The new iPod touch is 6.1 mm thick and weighs 88 grams. With Apple's dual-core A5 chip, the device can deliver up to twice the processing power and up to seven times faster graphics than the previous generation of iPod touch.

Apple unveils iPhone 5. XINHUA

Apple's intelligent assistant Siri also comes to the new music player.

Like the new iPhone 5, the camera of the new iPod touch also supports panorama feature that enables users to capture panoramic images by simply moving the camera across a scene. Its battery is up to 40 hours of music playback and up to eight hours of video playback. Unlike the previous generation, the new iPod touch comes with five colours and a color-matched wrist strap that make it more convenient for users to take photos and play games.

Meanwhile, Apple introduced a new earphone called "EarPods" for its mobile products, which the company said it spent three years to design. The new earphone features sound ports built into the stem and the sides. According to the company, users can hear deep and richer bass tones through EarPods and they rival high-end headphones that cost hundreds of dollars. EarPods will ship with iPod touch and iPhone 5, and is 29 US dollars for retail price.

The iPod nano, Apple's cheaper line of portable music players, also got a hardware update. It features a 2.5 inch multi-touch display, the largest display ever built into an iPod nano, and is the thinnest iPod ever at 5mm thick. Bluetooth for wireless listening is also brought to the new iPod nano. Both iPod touch and iPod nano come with the new Lightning connector like iPhone 5.

Pre-orders for the new iPod touch starts on Friday with the price starting at 299 dollars for the 32 GB model. It will be shipped in October.

Peanut allergies seen on the rise

NEW YORK, 13 Sept — The number of children with peanut allergies in one Midwestern county has tripled in the past decade, according to a new study that adds to evidence nut allergies are getting more common in the developed world.

Researchers reviewed the medical records of several hundred children in Olmsted County, in southeastern Minnesota, and found that new diagnoses of peanut allergy rose from two out of every 10,000 kids in 1999 to nearly seven out of every 10,000 in 2007.

Overall, 65 of every 10,000 children in the county — home to a sophisticated countywide electronic health records system that provided data for the study — had a verified peanut allergy in 2007.

Though exact percentages of kids with peanut allergies may vary from place to place and study to study, Dr Ruchi Gupta, an associate professor of pediatrics at Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine in Chicago, who was not involved in the research, said, "What's consistent with this article is it does look like peanut allergies, especially among the younger children, are increasing over time."

Most, though not all, studies trying to gauge how widespread food allergies are among kids have tracked an increase in recent decades.

Food allergies are thought to affect eight percent of US kids, with the most common culprits being cow's milk, wheat, egg, soy, peanuts, tree nuts and some seafood.

China sees 900,000 newborns with birth defects annually Health

BEIJING, 13 Sept — About 5.6 percent of newborns in China have birth defects, with about 900,000 affected infants born each year, according to a Ministry of Health report. Birth defects have become the second-greatest cause of infant deaths in China, accounting for 19.1 percent of infant deaths, says the report on the prevention and treatment of newborn defects for 2012, issued by the ministry on Wednesday.

Of the babies born with defects, about 30 percent die within 5 years after birth, while another 40 percent suffer lifelong deformities, the report says. About 250,000 newborns have visible defects, it says. Experts believe the increase in birth defects may be linked to the withdrawal of compulsory premarital health checks in 2003, as well as an increase in the number of women who have their first child at an older age.

The intake of prohibited medicine, increased exposure to radioactivity and drinking have also contributed to the increase, experts say. Although the percentage of couples who went in for premarital health checks was at a mere 2.67 percent in 2004, it shot up to 41 percent in 2011 after several provinces began providing the service for free or requiring it in order to obtain a marriage license, the report says. Birth defects are a serious problem in China, particularly in rural areas.

Neural tube defects, congenital heart disease, cleft lip and hydrocephalus are among the most common defects.

To curb birth defects, authorities launched a health program in 2009 to provide free folic acid supplements for 12 million rural women of child-bearing age to help prevent birth defects. World Health Organization statistics indicate that more than 7.9 million children, or about 6 percent of total births worldwide, are born with birth defects each year due to genetic or environmental causes. Birth defects refer to physical, functional or metabolic abnormalities developed at or before birth. — Xinhua

Asian shares inch down amid caution before Fed decision Market

TOKYO, 13 Sept — Asian shares slipped slightly in choppy trade on Thursday ahead of the US Federal Reserve's decision later in the day, but investors remained cautiously optimistic for further stimulus action to bolster the world's largest economy. Commodities from oil to gold were also held in tight ranges ahead of the Fed decision expected to be released at 1630 GMT, followed by Chairman Ben Bernanke's news conference about two hours later. A Reuters poll showed economists raised their bets of a third round of Fed bond buying known as quantitative easing (QE) to 65 percent from 60 percent in August. As the dollar suffered from expectations for QE, which would be equal to printing money and diluting the value of the greenback, the euro stayed near four-month highs against the US currency on signs Europe was taking steps to manage its debt crisis.

European equities were seen pausing, while a 0.1 percent drop in US stock futures suggested a weak Wall Street start. Financial spread betters called London's FTSE 100 .FTSE, Paris's CAC-40 .FCHI and Frankfurt's DAX .GDAXI to open little changed. .L .EU .N "Any goodwill towards risk assets, probably more so in FX land, could be undone pretty quickly if Ben Bernanke fails to live up to what is expected of him and the Fed board today," said Chris Weston, trader at IG Markets. "Given the good run of equities and the fall in the USD since June, there is a real possibility (even if we get what we want) that a classic buy-the-rumor, sell-the-fact type event plays out," he said.

MSCI's broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan .MIAPJ0000PUS was down 0.1 percent after swinging in a plus and minus 0.2 percent range. Australian .AXJO and Shanghai shares .SSEC were the worst performers, both dropping 0.4 percent while South Korean shares .KS11 recouped earlier losses to be nearly flat. — Reuters

Texas woman approved for first double arm transplants in US

HOUSTON, 13 Sept — A woman in the US state of Texas has been officially added to a hospital list in Boston to become the first in the country to receive double arm transplants above the elbow, media reports said on Wednesday.

Katy Hayes, 43, completed a pre-operative evaluation and has been approved by the review board at Brigham and Women's Hospital (BWH) for the bilateral arm transplant, The Houston Chronicle reported, citing hospital officials.

Hayes, a mother with three children from Kingwood, Texas, became a quadruple amputee in 2010 after a life-threatening Group A Streptococcal (GAS) infection invaded her following the birth of her daughter.

BWH is working in collaboration with the New England Organ Bank (NEOB), which will actively search for an appropriate donor for Hayes, the hospital officials said. — Xinhua

Algeria, Kuwait sign agreements on trade, tourism

ALGIERS, 13 Sept—Algeria signed here on Tuesday with Kuwait two agreements on trade and tourism on the second day of the 7th session of Algeria-Kuwait Joint Committee, the official APS news agency reported. APS quoted a source close to the committee as saying that “two agreements on trade and tourism have been signed” by the two parties during the session, co-chaired by Algerian Finance Minister Karim Djoudi and Kuwaiti Minister of Education and Higher Education Nayef Falah Al Hajraf, who is also acting minister of Finance.

Algeria and Kuwait have also decided to set up an investment monitoring committee, in charge of removing obstacles to bilateral investments.

About 500 Boeing workers evacuated from US plant outside Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, 13 Sept—Some 500 employees of a sprawling Boeing Co facility in a southern suburb of Philadelphia were evacuated on Tuesday morning after a threat was telephoned to the plant, authorities said.

Damien Mills, a company spokesman, declined to reveal the nature of the threat but said the company immediately notified local police and evacuated the workers — part of the 6,200 employees who make CH-47 Chinook helicopters and the V-22 Osprey aircraft at the facility.

“Regular operations continue at most of the plant,”

he told Reuters. Police were investigating the threat.

He said the evacuated employees are standing in a safe zone in the area of the plant, which is located in Ridley Township, south of Philadelphia in Delaware County. The evacuation comes amid tensions surrounding the anniversary of the 11 September, 2001, attacks, when nearly 3,000 people were killed by airliners hijacked by Islamist militants.

It also coincides with heightened concerns about workplace violence, including an episode in New York last month when a man shot and killed a former co-worker near the Empire State Building and an incident in suburban New Jersey when an employee shot two co-workers before taking his own life.—Reuters

US city of Houston issues air quality alert for ozone pollution

HOUSTON, 13 Sept—Officials in the US metropolis of Houston on Tuesday issued a pollution warning for some local areas due to dangerous ozone levels. The warning was in place for the areas of Houston, Galveston and Brazoria, according to an online report by The Houston Chronicle. The warning was issued because atmospheric conditions are favourable for increased ozone pollution in the region, the newspaper said. Ozone is an extremely reactive gas molecule that is the primary ingredient of smog air pollution and is very harmful to breathe. Ozone attacks lung tissue by reacting chemically with it. Elevated levels of ozone can act as a lung irritant. Young people and the elderly, as well as those with chronic respiratory conditions such as asthma and emphysema, should avoid exposure. The American Lung Association ranks Houston No 8 among the most ozone-polluted US cities. A new local website was launched in August this year for people to track ozone pollution down to the neighbourhood level in this city of over 2.1 million.—Xinhua

Smoke from Idaho wildfire poses health risk-officials

SALMON, 13 Sept—Smoke from a massive Idaho wildfire posed a health risk to a small mountain town that was the staging area for firefighters battling the blaze, health officials said on Tuesday.

Government air monitors showed pollution levels peaked in the hazardous zone on Monday night as the Mustang Complex fire, north of Salmon in east-central Idaho, poured thick smoke into a community that has coped with poor air for nearly seven weeks. “I think we all have to consider it a crisis at this point,” said Jim Vannoy, programme manager for environmental health education and assessment with the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The lightning-sparked blaze that has raged since late July is one of several large fires in the West.

Idaho's Mustang Complex in the Salmon-Challis National Forest grew to nearly 300,000 acres on Tuesday as firefighters braced to defend homes in two small communities. About 400 residences were ordered evacuated on Sunday.

In neighbouring Washington state, 100 smaller wildfires from the Washington-Oregon line to just west of Spokane and north to the Canadian border charred 80,000 acres, threatening scores of homes, officials said.

In Idaho, relief from the smoke was not expected any time soon. The smoke contains noxious gases like carbon monoxide and fine particles that can drive deep into the lungs and aggravate or cause respiratory or heart ailments.

Public health experts said research is limited on the long-term effects of wildfire smoke because the exposure usually is concentrated in remote, sparsely populated areas.

“In general, the thoughts are that the health effects will be resolved because the events are, at most, weeks in duration,” said Joel Kaufman, professor of environmental and occupational health at the University of Washington. Janet Nelson, local emergency services coordinator, said she was fielding reports of children coughing to the point of vomiting, health workers complaining of fatigue and scores of people with persistent headaches.

West Nile virus toll grows to eight in US state of Oklahoma

HOUSTON, 13 Sept—Eight people have died from West Nile virus in the US state of Oklahoma so far this year, the state health department said on Tuesday.

The latest fatality was a man older than 65 who lived in Tulsa County, according to a release from the department.

Of the confirmed deaths so far, two were in Oklahoma County, three in Tulsa

County, one in Seminole County, and the remaining two in Carter County.

This year Oklahoma has broken its record for the most confirmed cases of West Nile virus. A total of 127 West Nile cases have so far been confirmed by the state health department.

Oklahoma previously reported a record 107 West Nile infections in 2007. Nine people in the state died from the virus that year.

This year has also witnessed the worst outbreak of West Nile nationally since the virus was discovered in the United States in 1999, according to the US Centres for Disease Control and Prevention. So far there have been 1,993 cases reported nationwide.

Texas, the worst-hit state in the current outbreak, has about half of the nation's deaths from the illness. The state has confirmed 48 deaths related to West Nile virus so far this year.

First identified in Uganda in 1937, West Nile virus is a mosquito-borne illness that leads to serious neurological disease in some cases. Its symptoms include sudden onset of fever, headache, nausea, dizziness and muscle weakness.

Death in Vegas sends shockwaves Down Under

LAS VEGAS, 13 Sept—The mysterious death of a young footballer outside a Las Vegas casino has cast a shadow over the Australian Football League finals series and prompted soul-searching among clubs about their responsibilities for players.

The body of John McCarthy, a 22-year-old midfielder for Port Adelaide Power, was found on the driveway of the Flamingo hotel early on Sunday morning.

McCarthy had become separated from a group of team mates partying in the Nevada gambling mecca, a popular holiday destination for Australian Rules players keen to let their hair down after a bruising season of the indigenous football code.

The player called his girlfriend and sounded distressed and disoriented after losing his companions, and spoke of heading to the airport to get a flight home, a Port club spokesman confirmed in Adelaide on Tuesday. Hours after the call, he was pronounced dead in a medical trauma unit, having fallen nine meters from a roof of the Flamingo casino.

Cuba willing to discuss case of jailed US citizen

HAVANA, 13 Sept — The Cuban government said on Wednesday it was open to discuss with US officials the case of jailed American contractor Alan Gross, who is serving a 15-year sentence in Cuba for allegedly aiding anti-government forces.

Cuban officials said they were expecting a response from Washington regarding Gross, who was imprisoned in Havana after being found with satellite communications equipment purportedly destined for anti-Castro groups on the island. "Cuba reiterates its willingness to have dialog with the government of the United States to find a solution to Mr Gross' case," Josefin Vidal, the Cuban foreign ministry's director of US affairs, said on Wednesday, adding "we are still waiting for an answer." Cuba's announcement came in the wake of statements made by Gross's wife, Judy, after visiting her husband last weekend and finding him in frail health.

"He has lost 47.7 kilos and developed degenerative arthritis and a mass behind his right shoulder blade," she said in a statement issued by the defence counsel representing her husband. Havana confirmed Mrs Gross had visited her husband on three occasions, but the Foreign Ministry insisted that he is in a "normal" condition. "Mr Gross' state of health remains normal and he regularly exercises vigorously," the statement said. Gross was arrested in December 2009 at Havana's international airport, while trying to bring in telecommunications equipment banned in Cuba.

The Cuban Supreme Court sentenced him 15 years in prison in 2011, on charges of violating "the independence and security of the Cuban State." The US government said that Gross was hired to deliver communications equipment to the Jewish community on the island to provide them with Internet access. But according to Cuban officials, the community already had official Internet access long before Gross began making trips to the island. — Xinhua

Afghans seek shelter in Dubai ahead of pullout

AFGHANISTAN

DUBAI/KABUL, 13 Sept — Not long ago, Mohammed Daoud was making good money hiring out halls for wedding parties thrown by a new class of Afghan war entrepreneurs. Today, he is using some of the profits to buy a $160,000 apartment nestled amid the skyscrapers and shopping malls of Dubai. Daoud sees his 27th-floor bolt-hole as both a canny investment and the ultimate insurance policy against the darkest scenarios he can envisage for his homeland when the bulk of foreign forces leave.

"Nobody knows what's going to happen after 2014," he told Reuters in Kabul. "If something happens with the security situation here, I can take my family. We feel safe in Dubai." Wealthy Afghans have sharply increased the pace of investment in property in the Gulf Emirate, motivated by a mix of hard-headed commercial calculations and more nebulous security fears sparked by the drawdown. Afghan buyers spent 220 million dirhams ($60.7 million) on property in Dubai in the first six months of this year, a 27 percent increase compared with the same period in 2011, according to Dubai government data obtained by Reuters. Some are spending up to 20 million dirhams on shopping sprees for multiple villas, while many buy million-dollar homes in cash, dealers say.

The growth outpaced a 21 percent rise in total property transactions in Dubai by both local and foreign investors in the same period. The interest was driven in part by a steep decline in prices in the Emirate's once white-hot property market. The figures will make troubling reading for Western allies struggling to convince an uneasy Afghan population the transition will not be a prelude to international abandonment or an escalation in fighting with the Taliban.

Haji Obaidullah Sader Khail, chairman of the Afghan-Dubai Business Council, said the true scale of Afghan investment could be four times higher than the data suggests because many transactions may not have been registered. "I know people who have bought 15 to 20 villas," he said. According to the official figures, the number of properties Afghans bought in Dubai jumped to 114 in the first half compared to 76 in the same period in 2011.

Israel 2nd-most educated of OECD member states

ISRAEL

JERUSALEM, 13 Sept — Israel has the second-highest percentage of 25 to 64-year-old people attending higher education among Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) member states, according to a just-released report. The report, "Education at a Glance 2012" released at the start of the school year, revealed that Canada led the list with 51 percent of the same demographic graduating from an institution of higher education.

Japan trailed Israel at 45 percent, and the United States at 42 percent, according to the report, quoted by the Ma'ariv daily. 50 percent of Israeli women have academic degrees, trailing Canada's 56 percent; both are far above average, vis a vis the OECD country average of 32 percent. Israel joined Finland, Greece, Ireland, Japan, Korea, Portugal, Slovenia and the United Kingdom with an over 90 percent secondary education graduation rate, according to Israel National News.

However, on the negative side of the equation, Israel was noted as having the fourth highest number of pupils per classroom, 28 in grade school and 30 in high school. While Israel falls below the member state average in investment in education, per student — the United States, for example, spends more than 2.5 times as much per student — Israeli investment came out above average, when viewed from the standpoint of overall government budgeting.

Meanwhile, numbers from the Central Bureau of Statistics say that the Education Ministry provides support for just a third of school dropouts — some eight percent of students in each grade, according to the Haaretz daily. The Ministry's Youth Advancement Units, which aid students who have left school, reported 10,232 dropouts in the 2011-2012 school year, down from 28,176 in the previous year, according to internal figures. — Xinhua

15 Taliban militants killed in Afghanistan within 24 hours

KABUL, 13 Sept — Military operations carried out by the Afghan police, army and the NATO-led coalition forces have claimed the lives of 15 Taliban militants in different Afghan provinces within the past 24 hours, authorities said on Thursday.

"Afghan National Police (ANP), Afghan army and intelligence agency in collaboration with the coalition forces launched 13 joint cleanup operations in Kapisa, Baghlan, Jowzjan, Kandahar, Zabul, Uruzgan, Wardak, Ghazni, Khost, Paktika and Helmand provinces over the past 24 hours," the Afghan Interior Ministry said in a statement issued here. "As a result of these operations, 15 armed Taliban were killed, four wounded and 10 others were arrested by the ANP," the statement said, adding that the joint forces also found and seized weapons and explosive during the above raids.

The statement did not say whether there were any casualties on the side of security forces. However, the Taliban insurgent group, which announced the launching of an annual spring offensive from 3 May against Afghan and NATO forces, has not made comments yet. Afghan forces and some 130,000 NATO-led coalition troops have recently intensified cleanup operations against Taliban and other militants throughout the country.

Towards a green city

The concept of Green City had a gradual start in the late 1800s. 'The Green Paper on the Urban Development' published in 1990 has been considered as a 'milestone' document in promoting sustainable city projects as a solution to global environmental role. After the earth Summit held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, from 2 to 14 June 1992, different terms, including sustaining cities, sustainable cities, sustainable urbanism, green city, eco-towns, eco districts and eco-cities, have tried to reduce environmental impacts on the cities and to achieve sustainable development.

With the rapid development of science and technology, the world is now facing the challenges such as environmental degradation and pollution. Environmental degradation has the great impacts not only on people but also on our future generation. It is assumed that urbanization mostly causes environmental degradation. Excessive tapping of natural resources, use of energy, excessive use of water, disposal of sewage and drainages and carbon emission can cause severe damages to the environment.

So, we need to set up Green Urbanism that can equalize human beings and environment. Sustainable development of urban areas is of great importance. As a vast majority of world population is living in urban areas, urban development programme has become a first priority for every government. With the increasing number of world population, urbanization of developed and developing countries had rapidly developed.

To establish Green cities, basic infrastructures such as public transportation, energy-saving buildings, water consumption and litters disposal system are to be built. Establishment of green cities also includes the construction of new cities and upgrading of current cities into the environmental-friendly ones. In addition, the governments need to persuade their citizens to take energy-saving practices.

Small plane crashes in Russia killing 10

MOSCOW, 13 Sept—A small propeller plane crashed in Russia's far east on Wednesday killing 10 of the 14 people on board, Russia's local emergency services said.

The Russian-design Antonov An-28 plane flown by two pilots was taking 12 passengers from Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky, the provincial capital of Kamchatka, to the northern village of Palana when it crashed.

Heavy storm clouds and bad weather may have brought down the plane, a local air traffic control source told Interfax. The agency said one child was among the dead. "Ten bodies were found at the scene of the crash and four injured passengers were being readied to be airlifted to the hospital," a spokeswoman for the local emergency services said.

Alaska fisherman survives 26 hours floating in fish crate

Alaska

ANCHORAGE, 13 Sept—An Alaska fisherman survived for a day floating on frigid ocean waters in a plastic fish crate after his boat sank and said he kept up his spirits by singing.

Ryan Harris, 19, told the local newspaper in Sitka, Alaska, that he sang songs like "Row, Row, Row Your Boat" and "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" to keep himself awake through the night as the fishing crate bobbed on the waves.

Harris told the Sitka Sentinel that he gave himself a "pep talk," saying for hours on end: "I'm Ryan Hunter Harris and I'm not going to die here." Harris and his fishing partner, boat skipper Stonie Huffman, went into the water late on Friday when their 28-foot vessel sank off Sitka, according to the US Coast Guard.

Five killed, five injured in attacks in Iraq

Iraq

BAGHDAD, 13 Sept—Five people were killed and five security members wounded on Tuesday in separate gunfire and bomb attacks in central and northern Iraq, the police said.

In Baghdad, Brigadier General, Raad Nu'man, a police chief was killed when gunmen using silenced weapons broke into his house in Um al-Maalif district in southwestern Baghdad, an Interior Ministry source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

In the west of the Iraqi capital, gunmen raided the house of Lieutenant Colonel, Mejbil Meshaal al-Jumaili, the chief of the anti-terror unit in the town of Garma near the city of Fallujah, some 50 km west of Baghdad, killing his son, his brother and one of his relatives, a local police source anonymously told Xinhua.

Al-Jumaili himself escaped the attack unharmed, as he was not at home at the time of the attack, the source said, adding that one of al-Jumaili's bodyguards was also injured.

In a separate incident, two roadside bombs went off in a quick succession near a joint army and police patrol in the town of Saqlawiyah, some 20 km northeast of Fallujah, wounding three soldiers and a policeman, the source said.

In Iraq's northern province of Nineveh, gunmen using pistols fitted with silencers attacked a police checkpoint in the central part of the provincial capital of Mosul, some 400 km north of Baghdad, killing one policeman, a provincial police source told Xinhua on condition of anonymity.

Violence in Iraq has ebbed from its climax in 2006 and 2007, when sectarian conflicts pushed the country to the brink of a civil war, but tensions and attacks are still common across the country.

Mexico extradites senior Zetas

drug cartel member to US

Mexico

MEXICO CITY, 13 Sept—Mexico extradited to the United States on Tuesday one of the founders of the brutal Zetas drug cartel who had been linked to the killing of a US customs agent last year. The Mexican attorney general's office said that former soldier Jesus Rejon, known as Z-7, was handed over to face trial at a federal court in Washington on drug-trafficking charges.

Rejon was captured in July 2011 after being sought in connection with the roadside shooting of two US Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents, one of whom died.

The attorney general's office did not mention the February 2011 killing in its statement on the extradition.

The shooting of the ICE agents sparked anger in the United States and prompted a round of finger-pointing between Mexican and US politicians over the failure to curb drug-related violence that has plagued Mexico in recent years.

The Zetas have been blamed for some of the worst atrocities to hit Mexico during this period. Turf wars between drug gangs and their clashes with security forces have claimed more than 55,000 lives over the past six years.

Rejon was a founding member of the Zetas, a gang made up originally of army deserters at the end of the 1990s and initially worked as enforcers for the Gulf Cartel, before splitting from their employers in 2010.

President Felipe Calderon's government has tried to turn up the heat on the Zetas and recent in-fighting among gang members suggests it may be rupturing, threatening a new wave of bloodletting.—Reuters

Three dead in Polish bus crash in eastern France

PARIS, 13 Sept—Three were killed and many others were critically injured on Tuesday as a Polish bus crashes at A36 highway in the eastern French city of Mulhouse, local media reported.

The bus was carrying 68 people, including 65 passengers and three staff when it crashed on the motoway which links France to Germany, French radio RFI said on its website.

The AFP quoted French officials as saying that no children were on board. A passenger said the bus driver suddenly swerved while emerging from the exit lane and the bus was found lying on its side in a ditch. Two emergency rescue services helicopters were deployed at the scene.

The driver was then taken custody by French police and his first tests for alcohol were negative.

No other vehicles were involved. The owner of the bus, Polish travel agency Sindbad which has a fleet of coaches, had chartered it to another company Albatros that ran buses to the French cities of Mulhouse, Cannes, Toulon, Lyon, Marseille and Nice.—Xinhua

Big fire destroys forest, villages in western Turkey

ISTANBUL, 13 Sept—Nearly 500 hectares of forest have been burned down and a number of villages have been evacuated in the Kaz Mountains in the Havran district of Turkey's western province of Balikes on Tuesday.

The semi-official Anatolia news agency reported that the big forest fire is continuing to spread in the mountains and that Olive groves and farm lands have also been affected by the fire.

Governor Ahmet Turhan said they were struggling to bring the fire under control because of the strong winds.

However, the regional director of forestry Recep Ates said "firefighters have begun to respond to the fire effectively" as the wind's speed has started to decrease. "There have been some critical points which were dangerous for us, but for now the situation does not look too bad," he said. The cause of the fire is still unknown, but according to official estimates, a farmland blaze could be the source.—Xinhua

Forest fires hit vast area in Portugal

LISBON, 13 Sept—Over 73,000 hectares of forest, an area nine times the size of Portuguese capital Lisbon, have been destroyed during the first eight months of this year, said an official report released on Tuesday.

The report, conducted by the country's Institute for Conservation of Nature and Forests, showed that between 1 Jan and 31 Aug this year 73,055 hectares of forest burned, up by 81 percent from the 40,146 hectares that were destroyed in the same period of last year.

Meanwhile, a total of 16,168 forest fires were recorded in the first eight months this year, 1,218 more than in the same period last year. In August alone, there were 2,764 forest fires, in which 5,215 hectares burned. One giant blaze at Tavira, Algarve, a southern region of Portugal, which broke out on 18 July, ravaged 21,437 hectares of forest—some 29 percent of the total area destroyed. The report noted that drought in spring contributed to the increase in the number of forest fires.—Xinhua

East Asian librarians call for cooperation in digital era

NANNING, 13 Sept — Library curators from China and other East Asian countries have agreed to strengthen cooperation and promote the sharing of resources amid the boom in electronic media that has posed challenges to traditional libraries.

Chief librarians and representatives from the national libraries of China, the Republic of Korea and 10 Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) countries signed a proposal at the ongoing China-ASEAN Cultural Forum that kicked off Tuesday in Nanning, capital of south China's Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region.

The curators proposed establishing a long-term cooperative relationship among libraries in these countries so as to share resources, enhance personnel exchanges and boost the quality of library services. With the dawning of the digital era, cooperation and exchanges are more necessary for confronting new challenges, said Zhou Heping, director of the National Library of China, in a keynote speech. "The development of libraries has entered a digital era of information sharing," said Zhao Shaohua, China's vice minister of culture, while addressing the opening ceremony. "China and ASEAN countries should strengthen substantial cooperation on library development as part of regional cultural cooperation."

Ngian Lek Choh, director of the National Library of Singapore, said the library alliance will also help bring vitality to cultural heritage. "It's like when family members get together, they exchange information, opinions and experience. Meanwhile, they learn from each other and grow together," she said.

Australian man detained in counter-terror raids

CANBERRA, 13 Sept — Australian police have detained a 23-year-old man, who they said on Thursday they expect to charge under counter-terrorism laws, after raids on about a dozen homes during which an unspecified number of weapons were seized. The raids were conducted by state and national police on 11 homes in Melbourne, Australia's second-largest city and the capital of southern Victoria state, on Wednesday.

Computer equipment, including a memory stick containing violent material, was seized along with a number of registered firearms and fake weapons, police said. Police said the man was expected to be charged with "collecting or making documents likely to facilitate terrorist acts", an offence under Australia's criminal code. The maximum sentence for the charge is 15 years in jail. "I would like to reassure people that we have not identified any immediate threats that pose immediate concerns to the safety of the community," Victoria Police Assistant Commissioner Steve Fontana said in a statement.

Australia, a staunch US ally, has gradually tightened its national security laws since the 11 Sept, 2001, airliner attacks on the United States. Under those security laws, police can detain a person for up to seven days for questioning. The Australian Federal Police declined to comment on the man's ethnic or religious background. The Islamic Council of Victoria said the police had briefed members of the Muslim community about the raids. "The last thing we want is any kind of terrorist attack anywhere in the world, let alone in Australia, and it's very reassuring that the authorities are being very vigilant in keeping our community safe," Sherene Hassan of the Islamic Council of Victoria told Australian Broadcasting Corp radio.

Australia has never suffered a major peacetime attack on home soil, although 88 Australians were killed in the 2002 nightclub bombings on the Indonesian resort island of Bali and Australia's embassy in Jakarta was bombed in 2004. Australian authorities have disrupted four major plots since 2000, with 23 people convicted of terrorism offences.

Indonesia among world's top rank with 60 mln smokers

JAKARTA, 13 Sept — A recent survey reveals that Indonesians are some of the top smokers in the world with about 60 million people or 34.8 percent of total adults being active smokers, local media reported on Wednesday. The "Global Adult Tobacco Survey (GATS): Indonesia Report 2011" shows that 67.4 percent of male Indonesians aged 15 and over years are smokers, confirming that the tobacco epidemic is still rife in the country.

Health Minister Nafsiah Mboi said on Tuesday she was anxious about the fact that over 67 percent of adult males are smokers. That's an increase from 53.9 percent in the 1995 National Social Economic Survey. "This figure shows that we have failed to protect our own people," she told a discussion as part of the survey release. The number of female smokers also increased to 2.7 percent in 2011 from 1.7 percent in 1995. Nafsiah told participants that the Indonesian government was embarrassed to hear the findings.

"It means we have been defeated by the tobacco industry. This is unacceptable," she said as quoted by the Jakarta Post. Apart from the increase in the number of smokers, GATS also emphasized the high number of passive smokers, nonsmokers exposed to secondhand smoke. 133.3 million or almost 80 percent of adults are exposed to smoke at home. Each adult smoker consumes an average of almost 13 cigarettes each day, 31.5 percent of which are kretek (clove cigarettes). Meanwhile, 2.9 million people use smokeless tobacco products.

Washington
state wildfires
prompt evacuations, destroy three homes

SEATTLE, 13 Sept—Fast-growing wildfires destroyed three homes in Washington state on Wednesday and threatened 350 more buildings as firefighters worked to keep the flames at bay and hundreds of residents prepared to evacuate.

The fires raging in Washington have charred 130,000 acres and the weather could make things worse, officials said. The fires were among a cluster of blazes raging in the US West. "Conditions look horrible," said Paul Perz, the state's assistant fire marshal. "We're anticipating that unstable conditions and winds in eastern Washington will fuel the fires."

The wildfires were sparked by thousands of weekend lightning strikes that ignited more than 150 fires on Monday. Six new fires started on Wednesday. The most menacing of the blazes, located about 140 miles east of Seattle, has spread to 9,500 acres and is threatening about 125 homes. More than 700 residents have been urged to evacuate.

Although 620 firefighters were on the scene, little of the fire was contained, Perz said. "Portions of the town are threatened," said John Kruse, Wenatchee police sergeant. "Right now, we're taking it 12 hours at a time."

Half a billion Android devices activated

SAN FRANCISCO, 13 Sept—Google on Wednesday announced that 500 million devices running on its Android operating system have been activated so far.

"Today is a big day for Android... 500 million devices activated globally, over 1.3 million added every single day," Hugo Barra, Google Android's director of product management, said in a Google+ post.

In June, Google said 400 million Android devices had been activated and the rate was 1 million per day. Google announced the milestone just before Apple unveiled iPhone 5. The latest smartphone from Apple features a bigger screen and support for LTE network, both of which have been available on smartphones using Android system for more than a year.

According to latest data from research firm IDC, there were four Android phones for every iPhone shipped during the second quarter of this year. It is up from a ratio of 2.5 to 1 during the same period last year.

AEG dropping insurance claim over Michael Jackson death

LOS ANGELES, 13 Sept—Michael Jackson's former concert promoter AEG Live is withdrawing a $17.5 million insurance claim in the 2009 death of the pop star amid revelations in leaked emails that show company executives were concerned about his stability ahead of his planned London comeback tour.

Attorneys involved in the case denied on Tuesday that AEG Live's move was related to the publication of the leaked emails by the Los Angeles Times on 2 September.

Jackson died in June 2009 at age 50 from an overdose of the powerful anesthetic propofol and sedatives. Last year, a Los Angeles jury convicted the "Thriller" singer's physician, Conrad Murray, of involuntary manslaughter, but heard that Jackson was taking a cocktail of sleep aids and prescription medications.

AEG Live, the concert division of privately-held Anschutz Entertainment Group (AEG), had filed a claim seeking a $17.5 million insurance payment from Lloyd's of London for losses they incurred in up-front costs for Jackson's "This Is It" sell-out shows that were to start in London in July 2009.

Lloyd's later filed a lawsuit against AEG Live in Los Angeles Superior Court, seeking a declaration that the insurance company did not owe the money.

Patricia Riggen to direct Chilean miner drama

LOS ANGELES, 13 Sept—Patricia Riggen, director of "Under the Same Moon (La Misma Luna)," will slide behind the camera again to tell the incredible true story of the 33 Chilean miners who were rescued after being trapped half a mile below ground for 69 days, TheWrap has learned.

The project, currently titled "The 33," will be produced by film veteran Mike Medavoy ("Black Swan," "Shutter Island").

Released in 2007, "Under the Same Moon" told the star of a Mexican boy who struggles to be reunited with his mother in the United States. In addition to "Under the Same Moon," the Mexican-born Riggen has directed the 2011 Disney Channel film "Lemonade Mouth" and "Girl in Progress," a 2012 coming-of-age drama starring Eva Mendes.

Medavoy said Riggen's work on "Under the Same Moon" convinced him she was the right fit for the story of the real-life heroes of the San Jose mine.

"I saw in her film not only her talent but the real humanity and humor that this film needs," Medavoy said in a statement. "Patricia has the heart and sensibility to bring this story to life in a way that accurately reflects what the miners and their families endured." Riggen and the producers are currently in Chile meeting with the miners.

The film will depict the mine's collapse and ongoing rescue efforts, alternating between the miners who are trapped underground and their families and rescuers above. The script was written in collaboration with the miners themselves, and the producers promise the film will include details that have never been made public.

"It's been an extraordinary statement. "Since their rescue a little less than two years ago, the real story of their incredible survival has gone untold. In their darkest hour, they struggled to maintain their unity. The collapse brought out the best and the worst in them. Ultimately, the human spirit triumphed and all of them came out alive." Medavoy, who lived in Chile for 10 years, secured all 33 of the miners' rights to the story last year along with executive producers Carlos E Lavin and Leopoldo Enriquez.

Katie Couric crushes rivals in talk show debut

LOS ANGELES, 13 Sept—Katie Couric won the battle of the new daytime TV talk shows, scoring the highest ratings for any such debut in 10 years. "Katie," the nationally syndicated lifestyle venture from the former CBS news anchor and "Today" show host, crushed the premieres on Monday of Ricki Lake and "Survivor" host Jeff Probst, as well as the one by comedian Steve Harvey last week, according to early Nielsen ratings.

Featuring interviews with singer Sheryl Crow and Jessica Simpson, "Katie" was first in its time period in the top TV markets of New York and Los Angeles, and first or second in the 13 other biggest US cities.

Couric's 2.8 household rating was 250 percent higher than that of Lake, and 150 percent higher than Probst's. A single ratings point represents 1 percent of the estimated 115.9 million television households in the United States.

Numbers showing how many millions of viewers tuned in will not be available until next week.

Gwyneth Paltrow named best dressed woman by People magazine

LOS ANGELES, 13 Sept—Actress Gwyneth Paltrow was named the "World's Best Dressed Woman" of 2012 by People magazine on Wednesday, wowing the celebrity magazine with a simple elegant style that avoids some of fashion's quirkier trends.

The Oscar-winning actress, 39, and wife of Coldplay frontman Chris Martin, headed a list of the year's style mavens that included Prince William's wife Kate, R&B star Rihanna, and the Kardashian family of TV reality show fame.

People said the list was compiled after soliciting input from the celebrity magazine's 42 million readers, its editors and fashion bloggers.

While Oscar-winner Paltrow won the best dressed title, fashion icon Kate Middleton—formally known as the Duchess of Cambridge—was named the woman with the best classic style.

Paltrow's stylist, Elizabeth Saltzman, told People that the actress was not a slave to trends. "She doesn't do fringe. She has a uniform. It's simple, not overdone," Saltzman said.

Emma Stone, the 23-year-old star of "The Amazing Spider-Man" and "The Help," was chosen as having the best red carpet style, while singer Rihanna was praised for taking the most risks in her fashion choices.

Actresses Jessica Alba (best jeans), Jennifer Lawrence (best under 25s), and Reese Witherspoon (best pregnancy) also made the top 10, along with Australian model Miranda Kerr.

Among men, honors went to actors Andrew Garfield, Brad Pitt, Colin Firth, Robert Pattinson, Chris and Liam Hemsworth and singer Jay-Z.

People also looked back at some of the fashion faux pas of 2012. The magazine recalled an orange lace dress worn with prominent black underwear by pop singer Fergie, and a floral floor-length dress worn by Sarah Jessica Parker that fashion blogger Heather Cocks said made the "Sex and the City" actress look like a cast member of polygamy TV reality show "Sister Wives."—Reuters

Man United's Kagawa says back injury is not serious

TOKYO, 13 Sept—Japan playmaker Shinji Kagawa has tried to play down a back injury which ruled the Manchester United midfielder out of Tuesday's 1-0 win over Iraq in a World Cup qualifier.

The 23-year-old pulled out of the game in Saitama an hour before kick-off having felt a twinge in his lower back during training the previous day. "I underwent treatment for as long as possible before the match and (Japan coach Alberto Zaccheroni) waited for me," said Kagawa, who joined United for $21 million in the pre-season.

"I felt a twinge and didn't want to take the risk," added the former Borussia Dortmund midfielder, who watched the Group B game from the stands.

"It's not a serious injury and I don't think it will keep me out for long. I can walk without any problem but if I put strain on it it still hurts."

Kagawa is set to undergo tests on his return to Old Trafford, where he has made an impressive start to his United career, although he is likely to be a doubt for Saturday's home game against Wigan Athletic in the Premier League.

"I waited until the afternoon to see how his condition was but there's no way I can put a player on the pitch who is not at 100 per cent," said Italian Zaccheroni.

After the weekend encounter United kick off their Champions League campaign at home to Turkey's Galatasaray on 19 September before a trip to fierce rivals Liverpool in the league on 23 September.

I'm focused on winning, not contracts, says Ronaldo

Soccer

MADRID, 13 Sept—Cristiano Ronaldo is concentrating on playing well for Real Madrid and is not agitating to improve the terms of his contract with the Spanish champions, the Portugal forward said on Wednesday.

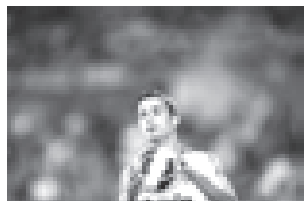

Arriving back in Madrid after helping his country to World Cup qualifying wins against Luxembourg and Azerbaijan, Ronaldo wrote on his Facebook page it is "now time to return to the club and think only about my club".

He added: "I would like to reaffirm, without being concerned about contracts, that my focus is solely on winning every game and every available trophy with the essential company of my teammates and all madridistas."

Ronaldo dropped a bombshell after Real's match at home to Granada this month when he told reporters he was "sad" for professional reasons, prompting speculation he might be seeking an exit.

The world's most expensive player, who reportedly earns around 11 million euros a season, had earlier refused to celebrate his two goals in the 3-0 La Liga victory and would not elaborate on the reasons for his sadness. He said only that "those who worked in the club" knew why. Local media have reported he doesn't feel appreciated and wants more cash and fiercely pro-Real sports daily Marca said on Tuesday he had asked the club to bump his salary up to a post-tax 15 million euros and extend his contract.—Reuters

Former England striker Michael Owen poses with the Olympic Torch at Battersea dogs home in London, on 23 July, 2012.—REUTERS

LONDON, 13 Sept—Michael Owen used to terrify international defenders and made scoring look easy but the extent to which his career has gone off the boil will be brought into focus on Saturday when he lines up for modest Stoke City.

Just days after his former England colleagues struggled in a 1-1 draw against Ukraine, Owen, who scored 40 international goals while representing some of Europe's most illustrious clubs, could make his Stoke debut against Manchester City. In his pomp, Owen would have been just the man to find a breakthrough at Wembley, but injuries and a waning of his powers have kept him out of England consideration, and he has not represented his country since 2008.

City are aiming to extend their unbeaten start to their Premier League title defence, though next Tuesday's Champions League match against Real Madrid at the Bernabeu could prove a distraction. Owen will hope to forge a traditional little-and-large partnership with Peter Crouch, who scored a wonder goal against City in the corresponding fixture last season and linked up with Owen to good effect when they represented England.

Crouch this week backed Owen, who counts Liverpool, Real Madrid and Manchester United among his former clubs, to force his way back into the international reckoning.

"If he's playing regularly for Stoke and scoring in the Premier League, I don't see why he can't force his way into the England set-up," Crouch said.

City's Manchester neighbours United face Wigan Athletic (1400), but summer signing Robin van Persie, whose hat-trick rescued his team against Southampton in their previous outing, is an injury doubt.

With Wayne Rooney already ruled out, United might turn to Danny Welbeck to lead the line after Van Persie suffered a thigh injury and was substituted at halftime in the Netherlands' 4-1 win over Hungary on Tuesday.

United could also be without playmaker Shinji Kagawa, who was forced out of Japan's 1-0 win over Iraq on Tuesday with a back problem.—Reuters

Serena, Sharapova to join Murray in Brisbane

SYDNEY, 13 Sept—French Open winner Maria Sharapova will join US Open champions Serena Williams and Andy Murray in warming up for next year's Australian Open at the Brisbane International, organizers said on Thursday.

Williams and Murray started their seasons at the tournament this year but Russian Sharapova will be making her first appearance at the event, which takes place at the Queensland Tennis Centre from 31 December to 6 January.

"Going into Australia after a long off season you always want to have the best possible matches," the 25-year-old, losing finalist at Melbourne Park this season, said in a news release.

"I tried to put Brisbane

on the map last year but unfortunately couldn't make it out of injury... I have heard so many great things about it."

Scherzer shines as Tigers claw back White Sox

Baseball

Detroit Tigers starting pitcher Max Scherzer

DETROIT, 13 Sept—Starter Max Scherzer was dominant early and the Detroit batters backed him up in the latter stages as the Tigers ate into Chicago's American League Central lead with an 8-6 victory over the White Sox on Wednesday.

Scherzer (16-6) struck out seven, to increase his Major League-leading total to 220, and allowed just one run in six innings to set the tone for Detroit as they pulled within one game of Chicago at the top of the division. "I knew this was the biggest start for me this season," Scherzer told reporters. "It's September baseball. I wanted the ball in this situation for that very reason." The Tigers have won two-of-three in the series heading into Thursday's finale.

Detroit (75-67) took control with three runs in the fifth inning and kept piling it on with Prince Fielder's three-run home run in the seventh for a 6-1 lead.

They moved 8-1 ahead in the top of the eighth but the White Sox (76-66) made a late charge against the visiting bullpen. Kevin Youkilis blasted a three-run homer in the bottom of the eighth, where Chicago scored four runs, and their rally brought the tying run to the plate in the ninth but Orlando Hudson struck out to end the game.—Reuters

UK's Cameron apologizes for 1989 soccer stadium disaster

LIVERPOOL, 13 Sept—British Prime Minister David Cameron said on Wednesday he was “profoundly sorry” for failures and cover-ups in the wake of the 1989 Hillsborough soccer disaster in which 96 spectators died after a crowd crush in the stadium. Attempts by the police to deflect the blame for Britain’s worst sporting disaster onto Liverpool fans to cover up their own flawed response and the dangers of an outdated stadium amounted to a “double injustice”, he said.

The victims died in an overcrowded fenced-in enclosure at the Hillsborough stadium in Sheffield, northern England, a tragedy that changed the face of English soccer and ushered in a new era of modern, all-seated venues.

Britain was shocked by harrowing images of young fans crushed against metal fences, bodies lying on the pitch and spectators using wooden advertising hoardings as makeshift stretchers on a warm spring afternoon. The Conservative Party leader spoke after the release of an independent panel's investigation into the deaths that said police had sought to blame the Liverpool fans, portraying them as aggressive, drunk and ticketless and bent on packing into the already crowded stadium.

Speaking in parliament, Cameron called the disaster “one of the greatest peacetime tragedies of the last century” and acknowledged that the report would be harrowing for relatives of the deceased. “It was wrong that the families have had to wait for so long - and fight so hard - just to get to the truth,” he said. “And it was wrong that the police changed the records of what happened and tried to blame the fans.

“On behalf of the government, and indeed our country, I am profoundly sorry for this double injustice that has been left uncorrected for so long.”—Reuters

League and union exchange proposals as lockout looms Hockey

TORONTO, 13 Sept—The National Hockey League (NHL) and union representing its players exchanged proposals on Wednesday as negotiations for a new collective bargaining agreement resumed with the threat of a lockout just days away. The meeting was the first in almost a week and with the current deal set to expire at midnight on Saturday and owners prepared to impose a lockout, the next few days are crucial if the 2012-13 NHL season is to open as scheduled on 11 October.

NHL Players' Association (NHLPA) head Donald Fehr arrived at the league's Manhattan headquarters with a proposal and the NHL ready with a counter offer it said would be off the table if players do not accept it before the current agreement expires. "With every day we are experiencing, and will continue to experience, damage to the game and to the business of the game," NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman told reporters.

“What we would be prepared to do now to make a deal before there is extensive damage is not the same that we will be prepared to do in the event we get to the point where we have suffered the damage." The NHL's board of governors is set to hold meetings in New York on Thursday while the NHLPA will stage executive board and negotiating committee meetings, which are expected to be attended by close to 300 players.

No further formal negotiations are scheduled but Bettman said he was prepared to sit down and negotiate further with players at anytime. "If there is a real intent on the other side to make a deal then we will get into a room make a deal and address the issues in a meaningful way," said Bettman. "We looked at their proposal and it was clear there wasn't very much movement at all."

The main sticking point in the dispute, which threatens a fourth work stoppage in 20 years, lies with the two sides at odds over how to divide $3.3 billion in revenue.—Reuters
