Maha Bandoolla Park gets a facelift

Tin Win Lay
(Kyimyindine)

Major repair of Maha Bandoolla Park in the very heart of Yangon wound up since the end of March.

It was established since 1924 with a humble start as a mere garden on narrower ground.

The garden hosted Independence flag raising ceremony on 4 January, 1948. To mark the historic event, Independence Monument was erected since 26 September, 1950.

The park was kept open to the public in reigns of various regimes but was subject to weak repair.

The government in office started the major repair since 2012. Lawns were replaced. Tiles were installed. The entrance roads were tarred. Water fountains and spotlights were put in place. New gateways are reported to be opened.

The park is the historic landmark in Yangon. Yangon City Development Committee designed the regenerated garden. The area of the garden is 7.5 acres.

Specific patterns of lights will be decorated during nights of significant days. Water fountains will be controlled by a computerized system. The new look of the garden gives more prominence to the Independence Monument. The entry fee is K 300 for an adult and K 100 for a child and 1 US$ or K 500 for a foreigner.

Parks and Playgrounds Department of YCDC will continue to upgrade Thakin Mya Park in Ahlon Township, Kanthaya Park and Kandaw Inya Park in Bahan Township.

UN passes historic global Arms Trade Treaty

NEW YORK, 3 April—The UN General Assembly on Tuesday overwhelmingly adopted a landmark Arms Trade Treaty that will help regulate the global flow of conventional arms for the first time, despite its failure to be adopted by consensus last Thursday.

The resolution adopting the historic treaty was approved by 154 countries. North Korea, Syria and Iran, the three countries that blocked its adoption by consensus last week, voted against the decision, saying the final text was not balanced and favoured the interests of major exporters.

Twenty three countries including the world's top exporters, such as Russia and China, and major importers, such as India and Indonesia, abstained from casting their votes.

"This is a treaty with teeth," Australian Ambassador Peter Woolcott, who chaired the intense and lengthy negotiations that began on 18 March, told reporters. "I think it will make a difference over time, I think it is a very good framework for states to work with."

As it is necessary for 50 countries to ratify the treaty before it comes into effect, Woolcott anticipated that the implementation process could take a year or two. It opens for signature

Parties carp as Italy's "wise men" seek end to political crisis

Italian President Giorgio Napolitano (3rd R) meets the "wise men", a panel of experts he appointed to help find a way out of the political deadlock created by last month's election, at the Quirinale Palace in Rome in this picture by the Italian Presidency Press Office on 2 April, 2013.—REUTERS

ROME, 3 April—Italian President Giorgio Napolitano expressed despair on Tuesday at fierce criticism of his latest plan to end a post-election deadlock that has raised fears of months of instability in the euro zone's third largest economy.

Two groups of "wise men" appointed by Napolitano to try to forge a policy compromise between squabbling parties to end the impasse since the 24-25 February election started work on Tuesday. Napolitano said they would report back in 8-10 days.

The 87-year-old head of state reacted angrily to suggestions from the centre-right of Silvio Berlusconi that his plan, which came after all other efforts to find a government failed, were a useless waste of time that the economy could ill afford.

"After seven years I am ending my mandate in a surreal way, finding myself the subject of absurd reactions, suspicions and incomprehensible paranoias, from the harmless to the unhinged," Napolitano was quoted as saying by Corriere della Sera daily.

Italy is deep in its longest recession for 20 years and although markets have so far remained relatively sanguine about the political deadlock, the economy desperately needs a stable government to unblock decades of sluggish growth.

There are also fears Italy's borrowing costs could rise dangerously if the impasse finally starts to spook investors. Since the election, the parties have refused to budge at all from irreconcilable positions that "made one despair of the possibility of governing this country", Napolitano said.

Napolitano appointed the commissions after Democratic Party (PD) leader Pier Luigi Bersani failed to gather enough support for a centre-left led government despite a week of efforts.

Iran's nuclear programme entails huge costs, few benefits

DUBAI, 3 April—Iran will pursue its nuclear quest although it has reaped few gains from a totem of national pride that has cost it well over $100 billion in lost oil revenue and foreign investment alone, two think-tanks said on Wednesday.

A report by the Washington-based Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and the Federation of American Scientists said Iran's atomic work could not simply be ended or "bombed away" and that diplomacy was the only way to keep it peaceful. "It is entangled with too much pride—however misguided — and sunk costs simply to be abandoned," the report's authors, Ali Vaez of the International Crisis Group and Carnegie's Karim

Sadjadpour, said of Iran's five-decade-old nuclear programme, which began under the US-allied shah.

Reactor-scrapping research facility to be built in Fukushima Prefecture

TOKYO, 3 April—The Japanese government said on Tuesday it will build a research facility for decommissioning reactors at the Fukushima Daiichi power plant in the town of Naraha, some 25 kilometres south of the crippled nuclear power plant.

The government's panel on decommissioning the reactors at the disaster-hit complex will set up a real-size model of a reactor container there and use remote-controlled robots to develop the technology needed to identify damaged reactor parts and repair them.

The government plans to conduct geological surveys of the candidate site in Fukushima Prefecture and to launch the operation of the facility around March 2015, officials said.

There were three candidate sites for the facility in Naraha where the dosage of radiation is relatively low, and the one chosen by the panel is some 2-3 km away from a port and an expressway exit. The dosage of radiation at that site stands at 0.3 microsievert per hour, the officials said.

If the geological survey shows that the picked site is not suitable for the research facility, the panel will look at the remaining two candidate sites, they said.

The government has earmarked about 85 billion yen in its fiscal 2012 supplementary budget for establishing the research facility and also a separate facility aimed at analyzing samples of melted nuclear fuels. Tokyo Electric Power Co, the operator of the Fukushima Daiichi power station, has said it will decommission four of the six reactors at the plant.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said during a Diet session last Friday that it would not be easy to re-start the two reactors at the disaster-hit plant and four reactors at the Fukushima Daiichi plant, all of which are currently shut down, considering the strong opposition among residents and local governments.

Argentina asks Britain for talks on disputed islets

BUENOS AIRES, 3 April—Argentine President Cristina Fernandez on Tuesday proposed talks with Britain on the fate of the Malvinas Islands, which are known to the British as the Falklands.

"Peace and diplomacy are the only paths," said Fernandez. "The Malvinas are an unwavering cause, not just a national cause, but also a regional cause for sovereignty and a global fight against colonialism."

Fernandez spoke in Puerto Madryn, south of the capital Buenos Aires, at a ceremony marking the 31st anniversary of the 74-day Malvinas War, which ended with Argentina's defeat after it failed to recover the islands from British control.

London has steadfastly refused to hold talks on the Malvinas, arguing that the islanders, mainly descendants of English settlers, want to remain under the British rule.

To support its stance,

Britain helped organize a 10-11 March referendum in which 99.8 percent of islanders voted to preserve their status as a British Overseas Territory.

Argentina did not recognize the outcome, saying the referendum of British "transplants" does not reflect legitimate self-determination.

The 1982 Malvinas War led to the deaths of 649 Argentinean soldiers, 255 British fighters and three islanders.—Xinhua

Ethnic groups in Myanmar

The eight major races of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar and the official list of their ethnic groups

The Chin race comprises of 53 ethnic groups: Chin, Anu, Anun, Asho, Awa Khami, Dai (Yindu), Dim, Gunte, Gwete, Haulngo, Kalin Kaw, Kaung Saing, Kaung So, Khami, Khawno, Kwangli (Sim), Kwei Shin, Lai, Laizao, Lawthu, Laymyo, Lhinbu, Lushay, Lyente, Magun, Malin, Matu, Meithei, Mgan, Mier, Miram, Naga, Ngorn, Oo Pu, Panun, Rongtu, Saing Zan, Saline, Sentang Tais-hon, Tangkhul, Tapong, Tay Zan, Thado, Tid-dim Chin (Hai Dim), Torr, Wakim, Za How, Zahnyet, Zizan, Zo, Zo pe, Zotung.

The Kayah State is a comparatively small area but it makes up for it with stunning scenery as well as a wealth of natural resources. Their land is mountainous but fertile because of the many rivers and streams and most are farmers or breeders of cattle. They are proud of their traditions in the same way that the other races value their own culture and they are known to be excellent silversmiths and metal workers.

The Kayah race comprises of 9 ethnic group: Kayah, Bre (Ka Yaw), Gheko, Kebar, Manu Manaw, Padaung (Ka Yun), Yin Baw, Yin Talai, Zayein.

Outside of the Kayah State, this race with 11 ethnic groups lives in the delta and in Yangon. They are Buddhists, Christians or animists. Their biggest festival is the New Year which falls in December or January according to the Lunar Calendar. In rural regions they are mostly farmers, and also breed pigs and raise chickens and ducks for eggs. Kayin living in the cities are mostly Christians and are extremely devout.

The Kayin race comprises of 11 ethnic groups: Kayin, Bwe, Kayin Pyu, Monne Pwa, Mon Pwa, Pa Le Chi, Paku, Pwo (Shu), Sar Pyu (Mon Kayin), Sgaw, Ta Lay Pwa.

The Mon people may not have any other ethnic groups but they are proud of their rich and ancient civilization that goes back many centuries. They value their tradition of being devout Buddhists with a gentle and gracious lifestyle of art and music. The Mon monarch of the commonly known as Queen Shin Saw Pu (r.1453-1473) was the first to gild the spire of the Shwedagon Pagoda with the amount of gold equal to her body weight, 90 lbs.

The Rakhine race is as old as the Pyu, the lost civilization that flourished in Myanmar since the 2 century BC. They inhabit the narrow and rocky strip of the western coastline bordered by mountain ranges to the east. Their land was once among the richest in SE Asia and further archaeological surveys would give ample proof. Most Rakhine are Buddhists and there are many Beautiful temples constructed of stone. They are famous as seafarers and skilled fishermen.

The Rakhine race comprises of 7 ethnic groups: Rakhine, Daingnet, Kamein, Kwe Myi, Mara Magyi, Mro, Thet.

A sort of shellfish disappears near Japan's crippled nuclear plant

TOKYO, 3 April—Japanese researchers announced recently that a sort of shellfish called Thais clavigera disappeared in a 30-km coastal area near Japan's crippled Fukushima Daiichi nuclear plant.

Researchers from Japan's National Institute for Environmental Studies and National Institute of Radiological Sciences conducted the study last April on shellfish's living status in 43 places from Japan's Chiba to Iwate Prefectures for four months.

The team found that the Thais clavigera was extinct in eight of ten places within the 20-km-radius alert zone of the nuclear plant, which was damaged by tsunami in March 2011 and triggered the world's worst nuclear disaster since Chernobyl in 1986.

Other shellfish species, such as Cellana grata, were found in the alert zone but the amount of them declined, with high dose of radioactive materials inside their bodies, according to the researchers.

Thais clavigera, a kind of shell that widely lives across Japan, was found in most places that had been surveyed, including 25 of 33 places outside the alert zone, said the researchers.

Toshihiro Horiguchi, a researcher from the environmental institute and the head of the team, said that it is a rare occurrence that Thais clavigera entirely disappeared from a 30-km long area, adding the extinct was probably caused by the nuclear crisis.

The link between the disappearance and the catastrophic tsunami was excluded as the shell was also found in other areas that affected by the disaster, according to the team.

The researchers made the report in an annual meeting of the Japanese Society of Fisheries Science last Wednesday and will further study links between the extinct and nuclear crisis.

Ukraine conducts test run of high-speed train

KIEV, 3 April—Ukraine conducted a test run of a domestically built high-speed train in southern Crimea peninsula, officials said on Tuesday.

The EKp1 train, built by the Krukov railcar plant in central Ukraine, is designed with a maximum speed of 200 km per hour to compete with imported high-speed trains, the National Committee on Transport and Communications said in a statement.

The EKp1 train, unveiled in Simferopol, Crimea, will be tested on Crimean rail lines until 1 May, and then it will be put into commercial use, the statement said.

The nine-car train uses wear-resistant, environment-friendly and slow-burning materials and meets global railway safety standards, added the committee. The EKp1 train is equipped with first- and second-class coaches, dining rooms and places for the disabled. Ticket prices are expected to meet the demands of people with different levels of income.

Chinese mobiles phones to get Beidou access

BEIJING, 3 April—China is promoting the civilian use of its indigenous Beidou Navigation Satellite System and plans to apply it in public mobile phones services, an official said on Tuesday.

The Beidou system has been performing well, with its navigation precision improving steadily since it began providing services to users in the Asian-Pacific region on 27 December last year, said Yang Qiangwen, a leading scientist with the China Satellite Navigation Office in an interview with Xinhua.

"We are seeking favourable policies and attracting investment to promote the technology for public use," he said. "It will not be long before mobile phones adopt the Beidou system."

China started to build up its own space-based Positioning, Navigation and Timing system in 2000. So far, China has successfully launched 16 navigation satellites and four other experimental ones for the Beidou system. Beidou has so far mostly provided licensed services for China's government and military users in transport, weather forecasts, fishing, forestry, telecommunications, hydrological monitoring and mapping.

As the public interest in Beidou is rising, the fourth China Satellite Navigation Conference, to be held in Wuhan City of central China's Hubei Province in May, will focus on the opportunities and challenges for the system's application, Yang added.

Oman expects six percent GDP growth in 2013

DUBAI, 3 April—Omani Minister of Finance Darwish bin Ismail bin Ali Al-Balushi said here on Tuesday that his country's real GDP would grow 6 percent this year, despite Oman suffered a budget deficit in 2012, which was estimated 1.2 billion Omani riyal (3.1 billion US dollars). Speaking to Xinhua on the sidelines of an annual summit of Arab finance ministers, Al-Balushi said that increases of oil prices and expenditure would continue to boost the Gulf Arab sultanate's economy. Al-Balushi noted the government would continue to increase expenditures to spur growth and create job opportunities until 2015.

The next five-year plan will be designed for the period starting from 2016 to 2020, he said. The minister said that any oil price above 85 dollars per barrel would help Oman to reduce its deficit. Al-Balushi, however, warned that the country would face another budget deficit this year. The black gold is currently trading around 96 dollars per barrel, up 7.46 percent month on month and down 7.68 percent year on year.—Xinhua

The two patients in Shanghai did not survive, and the third one from Anhui is currently in critical condition.

The WHO said there was so far no epidemiological link between the cases that have been identified. Up till now, no further cases have emerged among the 88 identified contacts under follow-up. The source of infection and the mode of transmission are under investigation.

The health organization said the Chinese government was engaged in an active investigation and had instituted enhanced surveillance, laboratory strengthening and training of healthcare professionals for detection, reporting and treatment.

WHO said it was in close contact with the national authorities to follow up the event, and updates would be issued as soon as new information becomes available.—Xinhua

End-of-life talks lacking between doctors, patients

Chrysler posts best monthly sales since December 2007

DETROIT, 3 April—Chrysler Group said its vehicle sales in March were the best since December 2007, and estimated the industry's annual sales rate last month was 15.6 million.

Chrysler, a unit of Italian automaker Fiat SpA (FIA.MI), said March sales totaled 171,606 vehicles, up 5 percent from 163,381 a year earlier. The Fiat, Dodge and Ram Truck brands all posted increases.

Chrysler's estimate of the industry's seasonally adjusted annual rate in March is in line with an average SAAR of 15.3 million from a group of analysts polled by Thomson Reuters. Chrysler's total includes about 300,000 heavy-duty vehicles, while the Thomson Reuters poll excluded such vehicles.

Ram Truck sales rose 24 percent in March, reflecting strong demand for the full-size Ram pickup, which received an extensive makeover for the 2013 model year.

Dodge sales were up 15 percent, led by double-digit increases for the Avenger, the Challenger and the Durango.

GM recalls some 2013 Buick Encores for loose steering wheel

DETROIT, 3 April—General Motors Co is recalling a small number of 2013 Buick Encores because the steering wheel could come loose or separate from the steering column, federal safety officials said on Tuesday.

The recall affects 144 Encores equipped with heated steering wheels and built between 9 and 28 December, GM said in a filing with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The Encore, a new compact crossover vehicle introduced in January by Buick, is built by GM Korea. A companion model is sold by GM in Europe as the Opel Mokka.

GM in its filing said a steering wheel fastener on the Encore may not have been properly installed. In a statement on Tuesday, GM said "there are no known injuries or crashes related to the issue." The company said it had contacted 59 customers who had taken delivery of Encores with heated steering

German inflation reaches two year low in March

BERLIN, 3 April—German annual inflation rate in March reached a two-year-low level of 1.4 percent, preliminary data showed on Tuesday.

The Federal Statistical Office (Destatis) said in a statement that the provisionally calculated consumer prices index in March 2013 increased by 1.4 percent year on year, which was the lowest since December 2010. On a monthly basis, German consumer prices index rose by 0.5 percent in March.

Calculated by a harmonized method for the purpose of comparing with other European Union countries, German consumer prices increase by 1.8 percent in March 2013 year on year, below European Central Bank's medium-term inflation maintenance target of 2.0 percent, and remained as the lowest since November 2010. Monthly harmonized inflation rate of Germany eased to 0.4 percent in March.

According to the Wiesbaden-based Destatis, final results for March 2013 German inflation would be released next Thursday.

Despite a shrink of 0.6 percent in the last quarter of 2012, German economy was expected to return to its growth track this year. German central bank Bundesbank had forecasted the annual inflation rate to be 1.5 percent in 2013 and 1.6 next year. The low inflation rate, as well as stable labour market, has offered reasons for German people to stay optimistic about the outlook of their financial situation.

Tsunami-hit railway partially reopens, gets cars with Kuwaiti aid

MORIOKA, 3 April—A Sanriku Railway Co line crippled by the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami disaster partially reopened for service on Wednesday, with new carriages bought with the help of the Kuwaiti government.

A special train to mark the partial reopening of Minami Riasu Line after some two years will run along a 21.6 kilometre stretch between Sakari and Yoshihama stations in Ofunato, Iwate Prefecture.

After the tsunami washed away station buildings and rail tracks, destroying three of four rail cars serving the line, the firm purchased three new carriages with financial aid from Kuwait and painted cherry blossoms on the sole remaining car.

The firm plans to reopen other currently closed segments — a 15-km stretch between Yoshihama and Kamaishi stations on the Minami Riasu Line and a 10.5-km stretch between Omoto and Tanohata stations on Kita Riasu Line — in April next year.

Armed men attack Baghdad newspaper offices over story on cleric

BAGHDAD, 3 April—Men armed with pistols, knives and steel pipes stormed into three Baghdad newspaper offices, beating employees and smashing computers after publication of an article about a Shi'ite Muslim cleric, police and editors said on Tuesday.

Monday's attacks illustrated the stubborn influence of hardline Islamist militias in Iraq, where Sunni and Shi'ite insurgents often imposed their own fundamentalist vision on the streets during the height of sectarian war a few years ago.

"A group of men armed with steel pipes and knives attacked three newspaper offices in Baghdad. Some of the employees were wounded and we have arrested two of the assailants," a police source said. Yasir Tallas, an editor at Addustour, told Reuters that around 50 men in civilian clothes broke through the doors of the newspaper and smashed computers, furniture and printers. "A group of men attacked us and set ablaze to the paper's archives. They threatened to kill us if the paper publishes any insults to those they are loyal to. This group is well known to the government," Tallas said, without mentioning names.

Addustour published a front-page editorial on Tuesday showing photos of damage to its offices and said the attack followed an article on plans by a Shi'ite cleric to hold a mass prayer in the holy city of Kerbala.

An editor working for another of the targeted newspapers said a group of men armed with pistols and blades attacked its offices in northern Baghdad, accusing journalists of having insulted their cleric. "We were shocked after seeing men carrying pistols and blades breaking into the paper offices, beating and cursing employees for what they said were insults," the editor said on condition of anonymity, fearing reprisal.—Reuters

Senior US diplomat to attend Boao Forum for Asia in China

WASHINGTON, 3 April—Robert Hormats, US Under-Secretary of State for Economic Growth, Energy and Environment, will attend the annual Boao Forum for Asia to be held this weekend in China, the State Department said on Tuesday.

Before participating in the 6-8 April Boao Forum for Asia, to be held in Boao of Hainan Province in southern China, Hormats will first travel to Vancouver of Canada, where he is to address the Pacific Energy Summit and to meet with government and business leaders from Canada and the Asia Pacific region, the Department said in a statement.

The US diplomat then will arrive in Boao on Friday to attend the Boao Forum for Asia, an event which will attract government and private sector participants from China and the region.

After that, Hormats will travel to Beijing from 8 to 9 April for holding bilateral consultations with Chinese officials and to deliver the keynote address at the US-China Internet Industry Forum. On the final leg of his tour, Hormats will visit Tokyo of Japan from 10 to 11 April, where he will engage Japanese government officials and private sector representatives on a wide range of economic, energy and environment issues, the statement said.—Xinhua

Food poisoning at Egypt's Azhar University triggers public outrage

CAIRO, 3 April—Mass food poisoning at Egypt's al-Azhar University on Tuesday led to the hospitalization of more than 500 students and triggered public outrage against the slack food safety practice at the institute. As many as 561 Egyptian students have been poisoned by the university's cafeteria food while no death has been reported in the incident so far, spokesman for the Ministry of Health Yahia Moussa told Xinhua.

The incident occurred in the dormitory of Al-Azhar University in Nasr City, east of the capital Cairo, where the students felt spasms in the stomach and vomited after eating the lunch food from the cafeteria. They were immediately taken to several local hospitals for treatment.

In the wake of the incident, hundreds of angry students stormed Mashiakhket al-Azhar (the administration building of al-Azhar), demanding the dismissal of University President Osama al-Abd. The interior ministry had to send security forces to contain the protests. The angry students claimed the real number of the poisoned topped 1,000.

The al-Azhar University Student Union's Representative Marwan Alaa was quoted by state-run al-Ahram online as saying "Food poisoning happened more than once at this university." "Two weeks ago, we saw some worms in our food and told the university president about it but he took no action." Egyptian President Mohamed Morsi visited the students being treated at Medical Insurance Hospital. According to a presidential statement, Medical Insurance Authority affirmed that all of the cases are under control and that most of the students have left the hospital.

Israeli troops return fire into Syria

JERUSALEM, 3 April—Israeli tanks fired into Syria on Tuesday after shots were fired at troops in the occupied Golan Heights, a military spokeswoman said, in a further spillover of the Syrian civil war.

"Shots were fired at an IDF (Israel Defence Forces) patrol on the border. No injuries or damage was caused. In response, IDF forces returned precise fire at the source and reported a direct hit," the spokeswoman said.

The UN Security Council voiced concern last week about the increasing spillover into the Golan Heights of the civil war being fought between forces loyal to Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and rebels trying to topple him.

Earlier on Tuesday a mortar shell fired during fighting between Syrian forces and rebels landed in the Israeli-controlled territory of the Golan Heights, military sources said.

It was unclear whether the gunfire or the shell were deliberately aimed at Israeli forces and the spokeswoman said it was not known whether they were fired by Assad's forces or the rebels.

The shell landed in an open area near an Israeli settlement and caused no injuries, a military source said.

Shells have fallen several times inside Israeli-controlled territory and some incidents have drawn Israeli return fire.

Japan gov't relieved of responsibility for cancer drug-linked deaths

TOKYO, 3 April—The Supreme Court on Tuesday relieved the Japanese government of responsibility for damages for deaths caused by a side effect of the lung cancer drug Iressa.

The top court decided not to hear an appeal against a Tokyo High Court ruling that found the government bore no responsibility for the deaths from interstitial pneumonia, developed as a side effect by some cancer patients taking the drug.

However, the Supreme Court did decide to receive that portion of the appeal, filed by relatives of patients who had died, seeking damages from the Japanese importer of the drug made by the British drugmaker AstraZeneca PLC. The top court said it would hand down its ruling on 12 April, and is expected to relieve the Japanese importer, AstraZeneca KK, of liability as well.

In July 2002, Japan became the first country in the world to approve the drug Iressa. The plaintiffs argued that AstraZeneca failed to provide sufficient explanations about the potential side effect and the government failed to give appropriate administrative guidance to the company regarding such explanations.—Kyodo News

Lower cost, better services

Myanmar is seen by many— if not all— international telecom service providers as a huge and still untapped market. Only about 5% of the 60 million population have access to mobile services.

Despite a series of dramatic cuts of SIM card prices, they were still expensive for a large piece of population who live on meagre earnings. Recently, the government announced the sale of low-cost SIM cards. The price—K 1500 (approximate to 2 US$) for one SIM card of CDMA 800 MHz—is announced Wednesday as the President in a coordination meeting for sale of low-cost mobile SIM cards said the responsible organization would release information as necessary.

The President in his fourth radio message on 1 April said SIM cards would be distributed “equitably” to each regions and states after considering such details as demands and capacity of telecom facilities.

He promised to build new mobile telephone towers to increase “infrastructural capacity” through cooperation with local and foreign companies to enable the adequate supply of SIM cards each month.

If 350,000 SIM cards are sold each month as planned, Myanmar's mobile density will be doubled within a year. If the government has no thorough plan to develop the country's telecom facilities, the mobile subscribers may suffer more disruptions in the future.

There are complaints over higher service charges of the mobile services. The ministry should also pay attention to reducing service charges to prevent losing out their subscribers to emerging private peers.

The Ministry of Communications and Information Technology is due to allow two international telecom service providers this year, privatizing the state-monopolized industry for the first time in decades. The competitiveness in the industry is expected to be seen which means the general public would enjoy lower cost and better services.

Four face manslaughter charges for Brazil nightclub fire

SAO PAULO, 3 April—Prosecutors charged four people with manslaughter on Tuesday for their roles in the 27 January nightclub fire that killed 241 people in southern Brazil, saying they overlooked grave safety irregularities.

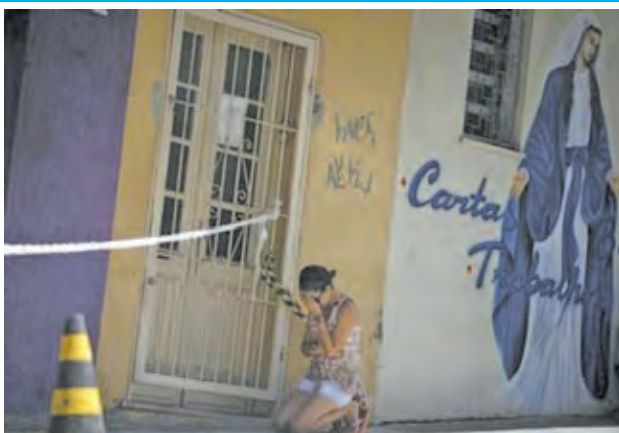

The Kiss club's two owners, as well as two members of a band who lit a flare that ignited a sound-proofing ceiling foam, will stand trial for manslaughter while four others face lesser charges, including for false testimony.

"They ignored what could have happened to these people for financial reasons," prosecutor Joel Dutra said of the accused.

He said the band knowingly used a cheap firework for a risky special-effects show. Police have said the crowd was over capacity and the club, in the wealthy college town of Santa Maria, should have had more exits. Most of the deaths were caused when victims inhaled toxic fumes trying to escape from the building.

Tanzania mudslides kill 13 after heavy rain

DAR ES SALAAM, 3 April—Mudslides after torrential rains have killed 13 people at a quarry in the northern Tanzanian town of Arusha, a senior government official said on Tuesday.

Tanzania's buoyant economy has fuelled a building boom, especially in the centre of the tourist town but high demand for construction materials has led to a proliferation of new quarries, raising concern for safety standards.

"A heavy downpour on Sunday caused mudslides and flooding in some parts of Arusha. This resulted in the deaths of 13 people at a quarry," Arusha Regional Commissioner Magesa Mulongo told Reuters by telephone.

Television footage showed rescue workers in army uniform using stretchers to carry the bodies of victims out of the quarry. Several trucks were buried under the muddy morass in the Moshono area on the outskirts of Arusha.

Mulongo said two people were rescued from the mudslides before the search and rescue operation ended late on Monday. The quarry was temporarily closed to allow police investigations.

In an indication of shaky safety standards in the building industry, at least 36 people were killed in the collapse of a multi-storey building under construction in Tanzania's biggest city Dar es Salaam on Friday.—Reuters

Obama unveils $100 million human brain research project

WASHINGTON, 3 April—US President Barack Obama on Tuesday proposed a new research project, dubbed the Brain Initiative, aimed at gaining a better understanding of the human brain, with $100 million allocated in the budget for fiscal 2014 starting October.

The brain initiative will give "scientists the tools they need to get a dynamic picture of the brain in action and better understand how we learn and how we remember," Obama told a Press conference at the White House.

The National Institutes of Health will be a key organization in the research project, with private research institutions expected to participate.

Obama had indicated in his State of the Union address in February that his administration would invest in a human brain research project to better deal with brain-related illnesses such as Alzheimer's disease.

"The Brain Initiative will accelerate the development and application of new technologies that will enable researchers to produce dynamic pictures of the brain that show how individual brain cells and complex neural circuits interact at the speed of thought," the White House said in a statement. "These technologies will open new doors to explore how the brain records, processes, uses, stores and retrieves vast quantities of information, and shed light on the complex links between brain function and behaviour," it said.

Japan to set up top-level task force to bolster farm industry

TOKYO, 3 April—The government plans to set up a top-level task force to strengthen the agriculture sector, which is feared to suffer heavy blows when Japan joins the Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade framework, government and ruling party sources said on Tuesday.

The ministerial-level task force, to be headed by Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and launched around May, will discuss how to promote farm product exports and preserve farm land, according to the sources.

Japanese farmers fear their livelihoods will be devastated by an influx of cheap imported products once Japan joins the TPP.

As farmers have been traditional supporters of Abe's Liberal Democratic Party, the party apparently sees a need to set up the task force before the upper house election this summer.

The task force will also discuss how to stabilize farmers' earnings and how to train their successors.

Last month Japan announced its intent to join the TPP trade liberalization negotiations now involving 11 nations, including the United States.

The task force is expected to include farm minister Yoshimasa Hayashi, Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga and TPP Minister Akira Amari, according to the sources.

The government has already decided to set up a working-level task force on TPP issues headed by Amari. The government estimates that 3 trillion yen of Japan's current 7.1 trillion yen worth of agricultural produce would be lost if the country abolishes all tariffs in joining the TPP.

On the other hand, the framework is expected to boost Japan's industrial exports and push up its gross domestic product by 3.2 trillion yen in a decade.

Japan, Mongolia hold new round of FTA talks after Abe's visit

ULAN BATOR, 3 April—Japan and Mongolia launched their third round of free trade negotiations on Tuesday in Ulan Bator just days after Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe visited the fast-growing nation in the hope of securing supplies of mineral resources.

During the four-day meeting, the two sides are scheduled to deal with more specifics in such areas as investment rules and customs regulations, seeking the early finalization of what would be Mongolia's first free trade agreement.

The meeting comes after Abe met with Mongolian President Tsakhia Elbegdorj and Prime Minister Norov Altankhuyag on Saturday and agreed to accelerate bilateral FTA talk and strengthen cooperation on developing Mongolia's rich mineral resources and dealing with Asia's security affairs.

While Mongolia has remained a small trading partner for Japan, its double-digit economic growth rate and diplomatic ties with North Korea, among other factors, make it an important country for Japan. The latest trade liberalization talks follow the two countries' first round of negotiations in June and the second round in December.

Mongolia's export to Japan totaled 2.06 billion yen in 2012, while Japan's export to Mongolia stood at 27.53 billion yen, according to Japan's Finance Ministry.—Kyodo News

Honda to resume construction of 2nd auto plant in India

NEW DELHI, 3 April—The Indian subsidiary of Honda Motor Co said on Tuesday it will resume construction of its second auto plant in India, suspended since the 2008-2009 global financial crisis.

Honda Cars India Ltd aims to complete the plant in the western Indian state of Rajasthan next year, and to boost its annual vehicle production capacity in India to 240,000 vehicles.

The new plant will produce vehicles for sale in the growing Indian market and for export to Africa and Europe.

Honda Cars India President Hironori Kanayama said the plant will produce diesel engine vehicles to expand Honda's product lineup in India. "We will meet customers' diversifying demand."

Honda will invest a total 25 billion rupees (about 42.7 billion yen) on the assembly plant and adjacent diesel engine and component factories.

The Honda subsidiary plans to employ 2,200 workers at the Rajasthan plant.—Kyodo News

Malaysian PM to dissolve parliament to set stage for elections

KUALA LUMPUR, 3 April—Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak is expected to dissolve the parliament on Wednesday, setting the stage for a closely-fought election.

Najib's staff told the press that the prime minister is expected to make an announcement that would be telecast live from his office at 11:30 am local time. The election is expected to pile pressure on Najib, who is tasked to help the ruling coalition National Front recover from its worst ever showing in the previous election. The National Front had ruled the country since independence 56 years ago.

In 2008, the National Front won 140 of the 222 seats in the parliament, which was less than two-thirds of the majority, and lost five out of 13 states to opposition People's Alliance. Parliamentary and state elections would be held simultaneously and must be called by June, the election commission said. Failure to improve the 2008's election result would cost Najib his job.—Xinhua

Report shows New Zealand moving from feeding Westerners to feeding Asians

WELLINGTON, 3 April—Demand from Asia, particularly China, is feeding a boom in New Zealand's food and beverage sector, according to a government-commissioned report out Wednesday.

The Investor's Guide to the New Zealand Food & Beverage Industry 2013 showed that Asia was New Zealand's largest export destination region, accounting for more than 40 percent of food and beverage export value in 2011.

China was the single largest export destination country, buying 2.9 billion NZ dollars (2.43 billion US dollars) worth of products, followed by Australia and the United States, each taking 2.1 billion NZ dollars, said the report from the Ministry of Business, Innovation and Employment.

"The New Zealand primary sector is in the middle of a fundamental transition from feeding Westerners to feeding the Asia-Pacific region," Economic Development Minister Steven Joyce said in a statement.

The report suggested that growth in the sector was being driven largely by East Asia, followed by solid performers such as the Australia-Pacific and Southeast Asia regions, and smaller but fast-growing export markets like South Africa and South Asia, while traditional markets like North America and Europe were growing slowly. The report made a strong, factual case for investment in the New Zealand food and beverage sector, said Joyce.

In 1990, North America and Europe had accounted for 22 percent and 30 percent of New Zealand food and beverage exports respectively, but the figures had dropped to 12 percent and 16 percent in 2011, according to the report.

Meanwhile, East Asia and Southeast Asia had risen from 19 percent and 8 percent respectively to 26 percent and 13 percent.

Australia's trade deficit narrows in February

SYDNEY, 3 April—Australia's trade deficit narrowed to 178 million AU dollars (186.24 million US dollars) in February, according to data released on Wednesday by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS).

The result was less than economists' forecasts of a 1 billion AU dollar deficit.

The ABS said the balance on goods and services was a deficit of 178 million AU dollars in February, a fall of 1,037 million AU dollars on the deficit in January.

Exports of goods and services rose 3.0 percent to 25,642 million AU dollars in February while imports of goods and services fell 1.0 percent to 25,820 million AU dollars in the month.

Singapore Airlines' girls give up bright blue eyeshadow for new look

SINGAPORE, 3 April—The Singapore Girl, the flight attendant that has been featured in the advertisements of Singapore Airlines over the decades, is getting a more subtle and modern look, local daily Straits Times reported on Wednesday.

She has now given up her bright blue eyeshadow, and the colours on her face are less striking, though she is still immaculate in her body-hugging signature kebaya—a traditional blouse-dress combination that is worn by women in Southeast Asia—with her hair nicely done.

She is sticking to blue, green, plum and brown eye make-up, and red lipstick to complement the colours of her kebaya. But the tones and shades are more subtle than before and trendier, said Marvin Tan, the airline's head of cabin crew.

"We took into account feedback from some customers that the previous colours seemed to be on the strong side," the newspaper quoted Tan as saying. Alex Wong, a 53-year-old businessman, said, "I'm glad the SIA Girl is moving towards a softer look. I do think some of them are too heavily made up, especially when compared with girls from other carriers."—Xinhua

Meat Loaf says he really is on his final tour

LONDON, 3 April—After more than 35 years of touring, American rocker Meat Loaf is quitting the road.

Meat Loaf, whose 1977 "Bat Out Of Hell" remains one of the biggest selling albums, said his "Last At Bat" tour starting in Britain this week and heading through Europe, would be his last, after struggling with health problems in recent years.

While other ageing rockers like the Rolling

Stones are returning to the lucrative tour circuit, Meat Loaf said he has had enough.

"This is really it ... I just don't want to travel anymore," the portly singer told Reuters TV in an interview before his tour through Britain, Germany and the Netherlands.

"I outweigh (Mick) Jagger by about 100 pounds (45 kgs) and that counts for something. He hasn't seen the wear and tear."

Meat Loaf, whose real name is Marvin Lee Aday, cancelled a European Tour in 2007 after being diagnosed with a cyst on his vocal chords, saying he received some "vicious" reaction to this.

He then sparked further fears for his health in 2011 when he collapsed on stage. He later blamed the blackouts on past concussion injuries and his health issues on asthma.

Last year he underwent a knee replacement operation from which he is still recovering and is due to have an operation on his other knee shortly.

Meat Loaf said his health was "fine" but it was important to be able to perform to your best.

"When your name is on the marquee, you either get the glory or you get the hits," said the rocker, dressed all in black, who has also appeared in a list of movies, including cult classic "The Rocky Horror Picture Show".

Psy to turn "Gentleman" in new song, rapper says

SEOUL, 3 April—South Korean rapper Psy plans to follow his "Gangnam Style" YouTube megahit with a single called "Gentleman" and a new dance, but is playing coy about everything else ahead of the song's release, which was moved up a day to 12 April.

"The new song is extremely fun and ... what I can tell you is the song title is 'Gentleman'", Psy told local television late on Monday.

"I can't tell you about the dance but all Koreans know this dance — but (those in) other countries haven't seen it", Psy added, hinting at a takeoff on a traditional dance.

The music video for "Gangnam Style", which featured the chubby Psy doing what has become his trademark 'invisible horse' dance in a succession of garish jackets, is now YouTube's most-watched clip, and has made the 35-year-old a global celebrity.

March 2011 disaster documentary wins top award at HK film festival

TOKYO, 3 April —A film about an elderly man's struggle following the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami disaster received a top award in the documentary category at the 37th Hong Kong International Film Festival on Tuesday, its director Kaoru Ikeya said.

The film "Senzoninaru" (becoming an ancestor), with the English title "Roots," follows the post-quake life of Naoshi Sato, 79, until he eventually succeeds in rebuilding his home, half of which was destroyed in the disaster. Sato, a resident of Rikuzentakata, Iwate Prefecture, lost his son in the tsunami.

"Many members of the audience told me that they were cheered up (by the movie)," Ikeya said. "It is because the efforts by Naoshi were accepted in Hong Kong as well," he said of winning the Firebird Award, a top division prize.

At the 63rd Berlin International Film Festival earlier this year, the movie received a special mention by the Ecumenical Jury, which gives awards independently from the film festival's secretariat.

Heskey elects to stay on in Australia for another year

SYDNEY, 3 April—Former England striker Emile Heskey has signed up for another year at Australian club Newcastle Jets after scoring nine goals in 23 appearances in his debut A-League campaign.

The Jets, who are owned by financially troubled mining mogul Nathan Tinkler, failed to reach the playoffs this year after finishing eighth in the league.

“I’m pleased to be extending my stay in Newcastle for another year,” Heskey said in a statement on Wednesday.

“Everyone has made me feel very welcome here and I’ve really enjoyed my first season playing for the Jets.

“I’m looking forward to getting a full pre-season under my belt and helping the team push for a finals place next season.”

The 35-year-old former Leicester City, Liverpool, Birmingham City and Wigan Athletic player won 62 caps for his country, scoring seven goals and playing at two World Cups, but moved to Australia after being released by Premier League Aston Villa last year.

Along with former Juventus and Italy forward Alessandro Del Piero and Japanese standout Shinji Ono, Heskey had helped considerably boost the A-League’s international profile—Reuters

Matsuyama to debut as pro at Nagoya this month

NEW DELHI, 3 April—Top Japanese amateur Hideki Matsuyama will make his professional debut at this month’s Token Homemate Cup, the 21-year-old golfer said on Tuesday.

“I had many top-10 finishes last year in professional competitions, and this gave me the confidence that I can make it,” the 2010 and 2011 Asian amateur champion said in a statement.

“I want to become a player who can win around the world,” added the golfer, whose 2011 Taiheiyo Masters triumph made him only the third amateur to win on the Japan Golf Tour. The 130,000,000 yen (£915,196.21) Token Homemate Cup gets underway at Nagoya’s Token Tado Country Club on 18 April. Currently ranked fourth among the amateurs, Matsuyama finished tied 27th to win the low amateur title at the 2011 US Masters tournament and followed that up with a tied 54th finish 12 months later.

Mourinho defends decision to leave Casillas out again

MADRID, 3 April — Real Madrid coach Jose Mourinho has defended his decision to leave 2010 World Cup-winning captain Iker Casillas out of his squad again for Wednesday’s Champions League quarter-final first leg with Galatasaray.

The Spain goalkeeper is fit to train after recovering from a broken finger but will not feature against the Turkish team, having also been omitted for Saturday’s 1-1 draw at Real Zaragoza in La Liga.

Mourinho, who according to media reports has a strained relationship with Casillas, named three goalkeepers for the first leg — Diego Lopez, bought in January as cover, and youth team products Antonio Adan and Jesus. “(Casillas) is training well. He needs to carry on doing so and wait his opportunity,” the Portuguese told a news conference at the Bernabeu on Tuesday.

Bayern hurt Juventus on Buffon off night

MUNICH, 3 April—Bayern Munich tore Juventus apart on a rare off night for Andrea Pirlo and Gianluigi Buffon but had to settle for a 2-0 win after missing a hatful of chances in Tuesday’s Champions League quarter-final first leg.

Italy World Cup winners Pirlo and Buffon were both at fault as David Alaba put hosts Bayern ahead inside 30 seconds, a goal which set the tone of the first half as the Bavarians, who hit nine past Hamburg SV on Saturday, exposed the Juve defence.

Goalkeeper Buffon should also have done better with Luiz Gustavo’s shot in the run-up to Thomas Mueller’s second goal just after the hour in the meeting of the German and Italian league leaders.

Twice European champions and five-times runners-up Juventus were back in the quarter-finals after a seven-year absence and coach Antonio Conte said beforehand it was a chance to see how much they lagged behind the likes of Bayern.

The answer appeared to be an awful lot as the run-away Bundesliga leaders ripped into a ragged, disorientated Juve in a match so one-sided it at times resembled their 7-0 win over FC Basel last season.

However, Conte was not writing his side off despite a comprehensive defeat which cost them their three-year, 18-match unbeaten run in European competition.

“We still have the second leg and in football, you play until the end before drawing conclusions,” he told a news conference. “I’ll tell you after the second leg.

China Navy kicks off visit to Algeria

ALGIERS, 3 April—The 13th Escort Taskforce of the Chinese Navy arrived on Tuesday in Algiers, capital of Algeria, beginning a four-day visit to the country.

The visit by the escort taskforce, composed of two frigates and one supply ship, is the first of its kind made to the nation by a Chinese naval fleet, said Li Xiaoyan, commander of the escort taskforce.

During the visit, Rear Admiral Li will meet with Commander of the Algerian Navy Malek Necib and other Algerian navy officers, and introduce the Chinese Navy's anti-piracy operations in the Gulf of Aden and the waters off Somalia.

The Algerian military will organize a delegation to visit the Chinese fleet. Some cultural and sport activities, including a basketball game and a deck reception, are planned to be held during the visit.

The 13th Escort Taskforce has undertaken China's convoy tasks for a four-month period in the Gulf of Aden and waters off Somalia before it departed the region on 18 March for nation-visiting tasks.

Algeria is the second leg of the fleet's nation-visiting agenda. The fleet visited Malta on 26-30 March, and will later visit Morocco, Portugal and France.

Chinese warships have undertaken anti-piracy operations off the coast of Somalia since December 2008. To date, the Chinese Navy has succeeded in escorting more than 5,000 merchant ships.

UNICEF hails adoption of Arms Trade Treaty

UNITED NATIONS, 3 April—UNICEF on Tuesday welcomed the adoption of the Arms Trade Treaty by the United Nations General Assembly as a crucial step toward protecting children by regulating the transfer of weapons from one country to another.

The lack of any consistent global oversight of the arms trade has allowed weapons to be misused on a mass scale, resulting in the widespread killing and maiming of civilians, UNICEF said in a Press release issued here.

"The fact that the treaty makes specific reference to children and women is especially heartening," said Susan Bissell, UNICEF's chief of child protection in New York.

The 193-nation General Assembly has approved a global arms trade treaty that failed to achieve unanimous support last week but which garnered the support of a majority of member states when put to a vote on Tuesday. The treaty regulates the multi-billion-US dollar international arms trade.

New evidence frees US man 42 years after deadly hotel fire

TUCSON, 3 April—An Arizona man was set free on Tuesday after serving four decades for murder in connection with a 1970 hotel fire that killed 29 people, after new evidence emerged throwing his conviction into question.

"It's good to feel Mother Earth under my feet again," Louis Taylor, 58, told reporters seconds after leaving the prison grounds in a car with members of his legal defence team.

Taylor was freed after a Pima County Superior Court judge agreed there was sufficient evidence to grant a new trial.

During the same hearing, Taylor pleaded "no contest" to each of 28 counts of murder and accepted a plea agreement in which he would not admit guilt.

He was immediately sentenced to time served and agreed to seek no compensation for his time behind bars. He will not be required to pay restitution.

Paul D'Hedouville II, whose father, Paul D'Hedouville, died in the fire, read a statement to the court. He listed a few life moments his father — a 31-year-old attorney in 1970 — missed over the years. There were Christmases, anniversaries and weddings, soccer games, trips to the beach and camping trips, D'Hedouville said, at times choking back tears.

"He was never able to go to Ireland to meet my future bride," he said. D'Hedouville, who flew in from Washington, DC for the hearing, harbours no ill will toward Taylor and observed that the man convicted of his father's murder can now do as he wants.—Reuters

Swine flu expected to wane in Georgia

TBILISI, 3 April—New swine flu infections are expected to decrease in the coming weeks as the flu season has already passed in Georgia, a health official said on Tuesday.

So far, the South Caucasus country has registered 28 fatal cases caused by the (A)H1N1 virus, commonly referred to as swine flu, and 323 cases of infection in total, according to the Georgian national centre for disease control.

The centre's chief, Paata Imnadze, said swine flu infections are expected to reduce as the flu season has already passed in the country.

The first case of A(H1N1) infection in Georgia was registered in 2009. During the flu season between 2010 and 2011, the virus claimed 33 lives and infected 1,800 people in the country.

Coordination meeting for implementation of Visa Policy in Myanmar held

NAY PYI TAW, 3 April—“Smooth issuance of visa to foreigners is crucial as Myanmar will take ASEAN Chairmanship in 2014,” said Vice-President U Nyan Tun at a coordination meeting for implementation of Visa Policy in Myanmar, at the Ministry of Immigration and Population, here, this afternoon.

The Union Government has designated Ministry of Immigration and Population as focal ministry. Myanmar issues six kinds of visa to foreigners. Visa on Arrival has been granted for citizens from 50 countries till now. The Vice-President called for a change in visa system of the country, restating the instructions of the President on cooperation between the Immigration and Population Ministry and personnel concerned on border security, foreign relations, and border trade.

He stressed the need for systematic tracking of disoriented foreigners to preserve the national cultural characteristics and protect the sovereignty of the State as well as the simple and systematic visa procedures for foreign technicians and tourists that can help improve economic performance of the country.
