Yangon-Pathein railway link nearing completion

As the government is seeking means to improve the country's transportation facilities for convenience of the people, it is expanding its motor road and railroad networks.

Yangon-Pathein railway link has been completed by 50 percent and is expected to be completed in coming year, according to engineers of the project.

"The railroad has the length of 40.34 miles. The project started since 2009-2010 fiscal year. The section I have been implementing (will be finished in May this year," project engineer U Zaw Min Oo of Yangon (Hlinethaya)-Ayeyawady (Nyaungdon) road section) said.

"The workforce of 450 is working day and night."

"There will be six railway stations and 105 bridges along the railroad."

U Zaw Ye Myint, project engineer of Yangon-Pathein railroad section explained, "Patheineinme railroad section was finished in 2011, leaving Einme-Sakkawt section to implement. The railroad section has the length of 54.75 miles. There are 127 railway stations along the railroad section. There are six railway stations, namely Singaung, Daunggyi, Einme, Kyondaigyi, Mayan and Pantanaw (Sakkawt) railway stations. The section will be completed in open season of 2013-2014 fiscal year."

Upon completion, the railroad will guarantee better transportation to the people on the western bank of Ayeyawady River plus the direct link with Yangon, the commercial city. Ayeyawady Region will enjoy swift commodity flow.

US Senate approves John Kerry as next secretary of state Democratic Senator John Kerry.

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan—US Senate on Tuesday approved Democratic Senator John Kerry as the next secretary of state, who is set to replace Hillary Clinton.

The Senate confirmed Kerry's nomination in a 94-3 vote, hours after the chamber's Foreign Relations Committee approved his nomination. Kerry has chaired the committee himself for the past four years.

"Senator Kerry will need no introduction to the world's political and military leaders and will begin Day One fully conversant not only with the intricacies of US foreign policy, but able to act on a multitude of international stages," said Democratic Senator Bob Menendez at the Senate, who serves as the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Senator Bob Corker, the top Republican on the same committee, praised Kerry's testimony on Thursday and called him "a realist" in dealing with world affairs. At the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee earlier the day, Kerry appreciated the praises from his colleagues. "I'm honoured beyond words," he said. "What a privilege to work with you and now to work with you in a different way. I thank you very, very much."

Kerry is expected to be sworn in this week, as Clinton will leave her job on Friday. A senator from the state of Massachusetts, Kerry was nominated by US President Barack Obama on 21 December as the next chief diplomat of the United States.

Kerry offered support to Obama's re-elections, and acted in preparation for his debate with Mitt Romney, the president's Republican rival.—Xinhua

Dutch parliament supports Croatia's EU accession

THE HAGUE, 30 Jan—A majority of the Dutch parliament on Tuesday approved the accession of Croatia to the European Union (EU) later this year.

Croatia finished accession negotiations in June 2011 and on 9 December, 2011 signed the Treaty of Accession. After that the Croats voted in favor of EU membership in a referendum.

Before 1 July, all EU member states should have ratified the treaty, followed by accession of Croatia as the 28th EU member.

The Dutch parliament agreed with Foreign Minister Frans Timmermans, who stated that the EU has learned from the mistakes that were made when Romania and Bulgaria joined in 2007. After their accession, it became clear that these countries were not meeting the conditions and therefore should not have been admitted.

According to Timmermans, the Croats have made sufficient progress to join the Union.

Labour (PvdA), the Liberals (VVD), the Christian Democrats (CDA), the Democrats of D66 and GroenLinks (Green Left) supported the accession of Croatia, although government parties PvdA and VVD still find the situation in Croatia is not yet ideal.

Only the anti-Europe Party of Freedom PVV and the Socialist Party SP are against the Croatian accession.—Xinhua

US Transportation Secretary LaHood to step down

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan—US Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood said on Tuesday that he planned to step down, marking the sixth department head to leave office as President Barack Obama begins his second term.

"I have let President Obama know that I will not serve a second term as Secretary of the US Department of Transportation," Ray LaHood said in a statement, adding "I plan to stay on until my successor is confirmed to ensure a smooth transition for the Department and all the important work we still have to do."

In a statement, Obama thanked LaHood for what he's done over the last four years, saying "As Secretary of Transportation, he has fought to create jobs and grow our economy by rebuilding our roads, bridges and transit systems. Under his leadership, we have made significant investments in our passenger rail system and laid the high-speed rail network of the future."

During his tenure, LaHood has put safety front and centre with the Distracted Driving Initiative and a rule to combat pilot fatigue that was decades in the making. He has also strengthened consumer protections with new regulations on buses, trucks and airlines.

Before becoming secretary in 2009, LaHood served 14 years in Congress representing an Illinois district. He's the only Republican still in Obama's Cabinet.

Fear, threats and bad food: life aboard a sanctions-hit Iranian ship

CHENNAI, 30 Jan—The eight Indian crew members on board the MV Amina had no inkling they were trapped on the frontline of the West's economic war against Iran.

All experienced seamen, they joined the Iranian-flagged cargo ship last year. Within months, they were caught up in a fight to prevent the ship fleeing to international waters to escape port arrest in Sri Lanka. Having disobeyed the captain's orders to weigh anchor, their courage turned to fear.

"The captain taunted us that if you fall in the water I will give a report that says that you tried to commit suicide," said 42-year-old Jesuraj, a foreman of the ship, speaking to Reuters after he and the others eventually made their way home.

"We had a lifeboat on standby and were ready to escape if required. We slept with our life jackets with the hope that if the ship did leave for Iran we would jump off and try to get the attention of some fishing boat."

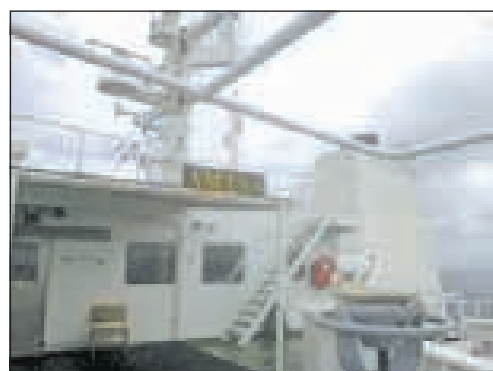

For a few miserable weeks, this was life on the sharp edge of a sanctions regime that has battered the Iranian economy and squeezed the shipping fleet it relies on for commerce, cutting off funds that the West says could be ploughed into expensive nuclear arms programmes.

The Indians left the ship after authorities intervened, returned their confiscated passports and took them ashore in Sri Lanka.

Subsequently, the Amina was fired on by Sri Lanka's navy when it tried to make another getaway. A few days later, the Iranian captain took advantage of rough seas to flee, bringing the ship into Iran's Bandar Abbas port last week.

Violence engulfs key Syrian cities, activists say 50,000 killed in crisis

DAMASCUS, 30 Jan—Three explosive devices went off on Tuesday in Syria's capital of Damascus, leaving injuries and property loss, as a broad-based opposition watchdog placed the overall death toll of Syria's 22-month-old crisis at 50,000.

An explosive device affixed under a car went off on Tuesday near Jisr al-Zahira area in Damascus, leaving material damages only, the pro-government Sham FM said, adding that another roadside bomb tore through the car of a Syrian parliamentarian, who was injured in the blast. The state-run SANA news agency, meanwhile, said a roadside bomb went off in the old quarter of Damascus late on Tuesday, injuring a storekeeper. Also in the old quarter of Damascus, a fire broke out in the Swaiqa market late Tuesday, setting ablaze a number of shops and killing three people, a local online news website said, adding that the reason behind the fire has been unknown. Meanwhile, a military source was quoted by local media as confirming that the town of Aqraba, located near the road to the international airport of Damascus, has become under control of the Syrian army after long-standing battles with the rebels. The state-media also said the army eliminated many gunmen during clashes in hotbeds around Damascus.—Xinhua

YouTube preparing to offer paid subscriptions this year: report

SAN FRANCISCO, 30 Jan—YouTube, the video website owned by Google Inc, plans to offer paid subscriptions to some of the content on its site later this year, according to a media report.

YouTube has reached out to several video producers, asking them to submit applications to create for-pay “channels,” according to a report in AdAge on Tuesday that cited anonymous sources.

The first such channels could be available to consumers by the second quarter for between $1 a month and $5 a month, AdAge reported.

YouTube, the world’s No 1 video website, has been moving to add professional-grade video programs to the vast archive of amateur, home-shot videos that made the site popular. The current crop of such channels is available to consumers for free and supported by advertising that appears alongside the videos.

YouTube has hinted in the past that it was considering offering subscription-based paid content. YouTube boss Salar Kamangar told Reuters in June that there was strong demand among certain YouTube video producers, such as video game networks, to offer fee-based programs.

“They have such a big audiences that they can start to segment their audiences into those that are willing to pay a higher amount” for things like new gaming tricks, Kamangar said at the time. He also said that cable channels with small audiences could potentially be offered to consumers through YouTube on an “a la carte” basis. YouTube was not immediately available for comment.

Russia takes deeper roots in Antarctica for scientific purposes

MOSCOW, 30 Jan—Russia entrenched itself deeper in Antarctica for continuing scientific researches there, a government Press service said on Tuesday.

Russian Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev has signed a plan of work of the Russian Antarctic expedition for 2013-2017 and beyond, according to the Press service.

The plan includes conducting annual expeditions in Antarctica for land and marine studies, observing global climate changes and supporting space exploration.

“Overall, the plan focuses on expansion of Russia’s presence in Antarctica and implementation of some key projects,” it said. Russia maintains five permanent polar stations in Antarctica and plans to allocate another 60 billion rubles (about 2 billion US dollars) to implement a wide range of new projects, state-run RIA news agency said.

The plan also envisaged further research of the subglacial Lake Vostok where Russia’s Vostok Station is deployed. Russia joined the Antarctic Treaty and its Environmental Protocol in 1959. The current Russian plan of Antarctic explorations expired in 2012.

RIM faces its day of reckoning with BlackBerry 10 launch

NEW YORK, 30 Jan—The innovative line of BlackBerry smartphones that Research In Motion Ltd will formally unveil on Wednesday has already succeeded on one crucial count—getting RIM back in the conversation.

The new BlackBerry 10 has created a buzz among technology watchers and financial analysts, thanks to nifty features that may set it apart in an overcrowded smartphone market. RIM stock has almost tripled over the past four months on hopes the devices can restore RIM to sustained prosperity.

Reviewers like the browser speed and the intuitive keyboard on RIM’s new touchscreen. A feature called BlackBerry Balance, which keeps corporate and personal data separate, could help RIM rebuild its traditional base of big business customers.

Research In Motion Chief Executive Officer Thorsten Heins is silhouetted during the BlackBerry World event in Orlando on 1 May, 2012.

REUTERS

It’s a welcome start for RIM, the smartphone pioneer that has teetered on the brink of irrelevance. But success will come only if consumer and business customers embrace the new technology in the weeks and months after CEO Thorsten Heins takes the wraps off the phone at a glitzy New York launch. RIM is gambling its survival on the much-delayed BlackBerry 10, hoping to claw its way back into an industry now dominated by Apple Inc’s iPhone and Samsung Electronics Co Ltd’s Galaxy.

The timing may be just right. The new phone hits the market just as the iPhone’s remarkable run is showing some signs of slowing. “I really do believe that the consumer market as a whole is ready for something new,” said Kevin Burden, head of mobility at Strategy Analytics, an industry consulting firm. “I have to believe that there is some level of user fatigue that plays into the longevity of some of these platforms,” he added, referring to Google Inc’s Android and Apple’s iOS, which are both more than five years old. “RIM is probably timing it right.”

NASA to launch ocean wind monitor to space station

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan—The US space agency NASA announced on Tuesday that it will launch the ISS-RapidScat instrument to the International Space Station in 2014 to measure ocean-surface wind speed and direction.

The ISS-RapidScat instrument will help improve weather forecasts, including hurricane monitoring, and understanding of how ocean-atmosphere interactions influence Earth’s climate.

It will help fill the data gap created when QuikScat, which was designed to last two years but operated for 10, stopped collecting ocean wind data in late 2009.

NASA to launch ocean wind monitor to space station.

NASA and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration have studied next-generation replacements for QuikScat, but a successor will not be available soon. To meet this challenge cost-effectively, NASA proposed adapting leftover QuikScat hardware in combination with new hardware for use on the space station.

ISS-RapidScat will have measurement accuracy similar to QuikScat’s and will survey all regions of Earth accessible from the space station’s orbit. The instrument will be launched to the space station aboard a SpaceX Dragon cargo spacecraft.

It will be installed on the end of the station’s Columbus laboratory as an autonomous payload requiring no interaction by station crew members. It is expected to operate aboard the station for two years.

Could an earlier lunchtime help you lose weight?

NEW YORK, 30 Jan—Dieters who ate early lunches tended to lose more weight than those who had their midday meal on the later side, in a new Spanish study. The finding doesn't prove bumping up your lunch hour will help you shed those extra pounds. But it's possible eating times play a role in how the body regulates its weight, researchers said. "We should now seriously start to consider the timing of food—not just what we eat, but also when we eat," said study co-author Frank Scheer, from Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School in Boston.

His team's research included 420 people attending nutrition clinics in southeast Spain. Along with going to regular group therapy sessions with nutrition and exercise counseling, dieters measured, weighed and recorded their food and reported on their daily physical activity. Study participants were on a Mediterranean diet, in which about 40 percent of each day's calories are consumed at lunch. About half of people said they ate lunch before 3:00 pm and half after. Over 20 weeks of counseling, early and late lunchers ate a similar amount of food, based on their food journals, and burned a similar amount of calories through daily activities.

However, early eaters lost an average of 22 pounds—just over 11 percent of their starting weight—and late eaters dropped 17 pounds, or nine percent of their initial weight. What time dieters ate breakfast or dinner wasn't linked to their ultimate weight loss, according to findings published on Tuesday in the International Journal of Obesity. One limitation of the study is that the researchers didn't assign people randomly to eat early or late - so it's possible there were other underlying differences between dieters with different mealtimes. Certain gene variants that have been linked to obesity were more common in late lunchers, for example.

Dr Yunsheng Ma, a nutrition researcher from the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester, said people who eat later may have extra food in their stomach when they go to sleep—which could mean more of it isn't burned and ends up being stored as fat. "One of the other aspects to this is, what we know is glucose tolerance for example—how well you can deal with sugar in your food—your body is better able to cope with that in the morning than in the evening," Scheer told Reuters Health.

More adults need vaccines, and not just for flu: Centres for Disease Control and Prevention

ATLANTA, 30 Jan—The flu isn't the only illness adults should be immunized against, US health officials said on Tuesday, as a new study found current adult vaccination rates in the country "unacceptably low." The report by the Centres for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) concluded that a "substantial increase" in adult vaccinations is needed to prevent diseases including pneumonia, tetanus, diphtheria, hepatitis, shingles and whooping cough.

"Far too few adults are getting vaccinated against these important diseases, and we need to do more," said Dr Howard Koh, an assistant secretary for the US Department of Health and Human Services. In 2011, there were 37,000 cases of invasive pneumonia in the United States, and most of the 4,000 people who died from the illness were over the age of 50, Koh said. The CDC, a federal agency, recommends that older patients at risk for pneumonia receive vaccinations for the disease, he said.

Adults who don't get vaccinated can put others, including children, at risk, Koh said. In 2012, 9,300 adults were diagnosed with whooping cough out of a total of 42,000 cases. "When the source is identified, four out of five babies who got whooping cough caught it from someone in the home, a parent, sister, brother, grandparent or babysitter," he said. "These are just examples of why adult vaccines are critical to the public health of our country."

Ford set to offset losses in Europe with profits in North America

CHICAGO, 30 Jan—Ford Motor Co said on Tuesday that its profit in North America would be enough to offset its deepening losses in Europe in 2013.

With sales outlook deteriorating in Europe, Ford expects to lose two billion dollars there in 2013, worse than the 1.75-billion-dollar loss in 2012. However, the No 2 US automaker expects to earn more in North America in 2013.

Ford reported a pretax operating profit of nearly 1.7 billion dollars, or 31 cents per share in the fourth quarter 2012, better than the average analysts' estimate of 25 cents per share. This was also higher than the 1.1 billion dollars or 20 cents per share it earned a year earlier. Ford's fourth-quarter revenue totaled 36.5 billion dollars. Cancer gene mutation linked to earlier menopause

NEW YORK, 30 Jan—Women carrying BRCA mutations tied to breast and ovarian cancer may hit menopause a few years earlier than other women, according to a new study. Doctors already discuss with those women whether they want immediate surgery to remove their ovaries and breasts, or if they want to start a family first and hold off on ovary removal.

"Now they have an additional issue to deal with," said Dr Mitchell Rosen, who worked on the new study at the University of California, San Francisco Medical Centre. An estimated one in 600 US women carries the BRCA1 or BRCA2 gene mutation. Those mutations greatly increase the risk of breast and ovarian cancer.

According to the National Cancer Institute, a woman's chance of getting breast cancer at some point in her life increases from 12 to 60 percent with a BRCA mutation, and ovarian cancer from 1.4 percent to between 15 and 40 percent.

What has been less well studied is whether those mutations also affect a woman's egg stores and her chance of getting pregnant. For the new study, the researchers surveyed 382 California women who carried the BRCA1 or BRCA2 mutation and another 765 women who weren't known carriers. The study team focused specifically on women who went through menopause naturally—and not those who had their ovaries removed before menopause.—Reuters citizens died in the siege on a gas plant by Islamist militants earlier this month.

The Prime Minister's Office says Cameron will travel to Algeria on Wednesday to meet with his Algerian counterpart, Abdelmalek Sellal.

Cameron is expected to ask about the progress of the government's investigation into the siege, which took place at a gas plant jointly operated by British oil giant BP. Four Britons were among victims in the siege, which resulted in the deaths of many foreigners, including 10 Japanese.

The two leaders are expected to discuss ways to increase cooperation in anti-terrorism efforts.

Cameron has said North Africa is becoming a "magnet for jihadists," and that Britain will work with other countries to combat terrorism in the region.

Fendi to fund restoration of Rome's Trevi Fountain

ROME, 30 Jan—Rome's famous Trevi Fountain is being restored courtesy of the Italian designer brand Fendi, a well-known fashion house.

City officials announced on Monday that Fendi will shoulder the cost of 2.18 million euros, or about 2.9 million dollars, for the 20-month long project. The fountain was originally completed in 1762 and is known for tourists throwing coins into the water to ensure a prompt return to the historical city.

The work will proceed in a way that will allow visitors to see the fountain and toss in coins. In return for the funding Fendi will be able to put up a small sign near the fountain for 4 years. This marks another case where the cultural assets of the country, which is continuing austerity measures, are being restored by private sector firms. The restoration of Rome's ancient Colosseum is proceeding with funds from another designer brand. Rome Mayor Gianni Alemanno expressed hope for more donations of the same kind, saying that they will not be able to save the cultural history of the country without similar initiatives.—NHK

Xi stresses loyalty, stability of armed police

BEIJING, 30 Jan— Chinese leader Xi Jinping on Tuesday stressed the stability of the armed police and its absolute loyalty to the Communist Party of China (CPC).

Xi, general secretary of the CPC Central Committee and also chairman of the CPC Central Military Commission (CMC), made the remarks during an inspection tour of the armed police in Beijing. He urged them to build a strong force with a fine work style.

"The armed police forces should be united, secure and stable," Xi said.

The armed police should follow the absolute leadership of the CPC, and loyalty to the Party is always the foremost political requirement for them, he said. Xi reiterated that the armed police should be aware of its role in maintaining stability and improve its fighting capacity in order to achieve multiple tasks, including routine duties as well as handling emergencies. He also told the country's armed police forces to keep on high alert in maintaining the country's stability, as the current situation is "complicated."

"Forces should always maintain their readiness and capabilities for combat to ensure victory," Xi said. "The forces' fighting capability is the center for armed police construction."

Also, such construction should be carried out in a scientific and comprehensive manner, he said.

China's parliamentary session to avoid extravagance

BEIJING, 30 Jan— The upcoming annual parliamentary session will be frugal, as well as feature shorter speeches and fewer traffic controls, according to a statement from the National People's Congress (NPC) Standing Committee on Wednesday.

Li Jianguo, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee, has urged efforts to improve work style and curb banquets during the first session of the 12th NPC, the statement said.

Li made the remarks following Chinese leader Xi Jinping's written comment calling for promotion of the fine tradition of "being diligent and thrifty" and the idea of "honour to frugality and shame to extravagance."

The NPC Standing Committee statement said expenditures will be tightened for the first session of 12th NPC. The intensity and duration of traffic controls during the session should be properly limited and road closures should be kept to a minimum. There will be no flowers in NPC deputies' hotel rooms and no welcoming ceremonies at the airport or railway stations, according to the statement.

All deputies will eat at buffets without expensive food or alcohol, while extravagant galas, gifts and performances will not be arranged.

NPC deputies will be encouraged to focus on key issues and avoid empty talk, while the media will be encouraged to report more on deputies from grassroots areas. The number of session staffers will also be strictly controlled, the statement added.

The measures are part of a sweeping campaign to reduce extravagance and improving the working style of Communist Party of China (CPC) and government officials. The first annual session of the 12th NPC will convene on 5 March, 2013, during which top state leaders, including the country's president, will be elected.

Argentina rebuffs Israeli anger over 1994 bombing probe

BUENOS AIRES, 30 Jan— Argentina said on Tuesday that it "vehemently rejected" Israel's demand for explanations on a joint commission set up by Argentina and Iran to probe the 1994 bombing of a Jewish centre in Buenos Aires.

"The attack suffered by our people on 18 July, 1994 did not involve any Israeli citizen. The victims were mostly Argentine citizens and include six Bolivians, two Poles and a Chilean," the foreign ministry said in a statement.

Earlier in the day, Argentina's Ambassador Carlos Garcia to Israel was summoned to the foreign ministry for a clarification talk on the Memorandum of Understanding signed on Sunday between Argentina and Iran. Argentina's Foreign Ministry said it considered the "summons to demand explanations about sovereign decisions made by the Republic of Argentina to be an inappropriate act that we vehemently reject and that goes against the traditional ties of friendship existing between both countries."

On Sunday, Argentine President Cristina Fernandez announced the "historic" agreement with Iran and said the five-member commission will be composed of "internationally renowned legal experts," none of whom is from either of the two countries to ensure objectivity. One soldier injured in clashes with armed group in central Tunisia TUNIS, 30 Jan—Overnight clashes between a group of three armed men and anti-terrorist units left one soldier injured in Tunisia's central town of Kasserine, near the border with Algeria, Mosaique FM reported on Tuesday.

The officer, who was injured in the leg following a heavy gunfire exchange between the security units and the assailants, was sent to a military hospital in the Tunisian capital of Tunis, according to the report.

The armed men who were carrying machine guns managed to escape into the nearby mountain of Salloum, where anti-terrorist units are combing with the help of helicopters.

A number of automatic weapons were seized, the report said.

Similar incidents involving groups of armed assailants were reported last month in the same area, near the Chaambi mountain. One member of the national guard was killed in clashes between his unit and the terrorists, the official TAP Press agency said.

Uruguay, Mexico to boost cooperation in education, trade

MONTEVIDEO, 30 Jan—Mexico and Uruguay have agreed to boost cooperation in education programmes and strengthen economic ties. The agreement was reached at a meeting here between Mexican President Enrique Pena Nieto and his Uruguayan counterpart Jose Mujica on late Monday.

During the meeting, Pena Nieto showed interest in Uruguay's "Plan Ceibal," an education programme aimed at providing each Uruguayan student with a laptop computer, and promised to initiate a similar programme in Mexico.

Mujica pledged to "transfer all our experience" to support the programme in Mexico.

Mujica also asked for establishing Uruguay's first technological university with cooperation from Mexico, which he said "has more than 60 technological universities."

In economic cooperation, Pena Nieto said he wants to expand bilateral trade with Uruguay under Mexico's free trade agreement with the Southern Common Market (Mercosur), which consists of Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay and Venezuela.

He advocated for a joint commitment "to establishing several mechanisms to revise the current free trade framework and expand our exchange."

Before the visit, Pena Nieto reaffirmed Mexico's interest in closer ties with the Latin American and Caribbean countries.

Pena Nieto and Mujica flew to Uruguay together from Santiago, Chile following the first summit between the Community of Latin American and Caribbean States and the European Union, which concluded on Monday.

Since Uruguay and Mexico signed a free trade agreement in 2004, bilateral trade has increased by 15 percent annually.—Xinhua

Zambia's mining firm stuck with 60,000 tons of copper concentrates

LUSAKA, 29 Jan—A mining firm in Zambia is stuck with 60,000 tons of copper concentrates because all the country's smelters are heavily congested with the mineral, the Times of Zambia reported on Tuesday.

Kansanshi Mine Plc, owned by Canada's First Quantum Minerals Limited situated in northwestern Zambia's Solwezi district, says it has failed to turn the copper concentrates into cathodes because all the smelters were crammed up and the company is appealing for a duty waiver so that it could export the concentrates.

The company, which does not own a smelter of its own but transports the copper concentrates to other mining firms that have smelters, has appealed for a waiver on the concentrates which currently stands at 10 percent so that the pile-up of the concentrates could be reduced. "We are sitting on as much as 60,000 tons of copper concentrates. The smelters on the Copperbelt province are choker blocker and we cannot export this concentrate because it will attract a 10 percent duty and that makes it more expensive," Matt Pascall, the company's director of operations, was quoted as saying by the paper.

He said the government will gain more money if the company is allowed to take the concentrates to neighboring countries for processing.—Xinhua

NY Senate motion condemns wartime Japan's "comfort women" system

NEW YORK, 30 Jan—The New York Senate on Tuesday passed a resolution honouring a "comfort women" monument erected in the state, saying it is a reminder that the coercion of Asian women into sexual servitude by the wartime Japanese military was a "crime against humanity," a staff member of a lawmaker said.

The resolution says approximately 200,000 young women were forced into military prostitution during the Japanese colonial and wartime occupation of parts of Asia and some Pacific Islands.

It nevertheless toned down the condemnation of Japan expressed in an earlier draft. The draft resolution sought an apology from the Japanese government and encouraged it to "accept historical responsibility and educate future generations about these crimes."

The resolution honors a monument established in 2012 in New York that it says "symbolizes suffering endured by comfort women and serves as a reminder of the crime against humanity committed through the comfort women system."

In October, a South Korean civic group put an ad in New York's Times Square urging the Japanese government to apologize for victimized women.

In response, conservative Japanese lawmakers including Shinzo Abe, who became Prime Minister in late December, published an ad in a local newspaper in the neighbouring state of New Jersey saying that no historical documents have been found that show women "were forced against their will" into prostitution by the Imperial Japanese Army.—Kyodo News

Russia to launch more satellites

MOSCOW, 30 Jan—Russia plans to expand its orbital satellite group from 75 satellites at present to 113 in 2020, head of the Federal Space Agency, Roscosmos, said on Tuesday.

"We expect by 2015 the orbital group will consist of 95 and by 2020 of 113 satellites," Vladimir Popovkin told students of Bauman Technical University in Moscow. Popovkin said the space agency would spend one third of its budget developing new spacecraft and engines, including a nuclear-powered booster. "We plan to construct its prototype in 2018 so we could start its testing."

Popovkin envisaged that the new Russian module of the International Space Station could become a separate orbital station. "We build this module the way it could function autonomously as a small orbital station for scientific purposes," he said. The official also mentioned Russia might cut the number of carrier rocket launches from Baikonur space center in Kazakhstan after 2016, given Astana's complaints about environmental damage launches have inflicted.

Political tolerance

More than two years ago, Myanmar, in general context, was quite a stranger to democracy while the word 'politics' was a taboo. But the society — even some, if not many, politicians — still could not swallow some basic democratic practices even about two years after the first-ever general election in decades.

Many have accepted that democracy is the principle of majority rule with respect for the rights of individuals or groups in the minority. Since the first-ever parliamentary session, the lower house speaker warned against 'the tyranny of the majority'. The first two years of Myanmar democracy have tested 'political tolerance' of Myanmar politicians and society. We need to reassess how much we could safeguard freedom of expression and divergent opinions.

We could not force any society into unity. It could only be established voluntarily. To ensure unity, we must guarantee that every individual of the society has the fundamental and equal rights to hold divergent opinions but follows the majority rule.

Neither gun nor suppression will resolve any problems. We need to find solutions through political dialogues as we now have a legitimate parliament. It is not the time to see each other as enemy, define black and white, and play blame game. Every stakeholder of Myanmar's political circle needs to tolerate different views and accept realities. If we give no room for divergent opinions, we will never reach our common goal of democracy.

Second SEAGF Council Meeting approves 33 sports in Myanmar SEA Games

NAY PYI TAW, 30 Jan— President of South East Asian Games Federation Council and Myanmar National Olympic Committee and Union Minister for Sports U Tint Hsan addressed second SEAGF Council Meeting at Thingaha Hotel here yesterday morning.

The Union Minister said, "Sports are the most effective diplomatic means to tighten cross-cultural ties and unity among nations."

He stressed the need of "fair play and sportsmanship". He said he is confident that XXVII SEA Games would be "another milestone to our common search for regional peace and tranquility through friendly competitions".

Minutes of the previous SEAGF Council Meeting held in Nay Pyi Taw on 14 July, 2012, were approved and issues arising from the minutes discussed at the Pilgrims and tourists visiting the many famous pagodas in tourist frequented towns like Yangon, Mandalay, Bago, Taunggyi, Inlay, etcetera, will surely notice a curious object among many articles and artifacts of interest around its premise. It is indeed a stone taking the oval or egg shape. The stone is smooth maybe due to the natural process of friction in the riverbed of the flowing rivers, streams or creeks for thousands of years till they are taken from the river bed and placed in the prayer hall of the pagodas or places of worship. It has a diameter of 20 to 25 cm. It is commonly known as 'The Wishing Stone'. It is found at the foot of a raised throne where the relic image of Lord Buddha reposed in the open prayer hall facing the entrance. Sometimes it is placed at the foot of the Bo Bo Gyi or guardian spirits standing guard at the pagodas.

What is the purpose of this mystical stone in such revered place of worship, one may tend to inquire. In fact it is a medium through which a person consults to know about what lies in store for his future. It is indeed a form of self-invocation, which he needs to exercise in all seriousness to have his prayers come true and his wishes fulfilled.

It is indeed human nature in its innate desire to want to know his future. Such desire has spurred man to study ways of probing the unknown and delve into its innermost secrets. Mystical sciences such as astrology, astronomy, occultism, palmistry, consulting philosopher's stone charting of horoscope (man's life chart) had developed more than four thousand years ago in the ancient kingdoms of Egypt, Babylonia, Assyria, Sumeria, Greece and Rome in the Middle East; in India and China in the Far East. Fortune-telling, palm reading, extrasensory perception, predictions through mediums, sooth-sayings et cetera have prevailed through these centuries to satisfy the human urge to pry into the unknown and the tomorrow yet unborn.

This mystery has also excited the imaginations of people who by in-depth study and practice become endowed with supreme insight. Their contributions through their writings to the realms of mysticism, kept people guessing whether their far reaching prophecies bore elements of authenticity. Myanmar Buddhists are generally familiar with the sixteen episodes of King Kosala's dream when Lord Buddha, the Supreme self-Enlightened one was alive more than 2500 years ago. Nostradamus (1530-1566) a French physician and astrologer became famous for prophesizing events which he believed would take place centuries ahead of time. The predictions became instantly popular which kept people guessing up to this day. Another western seer Jean Dickenson foresaw with apprehension

President John F. Kennedy's impending tragedy in 1963. Fortunately not all such predictions came true, leaving our world a better place.

Along with the Oriental Asians of the East Asian Continent, our countrymen believe in such predictions. Although devout Buddhists professing the sacred tenets of Buddhist they do not fully discard these mundane practices prevalent since the days of King Anawratha a thousand years ago with the Ari Rahans. And there are professionals who are specifically skilled to do just that: fulfilling their curiosity. Myanmar abounds with astrologers, palmists, seers, mediums, Bodaws, (with their philosopher's stones), Natgadaws et cetera, who work on the weakness of men and the majority of women to satisfy their desire to foresee beyond the present. These Sayas are usually found in places where pilgrims, tourists frequent, namely famous pagodas, temples, and monasteries where relic images reposed. They set up their consultancy along the front facing him for the client to sit. They also occupy pedestrian walks at the crossroads of busy streets in downtowns. For a small fee charged towards casual consultation they make people happy when the stars are good, and pacify them by corrective prayers (yadaya) to offset their ill-effects when the stars are not to their liking.

Consulting a Wishing Stone is however a form of self-invocation where no interpreter is needed. One only needs to exercise this consultation with all seriousness and unwavering faith. It must not be played lightly as a joke. In the premise where the wishing stone is situated such as the pagodas, and holy statues, guardian spirits abound to ward off the evil ghosts and protect the devout pilgrims. Such vibrations can be felt by the holy monks and lay saints devoted to higher contemplation.

Certain rituals and formalities need to be performed by those who need the revelation. The preliminary prayer must be recited. Then he will need to diffuse universal loving-kindness (metta). In this process he must keep his mind open and focused. And then he/she may invoke the vow by saying as follows: 'If what I have vowed were to come true, may this stone which I hold become light as feather. If not may it turn heavy.' After recitation he may lift the Stone from the floor and note the prediction, which only he may be the judge. Then he may recite again in reverse order and note the prediction.

This is the story of the Wishing Stone commonly found in the premises of pagodas, but passed unnoticed by many visitors and pilgrims. The author attempts to bring this episode to your awareness and maybe try your quest. Whatever the case may present, desire to know one's future will keep on haunting man come what may.

Japanese husbands shout their love for wives in public

TOKYO, 30 Jan— Love was in the air in a Tokyo park as normally staid Japanese husbands gathered to scream out their feelings for their wives, promising gratitude and extra tight hugs.

With modesty and reticence traditionally valued over outspokenness, expressing deeper feelings like love has long been hard in Japan.

That's why dozens of Japanese men gather once a year ahead of 31 January, which in Japanese is a play on the words for "Beloved Wife," to let their feelings fly.

Declarations at the Tuesday night event ranged from a simple "I'll love you forever" to expressions of gratitude for homemade boxed lunches.

"I'm sorry that I've gained weight over the last seven years," a suit-clad man yelled. "But that's because the meals you cook are so delicious."

The event, now in its fifth year, was thought up by Kiyotaka Yamana with the support of a local flower shop to urged Japanese men to show their affection in more explicit ways.

"The economy is getting better in Japan and I see a lot of Japanese married couples getting more active in deepening their relationships," Yamana said.

Wives in the audience laughed and clapped, especially when one man got down on his knees to offer his wife a bouquet.

Man arrested for allegedly abandoning bodies of Japan financier, woman

TOKYO, 30 Jan—Police on Tuesday arrested a man on suspicion of abandoning the bodies of a Swiss-based Japanese financier and a woman believed to be the financier's wife, which were found buried in Saitama Prefecture.

Takaaki Kuwahara, 41, unemployed and of no fixed abode, was held earlier Tuesday on an island in Okinawa, southern Japan, in connection with the disappearance of Makoto Shimomi, the 51-year-old financier, and his wife since early December while on a trip home from Switzerland.

The police have also obtained arrest warrants for several other people, including a 43-year-old company executive acquainted with Shimomi.

The bodies found on Monday in a vacant lot, showed signs of strangulation. The police have identified one body as that of Shimomi and are confirming through DNA analysis whether the other is that of his 48-year-old wife Mie.

The couple disappeared after leaving their condo in Tokyo's Ginza commercial district on 7 December, the police said.

A vehicle in which they are believed to have traveled was found near the bodies found buried in Kuki, Saitama Prefecture, north of Tokyo.

SHANGHAI, 30 Jan— Japan's casual-wear retailer Fast Retailing Co plans to open the world's largest Uniqlo fashion store in Shanghai, sources familiar with the plan said on Tuesday.

The store, which will handle multiple fashion brands owned by Fast Retailing, will likely open for business before the end of the year.

Fast Retailing currently operates nine so-called "global flagship stores" in the world, including one in Shanghai. In contrast to the existing flagship stores, which handle only Uniqlo brand products, Fast Retailing hopes to widen its customer base by selling various fashion brands in the new Shanghai store.

The new Shanghai store, to be housed inside a commercial building in the busy Huaihai District, is expected to be substantially larger than the Uniqlo Ginza store, currently the company's largest outlet with 5,000 square metres of shopping space. First Retailing currently operates 182 Uniqlo stores in China, one of the company's key markets in the world. The company has said it plans to open 100 Uniqlo shops in China a year.

Nudists lose bid to block San Francisco ban on baring all

NEW YORK, 30 Jan— Nudists in famously tolerant San Francisco lost a bid on Tuesday to block a city ban on nakedness in public places, when a federal judge threw out a legal challenge that argued public nudity was akin to political expression.

San Francisco city leaders last month approved the ban on baring it all in streets, public plazas and the transit system to curtail public nudity, which some residents and business owners complained had gotten out of control.

The efforts to clamp down have caused a flap in the city, where men in particular are known to parade naked through the streets of the predominantly gay Castro District. Some residents say nudists, and specifically a group known as the Naked Guys, have gone too far with their constant presence at a square in the Castro District. But nudists claim they have a right go naked in public and say politicians in San Francisco, which has often celebrated the bizarre and unconventional, should leave them alone.

Four nudist activists sued in November, even before the measure barring public nudity was passed by a slim majority of the Board of Supervisors, saying it would violate their constitutional right to free expression.

However, US District Judge Edward Chen concluded that "nudity in and of itself is not inherently expressive," and denied the nudists' request for an injunction blocking the measure, which is due to go into effect on Friday.

New Mexico woman held for locking girl in a cage: police

SANTA FE, 30 Jan— Police in New Mexico found an 8-year-old girl locked in a cage in a darkened mobile home, authorities said on Tuesday, adding that they charged the girl's adoptive mother, who had gone to the movies, with child abuse.

Cindy Patriarchias, 33, and her boyfriend were arrested after police found the caged girl on Friday evening, Las Cruces Police Department spokesman Dan Trujillo said.

He said police, acting on a tip from the woman's estranged husband, found the girl in the corner of a bedroom locked inside the cage, about four feet high, slightly more than two feet wide and about five feet long.

The homemade wooden structure had two latches and a baby crib mattress on the floor, Trujillo said.

He said Patriarchias had been charged with one count of negligent child abuse while her boyfriend was charged with one count of negligently permitting child abuse. Patriarchias was released on bond on Tuesday but her boyfriend is still being held, authorities said. The girl was seen by medical personnel but showed no visible signs of physical abuse.—Reuters

Australian PM fixes federal election date on 14 September

CANBERRA, 30 Jan—Australian Prime Minister Julia Gillard made a surprise announcement on Wednesday that the federal election will be held on 14 September.

Gillard made clear of the election date during an address to the National Press Club in Canberra. The prime minister had been talking about the government's economic and education plans before announcing the election date.

Sky News commented that it's unprecedented to announce the election date so early, leaving major parties with eight months to prepare for the poll.

Gillard, leader of the Australian Labour Party (ALP), said she wanted to avoid the "carry on" that usually arises from constant speculation of the likely date of the poll during an election year.

"I can act so Australia's parliament and government serves their full three-year term, so it is clear and certain when the election will be held," Gillard said.

"So today I announce that I will advise the Governor-General to dissolve the House of Representatives and issue the writs on Monday, 12 August for an election for the House and half the Senate to be held on Saturday, the 14th of September." "I do so not to start the nation's longest election campaign, quite the opposite," Gillard said. "It should be clear to all which are the days of governing, and which are the days of campaigning."

"It gives shape and or-

Japan parties signal cooperation to choose next BOJ chief

TOKYO, 30 Jan—The ruling and biggest opposition parties agreed Wednesday to eliminate a rule that has prevented the government from picking people for such jobs as Bank of Japan governor if their name has been reported by news media in advance.

The move signals further cooperation in parliament between Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's Liberal Democratic Party and the opposition camp in choosing the next central bank chief, who will play a key role in boosting the country's struggling economy and fighting deflation after the incumbent steps down in April.

The agreement to end the rule set in 2007 came at a meeting between the Diet affairs chiefs of the LDP and the Democratic Party of Japan, which lost power in December's general election.

ASDF to deploy F-35 jets in Aomori Prefecture

TOKYO, 30 Jan—Japan's Defence Ministry has decided to deploy F-35 stealth fighter jets at Misawa Air Base in Aomori Prefecture, northern Japan, as early as fiscal 2017.

The Air Self-Defence Force has ordered 42 of the jets, which are being jointly developed by 9 countries including the United States.

Delivery of the jets to Japan is scheduled to begin by March 2017. The Defence Ministry intends to deploy the first fleet of jets to Misawa within a year.

The Defence Ministry has earmarked more than 88,000 dollars from the fiscal 2013 budget to start designing a new training facility at Misawa.

The jets will cost about 165 million dollars each, up more than 50 million dollars per jet from when the deal was signed last June. This is because the aircraft will be partially assembled in Japan.

The purchase has raised questions as to whether fighter jets made with Japanese parts would violate Japan's ban on weapons exports, if they are used overseas.

Defence Minister Itsunori Onodera says he will study the matter.

Over 1,000 Malaysian workers strike at Chiyoda's construction site

KUALA LUMPUR, 30 Jan—Major plant engineering company Chiyoda Corp said on Tuesday that workers entered into a strike Monday at a construction site undertaken by its local subsidiary in Sarawak, Malaysia.

More than 1,000 people took part in the industrial action demanding wage increase and improvement of working conditions, the Star daily said on Tuesday, adding that police were dispatched to the scene.

Chiyoda said some workers blockaded the road around the site on early Monday morning, forcing 327 Chiyoda employees and associates including 143 Japanese to stay at their living quarter.

As of 6 pm on Tuesday, some strikers remained blocking the road linking the living quarter and the nearest city, it said.

The project, undertaken by Marubeni, extends over one million square metres at a coastal industrial area in Oita Prefecture, southern Japan.

About 340,000 solar panels are to be installed. They are expected to produce 81,850 kilowatts, enough to supply 30,000 households. The plant will go into operation in April of next year and is projected to have a lifespan of 20 years.

Marubeni official Yoichi Fujimoto, who attended a ceremony to mark the construction start on Tuesday, said the facility makes effective use of idle land and will also contribute to the region's power supply.

Official cars ordered off roads during hazardous pollution

BEIJING, 30 Jan—Thirty percent of official cars in Beijing should not be used when there is "extremely bad" pollution, traffic authorities confirmed on Tuesday.

The order was implemented on Monday evening to help combat the fourth round of heavy smog to hit the capital city in four weeks, Beijing Traffic Management Bureau said.

Traffic authorities will monitor, take pictures and trace official cars that violate the government order. Whatever department the vehicles belong to will be punished.

Beijing has a list of official cars that should not be used when there is heavy pollution.

The capital categorizes air pollution days as "bad," "seriously bad" and "extremely bad" depending on indexes that include measurements of both fine and coarse air particles and ozone levels.

Indonesia, Japan agrees to strengthen military cooperation: defence chief JAKARTA, 30 Jan—Indonesia and Japan have agreed to strengthen the cooperation between Indonesian Army and Japan Self-Defence Forces, Indonesian Defence Minister Purnomo Yusgiantoro said here on Tuesday.

Indonesian Defence Minister Purnomo made the remarks after meeting with Eji Kamizuka, Japan Grounds Self-Defence Force Chief of Staff here on Tuesday. "Indonesia and Japan have already engaged much economic cooperation, and now the Japanese government has pushed to establish collaboration with Indonesia in military field," said Purnomo.

Purnomo said Japan has become more open to build its armada and starts to develop its self-defence forces as the situation in East Asia is unfavorable.

Purnomo said during the meeting Indonesia has also invited Japan to participate the joint anti-terrorism drill which will be held in Indonesia's West Java Province in September this year.

"Japan has agreed to take part in the counter-terrorism exercise involving 18 countries," the Minister said.—Xinhua

Justin Bieber strips down voice, heartache on 'Believe Acoustic'

LOS ANGELES, 30 Jan —Justin Bieber is stripping down. Musically, that is. The Canadian pop phenomenon showcases his vocal and song-writing talents with a new acoustic album, out on Tuesday, that also features three new tracks including a heartbreak ballad thought to be about his former girlfriend Selena Gomez.

"Believe Acoustic" sees Bieber, 18, change up the arrangements of songs from his fourth chart-topping album "Believe," released last June, singing with only a guitar or piano-driven melody.

The album went straight to the top of the iTunes US album charts on Tuesday, and won generally warm reviews. Up-tempo songs such as "Boyfriend," and "Beauty and the Beat," which roped in electronic

Justin Timberlake's new album '20/20' is due out in March

LOS ANGELES, 30 Jan — Singer-turned-actor Justin Timberlake has set a March date for his comeback album —his first in more than six years. RCA Records said on Tuesday "The 20/20 Experience," the former N'Sync boy band member's follow-up to 2006's "FutureSex/LoveSounds" and only his third album ever, would be released on 19 March.

In recent years, Timberlake, 31, has focused more on films and business ventures ranging from restaurants to a clothing line, and reviving social networking site Myspace, of which he is part owner. He remarked in a recent video that creating music involved "physical torture" for him. "Suit & Tie," the first single off his forthcoming album, fell short of sales expectations for its first week. The song, featuring rapper Jay-Z, sold 314,000 downloads last week. Industry experts had expected about 350,000 downloads.

Top menswear designer Tom Ford collaborated with Timberlake, designing suits worn in the "Suit & Tie" video as well as styling the production and the release's artwork. Timberlake will perform his first concert in five years during a private Super Bowl-weekend event in New Orleans on 2 February at an invitation-only concert.

Kennedy Center plans expansion, with floating stage on Potomac

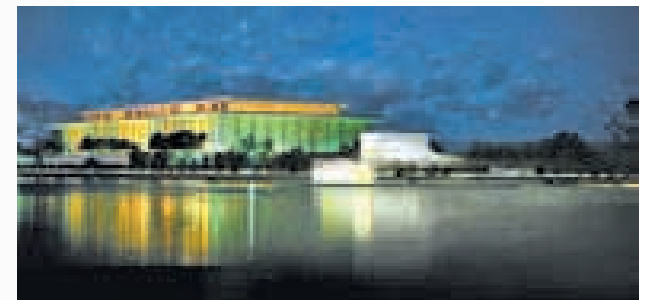

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan — The John F Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts is planning a $100 million addition, including an outdoor floating stage on the Potomac River, in its first major expansion since it opened in 1971. Three connected pavilions to house classrooms, rehearsal rooms, lecture space and other facilities were also included in initial plans for the US capital's premier performance space, which were laid out on Tuesday.

The expansion, designed by architect Steven Holl, will take place south of the Center and includes an outdoor video wall. One pavilion will float on the Potomac as an outdoor stage, and public gardens will link the Center with the water. "Steven's wonderful concept will create a strong visual presence that bolsters the Center's prominence as the national cultural center, while maintaining its unique presence among Washington's iconic landmarks," Kennedy Center Chairman David Rubenstein said in a statement.

The expansion will be paid for from private funds. Rubenstein, a founder of the Carlyle Group private equity firm, is contributing $50 million towards the roughly $100 million cost. The Center is seeking to raise another $25 million for programming. Exteriors for the project will include use of Carrara marble, the same Italian marble which clads the site now.

Actress Ashley Judd and race car driver Dario Franchitti split

LOS ANGELES, 30 Jan —American actress Ashley Judd and her Scottish race car driver husband Dario Franchitti are ending their marriage after 11 years. The movie star, 44, and the Indianapolis 500 race car driver, 39, married in 2001 and have no children.

"We have mutually decided to end our marriage. We'll always be family and continue to cherish our relationship based on the special love, integrity and respect we have always enjoyed," a representative for the couple told People magazine in a statement on Tuesday.

No reason was given for the split. Judd, the daughter of country music star Naomi Judd, starred in movies like "Double Jeopardy" and "High Crimes."

Media reports have said Judd, who represented Tennessee at the 2012 Democratic National Convention, might run for one of Kentucky's seats in the Senate.

Franchitti is a three-time Indianapolis 500 champion, who has also competed in NASCAR and the American Le Mans series. He and Judd married in Scotland in December 2001 after a two-year engagement.

Lazio beat Juventus to reach Coppa Italia final

ROME, 30 Jan — Thanks to an injury-time winner from Sergio Floccari, Lazio advanced to the Coppa Italia final at the expense of Juventus on Tuesday. Floccari headed in the goal from a corner deep into injury-time to give his side a 2-1 win on the night, and a 3-2 aggregate triumph. The goal came mere moments after Juventus midfielder Arturo Vidal looked to have sent the tie into extra-time after stepping inside his marker to rifle into the net from close range. Lazio midfielder Alvaro Gonzalez broke the deadlock in the 53rd minute with a fine diving header. Lazio head coach Vladimir Petkovic praised Lazio and goalkeeper Federico Marchetti for their dramatic win over Juventus. "We are satisfied with the result and that was a crazy game at the end, but we had the right determination to take home the result," he said.

Things could have been different if Marchetti had not saved from blank-point range when Juventus striker Sebastian Giovinco was clear on goal at the 95th minute. "Marchetti is having a fantastic season, not just in the individual saves, but the way he does his work and is a reference point in the locker room." Juventus head coach Antonio Conte felt his side did enough against Lazio and rued that last-gasp miss.

"We did more over the 180 minutes than Lazio, but whoever wins is always right, so we accept the result. That late miss from Marchisio weighed very heavily on us, as it would've been the goal to qualify us," he said. Lazio will meet either fierce rivals Roma or Inter Milan at the Stadio Olimpico in the final. Roma must wait until 17 April to try and consolidate their 2-1 first-leg lead.

Tottenham in late Damiao bid

RIO DE JANEIRO, 30 Jan — Tottenham Hotspur is reportedly willing to pay up to 20 million pounds to sign Brazil international striker Leandro Damiao.

The London outfit is also prepared to include their Brazilian goalkeeper Gomes in negotiations with Damiao's Brazilian club Internacional, Lancenet reported on Tuesday.

Damiao has long been on the radar of Tottenham and the Premier League club is understood to have had at least two offers rejected in the past two years.

The 23-year-old has won 14 international caps for Brazil and was the team's leading goalscorer at last year's London Olympics with six goals.

The England transfer window closes on Thursday and Tottenham will reportedly turn its attention to Sevilla striker Alvaro Negredo should it fail in its pursuit of the Brazilian.

Ravens QB Flacco grows into leadership role

NEW ORLEANS, 30 Jan — He is the "Cool Joe" that makes the Baltimore Ravens go, and in Sunday's Super Bowl quarterback Joe Flacco could take a giant step toward assuming the team's leadership role from retiring linebacker Ray Lewis.

The strong-armed quarterback, quiet but brimming with confidence, lifted his game in the postseason, throwing eight touchdowns without an interception and earning consideration as one of the game's top quarterbacks. The only National Football League quarterbacks to notch more touchdowns without an interception in a postseason were former San Francisco 49ers Hall of Famers Steve Young (nine TDs in 1994) and Joe Montana (11 TDs in 1989).

"He's been doing what he's been doing all year long for us," fullback Vonta Leach told Reuters at Tuesday's Media Day at the Superdome. "A lot of people are making a big deal now just because it's the playoffs, but Joe has been leading for our team all year long. He's just been Flacco." None other than Lewis himself recently anointed Flacco as the team's next 'General', but the linebacker said he hoped the Ravens quarterback would work on becoming a more vocal leader.—Reuters

Deco out of Fluminense' Copa Libertadores match

RIO DE JANEIRO, 30 Jan — Fluminense coach Abel Braga says injured midfielder Deco is unlikely to be ready for the club's 2013 Copa Libertadores debut against Caracas on 13 February. The former Porto, Barcelona and Chelsea star completed 20 minutes of light running on Tuesday in his first training appearance since injuring his right thigh two weeks ago.

"The Copa Libertadores is something different. You need to have meticulous planning and preparation and we can't go making rash decisions," Braga said. Fluminense, which won last year's Brazilian Serie A championship, is among the favourites for this year's Copa Libertadores title.

The Rio de Janeiro outfit is yet to win South America's most prestigious club competition. It's best result was in 2008 when it lost the final to Ecuador's Liga de Quito in a dramatic penalty shootout at Rio's Maracana Stadium. Fluminense and Caracas have been drawn in Group Eight of the tournament along with Chile's Huachipato and the winner of the Gremio-Liga de Quito qualifier, which will be decided in Porto Alegre on Wednesday.

Cuban baseball defector returns home under new law

HAVANA, 30 Jan — A decade after he defected to the United States to play Major League Baseball, Cuban pitcher Jose Contreras has returned to his homeland in the first test of the island's liberalized travel laws.

He was welcomed on Tuesday at Havana's Hot Corner, a mecca for baseball fans, by about 200 people who crowded around to get photos and autographs from the lanky right-hander.

Contreras, 41, signed baseball caps, dollar bills, Cuban money and a woman's dress as he mixed happily with his fellow countrymen in an emotional return home.

"After 10 years, I've had the opportunity to come back to Cuba, to my land, my country, and it's like a dream come true to be here with my family, with my fans," Contreras told Reuters in an occasionally tearful interview.

Before 14 January, when new travel regulations went into effect, high-profile defectors such as Contreras were effectively barred from returning to Cuba, but now they can return if they have been away for at least eight years. Much to the chagrin of Cuban officials, many Cuban athletes have left the country over the years to cash in on their sporting prowess.

Contreras was in Mexico playing for the Cuban national team when he defected in 2002 and signed a four-year, $32 million contract with the New York Yankees. He went on to pitch for the Chicago White Sox, Colorado Rockies and Philadelphia Phillies. Contreras was the first big-name athlete known to have tested the new law, returning to Cuba from the United States a few days ago, driven not only by a desire to see his homeland, but to be with his 77-year-old mother Modesta Camejo, who is ill.

Karzai seeks direct dialogue with Taleban

KABUL, 30 Jan — Afghan President Hamid Karzai has called on the Taleban insurgent group to respond to his government's call for direct dialogue.

In a speech in the capital Kabul on Tuesday, Karzai stressed that reconciliation with the Taleban through peace negotiations is important for bringing peace to Afghanistan.

Karzai said some foreign powers are plotting peace talks with the Taleban, but all negotiations with the Taleban should take place under his government.

He said he wants to call on the Taleban and the country's politicians not to let the foreigners cheat them.

White House urges lasting solution to Egyptian unrest

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan—The White House on Tuesday called for a lasting solution to the unfolding unrest in Egypt.

"We call on all Egyptian leaders across the political spectrum to make clear that violence and looting is not acceptable and to actively work to prevent further violence," White House spokesman Jay Carney told reporters aboard Air Force One en route to Nevada state.

"Egyptians need to engage in a peaceful process in order to reach a lasting solution to the current unrest," he said.

Egyptian President Mohamed Morsi imposed a curfew and a state of emergency on Sunday in response to the bloody clashes in the coastal cities of Port Said, Suez and Ismailia. However, thousands of protesters took to the streets on Monday evening till late hours in defiance of the curfew and army deployment.

Days of clashes between the protesters and the security forces have left over 50 people dead and about 2,000 others injured, renewing concern about Egypt's ongoing transition process.

"This democratic process must adhere to the rights of all Egyptians, and we look to the government of Egypt to ensure that the people's right to due process is protected," Carney said.

US to build drone base in Africa to combat terrorists: report

WASHINGTON, 30 Jan—The US military is planning to set up a drone base in northwestern Africa in order to combat the local affiliate of al-Qaeda and other Islamist extremist groups which pose a growing menace to the region, local media said on Tuesday.

This is an indication that Africa has become a priority for the US counter-terrorism efforts, the New York Times reported in a front-page news report.

The drone base is most likely to be established in Niger which sits east to Mali, where French troops are assisting government forces in fighting al-Qaeda-backed extremist groups controlling the north, the report said. But the US Africa Command is also discussing options for locating the base in other countries of the region, such as Burkina Faso, it added.

Pentagon officials were quoted as saying that they envision flying only unarmed surveillance drones from the base, though they did not rule out conducting missile strikes at some point if the threat worsens.

Currently, the US military has a limited presence in Africa, with only one permanent base in Djibouti. A new drone base in north-west Africa would join a constellation of small airstrips in recent years on the continent, including one in Ethiopia, for surveillance missions flown by drones or turboprop planes.

If the drone base is set up, the US military will provide immediate surveillance assistance to the French troops fighting in Mali, the report said.

IPRDs lack resources to serve as public information center: Deputy Information Minister

Amyotha Hluttaw session in progress.—MNA

NAY PYI TAW, 30 Jan—As regards the proposal of Dr Myat Nyana Soe from Yangon Region Constituency No (4) urging the Union government to build information and public relations departments in respective townships to public information centers so that people can inquire the functions of government agencies, Deputy Minister for Information U Paik Htwe replied that current workforce of township IPRDs could not take the responsibility of public information centers and there was no such legislation giving power to IPRDs to collect information and data from other departments.

He suggested forming public information committee by administrative organs in townships and assigning staff officers of IPRD as member or secretary of the proposed committee. Currently, the deputy minister said, the township IPRDs can only publicize the gazettes and orders and instructions of the government and are not in a position to assume the responsibility of publicizing information for public.

U Khin Maung Yi of Ayeyawady Region Constituency No (6) said there is sufficient equipment and technology at region/state level and the State is organizing capacity building programmes with international assistance. Thus, the proposal can be realized at region/state level. But still it is difficult to collect information at township level. If and when inter-department network is built along with full computerization, such public information centers can be introduced. He said he prefer to documentation of proposal saying it is a nice one but difficult to be implemented at present.

The proposal was put to vote and rejected as "No" vote outnumbered "Yes" ones.

As regards the question of U Nu of Yangon Region Constituency No (10) about whether there is any plan to give the whole amount of pension to the retired civil servants, Dr Lin Aung, Deputy Finance and Revenue Minister, said when one is allowed to have pension, gratuity is also granted as reward for his service. Monthly pension is then given for his living costs and is of internationally practised pension scheme.

Considering the long-term interests of the retirees, pension will be continued to be given in form of monthly allowance and there is no such plan to give the whole amount of pension, concluded the deputy minister.

U San Pyae of Kachin Constituency No (7) said "I was sympathetic towards the elderly retirees who have to take out pension amidst difficulties. I think it would be much better if the whole amount of pension can be given. Nonetheless, the government should take into account the potential rise of commodity prices even if it has enough finances to grant so. In my view, if the government could give pension for certain limited period, retirees can get capital."

The Hluttaw session came to an end in the afternoon.—MNA
