Obama to sign short-term debt limit bill

WASHINGTON, 23 Jan— The White House on Tuesday said they welcomed the House Republicans' proposal of a short-term extension of debt limit and the President would sign the bill if it could reach his desk.

White House spokesman Jay Carney said in a news briefing that US President Barack Obama would prefer a long-term raising of the debt limit, but the GOP's shift from their hard-line stance was "certainly something that we welcome."

"We want to see the debt ceiling sort of removed from the process of the very important debates that we have over what we pay for, how much revenue we bring in, how we get our fiscal house in order," said Carney. "What happened... was a very significant development in terms of de-escalating the sense of conflict over this."

While cautioning that the bill has to overcome some concerns expressed by members of the House and the Senate before it can pass both chambers and reach the President's desk, Carney said Obama would not stand in the way of the bill becoming law.

The United States has already reached its 16.4-trillion-dollar debt limit, and the Treasury Department has said it could run out of extraordinary measures to pay the government bills by mid-February.

Top Republican lawmakers said on Friday that the House would vote on a bill this week to extend the nation's borrowing authority by three months in order to force the Senate to pass a budget to cut government outlays.

They have backed down from the demand that any debt ceiling increase be accompanied by comparable spending cuts.

The bill, which is likely to be approved by the House on Wednesday, would extend government borrowing authority until May, and set a deadline for the House and Senate to pass a formal budget.

Bolivia's president says Venezuela's Chavez in therapy, eyes return

Bolivia's President Evo Morales speaks during an interview with journalists at the presidential residence in La Paz on 13 Jan, 2013.—REUTERS

LAPAZ/CARACAS, 23 Jan—Venezuela's President Hugo Chavez is undergoing physical therapy to hasten his return from Cuba after surgery there last month for the cancer jeopardizing his 14-year rule, Bolivian President Evo Morales said on Tuesday.

The comments by Morales, a fellow leftist and close friend of Chavez, added to positive signals from Venezuelan officials that the president was improving and may be able to return from Cuba, where he had surgery on 11 December.

He has not been seen or heard from in public since then.

"I communicated with Cuba and, brothers and sisters, we have good news about our brother, President Hugo Chavez. He is already undergoing physical therapy to return to his country," Morales said in a speech to parliament in La Paz.

"Latin American leaders like Fidel (Castro) and Hugo Chavez are very much needed at international events, and I'm certain that soon we will be (together again) at presidential summits," Morales added, without giving more details.

There were rumours around New Year's Day that the socialist Chavez, 58, was on life support. They have given way in the past few days to speculation he may soon return to Venezuela.

Local media reports have said a military hospital in Caracas is being prepared to receive Chavez.

In the absence of detailed medical information, Venezuelans are debating whether Chavez may be able to recover well enough to continue governing or whether he wants to come home to smooth a handover of power or simply to say farewell. After Morales' comments, Information Minister Ernesto Villegas said no return date was yet planned for Chavez.

Though still in a

"difficult" and "complex" battle for his health, the latest news from Havana was promising and Chavez was in "good spirits", the minister said in comments carried live on TV after a cabinet meeting in Caracas.

"Commander Chavez is in Havana in the process of full re-establishment of his health," Villegas said. "The (latest) report was very encouraging ... There is no return date yet."

Before going to Cuba, Chavez named Vice President Nicolas Maduro, a former bus driver who rose through the ranks to become one of Chavez's most faithful allies, as his preferred successor should he be incapacitated. Maduro would, though, have to win a new vote.

Netanyahu turns to Iran after narrow election win

JERUSALEM, 23 Jan— Hawkish Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu claimed victory in Israel's parliamentary election, shrugging off surprise losses to centre-left challengers and vowing on Wednesday to stop Iran from acquiring nuclear weapons. However, Tuesday's vote, which also disappointed religiously inspired hardliners, may deflect the premier's focus on confronting Teheran and resisting Palestinian demands as Israel's secular, middle-class demanded new attention to domestic issues.

That, in turn, might draw Netanyahu toward a less fractious relationship with his key ally, US President Barack Obama, who himself embarked on a new term this week with great ambitions.

Exit polls showed the Israeli leader's right-wing Likud and the ultra-nationalist Yisrael Beiteinu would remain the biggest bloc in the 120-member assembly, but with only 31 seats, 11 fewer than the 42 the two parties held in the last parliament. If the exit polls compiled by three local broadcasters prove correct — and they normally do in Israel — Netanyahu would be on course for a third term in office, perhaps leading a hardline coalition that would promote Jewish settlement on occupied land.

Top US commander in Afghanistan cleared in Pentagon inquiry

WASHINGTON, 23 Jan— General John Allen, the commander of US and NATO forces in Afghanistan, was cleared by Pentagon investigators of allegations of professional misconduct over email exchanges with a Florida socialite, US officials said on Tuesday.

The decision by the Defence Department's Inspector General helps lift a cloud that has hung over Allen, who is married and has two daughters, ever since he became indirectly ensnared in the scandal that forced David Petraeus to resign as CIA Director in November.

It could also resurrect the four-star general's military career—although a US official told Reuters that, as of late Tuesday, no decision had been made on whether to proceed with Allen's nomination to become the top US military commander in Europe.

President Barack Obama put that nomination on hold when the investigation was announced in November, even as he expressed confidence in Allen's ability to serve out the final months of his command in Afghanistan.

"With the investigation having only recently concluded, no decisions have been made on moving the nomination forward," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"But it's entirely possible that it could move forward in the days or weeks ahead."

The Pentagon inquiry centered on emails between Allen and Jill Kelley, a Tampa, Florida, resident who knew Allen when he served as the No 2 officer at the US military's Tampa-based Central Command from July 2008 to June 2011.

The Kelley-Allen emails surfaced when the FBI investigated Kelley's allegations of receiving anonymous, harassing emails from someone else about Petraeus. Those other emails led the FBI to uncover an extramarital affair between Petraeus and his biographer, Paula Broadwell.—Reuters

Scientists convene to study impact of Gulf of Mexico oil spill

HOUSTON, 23 Jan—More than 1,000 scientists and public officials gathered Monday in the US state of Louisiana to review the short and long-term effects of the 2010 oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Gulf of Mexico Oil Spill & Ecosystem Science Conference, the largest of its kind, is looking into the effects of pollution resulting from the spill and its effects on natural systems in the gulf and along the shoreline, and on the people who live and work there, according to news website NOLA.com.

The conference was kicked off by Thad Allen, the federal government's former national incident commander during the BP oil spill in 2010. Allen discussed his experience in coordinating oil spill responses and what research was needed to improve the response from a management perspective.

Even though the US government and industry attempted to clear some scientific issues likely to be raised during a major oil spill response, sometimes those efforts were not adequate, such as the approval of dispersants and the use of burning to keep as much oil as possible from reaching the shoreline, Allen said.

Responders also were ill-equipped to deal with health issues, ranging from concerns about the quality of testing to seafood safety, to the suicide of an Alabama boat captain participating in the Vessel of Opportunity program, he added.

To overcome many of these problems, Allen suggested the Oil Pollution Act and other laws be changed to develop a more unified structure that could work across legal and political boundaries.

Allen also recommended scientific information collected before and during the response be released to the public, in order to avoid misunderstanding about the effects on the environment or public health.

During the three-day conference, hundreds of scientific presentations will be made, ranging from socioeconomic effects of the spill to developments in dispersant science and technology. A public forum was planned for Tuesday on the gulf's ecosystems and prospects for recovery.

Google to kill passwords and bring physical keys embedded with smart chips

NEW DELHI, 23 Jan—Search giant Google is set to kill off passwords and is experimenting with USB keys, mobile phones and even jewelry that can act as a physical 'key' to give users access to their account.

The firm's security experts including an Indian are set to publish their findings next month, the 'Daily Mail' reported.

In the upcoming issue of IEEE Security & Privacy Magazine, Google Vice President of Security Eric Grosse and engineer Mayank

Upadhyay will detail what is basically a physical key with a 'smart chip' embedded inside it.

Along with many in the industry, we feel passwords and simple bearer tokens such as cookies are no longer sufficient to keep users safe," the pair write in their paper, according to Wired.

To log, users simply place the tiny Universal Serial Bus (USB) drive into their computer. The firm is also believed to be experimenting with wireless chips that are already built into some mobile phones, and can even be built in jewelry. "We'd like your smartphone or smart-card-embedded finger ring to authorise a new computer via a tap on the computer, even in situations in which your phone might be without cellular connectivity," the team writes.

"One option uses a tiny USB key called a YubiKey. When the user plugs the key into a laptop, they are automatically logged into all of their Google accounts - without ever having to type in a password," they explain. "Another option uses a 'smartcard-embedded' finger ring to authorise a new computer via a tap on the computer," they said.

The firm is also believed to be addressing the obvious problem with the system users losing their 'key' and is thought to be developing a simple system to replace them.

However, the pair admit that they will have to rely on websites to support the scheme. "Others have tried similar approaches but achieved little success in the consumer world," they write. "Although we recognise that our initiative will likewise remain speculative until we've proven large scale acceptance, we're eager to test it with other websites," they say.—PTI

Government to auction 700Mhz spectrum for 4G services in 2014

NEW DELHI, 23 Jan—The government on Monday said it will auction spectrum in 700Mhz band, which is used for offering high-speed Internet services through fourth generation technologies, in 2014.

"We are going to auction the 700 band in any case by 2014," Telecom Minister Kapil Sibal said during the commissioning of country's first lab for measuring specific absorption rate (SAR) for mobile handsets.

The 700Mhz spectrum band ranges from 698Mhz to 806Mhz and has been identified by the International Telecommunication Union for telecom services. "We have set up a lab in the country so that mobile phones can be tested here for electromagnetic radiations," Sibal said.

He added more such labs will be set up across the country starting with Mumbai. The Telecommunication Engineering Centre SAR lab, which has been commissioned at a cost of Rs. 2.5 crore, is the first lab in the country for independent audit of SAR value, self-certified by mobile handset manufacturers and importers in India.

The lab is capable of making SAR measurement for CDMA, GSM 2G and 3G mobile handsets in the frequency band of 800MHz, 900MHz, 1800MHz and 2100MHz.

The lab is also capable of making measurement of SAR value against the International Commission on non-Ionising Radio Protection (ICNIRP) limit of 2 Watt per kg measured over 10 gram of tissue as well as the recently adopted 1.6 watt per kg measured over 1 gm of tissue. Sibal also commissioned a Next Generation Network (NGN) lab in TEC, which serves the objectives of testing and certification as well as network related study for any Internet Protocol (IP) based equipment.—PTI

Samsung's T9000 smart refrigerator runs on Android, includes apps like Evernote and Epicurious

MUMBAI, 23 Jan—Refrigerators are getting smart. A new model released earlier this month runs apps to help users browse recipes, create shopping lists and manage the expiration dates of items like yogurt and milk.

The T9000 refrigerator by electronics company Samsung has a 10-inch Wi-Fi-enabled touchscreen and includes apps such as Epicurious for recipes and Evernote for note-taking.

"The fridge, because it's

China says top 10 steel mills to control 60 percent of capacity by 2015

A labourer works at a steel factory in Dalian, Liaoning Province on 4 Dec, 2012.—REUTERS

BEIJING, 23 Jan — China, the world's largest steel producer, aims to bring around 60 percent of total steel capacity under the control of its top 10 steel mills by 2015 as part of a wide-ranging plan to restructure its industries.

The Ministry of Industry and Information Technology (MIIT) announced on Tuesday it would encourage big state firms to acquire smaller rivals in a variety of industrial sectors, including automobile and machinery manufacturing as well as agriculture, metals and cement.

It said it would also seek to bring 90 percent of automobile production under the control of its top 10 firms by the end of 2015 as well as 90 percent of aluminium production capacity.

The government also plans to cut the number of firms involved in the exploration, smelting and separation of rare earths over the next three years.

Around half of China's total steel capacity is now owned by the 10 biggest steel firms following previous restructuring programmes, but Beijing has struggled to overcome obstructionism and red tape from local bureaucracies, or change the economic incentives that have allowed small and private mills to thrive.

"It is still quite difficult to consolidate and the key issue remains the local governments — they remain big supporters of steel mills," said Henry Liu, head of commodity research at Mirae Asset Securities in Hong Kong.—Reuters

US power regulator to fine Deutsche Bank unit over energy trading

WASHINGTON, 23 Jan — US electricity regulators are expected to impose a $1.5 million fine as early as Tuesday on a Deutsche Bank AG (DBKGn.DE) subsidiary over alleged power market manipulation, the Wall Street Journal reported, citing people with knowledge of the matter.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) earlier proposed that the energy-trading arm of Deutsche pay the fine and disgorgement of $123,198 in alleged ill-gotten profits last year, saying it manipulated California power prices.

Last week, the FERC requested a further extension in the legal deadline until 22 January amid the ongoing talks.

Deutsche Bank has disputed FERC's allegation that it manipulated the market by deliberately losing money on physical transactions to profit in derivative markets.

The action is part of a larger crackdown by the regulator targeting electricity trading schemes that it says resemble the market manipulations that caused California's energy crisis more than a decade ago, the

Indonesia foreign direct investment breaks new record in 2012

JAKARTA, 23 Jan — Indonesia foreign direct investment (FDI) reached new level of 221 trillion rupiah (around 24.6 billion US dollars) during 2012, or 26.07 percent up from previous year of 175.3 trillion rupiah.

Chatib Basri, the Investment Coordinating Board (BKPM) chairman said global economy condition especially in US and euro zone still remains gloomy, and it encourages the flow of foreign investment to come to Indonesia. "Indonesia is still promising due to high economic growth," he said here on Tuesday.

BKPM reported that cumulative investment from January to December 2012 reached 313.3 trillion rupiah, of which 92.2 trillion rupiah came from domestic direct investment (DDI) and 221 trillion rupiah from FDI. "The investment amount hit new historical record," he said.

Five biggest sectors have contributed to FDI achievement in 2012, mining sector (4.3 billion US dollars), transport, storage and telecommunication (2.8 billion US dollars), chemical and pharmaceutical industry (2.8 billion US dollars), metal, machinery and electronic industry (2.5 billion US dollars), and motor vehicle and other transport equipment industry (1.8 billion US dollars).

Chatib said natural resources are no longer foreign investors's favorite due to declining of commodity prices. "They (investors) move to other sectors such as food and transportation," he said.

Smoke-free laws linked to drop in child asthma attacks

LONDON, 23 Jan — Introducing laws banning smoking in enclosed public places can lead to swift and dramatic falls in the number of children admitted to hospital suffering asthma attacks, according to a study in England published on Monday.

Researchers at Imperial College London found there was a 12.3 percent fall in hospital admissions for childhood asthma in the first year after laws against smoking in enclosed public places and workplaces came into effect in July 2007. Similar anti-smoking legislation has been introduced in many other countries, including in the United States where it has also been linked to a reduction in childhood asthma emergencies.

"The findings are good news ... and they should encourage countries where public smoking is permitted to consider introducing similar legislation," said Christopher Millett from Imperial's school of public health, who led the study.

Asthma affects more than 300 million people worldwide and is the world's most common children's chronic illness. Symptoms include wheezing, shortness of breath, coughing and chest tightness. In Britain, it affects one in every 11 children.

Before the ban on smoking in enclosed public spaces was implemented in England, hospital admissions for children suffering a severe asthma attacks were increasing by 2.2 percent a year, peaking at 26,969 in 2006/2007, the researchers found. That trend reversed immediately after the law came into effect, with lower admission rates among boys and girls of all ages. There were similar reductions among children in wealthy and poor neighborhoods, both in cities and in rural areas.

German soldiers attacked in southern Turkey

ANKARA, 23 Jan — Seven German soldiers were attacked on Tuesday in the southern Turkish Province of Hatay by a group of activists who oppose the deployment of Patriot missile system in the country, local newspaper Today's Zaman reported on its website.

The seven German soldiers are in Iskenderun town of Hatay as part of the NATO mission for deploying the missile system on the Turkish-Syrian border.

The soldiers were besieged on their way to a bazaar in the center of Iskenderun by 26 activists from the Turkey Youth Union (TGB), who tried to throw sacks on their heads, said the report.

The soldiers escaped from the attackers with the help of local people and were not hurt, said the report, adding that they took shelter in a jewelry shop.

After police arrived at the scene, the soldiers were taken to their hotel by security forces. The group of activists continued their protest and chanted various slogans. "We will not allow Turkey to be the center for attacks in the Middle East. We will not allow American and NATO soldiers to travel freely in this country," the head of the group said. "Whether it was German or American soldiers whose heads we put sacks on, it does not matter."

China expands Yangtze River shipping capacity

YICHANG, 23 Jan — The shipping capacity of the Yangtze River, China's longest, has been vastly expanded as the result of decade-long efforts to dredge and deepen the river, an affiliate of the Ministry of Transport said on Monday.

The river's main course saw its shipping volume top 1.78 billion tonnes in 2012, four times that of 2003 with an average annual growth rate of 10 percent, said Xiong Xuebin, Director of the Yangtze River Hydrographic Bureau, an institution affiliated with the ministry.

Xiong said the revamped waterway now allows heavier ships to reach the upstream city of Chongqing, even during periods of dry weather.

He said the depth of the river's 370-km Chongqing-Yibin stretch has been increased to 2.7 meters from the original 1.8 metres.

US seeks long prison sentence for man who aided Mumbai plotters

CHICAGO, 23 Jan — David Headley, a Pakistani-American who admitted scouting targets for the deadly Islamic militant attacks on Mumbai in 2008 and later testified against the plotters, should face up to 35 years in prison, federal prosecutors said on Tuesday.

A prison term of 30 to 35 years for Headley "strikes a fair and just balance between the despicable nature of his crimes and the significant value of his cooperation," prosecutors told the judge who is scheduled to sentence Headley on Thursday.

The attacks in Mumbai in November 2008 killed more than 160 people, including six Americans.

Headley pleaded guilty to 12 charges, including conspiracy to bomb places of public use and commit murder. The guilty pleas included plotting an attack on a Danish newspaper. Africa pushes for control of peace efforts in war-ravaged eastern DR Congo

KAMPALA, 23 Jan — Chiefs of defence forces from Africa's Great Lakes region and Southern Africa Development Community met here on Sunday to finalize a military strategy to eliminate negative forces in war torn eastern Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC).

Behind the scene negotiations indicate the intricate position Africa is in to stay in charge of the peace efforts in eastern DRC after what may be termed as failed international efforts to make the guns silent.

Drumming up Pan Africanism and Africa being in charge of its future, Uganda's Minister of Defence Crispus Kiyonga told the defence chiefs that they must remain united and stick to the continent's long held view of providing solutions to its problems.

Kiyonga said in the face of regional efforts to end fighting in eastern DRC, there are opposing powers who still want to be in charge of pacifying the mineral rich central African country.

Following the flaring up of fighting in eastern DRC between the government troops and the M23 rebels, the Great Lakes region leaders intervened calling on member states to deploy a 4,000 strong Neutral International Force (NIF).

The force is supposed to fight the various local and foreign rebel groups holed up in the country.

Regional leaders are critical of the UN peace-keeping force in DRC (MONUSCO) accusing it of looking on as hundreds of thousands of Congolese are made homeless and others fleeing to neighbouring Rwanda and Uganda.

They keep citing the example where MONUSCO looked on as the M23 were capturing Goma, the provincial capital of North Kivu.

Kiyonga said behind the door negotiations through the UN system indicate that some world powers are not enthusiastic of the regional efforts to end the crisis.

"We have succeeded to leverage the cooperation of the UN. However if we do not keep our line of thinking firmly this opportunity could be lost. The Chiefs of defence staff must not be found lacking in articulating the most feasible mechanism to ensure that the NIF concept is maintained and command and control and political accountability not lost," he said.—Xinhua

British woman, 56, gets death for smuggling cocaine into Bali

DENPASAR, 23 Jan — An Indonesian court sentenced a middle-aged British woman to death on Tuesday for smuggling cocaine worth more than $2.5 million into the resort island of Bali.

Lindsay Sandiford, 56, was found guilty of smuggling 4.8 kg (11 lbs) of the drug hidden in the lining of her suitcase on a flight from Bangkok in May. Sandiford, who was accompanied by a translator, covered her face several times with a head scarf as she listened to the verdict being read out.

It was not clear if she would appeal. Prosecutors had initially sought a jail term for Sandiford, taking into account her age.

Indonesia has some of the strictest drug trafficking laws in the world, with many foreigners languishing in jail on Bali.

The so-called Bali Nine were arrested in 2005 and found guilty of attempting to smuggle more than 8 kg of heroin into Australia. Their sentences ranged from 15 years' jail to death.

Education promotion, investment in the...

such as the media, economic system, market-oriented mechanisms and civic organization apart from the three main pillars: legislation, executive, and judiciary.

Together with political, economic and social reforms, the efficiency of the people and international aid play a vital role in carrying out tasks for national reconsolidation and development. Moreover, the educational objectives of the State should meet the needs of national development plans. And the role and future of younger generation of the national races in the process of national reconsolidation must also be taken into account.

Promotion of education is the same as making investment in the future. But it must suit the new economic system of the State which is now being implemented. We must also switch from an economic system in which focus is made on exploitation of natural resources to a new technology-based economic system.

New generation youths are the future of the State. International aid and experiences must be utilized for the purpose of promoting education. Our country is still a developing country. New plans are under way for increasing the education budget with effect from coming fiscal year for the purpose of poverty reduction, development of rural areas and development of the state economy.

Our government has been reforming the higher education sector, and has been carrying out the tasks of education promotion for the practical utilization of vocational subjects. At the same time student-centered approach has been introduced for the reform of basic education sector through negotiations with those involved in basic education. In promoting the participation of the private sector in education, we have encouraged the opening of many private schools by enacting the necessary law. We are striving for all children to complete primary education.

If we study the collaboration with BSRU, it is found that MoU between BSRU and Yangon National University of Arts and Culture under the Ministry of Culture was signed on December 6, 2010. BSRU has sent delegations of Thai students to the Yangon National University of Arts and Culture three times and the Yangon National University of Arts and Culture has sent Myanmar student delegations to BSRU twice in 2010. Moreover, discussions have been made to establish Centres of Excellence with cooperation between Yangon University and Johns Hopkins University in the United States, Mandalay University and Cologne University of Germany and Dagon University and Calcutta University in India. By doing so, youths will have the opportunity to exchange their experience and well-qualified educated youths will emerge.

In conclusion, as international support for the development of the education sector in Myanmar plays a vital role in the construction, development and maturation of the democratic practices of the State, I would like to request to BSRU for your further collaboration and support for the education sector.

BSRU established in 1896 is a university offering courses in management and administration. It has become a royal university since 14 June 2004.—MNA

1st Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum: A Landmark and Historic Event

PERSPECTIVES

Effective aids management will develop remote areas

About 700 representatives from donor countries, development partners, international organizations and government officials gathered recently in Nay Pyi Taw for the first time in 50 years to attend Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum which many called a milestone.

Nay Pyi Taw Accord for Effective Development Cooperation was approved at the forum. It was based on five principles embodied in Paris Declaration—Ownership, Alignment, Harmonization, Managing for Result and Mutual Accountability. It also reflects principles in Busan Partnership for Effective Development Cooperation—ownership, focus on results, inclusive development partnerships and transparency and accountability.

As Myanmar has entered the second phase of reforms, it has drafted Framework on Economic and Social Reform and National Comprehensive Development Plan.

Donor countries have pledged US$ 591.86 million in development aid in 2013-2014 fiscal year.

The timing of the forum is perfect. We need to grasp the opportunity while the donor countries are in active mood. Our swift action could lead our country back on the right track.

The government's thorough handling of foreign aids would play a vital role in development of least-developed corners of the country. Designation of the areas of priority should be considered carefully and based on the reliable data.

If we could not effectively tap the aids this time, we will likely to face the donor fatigue and to endure the poverty.

The government must ensure that the aids distribution gets rid of corruption and make the most of these foreign aids through systematic, transparent and collaborative aids management.

Most people in remote areas are ethnic people who have suffered largely from poverty and lower living standards compared with their fellow citizens in urban areas. We will lose the trust of our brethren if we fail to help out our fellow citizens of ethnic races.

In the past, we lived in a polarised world of nation states, north and south, east and west but today we live in an increasingly globalised world with multiple new partnerships between north and south, east and west and the emphasis is much more on building institutions, democratic governance and on policy dialogue. Though we used to live in a fragile world and a fragile international framework, at present, a strong set of global values to build on with the international human rights, human security and social development in prior agenda.

It is obvious to see the multiple private-public partnerships between new actors—civil society, private companies and research institutions. These trends together can create a significantly increased and much more predictable international financing framework for sustainable development in the coming decades. There will be new partners, new models, new approaches which also means that it has to move beyond the endless discussion on historic responsibility. Moreover, the trust, understanding, and cooperation become the prior areas to be achieved.

To take our country forward and build a better and more prosperous future for ourselves and for the generations to come, the several initiatives have been made and the result was that the first Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum was held in Myanmar for the very first and foremost. It was held at the International Convention Center at Nay Pyi Taw on 19 and 20 January 2013, which has been marked as landmark and historic event for Myanmar. This forum is being held mainly because the international donors who wish to help and partner with Myanmar in its reform process would like to know the priority sectors and areas in the country's reform strategy and development plans. With the discussions and presentations made in one and a half day, intended to come up with the Nay Pyi Taw Accord which was envisioned with this intention to ensure effective cooperation between the government and the development partners.

The Opening of this 1st MDCF was attended by President U Thein Sein, Vice-President Dr Sai Mauk

first Forum. The importance of engaging all stakeholders in the cooperation process, using the Paris Declaration Principles, was also pointed out and again the participants' presence here today was the proof of the efforts to involve such a wide range of players. He also emphasized his efforts to promote peace and political dialogue with ethnic groups especially with Kachins.

After the Opening Speech, the invited ambassadors, resident representatives of UN agencies, delegates from ASEAN member countries, representatives from global donor countries, development partners and international organizations posed for documentary photos together and Short Term Plan by Deputy Minister for National Planning and Economic Development U Set Aung. His Presentation gave insights of NCDP and Three Reforms undertaken by the Myanmar government: Political Reform-Inclusiveness; Economic reform-People-centered Development; and Public Administrative Reform—on good governance and clean government, transparency and accountability.

It was followed by the presentation on "The Framework for Economic and Social Reform (FESR)" by Dr Zaw Oo from the Myanmar Development and Research Institute. He drew the attention of the participants by highlighting on 10 Reform Strategies and their challenges.

The development partners expressed their appreciation for the excellence of the first two presentations, and congratulated the government on the quality of the FESR and the remarkable progress made so far in reforms.

Twelve interventions highlighted the timeliness of the Forum in considering how to support the reform efforts with increased cooperation. A conducive investment environment, focus on capacity development, regional cooperation, and engagement of all stakeholders by government were highlighted in the interventions. The links between socio-economic development and democracy and the importance of peace as a foundation for progress were also emphasized by several participants.

In this session, the importance of macro-economic stability, fiscal management, agricultural reforms, and development of infrastructure especially energy, as important elements for encouraging private sector development and providing the foundation for poverty reduction have been highlighted.

In the session 3, on "Culture of Democracy" was chaired by U Tin Htut Oo, the Chairman of NESAC. The Presenter was Dr Kyaw Yin Hlaing (NESAC) and he expressed on promoting national harmony that responded to the compelling presentation of the complexity and (See page 9)

Kham, Union Ministers, Deputy Ministers, Economic Ministers from States and Regions, representatives from the Pyidaungsu Hluttaw, representatives from 57 partner countries (including ambassadors, resident representatives of UN agencies, delegates from ASEAN member countries, representatives from global donor countries, development partners and international organizations), senior officials from respective ministries, civil society, national and international NGOs, and the private sector, altogether 656 participants attended this forum.

In his Opening Address, the President stressed how Myanmar and its partners could build on and deepen the ambitious political and economic changes being introduced in the country to achieve 'people-centered development' and how the government has committed to implement changes in line with the Framework for Economic and Social Reform (FESR) and asked partners to help Myanmar advance in its priorities. He also urged government, private sector, civil society organizations and international partners to work together systematically and transparently for Myanmar's development.

He also highlighted the Three Waves of Reform and their positive impacts on international policies towards Myanmar over the past two years, providing a very clear rationale for this with the President and the Vice-President.

The First Myanmar Development Cooperation Forum then continued its second session with An Address made by Union Minister for National Planning and Economic Development H.E. Dr Kan Zaw which highlighted the central importance of the FESR in guiding this cooperation, the work underway to prepare longer term plans and programmes, and the importance of not only financial resources but access to knowledge and experience in the cooperation.

He also highlighted the encouragement of the partnerships between development lenders and grant donors to enhance the quality and inclusiveness of loan projects. Most importantly, Myanmar's development cooperation at all times to exhibit the four key principles agreed at Busan-local ownership; focus on results; inclusive development partnerships and transparency and accountability to each other.

In realizing these principles, Myanmar has jointly developed the Nay Pyi Taw Accord for effective development cooperation which has been discussed and adopted by this forum.

After that, the Video presentation on Reform and Development in Myanmar was viewed by the participants to this Forum. The first Paper at this Forum was Myanmar Perspective Plan dynamics of change in Myanmar by cautioning against overwhelming our efforts and making sure there is consultation, cooperation and coordination in providing support to the efforts.

Addressing development and dignity deficits as the root cause of conflict and the importance of rule of law and human rights, legal reform, and political reform were emphasized in sustaining present cease fire agreements and reducing future conflicts. Negotiations for peace and promotion of national harmony should be based on respect, inclusiveness and be comprehensive.

In Session 4, the Parallel sessions and discussion focused on Priorities and Plans, were made by Union Ministers, Deputy Ministers, region/state ministers, departmental heads, and representatives from donor's countries across the world, development partners and international organizations and special guests. There were altogether 12 Parallel Sessions started from 1400 hr till to 1700 hr. Partners responded by agreeing to focus their efforts on shared priorities in areas where they had specific expertise, including on 'quick wins' identified in the FESR. They also agreed to establish sectoral coordination processes to develop sectoral strategies and focus efforts on their implementation.

The summaries of the results of the twelve parallel sessions were as useful consultations on how to take forward this cooperation. Every session was marked by the spirit of enhancing mutual understanding and openness of exchange. In many cases, this was the first joint meeting between the Government of Myanmar ministries concerned and interested partners, and it served the purpose of starting off a process of broad-based dialogue. Both sides can build on this experience.

In terms of substance, in many areas, importance of inclusion and openness was emphasized as the central part of the strategy to address development challenges. The need for further prioritization and sequencing was also stressed as a common theme, as was the importance of linkages to the FESR initiatives. The following recommendations have been summarized for the discussions made at the different parallel sessions:

Education: the Comprehensive Education Sector Review highlights the importance of building reform on strong evidence, of building consensus based on analysis of gaps, and of expanding partnerships to reach out to all stakeholders. These should include all ministries involved, for example Science and Technology and Industry, and all States and Regions to ensure balance development of the sector. Similar inclusive efforts are needed to develop cultural heritage. Internal coordination inside ministries and departments should be improved.

Agriculture: participants identified opportunities for significant economic gains for rural communities. They identified major needs in human resource development, extension Services, and research and development, and proposed a special focus on social protection and landlessness.

Environment and Mining: to effectively and efficiently develop the environmental sector a clear sector strategy, policies and regulations that guides also other sectors and stakeholders is essential. Land management and climate change, and controlling pollution due to the mining industry were highlighted issues. The strategy would provide also the criteria for prioritization of the many projects presented by the government.

Employment: participants stressed the importance of effective worker protection, including for migrant workers (who are estimated to number 3 million in Thailand alone). GOM underlined its commitment to ending forced labor. Participants noted that balanced growth is important for maximizing employment.

Hotels and Tourism: the sector's considerable job creation potential was recognized, where it involves local communities and preserves culture and history. Sector priorities include human resource development and the creation of tourist infrastructure. Partners stressed the need for systematic prioritization based on careful analysis, including of regional experience. Electricity: participants agreed that increasing electricity supply and access is critical for economic growth and social development. They stressed the importance of integrated planning. With an effective regulatory framework, they noted efficient private investment can be expected. Efforts to improve energy efficiency and use of off-grid approaches for remote areas were also stressed.

Health: participants agreed a vision of universal health coverage that provides a safety net for all. This requires a partnership for health sector strengthening and a costed national health plan.

Communication: participants supported Government of Myanmar's ambitious plan to expand mobile and internet access. They commended Government of Myanmar's move to issue 2 new mobile licenses shortly. Participants emphasized the importance of access to communication technology for inclusive and people-centered development, but noted that attention needs to be paid to the development of rice content as well.

Transport: partners suggested prioritizing competing needs based on a master plan. They also urged greater emphasis on safety standards, vehicle registration, and road safety—and on environmental and social considerations.

Social Protection: Government of Myanmar emphasized that it is making a strategic shift in social protection, from being a provider of services to more of a regulator. Participants noted the importance of capacity building in this process. Participants recognized Myanmar's vulnerability to humanitarian emergencies and encouraged an inclusive approach to the effort to mitigate the risks and increase preparedness.

Public Administration: while welcoming plans to enhance the capacity for reform through training and institutional development, partners highlighted the importance of sequencing and prioritization of government efforts, South-South Cooperation especially from within ASEAN is an important source of experience and support. Support for the Population Census should be prioritized for international support, within an overall strategy to support improvement of statistical capacities.

Territorial Development: the detailed presentations of the 14 States and Regions would benefit from a strategic plan for each that emphasizes their advantages and opportunities, informed by access to information and data, and with a set of prioritized requirements. Partnerships with the private sector and civil society at the local level should be pursued to compliment government contributions.

In Day 2, continuation with Session 5 on Chair's Summary of Day 1 and arrangements for Day 2 were chaired by Dr Maung Maung Thein, Deputy Minister for Finance and Revenue. The topic of Financing Development was presented by the three presenters from MNPED and Ministry of Finance and Revenue. Presentation on Financing and Development by U Set Aung from MNPED, Presentation on Budget and Development by U Maung Maung Win from Ministry of Finance and Revenue, Presentation on Aid Flows by Daw Than Than Lin from MNPED. Myanmar's development financing needs were discussed, including plans to mobilize more domestic revenue and requirements for additional overseas assistance. Partners applauded the Government's determination to become increasingly self-reliant in its development financing over time. They expected to see Myanmar's budgetary allocations continue to shift to support key development priorities, particularly in chronically underfunded areas. It was agreed that the Government's reform would help it to use assistance more effectively, which ought to encourage further increases in ODA. The Government's commitment to work with partners to develop further its foreign aid management policies and systems to make them more efficient and effective and it was agreed that inclusive structures for ongoing dialogue would be created to carry forward the momentum of the Forum.

After that, session 6 was made with Three presentations first and called a final discussion period of over one hour to allow responses to all the presentations and for any country statements that could not be delivered on Day 1. Then it was followed by the Adoption of the Accord and Closing Remarks given by Dr Kan Zaw.

Retrospective view on aid effectiveness and its commitments can be seen through a series of specific implementation measures. The Paris Declaration (2005) lays out a practical, action-oriented roadmap to improve the quality of aid and its impact on development and also establishes a monitoring system to assess progress and ensure that donors and recipients hold each other accountable for their commitments. Those 5 Principles of Paris Declaration, in fact have gained support across the development community which outlined: ownership; alignment; harmonization; results and mutual accountability. To deepen those Principles, the Accra Agenda for Action (AAA) was made in 2008.

Another remarkable Meeting is the Busan Meeting held in 2011, in which Ministers from across the globe, from both developing and donor countries, government representatives, parliamentarians, civil society organizations and private sector representatives have come together for the Fourth High-Level Forum on Aid Effectiveness. The Busan meeting follows previous conferences in Accra and Paris. These meetings delivered the Accra Agenda for Action and the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness. The quality of aid is of utmost importance for the donors and is monitored against concrete targets agreed internationally such as the Paris Declaration (2005), the Accra Agenda for Action (2008), and the Busan Partnership for Effective Development Cooperation (2011).

From the outset, we note that there are a number of common threads and ideas that stretch across all those priorities and engagement under aid effectiveness that can be encountered. It is advisable to mapping the issues and their consequences from lessons learnt are also pointed out by several discussions during the Forum.

The Discussions in this Forum can have a significant impact on country-level policies, capacity development and innovation and partnerships in response to inter-linked development challenges. The deliberations made by all participants to this Forum will pave forward to concrete policy recommendations and guidelines for development work on the ground, tailored to respond to specific challenges and shaped by multi-stakeholder. It is expected this kind of Forum will continue to address critical gaps on development cooperation. It is also expected that it must continue to be practical and forward-looking. It must evolve and focus on international cooperation for sustainable development. Moreover, it is agreed that the outcome of the Rio-20 Conference and the post-2015 development agenda are likely to have important implications for the future role of development cooperation.

In this MDCF Forum, the Government advised the meeting of its national development priorities and reflected in key planning documents currently being prepared, including the Framework for Economic and Social Reforms (FESR) and the National Comprehensive Development Plan (NCDP). Partners also strongly endorsed the Government's key development strategies, including the creation of 'good governance and clean government,' balanced private sector-led growth, and the use of participatory approaches.

The Forum culminated in adoption of the Nay Pyi Taw Accord for Effective Development Cooperation. The Accord presents series of commitments by the Government of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and its international partners to promote transparency, collaboration, and local leadership, ownership and management of development efforts. An Annual Action Plan would be prepared to advance the Accord and its measures monitored at subsequent meetings.

In conclusion, as an Observer, this kind of Forum is very informative and we are very passionate about our responsibilities. This Forum also gave ample opportunities to see other stakeholders do just that as well. Lastly, in accordance to its slogan mentioned with the Logo of this Forum, 1st MDCF is indeed a forum which calls for partnerships for action, implementation and success. In this regard, we have to look forward for those pledges made by great partners around the world at this Forum to change into actions with great enthusiasm.

Mandalay-Myitkyina train schedule change after series of mine blasts

MOHNYIN, 23 Jan—After a spate of mine blasts on railroads and bridges not only in Mohnyin, Mogaung townships in Kachin State but also in Indaw Township in Sagaing Region, departure and arrival time of Mandalay-Myitkyina trains will see a change beginning 25 this month, announced at stations in Kachin State. The new timetable makes the up and down trains to run in daytime within Kachin State, probably to reduce the risks, the locals conclude.

Depending on the types of trains, it takes at least 18 to 22 hours to run from Mandalay to Myitkyina, over 300 miles long route. However, it takes half a day to the whole day to repair a damaged railroad section once a mine blast occurs, says an official.—NLM-001

Pakistani PM to formally start consultations for elections

ISLAMABAD, 23 Jan — Pakistan's ruling party on Tuesday empowered the Prime Minister to start formal consultations with all political forces on the mode and modalities for holding elections, the PM office said.

The current assemblies will complete its terms in mid-March and parliamentary elections will be held within three months after that. As the elections fever gains momentum, the top leadership of ruling Pakistan Peoples Party met in Islamabad on Tuesday and discussed matters relating to the elections.

"The meeting urged the Prime Minister to hold consultations with all political forces on the mode and modalities for holding elections to the National and Provincial Assemblies in a free, fair, transparent and peaceful manner," the PM office said.

The Prime Minister decided to formally start the consultation process for this purpose, a statement said.

The meeting carried out an in-depth review of the political situation in the country with focus on the holding of free and fair elections in the country in accordance with the law and Constitution.

The meeting resolved that free and fair elections will be held in accordance with the constitution in a fair and free manner and within the time limit stipulated in the Constitution and will not be delayed even for a day.

The Prime Minister will discuss the establishment of a caretaker government that will supervise the elections under the law.

The main opposition Pakistan Muslim League (PML-N), led by former Prime Minister, Nawaz Sharif, has proposed two names for the caretaker prime minister, opposition sources say.

The PML-N leaders are also consulting other opposition parties to seek their backing for their nominees.

LONDON, 23 Jan—Veteran British rockers The Rolling Stones, who celebrated their 50th anniversary last year, were nominated for four NME music awards on Monday. The Stones, back in the limelight after a photo book, greatest hits album, documentary film and mini tour to mark their 2012 golden jubilee, were shortlisted for best live band, best book, music moment of the year and best music film.

They were one of four acts with four nominations each. The others were LA sisters Haim, an up-and-coming band tipped for the top by several industry polls, Australian rock band Tame Impala and British alternative hip hop artist

M.I.A.

Music magazine NME's nominations were decided by fans voting online, and the winners will be announced at The Troxy in east London on 27 February.

Li Na to meet Sharapova in semifinals while Ferrer takes on Djokovic

Maria Sharapova

MELBOURNE, 23 Jan—China's Li Na reached her third Australian Open semifinals in four years on Tuesday and will play

Maria Sharapova while defending champion Novak Djokovic eased into the men's semis to meet David Ferrer.

Former French Open champion Li knocked out fourth-seeded Polish Agnieszka Radwanska in straight sets.

Li ended the Polish's 13-match winning streak to reach her third semifinal at the Melbourne Park. She made the last four here in 2010 and 2011. Li lost to Kim Clijsters in 2011 final just before she took her first and only Grand Slam title at Roland Garros in 2011.

The 6-2, 6-2 quarterfinal victory against fellow Ekaterina Makarova not only set Sharapova up a semifinal encounter with Li, but also saw a new record set by the world No 2—Sharapova lost only nine games in five matches.

Sharapova double-baggelged her first two matches 6-0, 6-0, and then beat Venus Williams 6-1, 6-3 and Kirsten Flipkens 6-1, 6-0, beating Monia Sele's Australian Open record of losing 12 games before the semifinals.

Heading to a historical three Australian Open titles in a row, defending champion Djokovic bounced back from a marathon five-set fourth-round match just 48 hours earlier when he beat Czech Tomas Berdych 6-1, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4 in a much easier way.

The Serbian world No 1 showed little rustiness from that late finish to complete the quarterfinal in two hours 31 minutes.

"It was a great performance. I was hoping to have a shorter match, whoever won tonight, as long as it didn't go over five hours," Djokovic joked.

The victory guaranteed Djokovic's 11th consecutive Grand Slam semifinals and his semifinal opponent will be Spaniard Ferrer, who fought back from two sets down to beat his Spanish Davis Cup teammate Nicolas Pietrangeli 4-6, 4-6, 7-5, 7-6, 6-2.

Almagro had never beaten his compatriot in 12 previous attempts but appeared set to put the record straight when he took the first two sets and was serving for the third at 5-4.

But the Spaniard wasted the opportunity and ailed

twice more in the fourth set to serve out for the match as Ferrer fought to seal his progression.

Dwight Howard ejected in Lakers loss to Raptors

TORONTO, 23 Jan—Los Angeles Lakers centre Dwight Howard was ejected in the team's 108-103 loss to the Toronto Raptors in NBA action on Sunday afternoon. The ejection occurred with 1:18 left in the second quarter when Howard and Raptors forward Alan Anderson got tangled after a successful free throw by Metta World Peace.

Both players received a technical foul for their rough behaviour; Howard's was his second of the game. He had picked up one at the 4:43 mark of the first quarter after his shot was blocked by Raptors centre, Aaron Gray.

Following the game, Howard was not available to media for comments and had already left the locker room once the doors were opened to the media for post-game coverage. Lakers head coach Mike D'Antoni refused to offer an opinion on the incident, saying "That's the referee's call."

"The official told me he should just walk away. I said, 'What should he do, what back to the bench?' There's nothing he can do," added Bryant. "A guy comes up to him, puts a forearm in his chest and you say one thing, and now it's a double technical. I just don't agree with that."

Teammate Kobe Bryant did not hold back on his opinion of the play and was furious of the second technical foul issued to Howard.

"I really don't agree with that one at all," said

With two technical fouls today, Howard has accumulated a total of 80 in his nine-year NBA career with the Magic and Lakers. His ejection is his second of the season and his third of his career.—Xinhua

Ronaldinho vows "to give everything" to Brazil's cause

RIO DE JANEIRO, 23 Jan—Two-time FIFA World Player of the Year Ronaldinho has vowed to "give everything he has" to re-establish his place in Brazil's national team.

Ronaldinho was recalled to Brazil's squad on Tuesday by new coach Luiz Felipe Scolari for next month's international friendly against England at Wembley coaching staff to the people who work in the kitchen and especially the fans."

Stadium in London.

It comes after an impressive 2012 season for Brazilian top-flight outfit Atletico Mineiro in which the 32-year-old former Barcelona star scored nine goals and created 14 assists from 33 matches.

In a press conference to reveal the squad in Rio, Scolari challenged Ronaldinho to put his off-field controversies aside with a renewed focus on discipline and hard work.

"What I can say is that I will give everything I have to respond to what Felipe asks of me," Ronaldinho told media at Atletico's Belo Horizonte training base on Tuesday.

"I'm so happy to be back in the national team especially now when we are so close to the World Cup. I want to thank everybody at Atletico Mineiro, from the unpaid wages.

The Rio de Janeiro outfit responded by alleging the attacking midfielder had breached the terms of his contract by arriving to training under the influence of alcohol and sneaking a female friend into the team's hotel. Ronaldinho has denied the claims.

He says he owes his return to form to the faith shown by Atletico, which signed him just days after his ignominious Flamengo exit. "Everything that happened to me last year was very important, it made me happy and it was reflected in the way I played," Ronaldinho said.
